

INDIAN CASES

CONTAINING

FULL REPORTS OF DECISIONS

OF

The PRIVY COUNCIL, the High Courts of ALLAHABAD, BOMBAY, CALCUTTA, LAHORE, MADRAS, PATNA and RANGOON, the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of CENTRAL PROVINCES, ODUH and SIND

REPORTED IN

The following 31 Legal Periodicals:

Allahabad (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Law Reporter Allahabad; Bombay (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Reporter; Calcutta (1) Indian Law
Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Weekly Notes; Lahore (1) Indian Law Reports,
(2) Cases, (3) Law Journal, (4) Punjab Law Reporter; Madras (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Law Journal, (3) Law Times, (4) Law Weekly, (5)
Weekly Notes; Nagpur (1) Law Reports, (2) Law Journal;
Oudh (1) Cases, (2) Law Journal, (3) Weekly Notes;
Patna (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Cases, (3) Law
Reporter, (4) Law Times; Rangoon (1) Indian Law Reports, (2) Burma Law Journal; Sind
Law Reporter;—Criminal Law Journal and All India Reporter,

WITH

A large number of extra Rulings not reported elsewhere.

Books Checked

VOLUME 90, 1925.

K. P. Jaiswal

Founded by
Shahab-ud-Din Chaudhri, B.A., LL.B., M. L. C., Now President, Legislative Council, Punjab.

EDITORS

... { Z. K. CHAUDHRI, B.A., LL.B., Bar-at-Law.
 { N. H. CHAUDHRI, B.A., LL.B., Pleader.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY THE MANAGER, AT THE "LAW PUBLISHING PRESS," LAHORE.

CONSOLIDATED

Comparative Tables showing seriatim the Volumes and Pages of all Indian Law Journals and Reports for the period specified at the top of each table, with the corresponding Volumes and Pages of Indian Cases.

47 I. L. R., ALLAHABAD SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1925.

Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas.	Page.	Names of Parties.	Corresponding Vol. and page of Ind. Cas.
795	Lal Bahadur v. Ambika Prasad ..	91 471	910	Ishwar Dat Upadhiya v. Mahesh Dat Upadhiya ..	89 114
803	Naunihal Singh v. Alice Georgina Skinner ..	92 63	913	Tuli Ram v. Bhup Singh ..	89 214
823	Aziz Bano v. Muhammad Ibrahim Husain ..	89 690	915	Kulsum Bibi v. Muhammad Ismail ..	89 186
849	Niadar v. Ramji Lal ..	88 944	916	Rudra Prasad Pande v. Mathura Prasad Pande ..	89 173
850	Sarvi Begam v. Ram Chander Sarup ..	88 500	917	Shagun Chand v. Asa Ram ..	89 97
853	Shiam Lal, Joti Prasad v. Dhanpat Rai ..	88 493	920	Sanwalia v. Nathi Lal ..	88 504
855	Emperor v. Moti Lal ..	88 1049	921	Sita Ram v. Piari Lal ..	88 611
859	Prem Narain v. Jagdamba Sahai ..	89 621	923	Bhikhi Mal v. Debi Sahai ..	89 213
864	Basanti Bai v. Nanhe Mal ..	89 357	925	Faqir-Ullah v. Hikamat-Ullah ..	88 66
837	Lachman Prasad v. Munia ..	89 639	926	Prag v. Bhagwan Din ..	88 88
872	Ram Prasad Singh v. Jagdamba Prasad Singh ..	88 420	929	Kali Charan Singh v. Bageshra Kunwari ..	89 374
873	Amar Singh v. Ram Dei ..	89 415	932	Sundar Rai v. Suraj Bali Rai ..	88 1013
878	Ganesh Prasad v. Bhagelu Ram ..	89 350	934	Bilas Singh v. Emperor ..	89 630
881	Madhuri Saran v. Parbati ..	88 653	944	Husain Bakhsh v. Mahfuz-ul-Haq ..	88 972
883	Mata Prasad v. Nageshar Sahai ..	91 370	948	Narain Dat Tiwari v. Rudra Dat Bhat ..	89 520
900	Muhammad Mazhar Ali v. Biggha Begam ..	89 364	952	Net Singh v. The Receiver of the Estate of Gajraj Singh ..	89 488
901	Ganga Chamar v. Bindeshri Rai ..	88 684

23 ALLAHABAD LAW JOURNAL, FOR DECEMBER, 1925.

931	Kishan Dei v. Sheo Paltan ..	90 358	1029	Nathu Lal v. Raghubir Singh ..	89 946
990	Ram Harakh Pathak v. Emperor ..	90 913	1037	Emperor v. Param Sukh ..	91 43
993	Makundi Singh v. Parbhu Dayal ..	90 2	1015	Nag Kuer v. Sham Lal Sahu ..	92 274
937	Suraj Singh v. Phul Kumari ..	90 904	1051	Emperor v. Mewa Ram ..	90 917
1000	Farid-un-nisa v. Mukhtar Ahmad ..	89 649	1033	Muhammad Rahim v. Emperor ..	89 1025
1010	Soundara Rajan v. O. M. Natarajan ..	92 289	1054	Jiraj Singh v. Bansi ..	91 67
1016	D. R. K. Saklat v. Bella ..	92 200	1056	Harihar Dat v. Maksud Ali ..	91 38
1027	Miran v. Emperor ..	92 224	1059	Mutsaddi Lal v. Bhagwan Das ..	90 120

*6 LAW REPORTER ALLAHABAD, FOR DECEMBER, 1925.

Privy Council—Civil.			Allahabad—Civil—consolid.
206	Bhupendra Narayan Singh v. Narapat Singh ..	90 607	610	Narain Das v. Ram Chandra ..	90 116
209	Maung Bya v. Maung Kyi Nyo ..	90 198	614	Kedar Nath v. Bismillah Begam ..	90 72
Allahabad—Civil.			615	Gulab Dei v. G. I. P. Railway ..	90 99
601	Ram Sarup v. Gaya Prasad ..	90 180	617	Seth Beni Chand v. Syed Ikram Ahmad ..	90 887
606	Dip Prakash v. Bohra Dwarka Prasad ..	90 81	625	Bakhtawar v. Sunder Lal ..	90 992
			628	Jeut Koeri v. Mathura Koeri ..	90 787
			630	Dwarka Prasad v. Makund Sarup ..	90 290

*6 LAW REPORTER ALLAHABAD, FOR DECEMBER 1925—concl'd.

Allahabad—Criminal.			Allahabad—Criminal—concl'd.
202	Emperor v. Mewa Ram	90 917	213	Dwarka Prasad v. Makund Sarup	90 290
203	Abdul Hafiz Khan v. Emperor	92 441	216	Kadhori v. Emperor	92 452
205	Panna Lal v. Emperor	91 40	Allahabad—Revenue.
207	Khamani v. Emperor	92 584	255	Bisheshar Prasad Pandey v. Raghubir	90 353
208	Emperor v. Bhima	91 53	*NOTE.—Decisions of the Board of Revenue, not printed in Indian Cases.—[Ed.]
209	Munir v. Emperor	91 533

49 I. L. R., BOMBAY SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER, 1925.

788	Naginal Maganlal, In re	91 160	839	Mahadeo Govind v. Lakshmi-
799	Gulabchand Rupaji, In re	92 427		narayan	90 610
804	Emperor v. Jagerdeo	90 310	842	Vidyavardhak Sangh Company v.
821	Vishavnathbhat v. Mallappa	92 628		Ayyappa	90 614
827	G. I. P. Railway Company v. Haji		847	Rachappa Chanbasappa v. Nin-
	Tarmahomed	90 562		gappa	91 349
832	Narayan Keshav v. Kaji Gulam
	Mohidin	91 353

27 BOMBAY LAW REPORTER, FROM AUGUST TO OCTOBER, 1925.

1003	Sakharam v. Balkrishna	To be printed.	1150	Mahadeo v. Lakshminarayan	90 610
1019	Emperor v. Ranchhod Harjivan	89 1029	1152	Vidyavardhak Sangh Co. v.
1022	Emperor v. Sahebava	89 1050		Ayyappa	90 614
1023	Emperor v. Thakordas	89 1031	1156	Motilal v. Krishnabai	90 604
1031	Emperor v. P. B. Ponde	89 1042	1159	Kishenprasad v. Rajaram	To be printed.
1034	Emperor v. Anandrao Phanse	89 1046	1168	Coorla Mills v. Vallabhdas	To be printed.
1039	Emperor v. Gulabchand Rupji	92 427	1195	Parashuram Shamdasani v. Tata
1043	Emperor v. Jagardeo	90 310		Industrial Bank	91 153
1056	Emperor v. Basappa	90 320	1207	In re Naginal	91 160
1058	In re Basappa	89 846	1216	Sevadasji v. Bombay Municipality	To be printed.
1063	In re Muljibhai Hirabhai	89 976	1218	Pudumjee & Co. v. Moos	91 334
1064	Pramatha Nath v. Pradyumna		1229	Raghunath Rithkaran v. Imperial
	Kumar	87 305		Bank of India	91 342
1076	Lakshmiah Chetty v. Kothanda-		1237	Moos v. Government of Bombay	91 357
	rama Pillai	88 327	1240	Narayan v. Gulam Mohidin	91 353
1082	Vijayaratnam v. Sudarsana Rao	89 733	1246	Asvath v. Chimabai	91 330
1086	Kishoredas v. Ahmed Suleman	To be printed.	1253	Rachappa v. Ningappa	91 349
		89 859	1258	Ramchandra v. Dattu	91 347
1092	Sorabji v. Patuck		1261	Vaman v. Changi	91 360
1098	Burjor v. Ellerman City Lines		1273	Usuf Dadabhai v. Chand Mahomed	91 299
	Ltd.	89 866	1276	Collector v. Ramchandra	91 300
1103	Vishvanathbhat v. Mallappa	92 628	1279	Gulabchand v. Ramsukh	91 294
1107	Vagha v. Jagjivan	90 558	1281	India Spinning & Weaving Co. Ltd.
1109	Pandu v. Savla	90 561		v. Climax Industrial Syndicate	91 847
1111	G. I. P. Railway v. Tarmahomed	90 562	1310	Ramchandra v. Gontibai	91 419
1115	Ganpati v. Maruti	90 654	1318	Dodbasappa v. Pradhanappa	91 426
1116	V. S. Jorapur v. Venkatesh	90 656	1331	Hanmavva v. Venkappa	91 305
1118	Dayaram v. Chandulal	90 689	1334	Dattatraya v. Gangabai	To be printed.
1122	Ramprasad v. Shrinivas	90 685	1336	Giriappa v. Govindrao	91 314
1120	Bombay Municipality v. Ran-		1339	Gangaram v. Ganesh	91 318
	chordas	90 695	1343	Emperor v. Manant	92 689
1140	Nowroji v. Government of Bombay	90 48
1144	Hira Bibi v. Ram Hari	89 659
1147	Moos v. Abdul Husain	90 600

52 I. L. R., CALCUTTA SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER, 1925.

894	Purna Chandra Chatterjee v. Naren-		954	Rabindra Nath Dutt v. Abdul Ahad
	dra Nath Chowdhury	88 637		and Co.	88 400
910	Chandi Charan Law v. Mehar Banu	91 1016	959	Surendra Nath Panerjee v. Shashi
914	Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co.,			Bhushan Sarkar	92 223
	Ltd. v. Muhammad Fazlul Karim	90 851	962	Ram Gopal Goenka v. Corporation
943	Nesaraddin Mandal v. Anath Nath			of Calcutta	90 317
	Chowdhury	90 700

42 CALCUTTA LAW JOURNAL, FOR OCTOBER-NOVEMBER, 1925

280	Prayag Kumari v. Siva Prosad ...	93 385	475	Khosal Chandra Das v. Brindarani Dasya	93 613
-----	----------------------------------	--------	-----	--	--------

6 I. L. R., LAHORE SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER, 1925.

487	Teja Singh v. Kalyan Das-Chet Ram	91 778	502	Ahmad Khan v. Channi Bibi	91 455
489	Daya Ram v. Crown	92 423	512	Punjab Commercial Syndicate v. Punjab Co-operative Bank, Limited	92 322
493	Khem Chand v. Narain Das	89 1022	524	Khazan Chand v. Pars Ram	90 1045
499	Darbari Mal-Ram Sahai v. Secretary of State	92 332

7 LAHORE LAW JOURNAL, FROM MAY TO AUGUST, 1925.

226	Bhagwan Das v. Rahim Dad	89 979	352	Ham Raj v. Nihal Singh	90 678
228	Chandu v. Gajju	88 176	354	Jai Singh v. Darbara Singh	89 302
230	Prag Devi v. Nathu Mal	92 183	359	Municipal Committee v. Milkhi Ram	92 602
232	Ram Bheja Mal v. Bhagwan Das	89 955	330	Firm Phul Chand-Fateh Chand v. Firm Chhote Lal-Amba Pershad...	90 654
234	Sardar Khan v. Hidayat	89 977	361	Radha Kishan v. Mehtab Mian	90 629
236	Sardari Mal v. Hirde Nath	87 994	367	Mehr Nur Mohammad v. Nur Mohammad	90 668
239	Shankar Das v. Behari Lal	89 932	368	Qadar Bakhsh v. Crown	91 804
241	Amar Singh v. Sadhu Singh	86 709	371	Ram Karan v. Crown	92 577
250	Bawa Singh v. Crown	89 1026	389	Tulsi v. Crown	92 215
252	Gopal Dass v. Maghi Ram	90 292	392	Allah Jawaya v. Lajpat Rai	To be printed.
256	Pali v. Crown	92 175	395	Firm Amar Singh-Dhumi Mal v. Sharaf-ud-din	89 751
259	Sujan Singh v. Crown	90 145	397	Banu Mal v. Paras Ram	92 254
264	Sarup Singh v. Crown	88 22	402	Firm Gurdas Mal-Ram Lal v. Ram Lal	91 763
277	Wasal v. Crown	92 587	405	Jhanda Mal v. Gopal Das	91 784
230	Bulli Mal v. Jhabba	92 569	408	Mohla v. Kahnun	91 798
281	Chandra Wati v. Jagan Nath Singh	90 611	410	Nanak Chand-Mukandi Lal v. East Indian Railway	89 279
285	Ghulam Sarwar v. Ghulam Mustafa	90 603	414	Parbodh Singh v. Bodh Raj	92 195
238	Gurbachan Kaur v. Satwant Kaur	90 620	417	Ram Chand v. Nanak Chand	91 763
290	Ishar Das v. Lal Singh	90 632	420	Firm Saghu Mal-Har Charan Das v. Firm Dhanpat Rai-Diwan Chand	92 198
295	Jawaya Shah v. Fatima	89 658	424	Tegh Indar Singh v. Harnam Singh	90 1035
293	Maqsudan Lal v. Ram Chander	88 289	427	Teja Singh v. Firm Kalyan Das-Chet Ram	91 778
301	Rahmat Ali v. Daulat Bibi	90 640	428	Nazir Singh v. Crown	91 806
306	Ram Chand v. Channu Mal	88 301	436	Pakhar Singh v. Crown	91 812
319	Sher Khan v. Prabh Dayal	90 683	442	Pohla v. Crown	92 417
321	Begu v. King-Emperor	88 3
329	Channan Singh v. Emperor	86 221
331	Crown v. Ghulam Mohammad	92 590
331	Moti Ram v. Emperor	86 661
339	Sawan Singh v. Crown	90 657
341	Wishnu Ram v. Crown	90 660
343	Gurandita Mal v. Firm Gurdas Mal-Ram Chand	91 772
351	Hari Ram v. Firm Buta Shah-Lachmi Das	Not reportable.

48 I. L. R., MADRAS SERIES, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1925.

833	Vaithialinga Mudaliar v. Srirangath Anni	92 85	933	Nelakanti Sandarasiva Rao v. Ivatury Viyyamma	91 401
906	Soundara Rajan v. Natarajan	92 289	933	Secretary of State for India in Council, In re	90 601
920	Angamuthu Mudaliar v. Ratna Mudaliar	91 516	941	Peta Nagayya, In re	90 991
925	Ramiah & Co. v. Sadasiva Mudaliar	91 151	914	Viswanatha Mudali v. Doraiswami Mudali	91 193

49 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FOR NOVEMBER, 1925.

628	Nallakakkan Ambalam v. Sri Kallalagar Devasthanam	91 319	643	Official Receiver, Tanjore v. Nagaratna Mudaliar	92 497
630	Govindasami Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettiar	91 714	656	Ranganatha Aiyar v. Srinivasa Aiyangar	90 1037
632	Sayan Durga Bai Ammal v. Ramanatha Rao	91 566	664	Radhakrishna Aiyar v. Vinayakaswamiar	91 99
634	Venku Shettithi v. Ramachandrayya	92 342	665	Sivaswami Aiyar v. Tirumudi Chettiar	90 593
640	Rao Bahadur Govinda Rao v. Chinathurai Pillai	91 377

49 MADRAS LAW JOURNAL, FOR NOVEMBER, 1925—concl'd.

668	Sigamani Pandithan v. Munibadra Nainar	91	514	719	Shiva Aithala v. Rangappaya Aithala	92	523
671	Nagabhushanam v. Jagannaikulu	90	775	720	Narasimha Mudali v. Narayanaswami Chetti	92	333
675	Abdul Samad Khan Khiladar v. Bibijan	91	618	722	Rajah Bhupendra Narayan Singh v. Narapat Singh	90	607
679	Sourimuthu v. Pavadai Pachia Pillai	91	868	727	Chandayya Hedge v. Kaveri Hegadthi	92	390
684	Viswanatha Mudali v. Doraswami Mudali	91	193	730	Venkataswami v. Kotilingam	91	1051
697	Muthu Veerappa Chettiar v. Sivagurunatha Pillai	92	603	731	Thayammal v. Perumal Chetti	91	914
699	Sankaran Nair v. Ambu	92	109	733	Gandha Korliah v. Janoo Hassan	91	780
701	Ramaiah v. Lakshmi Narayana	91	660	742	Alaga Pillai v. Ramaswami Thevan	91	1024
704	Srinivasa Aiyangar v. Pratapa Simha Rajah Saheb	91	820	746	Narasimha Suryanarayana v. Lakshminarasimham	91	924
706	Muthuraman Chettiar v. Uppalura Seetharamayya	91	985	753	Subramaniam Chetty v. Ramaswami Chetty	91	11
709	Gopal Naidu v. Mohanlal Kanyalal	91	874	756	Venkataratnam v. Narasimachariyulu	92	470
717	Subramaniam Pattar v. Velu Nair	92	481	758	Farid-un-nisa v. Mukhtar Ahmad	89	649

22 LAW WEEKLY, FOR NOVEMBER, 1925.

579	Chockalingam Pillai v. Pichappa Chettiar	92	599	673	Vaithi Matharan v. Narayanaswami Aiyar	92	855
532	Kommareddi Ramachandrayya v. Vodury Venkataratnam	92	800	675	Malabar Forests & Rubber Coy., Ltd. Bombay v. D. H. McLeod	91	615
536	Sivagami Ammal v. T. S. Gopalswami Odayar	87	372	679	Gangadara Sah v. Swaminadha Mudali	92	112
592	Guntur Narasimham v. Nyapati Narayana Rao Garu	92	405	691	Paidal Nayar, In re	92	624
606	Veerappa Chettiar v. Sundaresa Sastrigal	92	300	695	Thirumalachariar v. Athimoola Karayalar	92	776
617	Muthu Veerappa Chettiar v. Sivagurunatha Pillai	92	603	698	Venkatachariar v. Pachayappa Chetty	92	516
618	Narayanasami Pillai v. Gopalakrishna Naidu	92	483	701	Ramasami Goundan v. Singaperumal Kadavul	92	823
619	Krishna Jute and Cotton Mills Co., Ltd., Ellore v. Municipal Council, Vizianagaram	91	297	701	Sigamani Pandithan v. Munibhadra Nainar	91	514
622	Nallakkan Ambalam v. Sri Kallalagar Devasthanam	91	319	707	M. & S. M. Ry. Co., Ltd. v. Gundapu Gopalakrishnamma	85	1003
625	Periakaruppa Thevan v. Aiyans and Kaniyala	91	1027	710	Rama Raja Thevar v. Papammal	90	983
629	Srinivasa Rao v. Venkatanarasamma	91	727	716	Sominaidu v. Sitaramayya	91	359
631	Karnam Venkatasubba Rao v. Adinarayana Rao	92	472	719	Subramaniam Chetty v. Chairman, Municipal Council, Gudiyatnam	93	658
634	Pasumarti Seethanna v. Thammandra Yasikalappa	91	765	723	Marudayya Thevar v. Shunmugasundara Thevar	91	702
637	Narasimha Mudali v. Potti Narayanasami Chetty	92	333	726	Lucia Jacob v. David Alexander Wills	89	824
639	Manem Ayyanna v. Pulavarti Veerabhadram	91	771	732	Kaman Mada v. Malli	91	302
642	Telasidass Govindjee v. Madhavadas Laljee	92	570	734	Mrutyantjaiah v. Venkatapathigadu	90	834
645	Rajendra Narain Dhanj Deo v. Kumar Gangananda Singh	89	737	736	Ramanujachariar v. Kailasam Iyer	87	969
650	Natarajan v. Muthiah Chetty	To be printed.		740	Ayisa Bivi Ammal v. Jokara Bivi	90	869
653	Muthu Pillai v. Alagirisami Pillai	91	961	744	Subramaniam Chetty v. Ramaswami Chetty	91	11
656	Govinda Pillai v. Ramanathan Chettiar	91	714	747	Bhadrayya v. Jaggaraju	91	1017
659	Narasimham v. Chendramma	92	321	749	Subramaniam Patter v. Velu Nair	92	481
671	Municipal Council, Cochin v. Bavu Devuzzi	92	18	752	Thennmayya v. Chinnayya	92	594
				755	Manicka Padayachi, In re	90	530
				762	Kelu Nair v. Secretary of State for India	91	82
				772	Veeranan Ambalam v. Ayyachi Ambalam	92	968

(1925) MADRAS WEEKLY NOTES, FOR AUGUST-SEPTEMBER.

467	Official Assignee of Madras v. Basudevadoss	88	401	572	Palani Goundan v. Suppia Goundan	91	516
469	Kariya Goundan v. Tirmkkaivelu Chetty	87	90	577	Pachaiappa Chetti v. Venkatachariar	90	952
470	Seshayya v. Subbarayudi	90	661	583	Salakshi Ammal v. Duraimanikka Nadan	90	829
472	Ramanujachariar v. Kailasam Ayyar	87	969	587	Bepanna Sitayya v. Paruchuri Ramaswami	91	758
474	Sevak Jeranchod Bhogilal v. Dakore Temple Committee	87	313	589	Sudalaimuthu Thevan v. Sappani Thevar	86	933
477	Prbohudas v. Ganidada	88	337	590	Appaswamy Chettiar v. Balakrishna Pillay	87	189
480	Ramakrishnayya v. Pitchayya	91	165	591	Govindasami Pillai v. Govinda Padayachi	89	894
481	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Janakiramayya	87	614	592	Subbier v. Venkatachalapathi	91	580
484	Nagappa Chetty v. V. A. A. R. Firm	91	494	596	Muhammed Batcha Sahib v. Arunachalam Chettiar	90	875
486	Rasappa Pillai v. Doraisami	90	545	600	Munigadu v. Emperor	88	521
489	Gopanna Mannadiar v. Palani Goundan	To be printed.		601	Subramania Aiyar v. Narayanasami Aiyar	90	1020
493	Khajamiyan Rowther v. Appavu Pillai	90	612	603	Madura Etc., Devasthanam v. Sundaram Annavi	91	525
495	Bhallamudi Kama Shastri v. Thirumamudi Kannan	88	765	606	Venkatarama Aiyar v. Emperor	90	616
497	Ramasami Pillai v. Mothu	83	153	608	Tiruvengadam Pillai v. Sabapathi Pillai	90	767
503	Palavesam Chettiar v. Narayana Aiyar	88	660	609	Govindaswami Pillai v. Doraiswami Mudali	91	181
505	Veeraraghava Achariar v. Parthasarathy Iyengar	To be printed.		612	Gopalan Nayar v. Gopalan Nayar	91	31
522	Vijayaratnam v. Sudarsana Rao	89	733	613	Visvanatha Mudali v. Doraiswami Mudali	91	193
525	Ramaswamy Nayudu v. Subbaraya Thevar	88	618	622	Appalasuri v. Kanamma Nayuralu	90	881
532	Gajadhar Mahton v. Ambika Prasad Tewari	87	292	629	Govinda Krishna Yachendra Bahadur Varu v. Srinivasa Ramacharl	90	881
534	Lajwanti v. Safa Chand	88	198	630	Lal Rajendra Narain Singh v. Sunder Bibi	87	2
535	Mir Subhan Ali v. Imami Begum	88	317	632	Krishnamurthi Aiyar v. Krishnamurthi Aiyar	85	882
541	Sivasamy Ayyar v. Tirumudi Chettiar	90	593	643	Sundarasiva Row v. Viyamma	91	401
543	Abdul Smad Khan Khiladar v. Bibijan	91	618	645	Pavakkal v. Athappa Goundan	91	62
547	Appa Pai v. Somu	90	754	647	Venkatasubbiah v. Lakshminarasimham	91	545
549	Raja Rajendra Narain v. Gangananda Singh	89	737	649	Vodde Subbigadu v. Emperor	91	78
553	Palani Goundan v. Emperor	88	31	652	Narayana Reddi v. Enumula Bojanna	90	663
554	Arjee Prabappa Chetty v. Desikachari	90	1023	653	Audiyappa Naidu v. Muthulakshmi Achi	91	610
556	Daivachilai Ayyangar v. Venkatachariar	88	967	655	Shunmugha Mudali v. Kumaraswami Mudali	90	420
591	Arunachala Chettiar v. Official Receiver of Tanjore	91	522	663	Ramasami Chettiar v. Ramanathan Chettiar	91	537
566	Sankaran Unni v. K. E. Kandan's Son	87	560	666	Ramaswami v. Emperor	91	540
568	Narayana Doss v. Sankarasubbier	91	571	668	Appaswamy Aiyar v. Emperor	91	389
569	Arumuga Thambiran v. Namasivaya Pandarasannathi	91	109	672	Official Receiver of Coimbatore v. Palaniswami Chetti	88	934

8 NAGPUR LAW JOURNAL, FROM AUGUST TO OCTOBER, 1925.

135	Chimashani v. Venkatrao	92	811	175	Atmaram v. Bhagwat	91	216
139	Ohandeker v. Emperor	89	1035	178	Ritha v. Emperor	91	250
153	Murlidhar v. Anandrao	93	850	182	Maharu v. Fakira	93	657
157	Premasukdas v. Pirkhan	To be printed.		184	Kanhairam v. Kalicharan	91	218
167	Yamunabai v. Emperor	91	51	190	Mahadossingh v. Emperor	91	212
170	Dr. Lobo v. Babulal	To be printed.		195	Ramrao v. Ghularam	To be printed.

21 NAGPUR LAW REPORTS, FOR DECEMBER, 1925.

182	Secretary, Municipal Committee, Nagpur v. Devidas	88	480	189	Sakharam v. Sheoram	92	334
185	Kutubuddin v. Gulam Rabbani	93	193	191	Dashrath v. Tarachand	89	514

28 OUDH CASES, FOR DECEMBER, 1925.

371	Lal Bahadur v. Ambika Prasad ...	91	471	387	Mahadeo Prasad v. Chunni Lal ...	86	596
378	Mohammad Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Ugraj Singh ...	86	270	389	Maya Ram v. Sarju ...	87	168
382	Durga Prasad Singh v. Jokhu Ram	86	591	393	Rajwanta v. Rameshar ...	87	180
384	Bachcha Singh v. Bachcha Kurmi ..	To be printed.		397	Abdul Ghafur v. Ram Sewak ..	87	822

12 OUDH LAW JOURNAL, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1925.

643	Jagannath v. King-Emperor ...	89	386	649	Lal Bahadur v. Ambika Prasad ...	91	471
644	Patraji v. King-Emperor ...	89	1025	656	Farid-un-nisa v. Mukhtar Ahmad ...	89	649
646	Ram Charan v. King-Emperor ..	90	713

*2 OUDH WEEKLY NOTES, FOR OCTOBER 21ST AND 28TH, 1925.

913	Lal Bahadur v. Ambika Prasad ..	91	471	944	Ganesh v. Raja Suraj Bakhsh Singh	91	1021
920	S. C. Mitra v. Nawab Ali Khan ...	92	50	947	Pirthi Din v. Ram Lal ...	91	512
931	Sitla Bakhsh Singh v. King-Emperor	93	1025

*NOTE.—Decisions of the Board of Revenue, not printed in Indian Cases.—[Ed.]

*3 OUDH WEEKLY NOTES, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1925.

1	Mata Prasad v. Nageshar Sahai ..	91	370	93	Ahmad Khan v. Channi Bibi ...	91	455
25	Syed Hasan Bakar v. Sheo Narain Singh ...	91	917	100	Mahipal Singh v. Sarjoo Prasad ..	92	99
40	Abhaidat Singh v. Raghoendar Par-tab Sahai ..	91	976	104	Kashi Ram Khosla v. R. L. Dikshit	91	1007
45	Secretary of State for India in Council v. Mahant Harcharan Dass ...	91	927	105	Bashir Ahmad v. Zobaida Khatun...	92	265
51	Chandra Sen Singh v. Bhagwan Singh ...	91	938	114	Kaniza v. Hasan Ahmad Khan ..	92	82
56	Mohammad Jaimur Khan v. Raghu-nath Singh ...	91	1015	121	Raisun Nisa v. Zorawar Sah ...	92	675
158	Karingan v. Harihar Dutt ..	92	34	127	Ram Protap Chamria v. Durga Prosad Chamria ...	92	633
65	Sant Sahai v. Chhulai Kurmi ...	92	23	138	Ram Pher-Singh v. Sheo Saran Singh ...	92	757
69	Gajraj Singh v. Nanhu Singh ..	91	942	142	Bahadur Ali Khan v. Secretary of State for India in Council ...	Not reportable.
73	Rampal Singh v. Bajrang Singh ..	92	126
83	National Bank of Upper India v. Bansidhar ...	92	94

*NOTE.—Decisions of the Board of Revenue, U. P., not printed in Indian Cases.—[Ed.]

4 I. L. R., PATNA SERIES, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925.

394	Jasoda Kuer v. Janak Missir ...	92	1034	478	Ladu Narain Singh v. Gobardhan Das ...	86	721
404	Broucke v. Sri Panch Rani Chhatar Kumari Devi ...	85	597	482	East Indian Railway Company v. Sagar Mal ...	89	672
438	Rameshwar Singh v. King-Emperor	91	809	484	Chamari Singh v. Public Prosecutor of Gaya ...	92	883
440	Gajadhar Prasad v. Firm Manulal-Jagannath Prasad ...	93	257	483	Mohiuddin v. King Emperor ..	86	459
448	Tofa Lal Das v. Moinuddin Mirza	93	129	503	Jeobaran Singh v. Ramkishun Lal	92	871
459	Mohammad Nasiruddin v. King-Emperor ...	87	106	507	Kedarnath Goenka v. Anant Prasad Singh	88	482
469	Ram Ghulam Singh v. Nand Kishore Prasad ...	88	813	510	Hitendra Singh v. Maharajadhiraj Sir Rameswar Singh Bahadur ...	88	141
472	Parmeshwar Lal v. King-Emperor...	92	885	604	Partap Mahton v. Wazirunnissa ...	88	687

(1925) PATNA CASES, FORM NOVEMBER, 1925.

298	Bibi Wajihunnissa Begum v. Babu Lal Mahton ...	90	871	317	Nathan Prasad Shah v. Kali Prasad Shah ...	90	785
305	Great Indian Peninsula Railway v. Datti Ram ...	90	812	320	Pratap Udai Nath Sahi Deo v. Mahabir Sahu ...	88	1032
311	G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Rameshwar Prasad ...	90	687	324	Sagar Mull v. Hira Maharaj ..	91	799
315	Jogendra Prasad Narayan Sinha v. Mangal Prasad Sahu ..	90	847	326	Muhammad Akbar Ali Khan v. Herbert Francis ...	91	822

*3 PATNA LAW REPORTER, FROM JULY 22ND TO DECEMBER 23RD, 1925.

Criminal.			Civil—concl'd.
160	Sarman Ahir v. King-Emperor ...	85 717	305	Chowdhury Sureshwar Misser v. Maheshrani Misrain ..	57 325
163	Nareshi Singh v. King-Emperor ...	82 156	309	Rajendra Narain Bhanj Deo v. Kumar Gangananda Singh ...	89 737
175	Ghulam Muhammad Khan v. King-Emperor ...	86 814	315	Pramatha Nath Mullick v. Pradyumna Kumar Mullick ..	87 305
Civil.			323	Raghunath Prasad Singh v. Basdeo Prasad Singh ...	83 1012
268	Rajendra Narayan Singh Deo v. Mahesh Chandra Chatterji ...	83 203	330	Ram Protap Chamaria v. Durga Prasad Chamaria ...	92 633
270	Tarkeshwar Prasad Tewari v. Debendra Prasad Tewari ...	92 181	339	Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Rajo Chowdhrair ...	To be printed.
283	Gonda Singh v. Kali Mahto ...	Not reportable.	341	Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Puran Chandra Mansali ..	To be printed.
290	Sura Lakshmiah Chetty v. Kothandarama Pillai ...	88 327	*NOTE.—Decisions of the Board of Revenue, Bihar & Orissa, not printed in Indian Cases.—[Ed.]
296	Hira Bibi v. Ram Hari Lal ...	89 659
300	Manzur Hassan v. Muhammad Zaman ...	86 236

6 PATNA LAW TIMES, FROM NOVEMBER 24TH TO DECEMBER 22ND, 1925.

769	Nagendra Nath Ghosh v. Sambhu Nath Pandey ...	88 219	823	Jotirmoyee Debi v. Raghunath Pathak ...	85 94
776	In re Ram Krishna Misra ...	88 70	824	Amolak Chand v. Mansukh Rai Mangal Lal ...	85 88
777	Sheo Sahay v. Jamuna Prasad Singh ...	88 807	826	Rambhujawan Singh v. Suraj Prasad Singh ...	88 502
778	Bhagwan Das v. Sheonandan Prasad Sahu ...	85 93	830	Ram Charan Das v. Ramlakhan Dass ...	88 69
780	Bibi Saleha v. Hulas Mahton ...	86 559	833	Siban Rai v. Bhagwat Dass ...	92 219
786	Talib Karim v. Abdul Majid ...	Not reportable.	838	Udit Singh v. King-Emperor ...	86 988
787	Tarni Singh v. Satnarain Maharaj	90 895	813	Mohit Narain Jha v. Thakan Jha ...	88 332
795	Raghunandan Pandey v. Garju Mandal ...	91 217	849	Ramgobind Singh v. Shashi Sekhar Prasad Singh ...	88 959
797	Aghori Koeri v. Babu Keshundeo Narayan Mahta ...	88 397	853	Dulhin Binodini Debi v. Parmeshwar Dayal Singh ...	88 987
799	Chhakauri Lal v. Isher Singh ...	91 814	857	Ram Pratap Marwari v. Sheikh Latif ...	91 76
801	Gonda Singh v. Jitan Mahto ...	88 395	859	Badri Sahu v. Pandit Peare Lal Misra ...	92 350
802	Harisankar Rai v. Tapaikuer ...	88 923	860	Sheo Charan Singh v. Kishno Kuer	92 2
805	Parmeshwar Singh v. Sureba Kuer	88 495
810	Deodhary Pandey v. King-Emperor	86 274

4 BURMA LAW JOURNAL, FROM APRIL TO JUNE, 1925.

72	Maung Aung Tha v. Maung Ba Than	88 612	110	S. K. Nagoor Meera v. Moideen Nainar Meera Ali ..	90 639
73	Mana Abu Backer v. Bee Bee	88 614	113	Maung Mya v. Ma Thin Tin ...	To be printed.
76	Ma Nan Thu v. Ma Shwe Mi	88 609	116	Lim Kar Chang v. T. S. Chetty Firm ...	91 78
80	Maung Oh Kyan v. Emperor	88 706	118	Maung San Min v. Maung Po Hlaing ...	To be printed.
83	G. V. W. Jones v. Emperor	To be printed.	123	Ma E Sein v. Mg. Hla Min ..	90 717
88	U Pe Gyi v. U Pyo	88 657	127	Siva Dass Dey v. Ashabi	91 679
91	Arunachellam Chettiar v. U Po Lu	92 631	130	M. K. M. V. Chetty Firm v. Ma Mya	To be printed.
93	Ma Hnin Yi v. Chew Whee Shein	90 635	131	Ally Moolla Industrial Corporation, Ltd. v. M. A. Esmail ..	90 676
97	In the matter of Maung Pan Win ..	88 759	135	P. S. A. L. Nachiappa Chettiar v. Mahomed Sabir Khan	92 370
99	U Tha Nyo v. Mg. Kyaw Tha	90 693	136	Maung Mya Din v. Maung Ye Gyi	92 719
102	Sin Seng Hin v. The Commissioner of Income-tax	89 785
103	Mahomed Hussain v. Hoosain Hamadane & Co.	90 967
104	Maung Sit Paung v. Maung Tun	90 728
107	Gopal v. King-Emperor	To be printed.
108	Mengha Singh v. Sucha Singh	90 995

18 SIND LAW REPORTER, PART IV FOR 1924.

265	Firm of Dassomal Ramchand v. Firm of Yusufali Adamji ..	86	361	298	King-Emperor v. Manu ...	Not reportable.
272	Crown v. Mahomed Punjal ...	77	736	301	Crown v. Khanu Kori ...	77 814
274	Mahomed v. Mahomed Idris ...	88	189	303	Chetansing Bagsing v. Gulibai ...	78 81
278	Moolyamal Topandas v. Ali Mahomed Jadwas ...	89	309	306	Tillumal v. Harbhagwandas ...	76 309
282	Pribhdas v. Sahib Khan ...	93	660	311	Aimai Shewakshaw v. Awabai Dhanjishah ...	76 739
286	Hotchand v. Tejoomal ...	89	353	320	Goverdhandas v. Rowji Hirji & Co. ...	76 62
				335	Khanchand v. T. G. Elphinston ...	76 203
				342	Pitumal v. Crown ...	88 449

26 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1925.

1441	Dhawa v. Emperor ..	89	961	1524	Forbes v. Muhammad Ali Haidar Khan ...	90 308
1441	Emperor v. Akhileshwari Prasad ..	89	961			90 309
1452	Sukhpat Lal v. Emperor ...	89	972	1525	Mohammad Yakub v. Emperor ...	90 310
1453	Kishen Chand v. Nanak Chand ..	89	973	1526	Jagardeo Ramsumar Tewari v. Emperor ...	90 316
1454	Lal Chand v. Emperor ...	89	974	1532	Sultan v. C. De M. Wellbourne ..	90 317
1455	Nura v. Emperor ..	89	975	1533	Ram Gopal Goenka v. The Corporation of Calcutta ...	90 320
1456	In re Muljibhai Hirabhai Patel ...	89	976	1536	Basappa Rachapa Hundekar v. Emperor ...	90 385
1456	Emperor v. Jafar Raki ..	89	976	1537	Sheocharan v. Emperor ...	90 387
1457	Patraji v. Emperor ...	89	1025	1539	Partap Chandra Guha Roy v. Emperor ...	90 398
1457	Muhammad Rahim v. Emperor ...	89	1025	1550	In re Perumal Naick ...	90 399
1458	Bawa Singh v. Emperor ...	89	1026	1551	Emperor v. Nisar Ali Khan ..	90 400
1459	Durjodhan Bhat v. Emperor ...	89	1027	1552	Rahimanshah v. Emperor ...	90 433
1459	Babo v. Emperor ...	89	1027	1553	Fazaruddin v. Emperor ...	90 434
1460	Fakir Chand v. Emperor ..	89	1028	1554	Emperor v. Nabu ...	90 436
1461	Emperor v. Ranchhod Harjivan ...	89	1029	1556	In re Yerlagadda Venkanna ...	90 439
1462	Dullah v. Emperor ...	89	1030	1559	Barhamdeo Rai v. Emperor ...	90 440
1462	Gokul Tatwa v. Emperor ...	89	1030	1560	Kasem Molla v. Emperor ..	90 442
1463	Emperor v. Thakordas Motiram ...	89	1031	1562	Shama Charan v. Emperor ...	90 441
1467	Anant Wasudeo Chandekar v. Emperor ...	89	1035	1564	Chhutkau v. Emperor ...	90 445
1474	Emperor v. P. B. Ponde ...	89	1042	1565	Faujdar Rai v. Emperor ...	90 447
1475	Emperor v. Phagunia Bhuian ..	89	1043	1567	Emperor v. Gajadhar Prasad ...	90 529
1478	Emperor v. Anandrao Gangaram Phanse ..	89	1046	1569	Chandra Kumar Sen v. Mathuriya Debya ...	90 530
1481	Pandia Mahar v. Emperor ...	89	1019	1570	In re Mania Manikha Padayachi ..	90 534
1482	Emperor v. Sahebava Birappa ..	89	1050	1574	Ahmed Ali v. Emperor ..	90 536
1482	Cheta Mahto v. Emperor ...	89	1050	1576	Emperor v. Mohammad Shafi ...	90 537
1485	Kanhaiya Lal v. Bhagwan Das ...	89	1053	1577	Abdul Gani Bhuya v. Emperor ...	90 541
1488	Sultan v. Emperor ...	89	1056	1581	Muqim-un-Nissa v. Ahmad-un-Nisa ...	90 542
1489	Bhagwantrao v. Emperor ...	90	145	1582	Kabatulla v. Emperor ...	90 544
1489	Sajjan Singh v. Emperor ..	90	145	1584	Srish Chandra Ghose v. Abani Nath Hazra ...	90 657
1491	Emperor v. Baldeo ...	90	147	1585	Sawan Singh v. Emperor ...	90 657
1492	Nur Muhammad v. Emperor ...	90	148	1585	Mahari Dhangar v. Baldeo Narain ...	90 659
1493	Dadu v. Emperor ...	90	149	1587	In re Kuppa Mudali ...	90 660
1494	Mula v. Emperor ...	90	150	1588	Wishnu Ram v. Emperor ..	90 661
1495	Bhura v. Emperor ...	90	151	1589	Balijeppalli Seshayya v. Balijeppalli Subbarayudi ..	90 661
1496	Chairman, Municipal Council, Chica- cole v. Gajireddi Seetharamayya Naidu ..	90	152	1589	Ram Pershad Tewari v. Emperor ...	90 665
1497	Hazara Singh v. Emperor ...	90	153	1593	Sanyasayya Naidu v. Public Prosecutor ...	90 666
1498	Haribar Singh v. Emperor ...	90	151	1594	Ramalinga Iyer v. Budda Varadarajulu Iyer ...	90 668
1500	Kartar Singh v. Emperor ..	90	156	1596	Nur Mohammad v. Nur Muhammad ...	90 669
1501	Thadiappan v. Veeraperumal Thevan ...	90	157	1596	Narayan Reddy v. Enumula Bojamma ...	90 705
1502	Harnandan Das v. Atul Kumar Prasad ..	90	158	1597	Kent v. Kent ...	90 706
1503	Sheo Darshan v. Emperor ..	90	159	1601	Bhabataran Mahto v. Emperor ..	90 712
1504	Sobhit Mallah v. Emperor ...	90	160	1602	Bishambar Nath Tondon v. Emperor ...	9 713
1505	E. J. Judah v. Emperor ..	90	289	1603	Ramprit Ahir v. Emperor ...	90 715
1506	Dwarka Prasad v. Makund Sarup ..	90	290	1609	Ram Charan v. Emperor ...
1508	Gopal Dass v. Maghi Ram ...	90	292	1611	Tunia v. Emperor ...
1510	Rez Muhammad v. Emperor ..	90	294
1511	Harbans Narain Singh v. Mohammad Sayeed ...	90	295
1513	In re Gam Mallu Dora ...	90	297

26 CRIMINAL LAW JOURNAL, FOR NOVEMBER-DECEMBER, 1925—concl'd.

1613	Ma E Sein v. Mg. Hla Min	90	717	1621	Emperor v. Mewa Ram	90	917
1615	Makhan Mapa v. Monindra Nath Bose	90	719	1622	Maung Tok v. Emperor	90	918
1617	Ram Harakh Pathak v. Emperor	90	913	1627	Ramsakal Rai v. Emperor	90	923
1618	Krishnamurthi Iyer v. Naryanaswami Iyer	90	914	1629	Ali Bahadur v. Emperor	90	925
1619	Sri Kishan v. Debi Dayal	90	915	1630	Sultan Muhammad Khan v. Emperor	90	926
				1631	Haq Dad v. Emperor	90	927

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925.

Privy Council.

130	Begu v. Emperor	88	3
132	Bhagwani Kunwar v. Mohan Singh	88	385
139	Pramatha Nath v. Pradhyumna Kumar.	87	305
146	A. H. Forbes v. Sir L. E. Ralli	87	318
150	Diwan Chand-Kirpa Ram & Co. v. Weld & Co.	83	51
155	Sevak Jeranchod Bhogilal v. Dakore Temple Committee	87	313
157	Probhudas v. Ganidada	88	337
159	Udoychand Pannalal v. Guzdar & Co.	88	445
161	Hope Pradhomme & Co. v. Hamel & Horley, Ltd.	88	307
168	Lajwanti v. Safa Chand	88	198
169	Gajadhar Mahton v. Ambika Prasad Tewari	87	292
170	Ghulam Rasul Khan v. Secretary of State for India	86	654
172	Palaniappa Chettiar v. Kathiresan Chettiar	88	351
174	Sreemanthu Rajah Yarlagadda Malikarjuna Prasada Nayudu Bahadur Zamindar v. Renduchintala Subbayya	88	196
174	Neki v. Chhajju Ram	89	185
176	Lal Rajindra Narain Singh v. Sundar Bibi	87	295
177	Ahmad Khan v. Ali Ebrahim	Not reportable.
180	Hanmant Rao v. Emperor	89	813
181	Lakshmiah v. Kothandarama	88	327
184	Mir Subhan Ali v. Imami Begam	88	347
188	Burn & Co. v. Sree Lukhdirji	90	52
194	Jacob v. Wills	89	824
196	Vijayaratnam v. Sudarsana Rao	89	733
198	Bai Monghibai v. Pragji Dayal	89	88
199	Doddawa v. Bennepagowda	86	326
201	Seetharama Chandra Row v. Krishna Row	89	817
203	Hira Bibi v. Ram Hari Lal	89	659
201	Farid-un-nisa v. Mukhtar Ahmad	89	619
211	Nowroji v. Government of Bombay	90	48
213	Rajendra Narain v. Gangananda Singh	89	737
216	Kirkwood v. Maung Sin	89	773
223	Homeshwar Singh v. Jagat Kishore Marwari	90	596
226	Bhupendra Narayan Singh v. Narapat Singh	90	607
229	Dr. Vrasapillai Gabriel v. Eliatamby	Not reportable.
232	Noorbhai v. Karuppan Chetty	Not reportable.
234	Mahabir Prasad Tewari v. Jamuna Singh	Not reportable.
236	Maung Bya v. Maung Kyi Nyo	92	31
		90	198

Allahabad High Court.

305	Dulli v. Emperor	85	714
308	Ameraj Singh v. Emperor	86	287
307	Azimuddin v. Emperor	86	420
308	Lalji v. Emperor	86	350
309	Nathu Mal v. Emperor	86	808
310	Jhun Lal v. Emperor	86	219
311	Raghunath Upadia v. Emperor	86	809
311	Gokul Prasad v. Debi Prasad	86	284
313	Emperor v. Sital Prasad	86	217
313	Ram Sewak v. Emperor	85	382
315	Emperor v. Autar	86	52
316	Nanhe Mal v. Jamil-ur-Rahman	86	59
318	Bhagwan Das v. Saddiq Ahmad	86	79
318	Emperor v. Madho Singh	86	801
319	Ramzani v. Emperor	86	45
322	Debigir Tapdhari v. Emperor	86	973
323	Surajpal Singh v. Saheb Singh	85	749
324	Sheopujan Misra v. Mangu Rai	86	130
324	Daulat v. Sankatha Prasad	86	21
325	Ram Ghulam v. Ram Chandra	86	85
327	Abdul Karim v. Ram Kishore	86	85
328	Jwala Prasad v. Chuttan	85	161
330	Bindrabai v. Ram Narain	85	449
331	Makhan Lal v. Sohan Lal	87	665
333	Shankar Sahi v. Baichu Ram	86	769
335	Nathu v. Ram Sarup	87	700
336	Mukha v. Mitter Sen	86	786
337	Ram Sarup v. Arya Samaj, Dhampur	86	255
339	Sarju Prasad Rout v. Mangal Singh	87	294
340	Sant Lal v. Beni Prasad	87	985
341	Mahadeo Rai v. Jan Muhammad	85	1
342	Maqsood Ali v. Abdullah	92	468
344	Ratni Bai v. Ghasi Ram Nathu Ram	86	105
315	Narain Singh v. Gujraj	86	728
346	Shib Charan Das v. Kharka	86	174
348	Raghubir Saran Das v. Ram Das	85	608
351	Kubar Upadhia v. Ramakar Dat Upadhia	85	86
352	Jagannath Prasad v. Jado Rai	85	963
353	Sham Devi v. Bhagwat Dayal	85	54
355	Umar Daraz v. Ram Das	87	55
356	Gopi Nath v. Ram Nath	87	585
358	Kunwar Nihal Singh v. Chanda Kunwar	86	741
360	Hazari Lal v. Abbas Mirza	86	595
361	Nadir Hussain v. Sadiq Husain	86	589
362	Dalip v. Khazan Singh	87	340
364	Narain Das v. Chiranji Lal	86	168
366	Budh Sagar v. Bishun Sahi	86	554
367	Kanhaiya Lal v. Nirajan Lal	86	98
369	Umrao Singh v. Pichi	86	445
371	Harakh Chand v. Ganga Prasad	86	922
375	Manki Kunwar v. Kundan Kunwar	87	121
376	Abdul Majid v. Ala Bux	86	1055

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925—contd.

Allahabad High Court—contd.			Allahabad High Court—contd.
378	Kalika Singh v. Ram Lal Singh ..	87 92	473	Rameshwar v. Gobind Prasad ...	87 426
379	Azmatullah Khan v. Ahmad Ali ...	88 581	474	Mahtab-un-nisa v. Rifaqat Ullah ...	85 459
380	Abdul Rahman v. Abdul Rahman ..	87 51	477	Zabar Singh v. Ram Sarup ..	85 726
381	E. I. Ry. Co. v. Tota Ram Pirbhu Dayal ...	86 162	478	Ram Autar v. Emperor ...	87 846
385	Lachman Prasad, In re ...	88 216	479	Dip Narain Rai v. Lachhman ...	87 799
388	Emperor v. Mahadeo ...	88 275	481	Dhanukdhari v. Piari ...	86 180
389	Sundar Bibi v. Rajendra Narain Singh ...	86 684	483	Bansidhar v. Dulhatia ...	87 235
392	Bhimmi v. Pershadi ..	87 410	484	Thakur Rudrapal Singh v. Matabadal Singh ...	85 480
393	Hakim Ullah v. Karim Bux ...	86 788	486	Kandhaiya Singh v. Kundan ...	87 257
394	Raghunath Prasad v. Lachmi Narain ...	88 271	487	Kehar Singh v. Jahangir Singh ...	88 761
395	Gudri Singh v. Parsotam Das ...	86 917	488	Ram Narain v. Nihal Singh ..	87 804
396	Babu Ram v. Emperor ..	87 523	491	Sagar Singh v. Sri Ram ...	88 136
399	Kandhai Lal v. Debi Prasad ...	87 778	492	Sheodarshan Singh v. Beni Chaudhari ...	87 585
400	Baijnath v. Dennet ...	88 78	495	Ishwari Prasad v. Babunaudan Shukul ...	88 193
401	Ram Gulam Singh v. Emperor ...	87 514	493	Amir v. Emperor ..	87 927
403	Firm Ram Gopal v. Income-Tax Commissioner ...	87 797	499	Kanhai v. Amrit ...	87 162
404	Jagat v. Sarawan ...	88 76	501	Rameshwar Prasad, In re ...	86 1027
405	Laijam Singh v. Emperor ...	86 817	502	Durga Prasad v. Gangadin ...	88 202
409	Kishori Lal v. Emperor ...	85 821	503	Gajendra Singh v. Durga Kumari..	88 768
410	Moti Ram v. Emperor ..	85 710	518	Kashi Nath v. Emperor ...	88 5
411	Raja Devi v. Muhammad Yaqub ...	88 109	519	The Union Bank of Allahabad, In re ..	88 785
412	Firm Bisesar Ram v. Firm Har Kishen ...	87 370	535	Begg Sutherland & Co., In re ...	88 239
413	Mohan Singh v. Emperor ..	85 647	537	Gajraj Singh v. Emperor ...	88 600
417	Munno Devi v. Municipal Board, Agra ...	88 191	538	Chunder Sen v. Mohar Singh ..	85 700
419	Ram Prasad Singh v. Babu Lal ...	86 849	539	Har Bhajan Lal v. Har Charan Lal ..	88 908
420	Daulat Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal ..	87 417	540	Motilal v. Emperor ...	88 1049
421	Ram Prasad Singh v. Nepal Singh ...	88 290	541	Jai Mangal Chand v. Ganpat Chand ...	86 942
424	Gajadhar Singh v. Hari Singh ...	87 647	542	Sarju Prasad v. Bhagwati Prasad ...	88 297
425	Amir Haidar v. Ali Ahmad ...	88 234	543	Sital Rai v. Ram Khelawan Pandey ...	88 431
426	Parbhu Dayal v. Tirbhuwan ..	85 788	544	Ramcharan Das v. Emperor ...	88 358
427	Babu Ram v. Banke Behari Lal ...	87 211	546	Mahip Narain Pandey v. Mannu Singh ...	88 130
427	Parmanand v. Mata Din ..	87 477	547	Ram Prasad Singh v. Jagtamba Prasad Singh ...	88 420
431	Motilal v. Bishambhar Nath ...	88 95	548	Sultan v. Hardhiyan ...	88 294
432	Bhuta v. Bisheshar Singh ..	87 564	549	Niadar v. Ramji Lal ..	88 944
434	Emperor v. Kutroo ...	88 280	550	Nur Bibi v. Ali Ahmad ..	88 408
436	Ramzan Baksh v. Muhammad Ishaq ...	87 484	551	Ganga Devi v. Ram Prasad ...	88 393
437	Ghumna v. Ram Chandra Rao ...	88 411	552	Madhuri Saran v. Parbati ...	88 653
439	Raghunath Singh v. Mahabir Prasad ...	87 558	553	Kishun Ahir v. Saran Ahir ..	88 433
440	Nagar v. Khase ...	86 893	554	Abdul Wahid v. Hatim Ali ...	88 434
442	Firm Jhandu Lal v. Wilayti ...	87 488	555	Kanji Mall v. Durga Prasad ...	88 438
443	Din Dayal v. Emperor ...	87 517	556	Pitam Lal v. Balwant Singh ...	88 396
446	Khudayar Khan v. Rahat Khan ...	87 415	557	Parbhu Lal v. Chattar ...	88 398
447	Jumna Das v. Kunwer Bai ...	87 440	558	Sita Ram v. Peare ..	88 611
448	Dhum Singh v. Emperor ...	88 1	559	Husain Baksh v. Mahfuzul Haq ...	88 972
449	Abhainandan Prasad v. Pashpat Nath ..	87 298	561	Sanwalia v. Nathi Lal ..	88 504
453	Sat Narain v. Bindesri Prasad ...	87 787	562	Firm Balram Das-Fakir Chand v. G. I. P. Ry. Co. ...	88 559
454	Ali Hammad v. Ghurpattar Singh ..	85 578	563	Thakur Prasad v. Gulab Kunwar ...	87 662
456	Mulay v. Balgovind ...	87 349	564	Durga Ram v. Har Kishen Das ..	88 440
457	Md. Abdul Rab v. Khodaija Bibi ...	88 165	565	Lalla Babu v. Lal Bahadur ...	87 569
458	Fakhr-ud-din v. Rahimulla ...	85 502	566	Rudra Prasad Pande v. Mathura Prasad Pande ...	89 173
459	Ravi Nandan Prasad v. Jagar Nath ...	87 278	567	Ishwar Prasad v. Babu Bishunath Prasad Singh ...	85 627
465	Ammar v. Govind! ..	83 247	569	Faqir Ullah v. Hikmat Ullah ...	88 661
466	Ganga Prasad v. Kishai ...	87 175	570	Gulab Dei v. Vaish Motor Company ...	88 429
467	Net Singh v. Receiver, Gajraj's Estate ...	89 488	571	Lachmi Narain v. Mooli ...	85 537
469	In re , Chuni Lal ..	86 189	572	Ganga Jee v. Sat Narain Lal ..	87 205
471	Rudra Pratap v. Sharda Mahesh Prasad ...	88 200
472	Sanokhan v. Emperor ...	85 818

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925—contd.

Allahabad High Court—concl'd.

Bombay High Court—contd.

574	Salamat Ali v. Guj Kumar Chand...	85	302	342	Chandulal v. Dagdu	87	435
576	Dip Narain Singh v. Jagmohan Ahir	87	15	343	Kallappa v. Balwant	87	951
578	Khem Singh v. Raghubir Singh	86	1048	344	Hardayal v. Haji Adam	87	1011
580	Bahadur v. Moti Chand	88	224	345	Ahmed v. Rander Municipality	87	918
584	Dip Chand v. Muhammad Khalil	88	162	346	Mohanlal v. Harilal	87	929
585	Kali Charan Singh v. Bageshra Kunwari	89	374	347	Dhanaji v. Gulabchand	87	812
587	Panchaiti Akhara v. Beni Bahadur Singh	87	262	350	Jadavbai v. Multanchand	87	936
588	Rudra Pratab Singh v. Sarda Mahesh Prasad Singh	87	322	351	Ved & Sopher v. Wagle & Co.	88	81
590	Zorawar Singh v. Bhagwan Singh	89	427	355	Jivanlal v. Bai Manchha	87	1043
591	Darbari Lal v. Emperor	89	146	357	Kedarnath v. Biharilal	87	1026
592	Kewal v. Tufail Ahmad	88	357	360	Roberts v. Shanks	To be printed.
Bombay High Court.				362	Achyut v. Ramachandra	87	719
289	Govindaprasad Lalitprasad Mishar v. Rindabai Lalitaprasad	87	472	363	Manikbai v. Gokuldas	87	816
290	Amarsangji Indrasangji v. Desai Umed	86	31	365	Bhikaji v. Secretary of State for India	92	110
292	Hanmant Gurunath Kulkarni v. Ramappa Lagamappa Ilager	86	879	367	Nanilal v. Ishvarbhai	87	934
294	Amarsangji Indrasangji v. Ranchhod Jethabhai	91	265	368	Saibai v. Balkrishna	87	702
299	Makkama Khadirsahab v. Masabi Abasali	86	876	369	Royal Bank of Scotland v. Rahim Cassum	87	982
301	Sridhar Rambhau Mane v. Gujabai Mhasku Shewale	86	867	372	Dnyanu v. Vishnu	87	721
302	Ratanji Dorabji v. Kisandas Tribhovandas	To be printed.		373	Imambhai v. Rahimbhai	87	977
305	Hassanali Degumiya v. Ruhulla Hamad	86	886	375	Vishnu v. Tukaram	87	779
309	Mehbunissa Begum v. Mehedunissa Begum	To be printed.		377	Tukaram v. Balabai	87	696
310	Supadi Lukadu v. Emperor	87	840	378	Mody & Co. v. Mahomadbhai & Co.	87	793
311	Mahadev Narain Joshi v. Shirdharbhat Gopalbhat Joshi	87	716	380	Ratilal v. Motilal	88	891
313	Hirabhai Dahyabhai v. Manek Lal Ranchhod	87	713	385	Bai Lalbu v. Mohanlal Gokaldas Javeri	89	215
314	Jamshedji Naoroji Gamadia v. Maganlal Bankeylal & Co.	92	9	386	Devakaran Bholaram v. Sangidas Jesiram	89	605
318	Commissioner of Income-Tax v. Purshottamdas Thakordas	87	706	387	P. B. Ponde v. Emperor	89	560
320	Narsingacharya Gopalacharya Shurpeli v. Tulsabai Rambhat Dandavati	87	712	389	Pandurang Shridhar v. Narhar Pandurang Atre	89	560
321	Habib Rowji v. Aluminium & Brass Works	88	96	390	Juvansingji Motisingji Thakor v. Dhola Chhala	91	272
324	Mahadeo v. Ganoo	87	735	398	Lakshman Santu v. Balkrishna Keshav	89	878
325	Sundarabi v. Lakshman	87	723	399	Shripad Dattatraya Kamat v. Vithal Vasudevshet Parker	89	197
326	Gulabrao v. Magan Ghelabhai	87	769	400	Dhanrajgirji Narsingirji v. W. G. Ward	88	886
327	Emperor v. Krishtappa	87	838	402	Hanmant Subbaya Naik v. Krishna Manjunath Yaji	89	62
328	Basayya v. Allayya	87	710	404	Krishnarao Pandurang Barve v. Balwant Keshav Patil	89	217
329	In re, Mahomed Esmail	88	77	406	Kesarlal Girdharlal Desai v. Jagubhai Hiralal	To be printed.
330	Ardeskar v. K. D. & Bros.	88	79	413	Shrinivas Narayan Prabhu v. Shid-dika Maidin Saiba	89	990
331	Gordhandas v. Gautamchand	87	1051	414	Jagannath Nathu v. Ichharam Naroba Vani	89	881
333	Pranlal v. Goculdas	88	92	415	Peruri Suryanarayanan v. W. L. Narsimha	89	996
335	Bahadurmal v. Mohanlal	87	1008	416	Shripad Gopalakrishna Chandavarkar v. Basappa Rudrappa Dandi	89	189
337	Ball v. Ball	88	86	417	Vishvanath Bhiva Raul v. Tukaram Vithu	89	68
339	Induraj v. Shivilal	87	699	418	Abdul Aziz Sheikh v. Chandu Sonu Khodke	89	580
341	Bhikalal v. Achratlal	87	910	419	Kalyan Municipality v. Govind Karsan Ramji	89	980
				420	Deekappa Malappa Kumbli v. Chanasappa Rachappa Neeli

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925—contd.

Bombay High Court—concl'd.			Calcutta High Court—contd.
422	Kondi Savla Bachal v. Banachand Cheniram	89 220	739	Brajeswari Dasi v. Rasik Chandra	85 581
423	Chhotallal Mohanlal v. Ambalal Hargovan	89 225	742	Mahabir Singh v. Giribala Dassi ..	87 526
424	Kisan Tukaram Takle v. Bapu Tukaram Ghadling	89 196	743	Indra Narain v. Sarbasova Dasi ..	87 930
425	Tukaram Mahadu Tandel v. Ramchandra Mahadu	89 984	748	Taleb Ali v. Abdul Razack ..	89 141
429	P. B. Ponde v. Emperor	89 1012	750	Hazarimull v. Sadasukh	88 808
430	Trimbak Narayan v. Damu Bhau	To be printed.	752	Bejoy Chand v. Kali Prasanna	87 708
431	Nilkant Vasudeo Samant v. Balwant Pandurang Samant	88 753	754	Nalinakshya v. Raghunath	85 662
431	Duma Toma Rumav v. Nathu Farsha Kurel	92 16	758	Dhirendra Chandra v. Khaja Habibullah	87 442
432	Laxman Waman Gadre v. Saraswati Ganesh	89 211	761	Satish Chandra v. Debendra Nath	85 636
Calcutta High Court.			766	Shyma Bibi v. Madhusudhan	85 100
673	Turner v. Emperor	86 659	768	Lila v. Bijoy Protap	87 534
674	Gokul Khatik v. Emperor	86 970	779	Bhupendra Nath v. Rai Charan ..	85 529
676	Nayan Munjari Dassi v. Chairman of the Commissioner of the Howrah Municipality	85 618	781	Rabindra Nath v. Abdul Ahad & Co.	88 400
678	Aswini Kumar Dutt v. Puti	85 978	782	Muhammad Yasin v. Emperor	88 602
679	Asiruddin Mondal v. Ram Shakhi Debya	85 775	783	Sivadas v. Birendra Krishna	88 654
681	Sreedhar Chaudhury v. Nilmoni Chaudhury	86 677	785	Jagannath v. Kalachand	86 1042
681	Krishna Mohan Ghosh v. Surapati Banerjee	To be printed.	788	Behari Lal v. Asutosh Banerjee	87 19
681	Radha Krishna Marwari v. Sarbeswar Nag	85 674	790	Jogendra Narayan v. Satyendra Chandra	90 380
686	Promatha Nath Mitra v. Manmatha Nath Mitra	86 610	791	Hay v. Bonomali	88 589
689	Satish Chandra Nag v. Haripada De	87 43	791	Jatindra Nath v. Gouri Bala	88 608
690	Hari Chandana Joga Deva v. Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd.	90 86	795	Saroda Charan v. Emperor	87 606
696	Askaran Choutmal v. E. I. Ry. & Co.	88 413	797	Advocate General, Bengal v. S. Webb	88 890
703	Monmotho Nath v. Puran Chand Nahatta	88 23	798	Government of Bengal v. Muchu Khan	86 467
711	Nishi Kanta Sarkar v. Umar Lal Sarkar	86 1029	799	Ram Nath v. Official Trustee, Bengal	87 1014
714	Pramatha Nath Sanyal v. Kali Kumar Dutt	88 5	801	Bhowanidas Ramgovind v. Ponnachand Luchmipat	88 929
716	Agent, Bengal Nagpur Ry. v. Behari Lal Dutt	90 426	805	Joyram Chandra v. Bisnu Charan	85 781
720	Sanatan Bhattacharya v. King-Emperor	88 856	806	Nityaranjan v. Emperor	88 607
721	Kalisadhan Addya v. Nani Lal Hazra	89 251	807	Kanchan Barani Debi v. Umesh Chandra	87 529
722	Raj Kumar Basu v. Girindra Kumar Bandyopadhyaya	87 178	809	In re Bhagat Bros. Ltd.	88 905
724	Indubala Debi v. Manmatha Nath Roy	87 404	812	Wang v. Sona Wangdi	87 633
729	Jessarar v. Emperor	87 833	814	G. M. Falkner v. Mirza Mahomed Syed Ali	86 853
735	Kamruddin Hyder v. M. N. Mitter	89 277	816	Nawab Ali v. Emperor	88 849
736	Sheikh Sadir v. Sabarali	88 528	817	Kailash Chandra v. Sadar Munsif, Silchar	88 826
737	Arjun Das Nariram v. Secretary of State	85 786	819	Sarada Prasad Roy Chowdhury v. Rai Mohan Saha	85 629
			821	Sarat Chandra Kar v. Emperor	88 860
			822	Narendra Chandra Rudra Pal v. Sabarali Bhuiya	88 714
			831	Dargahi v. Emperor	88 733
			834	Francis Higgins Pell v. Minnie Gregory	89 1
			845	Becharam Choudhuri v. Purna Chandra Chatterji	88 637
			852	Alexander & Co. Ltd., In re	88 672
			856	Pran Mohan Das v. Hari Mohan Das	85 790
			857	Sourendra Nath Mitter v. Tarubala Dassi	89 94
			860	Sanderson Kirkwood Tennent v. Walter Mitchel	88 435
			862	Mohini Mohan Misra v. Sarat Sundari Debi	86 353
			866	Taru Bala Dassi v. Sourendra Nath Mitra	88 269
			872	Ledu Molla v. Emperor	87 925
			874	Miller v. Miller	89 611

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925—contd.

Calcutta High Court—concl'd.

Lahore High Court—contd.

876	Emperor v. Premananda Dutt ..	88	1000	423	Bishan Sarup v. Emperor ..	86	61
884	Gouri Prosad Dey v. Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China ...	89	642	424	Mangtu v. Lachhi Ram ...	90	227
887	Sheikh Abdul v. Emperor ..	85	880	425	Sheo Nath v. Puran Mal ..	90	228
890	Nirmal Kumar Singh v. Secretary of State for India in Council ..	88	404	426	Maula Dad v. Emperor ..	86	69
893	Nani Bala Sen v. Auckland Jute Co., Ltd. ..	89	679	427	Mansa Ram v. Naurati ..	87	650
898	Pranesh Chandra Sen v. Banwarilal Shaha ...	86	533	428	Bulaki Mal v. Shambu Nath ...	88	896
902	Emperor v. Jitendra Nath Bose ..	89	709	429	Mahtab Shah v. Ali Haidar ...	92	709
903	Nayan Ullah v. Emperor ..	85	818	430	Sardari Mal v. Abdul Samad ...	90	39
906	Reference under O. XLVI, R. 1, C. P. C. ..	89	289	431	Panna Lal v. Balwant ...	87	250
907	Gora Chand v. Prafulla Kumar Roy ..	89	685	432	Bahawala v. Emperor ..	88	854
909	Emperor v. Mofizel Peada ..	89	242	434	Mehr Dad v. Muhammad Ali Shah...	90	250
				435	Fakhr-ud-din v. Crown ...	To be printed.
				436	Nur Mahommad v. Lal Chand ...	90	254
				437	Bahali v. Emperor ..	86	160
				438	Mubarak Ali Shah v. Secretary of State ..	94	145
				439	Gopal Dass v. Maghi Ram ...	90	292
				441	Nanak Chand-Mukandi Lal v. E. I. Ry. ...	89	279
				442	Ghannun Ram v. Jattu ...	89	928
				443	Surjan Das v. Chabba Cotton Co. ...	86	652
				444	Ganga Ram v. Indi ..	88	902
				445	Shankar Das v. Behari Lal ..	89	932
				446	Emperor v. Fitzmaurice ..	93	149
				448	Bawa Singh v. Emperor ..	89	1026
				449	Labh Singh v. Narinjan Das ..	88	85
				450	Kewal Ram v. Rahmat Khan ..	86	176
				451	Sardar Khan v. Hidayat ..	89	977
				452	Amir Zaman v. Emperor ..	88	861
				453	Bhagwan Das v. Rahim Dad Khan ..	89	979
				454	Emperor v. Nisar Muhammad Khan ..	86	1006
				455	Chandu v. Gajju ..	88	176
				456	Raghubir Saran v. Sohan Devi ..	86	104
				457	Ram Bheja Mal v. Bhagwan Dass ...	89	955
				458	Amir Hamza v. Murad Bibi ...	To be printed.
				459	Dhannun v. Emperor ..	86	156
				459	Sardari Mal v. Hirde Nath ..	87	994
				461	Moti Ram v. Emperor ..	86	661
				464	Emperor v. Jarnali ..	86	62
				465	Sita Ram v. Bal Kishen ..	88	472
				466	Sunder Singh v. Nighaiya ..	88	920
				467	Habib-ud-din v. Hatim Mirza ..	86	622
				470	Jiya Lal v. Shugan Chand ..	86	673
				471	Ram Chand v. Chhunun Mal ..	88	201
				477	Nand Lal v. Crown ..	88	1044
				478	Secretary of State v. Dunlop Rubber Co. Ltd.	88	979
				479	Ghulam Sarwar v. Ghulam Mustafa ..	90	603
				480	Hari Ram v. Buta Shah-Lachmi Das ..	V. table.
				481	Sri Ram v. Kidari Parshad-Chhedi Lal ..	88	743
				482	Jawaya Shah v. Fatima ..	89	656
				483	Ram Karan v. Emperor ..	92	577
				488	Har Parshad v. Emperor ..	86	1028
				489	Chandra Wati v. Jagan Nath Singh ..	90	611
				490	Mehr Nur Mohammad v. Nur Mohammad ..	90	608
				491	Ata Muhammad v. Shankar Das ..	88	872
				493	Gurbachan Kaur v. Satwant Kuar ..	90	620
				494	Anwar-ul-Haq v. Razar Abbas ..	88	865

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925—contd.

Lahore High Court—concl'd.			Madras High Court—contd.
495	Wasal v. Crown	92 587	599	Ernest William Adams v. H. S. F. Gray	90 5
496	Radha Krishan v. Mehtab Mian	90 629	606	Toleti Satyanarayanamoorthi v. Jayanti Butchayya	87 124
497	Ishar Das v. Lal Singh	90 632	607	Veerappa Chettiar v. Municipal Council, Palni	88 662
499	Sawan Singh v. Emperor	90 657	609	Kalyanji v. Ram Deen Lala	86 449
500	Asa Nand v. Dona Ram	86 733	613	Murugappa Naicker v. Emperor	86 286
501	Rahmat Ali v. Daulat Bibi	90 640	614	Xavier v. Joseph	87 216
503	Chandu Lal v. Mukandi	87 40	617	Venkataramayya v. Bandi Veeraswami	88 665
504	Bulli Mal v. Jhabba	92 569	619	Manikka Mudaliar v. Muhammad Zianuddin Saheb	86 797
505	Municipal Committee, Ferozepore City v. Milki Ram	92 603	620	Vavaru Ambalam v. President, Taluk Board of Ramnad	90 803
506	Hem Raj v. Nihal Singh	90 678	621	Subba Rao v. Appadurai Aiyar	86 839
507	Sher Khan v. Prabh Dayal	90 683	624	Muttathil Damodara Menon v. Ramakrishna Aiyar	86 443
509	Jhanda v. Sapuran Singh	85 772	626	Edmund Bendit v. Edgar Raphael Prudhomme	87 681
510	Emperor v. Gulam Mohammad	92 590	631	Sankara Narayana Pillay v. Gammal	87 1
511	Maqsudan Lal v. Ram Chunder Ram Rachpal	88 289	633	Gopal Chetti v. Ripon Press & Sugar Mill, Co. Ltd., Bellary	86 914
512	Allu v. Emperor	86 1007	635	Subbamma v. Adimoorthappa	86 269
513	Phul Chand-Fateh Chand v. Chhote Lal-Amba Pershad	90 654	636	Mohadeen Saheb v. Setti Chinna Fakurddin Sahib	85 1045
514	Imam Din v. Emperor	86 218	638	Bhallamudi Kama Sastri v. Thirumamidi Kannamma	88 765
515	Gulab Rai-Lahri Mal v. East Indian Railway Company	87 592	639	Pachiyayae v. Vallimuthu Velan	87 437
516	Relu Mal v. Masiti	87 237	640	Subbana v. Kurnam Dhandra Bayamma	86 498
517	Abdul Razak v. Muhammad Sharif	86 616	645	Shyama Bhai v. Purushothamados	90 124
518	Saad Ullah v. Ibrahim	85 553	660	Lodd Govindoss Krishnadoss Varu v. Muthiah Chetty	To be printed.
519	Nanwan v. Emperor	86 217	669	Subbiah Moopnar v. Ponnammal	88 393
520	Dedar Singh v. Bansi	85 741	670	Suleman Saheb v. Perichevla Venkatraju	86 195
521	Dhian Singh v. Gurdit Singh	89 234	672	Perumal Naick v. Emperor	90 398
522	Attar Singh v. Emperor	88 367	673	Somayya v. Venkayya	86 483
523	Mitra v. Municipal Committee, Lahore	89 658	675	Achuthan v. Abdu	91 833
524	Wishnu Ram v. Crown	90 660	681	Sinnana v. Veerappa	90 800
525	Lachmi Narain v. Muhammad Ji...	To be printed.	682	Seetharama v. Secretary of State	91 489
526	Jit Singh v. Emperor	86 811	686	Stephen v. Administrator General	90 498
527	Sansar Chand v. Karam Chand	89 613	688	Official Assignee v. Aiyu Dikshit-har	88 85
Madras High Court.			689	Muthusami v. Rayalu	88 375
577	Krishna Ayyar v. Ayyappa Naick	88 188	690	In re Gum Mallu Dora	90 297
578	Velovolu Potharaju v. Matta Adisesu	87 391	701	Palaniappa v. Subbramaniam	88 409
578	Pandalapelli Narayana Reddi v. G. Dyvadeenachar	86 813	703	Balaguruswami v. Guruswami	87 949
579	Grandhe Venkatasubbiah v. Emperor	86 209	706	In re Kadalnatha	87 924
584	Chairman, Municipal Council, Chica-cole v. Gajireddi Seetharamayya Naidu	90 152	707	Janardhanan v. Verghese	87 113
585	Sonaimuthu Ambalam v. Emperor	87 916	709	Janakiramayya v. Brahmayya	88 218
585	Kariya Goundan v. Tirukkaivelu Chetty	87 90	710	Basappa v. Santhappa	87 568
586	Venkata Chinnayamma Rao Bahadur Zamindarini Garu v. Subbamma Rao Bahadur Zamindarini Garu	To be printed.	711	Palani Goundan v. Emperor	88 31
587	Karaga Nidhi Ltd. v. Vania Vilasa Nidhi Ltd.	87 390	712	In re Chinnappa	88 177
588	Appaswamy Chettiar v. N. Balkrishna Pillai	87 189	713	Venkata Ramani v. Narayanaswami	87 660
589	Kothandaram Chettiar v. Annamalai Pillai	87 399	714	Paswan v. Rangaswami	88 88
591	Velu Thevan v. Krishnasami Reddi	87 297	715	Theetharappa v. Meenakshi Ammal	87 105
593	Govindoss Chatabhujados v. N. Ramados	90 92	716	In re Senjimalai	86 804
			717	Krishnaswami v. Pulukuruppa	88 424
			722	Sudalaimuthu v. Peria Somasundaram	87 25

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925—contd.

Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court—concl'd.			Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court—contd.
281	Onkarprasad v. Badri Das	89 273	400	Ram Narayan v. Barkandi	86 725
284	Gangabakas v. Narayan	86 505	401	Umrao v. Narain	89 175
288	Pestonji v. Ganpat	89 888	402	Jaidat Singh v. Baldeo Singh	86 752
289	Madho Rao v. Manoharlal	85 779	403	Mahraj Din v. Balbhaddar Per-shad	85 481
291	Chimnaji Raibhanji v. Sonaji	88 901	404	Gur Prasad v. Lalman	88 379
292	Collector of Nagpur v. Atmaram Bhagwant	Not reportable	406	Raza Mohammad Khan v. Ram Lal Kalwar	88 201
294	Akbar Hussain v. Emperor	89 398	407	Mohammad Zaki Khan v. Munnu Sahu	87 176
295	Motirao v. Gambhirprasad	87 832	408	Karya Singh v. Shiva Ratan Singh	86 913
296	Nathusing v. Crown	83 362	409	Iqbalur Rahman v. Altafur Rahman	86 703
297	Dashrath v. Tarachand	89 514	410	Rana Uma Nath Baksh Singh v. Janki Baksh Singh	86 864
298	Kisan v. Jasodabai	92 530	411	Ram Autar v. Sheo Piarey Lal Pandey	87 722
299	Narayan v. Dhudabai	92 663	412	Uman Shankar Singh v. Murli-dhar	89 187
302	Bhagwat v. Anandrao	86 515	413	Girdhari Lal v. Emperor	86 993
306	Wasudeo v. Bhiwa	89 44	416	Munnu Lal v. Harde Ram	86 1008
313	Anant v. Emperor	89 1035	417	Kalimuddin v. Tata Industrial Bank, Ltd.	88 1016
320	Rukhmabai v. Ramachandra	88 831	418	Suraj Bakhsh v. Bans Bahadur	87 987
321	Emperor v. Mahadeo Ganes Mulherker	86 469	419	B. & N. W. Ry. v. Court of Wards, Balrampur	89 139
324	Ragho v. R. M. Doye	87 81	421	Ahmad Agha v. Zohra Begam	87 1024
325	Suryabhan Pirthamji v. Pandu	86 375	422	Emperor v. Brij Behari	89 245
327	Paga Patil v. Ishwardas	88 876	423	Balkaran Singh v. Emperor	89 152
328	Bhagi v. Kashiram	89 55	424	Sitapat Ram v. Mahabir Prasad	88 532
329	Narayan v. Tulsiram	87 979	425	Baijnath v. Emperor	85 353
333	Madras & Southern Maratha Rail-way Co. v. Seth Ramnath	87 1031	428	Jang Bahadur v. Beni Madhao	89 99
Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court.			429	Jagannath Singh v. Jagjiwan Das	87 829
369	Ram Pher v. Ajudhia Singh	87 17	432	Ghani Ahmad Khan v. Aziz Be-gam	88 134
370	Deoki v. Jugal Kishore	85 529	433	Aisha v. Chatta	89 418
371	Muhammad Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Ugraj Singh	86 270	434	Manohar Lal v. Ram Ratan	88 538
373	Sheo Balak v. Ambika Sahai	87 333	435	Kalka Devi v. Ganga Bakhsh Singh	88 127
373	Bankey Lal v. Ram Lal	86 918	438	Mulla v. Emperor	89 158
374	Dilan v. Ram Bharosey	85 693	439	Algoo v. Shami Narain	89 465
374	Murli Brahman v. Emperor	89 836	440	Rajwanta v. Rameshar	87 180
377	Abdul Wahab v. Tahira Bano	89 51	441	Ram Pargat v. Emperor	88 461
379	Matadeen v. Mustafa Husain	88 165	442	Nageshar v. Baldeo	87 183
379	Bansidhar v. Jagmohan Das	86 748	443	Sheo Dulare v. Baij Nath	89 287
381	Ali Abbas v. Narain Das	87 997	444	Ali Mohammad Shah v. Gauri Shan-ker	89 282
383	Sat Narain v. Krishna Dutt	87 900	445	Jwala Sahay v. Balbhaddar Singh	88 494
384	Zahid Ali v. Shahr Banu	86 101	446	Sitaba v. Mata Din	89 482
385	Sheo Nath v. Tulasipat Ram	87 188	447	Emperor v. John Cassel	88 594
386	Ram Bali v. Ram Asre	86 686	448	Jang Bahadur v. Bank of Upper India, Ltd.	87 21
388	Khaki Singh v. Bishunath Lal	86 447	451	Nem Chand v. Gur Dayal	88 584
389	Durga Prasad v. Agent, B. & N. W. Ry.	87 350	452	Behari v. Emperor	89 155
390	Ram Das v. Bhagwan Kunwar	88 985	453	Prithi Nath v. Ram Saran	88 232
392	Sheo Baksh Singh v. Indra Bahadur Singh	87 185	454	Saadat Khan v. Emperor	88 463
393	Kandhai Lal v. Ananta	87 172	455	Maya Ram v. Sarjoo	87 168
394	Sitla Bakhsh Shukla v. Jagatpal Singh	86 693	456	Idoo v. Nehal Khan	88 1010
396	Banwari Lal Bhargava v. Bisham-bhar Nath Tandon	87 935	457	Pratab Bali v. Saresb Datt	87 1030
397	Angnu v. Mirza Mohammed Sajjad Ali Khan	88 131	458	Gaya Prasad v. Jagau Nath	86 932
398	Sarwar-ul-Mulk Sarwarjang Bahadur v. Mirza Waker Ali Beg	87 902	459	Chandrika Prasad v. Ram Sagar	89 567
399	Durga Prasad Singh v. Jokhu Ram	86 591	461	Jafar Husain v. Chouthi	85 702
			462	Bibi Batul v. Kedar Nath	88 810
			464	Lal Behari v. Emperor	86 969
			465	Shiam Sunder Singh v. Jagannath Singh	85 558

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925—contd.

Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court—concl'd.			Patna High Court.
469	Hay v. Emperor	88 833	473	Bahadur Singh Kesheo Prasad Singh v. Ramdeal Kuer	87 439
472	Emperor v. Paru	88 736	473	Imdad Ali v. Nandkumar Lal	88 478
473	Kewal Kishore v. Emperor	89 147	474	Adaya Prasad Singh v. Ram Narayan Das	87 531
476	Paras Ram v. Emperor	85 383	477	Abbasi Begum v. Yaquti Begam	93 628
477	Mani Ram v. Wasi Ali	85 335	478	Askaran Baid v. Raghunath Prasad	88 104
479	Ram Dayal v. Emperor	88 524	480	Rai Kashinath Singh v. Kalias Singh	89 236
480	Bahadur v. Emperor	89 145	482	Kaloo v. Bholanath	87 743
481	Mohammad Sadiq Ali Khan v. Sharf Jahan Begam	85 411	483	Muhammad Yassin v. Emperor	86 825
482	Har Prasad Singh v. Emperor	88 520	484	Khiredhar Singh v. Gajadhar Lal Mahto	91 221
483	National Bank of Upper India v. Lakhpai Rai	92 144	487	Bengal North Western Ry. Co. v. Sukhdeo Prasad	87 739
484	Ram Bhushan Das v. Ram Lakhan Sahu	85 918	488	Ladli Begum v. Ram Das	90 321
485	Mohammad Zaka Ullah v. Gul-kandi	85 393	489	Kesheo Prasad Singh v. Triloke Nath Tewari	86 841
486	Zulfiqar Ahmad v. Robert Elliot	85 423	492	Kameshwar Narain Singh v. Janardhan Prasad Narain Singh	87 736
487	Bibi Jai Kishori v. Ali Ahmad Khan	89 108	494	Jogindra Narayan v. Chinai Muhammad Sircar	89 275
489	Abhram Bali v. Emperor	89 150	496	Ram Charan Das v. Ram Lakhan Das	88 697
490	Mubarak Ali v. Abdul Haq	85 721	498	Sheo Pershad v. Jhaman Singh	87 741
491	Emperor v. Sheopal	85 943	499	Kumar Kamekhya Narain Singh v. Bechu Singh	88 483
492	Mohammad Shakir v. Jugal Kishore	85 455	500	Mohit Narain Jha v. Thakan Jha	88 332
493	Raghubar Dayal Singh v. Kanhaiya Bux	89 443	504	Jitan Dusadh v. Jawahir Singh	88 483
494	Jagdamba Singh v. Azmat Ullah Khan	86 324	505	Bhuneswari Kuer v. Sukhdeo Singh	85 483
495	Mahadei v. Tirbeni	86 356	512	Binodini Debi v. Parmeshwar Dayal	88 925
496	Qudratullah Khan v. Gulqandi	89 570	514	Munni Lal v. Gatti	88 845
499	Kalka v. Ram Suchit	89 511	516	Official Assignee, Bengal v. Jaga Bibi	85 488
500	Sri Ram v. Mathura Prasad	85 349	517	Ram Gobind Singh v. Shashi Sekhar	88 959
501	Bahadur v. Emperor	85 370	521	Bajrang Prasad v. Sonejhari Kuer	85 622
502	Pherai v. Puda Ram	85 280	523	Jagmohan Singh v. Prayag Narayan	87 473
504	Zaib-un-nissa v. Ishaad Husain	89 284	525	Raghuzandan v. Garju Mandal	91 217
505	Ali Abbas v. Subba Singh	88 725	526	Akhtar Hussain v. Emperor	88 595
506	Ashraf Ali v. Chandrapal Singh	89 563	530	Parmeshwar Singh v. Sureba Kuer	88 495
509	Mohan Lal v. Dhan Kuar	85 426	534	Mullick v. Ganga Gope	91 167
510	Ram Nidh v. Janki	85 387	535	Mewa Lal v. Emperor	88 522
512	Bishunpat Singh v. Kedar Nath Singh	88 804	536	Golam Mohammad Khan v. Emperor	86 614
515	Haji Anis Ahmad v. Hafiz-un-Nisa	89 534	540	Madaran v. Emperor	86 964
517	Bahadur v. Emperor	85 944	544	Diljan Ali v. Akhtari Begum	88 1035
518	Imdad Ali v. Ahmad Ali	85 400	547	Bambahadar Lal v. Gungra Kuer	89 232
522	Ram Dulari v. Rampal Singh	To be printed.	549	Pallakdhari v. Bankey	89 340
523	Mohammad Ghafoor Khan v. Mehdi Hasan Khan	87 356	551	Shib Dutta Singh v. Sheikh Karim Bakhsh	89 290
524	Sheo Ratan Singh v. Ram Singh	85 391	552	Mahammed Alam v. Nathu Sahw	85 1024
525	Shiv Narayan v. G. I. P. Railway Company	85 338	553	Gouri Shankar v. Collector of Muzafferpur	87 421
527	Lachhimpal Singh v. Bhagwat Singh	85 468	556	Hankar Sonar v. Basudeo Singh	86 575
529	Thakur Bishu Nath v. Ram Ratan	89 581	557	Ramsekhar Prasad Singh v. Mathura Lal	90 249
533	Sumeshar Datt Singh v. Kamta Singh	89 484	559	Partap Mahton v. Wazir-un-nissa	88 687
535	Bibi Batul v. Debi Prasad	89 348	564	Saleha v. Hulas Mahton	86 559
536	Krishna Nand v. Shivaraji	89 573	568	Kedar Nath Goenka v. Amrit Mandal	88 676
537	Santu v. Tara	85 407	575	Mahabir Prasad v. Basudeo Narayan	88 671
538	Nasrullah Khan v. Abdul Hamid	89 537	576	Ram Chander Tewary v. Gudar Potedar	89 343
539	Ram Harakh v. Ram Autar	90 1036	577	Sital Prasad Singh v. Jagdeo Singh	92 474
540	Emperor v. Nanda Singh	89 387
541	Shiam Sundar Singh v. Jagannath Singh	88 579
542	Ohhotey Singh v. Baldeo Bux Singh	88 947
544	Umrao v. Emperor	86 427

ALL INDIA REPORTER, FROM JULY TO SEPTEMBER, 1925—concl'd.

Patna High Court—concl'd.			Rangoon High Court—concl'd.
581	Rajendra Narayan, In the matter of	91 288	250	Veerappa Chetty v. Ma Tin ..	88 1011
583	Nehal Ahmad Khan v. Emperor ...	89 385	252	Sin Seng Hin v. Commissioner of
584	Tikaldhari Singh v. Misri Singh ...	89 386		Income Tax ..	89 785
585	Hia Lal Kumar v. Ganu Mahto ...	91 308	253	Agasee & Co. v. Tajima & Co. ...	83 879
588	Tikait Gayan Nath Sahi v. Malhji		254	Maung Po Shein v. Maung Po Kin	88 992
	Vaidija ..	90 276	255	Abdul Rahim v. Mahommed Cas-
590	Daroga Singh v. Raghunandan			sim ..	88 314
	Singh ...	88 669	256	Lalhia v. Bharadwaja ...	88 336
591	Yazirul Hassan v. Abdul Wahab		257	Ma Ohn May v. J. C. Sutherland ..	88 1009
	Khan ..	89 811	258	Nga Hla U v. Emperor ..	89 312
593	Abdul Shakur v. Abu Sayeed ..	86 803	261	Ma Hnin Yi v. Chew Whee Shein	90 635
595	Sariman Ahir v. Emperor ..	86 717	263	Maung Kyauk Pu v. Maung Pu ...	89 303
597	Garbhu Mahton v. Bibi Khudai		264	Nagoor Meera v. Hajee Moideen
	Jatunnissa ..	89 170		Nainar Meera Ali ..	90 639
599	Ritbhanjan Rai v. Emperor ...	86 822	266	Arunachellam Chettiar v. U Po Lu	92 631
602	Debi Prasad Dhandhanian v. Mahesh		267	Mengha Singh v. Sucha Singh ...	90 995
	Lal ..	89 32	268	Maung Dun v. Ma Sein ...	89 317
605	Gauri Shankar v. Bahadur Singh ...	88 340	270	Maung Mauk v. Maung Po Yin ..	To be
609	Brij Nath Prashad v. Bindeshwari				printed.
	Prasad Singh ...	86 791	271	N. K. R. R. M. Chetty Firm v. Sub-
610	Shama Charan v. Emperor ...	90 442		raya Mudaliar ...	89 300
611	East Indian Railway Company v.		273	U Tha Nyo v. Mg. Kyaw Tha ...	90 693
	Sagar Mull ...	89 672	275	Maung Sein Htin v. Chee Pan Ngaw	92 270
612	Harihar Prasad Singh v. Gharbharan		277	Nga Po Than v. Emperor ...	89 320
	Koeri ..	88 553	278	Maung Sit Paung v. Maung Tun ..	90 728
614	Gobinda Kuer v. Jai Narain Chau-		279	Nga Tha Bay v. Emperor ...	89 399
	dhry ...	88 91	280	Ma E Sein v. Mg. Hla Min ...	90 717
615	Christian v. Prasad Raut ...	90 501	282	Maung Shwe Myat v. Maung Po Sin	89 425
616	Basudeo Singh v. Mahadeo Lal ...	88 707	283	Godla Thammya v. Narisamulu ...	89 657
617	Ram Saran Singh v. Nikhad Narain		284	Ally Molla Industrial Corporation,
	Singh ...	88 603		Ltd. v. Esmail ...	90 676
622	Secretary of State for India in Coun-		286	Emperor v. Nga Bo Gyi ...	89 708
	cil v. Ramtahal Ram ...	86 928	287	Kin Foo v. Whee Seik Cheng ...	89 593
623	Jeobaran Singh v. Ramkishun Lal...	92 871
Rangoon High Court.			Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court.
225	Mooljee Dharsee & Co. v. M. E. Moola	88 740	225	Tulsidas Amanmal v. Lyon Lord &
227	Maung Din v. Ma Hnin Me ...	89 436		Co. ...	86 934
228	Ma Tok v. Ma Yin ...	92 489	229	Secretary of State for India v. Firm
230	G. C. Sircar v. Emperor ..	88 287		of Bellaram-Mohandas ...	Not
231	Ma Kyaw v. Maung Po Myit ...	89 447			reportable.
233	Ma Non Thu v. Ma Shwe Mi ..	88 609	231	Udharam v. Emperor ...	89 247
235	U Pe Gyi v. U Pyo ...	88 657	233	Woodward v. Emperor ...	92 433
236	Mana Abu Backer v. Bee Bee ...	88 614	236	Sultan Khan v. Emperor ...	86 351
238	E. E. Dawoodji & Son v. Sherman ...	88 934	237	Umer Duraz v. Emperor ...	86 410
239	U. Zagriya v. Emperor ..	89 459	241	Bhawanji Narsi v. Assan Pitamber
241	Bowdens Ltd. v. British P. & S.			Das ..	86 357
	Eng. Co. ...	88 331	242	Firm of Brijlal-Jagannath v. Firm
242	Maung Po Nyun v. Ma Saw Tin ...	88 402		of Allah Ditta-Mahbeob Illahi ...	86 393
243	Maung Oh Kyan v. Emperor ..	88 706	244	Scott Oldfield v. Firm of Co-opera-
245	U Tun Gywe v. Ko Ko Gyi ...	To be		tive Stores ..	88 784 printed.	246	Pearson v. Trustees of the Port of
246	Maung Aung Tha v. Maung Ba			Karachi ...	86 929
	Than ..	88 612	249	Haji Khudabux v. Emperor ...	85 706
247	Jones v. Emperor ...	To be	253	Rustomji Curesji v. Perozshah D.
		printed.		Minvala ...	86 1045
249	Maung Tha Din v. Daw Paw ...	88 988	254	Premji Mulji v. Garlick & Co. ...	90 573

Alphabetical List of Cases reported in Volume 90 of Indian Cases with references to the Volumes and Pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

An asterisk () denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.*

Names of cases reported.	Where reported.	Page.
A. T. A. R. M. M. Chetty Firm v. Mahomed Kasim ...	3 R. 367; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 377	1011
Abdul Gani Bhuya v. Emperor ...	42 C. L. J. 205; 26 Cr. L. J. 1577; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 235; 53 C. 181	537
Abdul Ghani v. Harnam Singh ...	(1925) Pat. 250; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 748; 7 P. L. T. 260	356
Abdul Hamid Choudhuri v. Brojendra Kumar Roy ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 290	643
Achal Singh v. Shaghunath Kuer ...	2 O. W. N. 713; 12 O. L. J. 603; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 2; 29 O. C. 51	470
Achola Sundari Debi v. Doman Sundari Debi ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 150	774
Achratlal Kesavalal Metha & Co. v. Vijayam & Co. ...	49 M. L. J. 189; 22 L. W. 70; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1145	1019
Adams v. Gray ...	(1925) M. W. N. 123; 48 M. L. J. 707; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 599	5
Agent, B. N. Ry. v. Behari Lal Dutt ...	29 O. W. N. 614; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 716; 52 O. 783	426
Agent, G. I. P. Ry., Co. v. Jasrup Shrinath ...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 57	135
Agent of the B. N. Ry. Co., Ltd. v. Hamir Mull-Chagan Mull ...	6 P. L. T. 565; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 727; 5 Pat. 106; (1926) Pat. 114	374
Agent, Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railway v. Gouri Lal ...	2 O. W. N. 749; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 68	46
Ahmad Husain v. Muhammad Qasim Khan ...	L. R. 6 A. 598 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 88; A. I. R. 1926 All. 46; 48 A. 171	80
Ahmed Ali v. Emperor ...	42 C. L. J. 215; 26 Cr. L. J. 1574; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 224	5
Ahmed Hasan v. Kodi Lal ...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 76	35
Ahmed Husain Khan v. Hardial ...	L. R. 6 A. 586 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 120; A. I. R. 1926 All. 142; 48 A. 199	243
Ahmed Yar Khan v. Dina Nath Sadhukhan ...	42 C. L. J. 69; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1148	40
Albert Karunakaran Stephen v. Administrator-General, Madras ...	(1925) M. W. N. 308; 49 M. L. J. 197; 22 L. W. 94; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 686	498
Ali Bahadur v. Emperor ...	2 O. W. N. 868; 26 Cr. L. J. 1629; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 146	925
Ally Moolla Industrial Co., Ltd. v. M. A. Ismail ...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 284; 4 Bur. L. J. 131 & 174	676
Ambika Charan Bhakta v. Ram Prosad Chatterji ...	30 C. W. N. 163; 42 C. L. J. 578; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 377	575
Ameer Mirza Beg v. Udit Pershad ...	2 O. W. N. 816; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 709	779
Amir Chand Khanna v. Anukul Chandra Bhandari ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 160	802
Ananda Chandra Kacharu v. Barada Kanta Dey ...	42 C. L. J. 203; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 177	509
Andoru Akanda v. Nasir Akanda ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 368	1010
Annamdevula Tata v. Ahamadulla Khan Sahib Bahadur ...	48 M. L. J. 701; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 890; 22 L. W. 528	401
Appa Pai v. Somu ...	22 L. W. 145; 49 M. L. J. 327; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1017; (1925) M. W. N. 547	754
Arjee Prabappa Chetty v. Noneti Desikachari ...	49 M. L. J. 101; 22 L. W. 78; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1131; (1925) M. W. N. 554 & 705	1028
Arunachalam Chetty v. Krishna Iyer ...	(1925) M. W. N. 324; 22 L. W. 265; 49 M. L. J. 530; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1168	481
Ashloke Singh v. Bodha Ganderi ...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 125	769
Ashraf Ali v. Arman Khan ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 162	893
Attorneys, In the matter of ...	29 O. W. N. 1047; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 964	468
Ayisa Bovi Ammal v. Sokara Booi ...	49 M. L. J. 375; 22 L. W. 740; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1265	869
B. S. Jorapur v. Venkates Balvant Joshi ...	27 Bom. L. R. 1116; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 472	656
Bachan Singh v. Bijai Singh ...	24 A. L. J. 130; A. I. R. 1926 All. 180; 48 A. 221	238
Baijnath v. Ramdas Sahu ...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 62	321
Baijnath Rai v. Mangla Prasad Narayan Sahi ...	(1925) Pat. 271; 6 P. L. T. 731; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 1	732
Baijulal Marwari v. Thakur Prasad Marwari ...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 33; 7 P. L. T. 153	262
Bakhtawar v. Sunder Lal ...	L. R. 6 A. 625 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 116; A. I. R. 1926 All. 173; 48 A. 213	992

Balijeppalli Seshayya v. Balijeppali Subbarayudi	...	(1925) M. W. N. 470; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1157; 26 Cr. L. J. 1589	661
Balkrishna v. Raghunath	..	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 201	43
Ballabh Das v. Narain Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1929 Nag. 206	323
Banji Lal v. Emperor	...	6 L. 373; 2 L. C. 163; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 615	1018
Bankateshwar Rawan Bahadurpal Singh v. Dina Nath Balgobind	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 180	936
Banshibadan Mandal v. Chhaunat Bibi	...	42 C. L. J. 176; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 400	228
Barbar v. Debenham	...	42 C. L. J. 87; 30 C. W. N. 274; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 469; 53 C. 123	4
Barhamdeo Rai v. Emperor	..	26 Cr. L. J. 1559; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 36; 7 P. L. T. 272	439
Basappa Rachapa Hundekar v. Emperor	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1056; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 526; 26 Cr. L. J. 1536	320
Bathoor Gramathil v. Munnambeth Ambanair	...	49 M. L. J. 379; 22 L. W. 487; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1264	577
Begam Sultan v. Sarvi Begam	...	23 A. L. J. 977; L. R. 6 A. 582 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 93; 48 A. 121	274
Begum Bibi v. Bulaqi Shah	...	2 L. C. 121; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 34	1050
Behari Lal Manna v. Murli Dhar	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 287	567
Beharilal v. Gorelal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 203	263
Bejoy Chand Mahtab v. Beni Madhab Chaudhury	...	52 C. 689; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 936	71
Beli Ram & Bros. v. Ram Lal	...	6 L. 380; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 644	937
Beni Chand v. Ekram Ahmad	...	L. R. 6 A. 617 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 181; 24 A. L. J. 128	887
Bhabataran Mahto v. Emperor	—	(1925) Pat. 278; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 706; 26 Cr. L. J. 1601	705
Bhagchand v. Secretary of State for India	..	A. I. R. 1924 Bom. 1; 26 Bom. L. R. 1; 48 B. 87	13
Bhagwan Singh v. Lachuman Prasad Sahu	..	3 Pat. L. R. 225; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 754	579
Bhagwantrao v. Emperor	—	26 Cr. L. J. 1489; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 217	145
Bhagwati Prashad v. Lall Bahadur	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 33	404
Bharat Chandra Chakraverty v. Kiron Chandra	...	52 C. 766; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1069	944
Bhawani Prasad Singh v. Ram Rati Kunwar	..	28 O. C. 261; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 649	418
Bhondai Miser v. Ram Prasad Miser	..	2 O. W. N. 710; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 607	562
Bhupendra Narain Mander v. Janeswar Mander	..	*Patna High Court	761
Bhupendra Narayan Singh v. Narapat Singh	..	A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 226; 42 C. L. J. 227; 49 M. L. J. 722; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 206; (1925) M. W. N. 724; 52 I. A. 355; 53 C. 6	607
Bhura v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1495; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 89	151
Bidhumukhi v. Gobinda Chandra Pal	...	42 C. L. J. 78; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 215	104
Bishambhar Nath Tondon v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1602; 2 O. W. N. 760; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 161	706
Bisheshar Parsad v. Raghubir	...	L. R. 6 A. 255 Rev.; 24 A. L. J. 83; A. I. R. 1926 All. 58; 48 A. 168	353
Brij Raj v. Ram Sarup	—	L. R. 6 A. 488 Civ.; 23 A. L. J. 901; A. I. R. 1926 All. 36; 48 A. 44	749
Bunyad Singh v. Naubat Singh	...	2 O. W. N. 753; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 59	613
Burn & Co. v. Lukhdirji of Morvi State	...	23 A. L. J. 806; A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 188; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 147; 30 C. W. N. 145 P. C.	52
Chairman, Municipal Council, Chicacole v. Gajireddi Seetharamayya	..	21 L. W. 280; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 584; 26 Cr. L. J. 1496	152
Chakauri Lal v. Deo Chand Mahton	..	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 61	273
Chakiri Subayya v. Yeradoddi Mal Reddy	...	21 L. W. 694; 49 M. L. J. 126; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1081	269
Chambu v. Pazani	..	21 L. W. 78; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 740	980
Chandan Singh v. Laxman	...	21 N. L. R. 98; A. I. R. 1925 Nag. 438	949
Chandra Kumar Sen v. Mathuriya Debya	...	29 C. W. N. 1035; 42 C. L. J. 120; 52 C. 1009; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1228; 26 Cr. L. J. 1569	529
Chandra Kumar Shaha v. Mafizar Rahman	...	*Calcutta High Court	832
Chandra Wati v. Jagan Nath Singh	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 489; 7 L. L. J. 281	611
Channu Dutta Vyas v. Swami Gyannandji Maharaj	...	A. I. R. 1926 All. 130	976
Chennapragada Narayanamurthy v. Secretary of State for India	...	48 M. L. J. 682; 22 L. W. 482; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 963	555
Chhutkau v. Emperor	...	28 O. C. 258; 26 Cr. L. J. 1564; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 36	444

Chinnamma Naidu v. Venkatammal	...	49 M. L. J. 186; 22 L. W. 369; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1023; (1925) M. W. N. 735	996
Chinnathambi Chetti v. Appavoo Chetty	...	22 L. W. 466	1031
Chiragh Din v. Abdullah	...	6 L. 405; 2 L. C. 117; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 654	1022
Choturam Bhikraj v. Narayan	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 49	210
Chotumal-Bulchand v. Firm of Lilaram-Lakhmi-chand	...	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 34	64
Christian, F. F. v. Prasad Raut	...	(1925) Pat. 220; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 615; 4 Pat. 760; 7 P. L. T. 280	501
Commissioner of Income Tax v. Thillai Chidambara Nadar	...	49 M. L. J. 124; 22 L. W. 206; 48 M. 602; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1018	549
Dadu v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1493; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 221	149
Daulat v. Ramappa	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 197	196
David Sassoon & Co. Ltd. v. Shivjiram Devidas	...	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 50	236
Dayaram Surajmal v. Chandulal Dayabhai	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1118; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 520	689
Debi Charan v. Deo Mukhi	...	2 O. W. N. 702; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 621	272
Demello v. New Victoria Mills, Co., Ltd.	...	23 A. L. J. 948; L. R. 6 A. 555 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 17	287
Deonarayan Singh v. Ram Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 143	799
Devi Chand v. Jai Chand	...	A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 21	1047
Dhanpat Rai v. Gopal Kaur	...	2 L. C. 124; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 7	1052
Dhirajuddin Bepari v. Baharulla Sheikh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 318	630
Dhirendra Nath Ghose v. Charushashi Debya	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 191	431
Dip Prakash v. Dwarka Prasad	...	L. R. 6 A. 606 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 91; A. I. R. 1926 All. 71; 48 A. 201	83
Dirbijoy Singh v. Drigpal Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 126	825
Dronamraju Lakshmi v. Immani Seshayya	...	48 M. L. J. 363; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 825	138
Dukhu Mia v. Jagdish Nath Roy	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 359	564
Dulichand v. Soni	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 75	56
Dunya Singh v. Ganga Dhar	...	2 O. W. N. 684; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 650	4
Durlav Chandra Chowdhuri v. Jamiruddin Ahmed Chowdhuri	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 314	405
Dwarka Prasad v. Makund Sarup	...	L. R. 6 A. 630 Civ. & 213 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 1506; A. I. R. 1926 All. 21; 24 A. L. J. 122	290
E. C. Kent v. E. E. L. Kent	...	49 M. L. J. 335; 26 Cr. L. J. 1597; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 59	653
E. J. Judah v. Emperor	...	29 C. W. N. 1011; 26 Cr. L. J. 1505; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 464; 53 C. 174	289
East Indian Railway Company v. Badrilal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 192	209
East Indian Railway Company v. Gobradhan Das	...	(1925) Pat. 333; 7 P. L. T. 140; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 165	790
East Indian Railway Company v. Moea Ram-Gaja Nand	...	2 O. W. N. 689; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 615	572
Eastern Mortgage & Agent Co., v. Mahammad Fazlul Karim	...	41 C. L. J. 571; 52 C. 914; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 385	851
Emperor v. Baldeo	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1491; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 184	147
Emperor v. Gajadhar Prasad	...	2 O. W. N. 707; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 610; 26 Cr. L. J. 1567	447
Emperor v. Mewa Ram	...	L. R. 6 A. 202 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 1621; 23 A. L. J. 1051; A. I. R. 1926 All. 178; 48 A. 208	917
Emperor v. Mohammad Shafi	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1576; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 57	536
Emperor v. Nabu	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1554; A. I. R. 1926 Sind 1	434
Emperor v. Nisar Ali Khan	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1551; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 179	399
Faujdar Rai v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1565; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 25; 7 P. L. T. 199	445
Fazaruddin v. Emperor	...	42 C. L. J. 111; 26 Cr. L. J. 1553; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 105	433
Fazle Ahmed v. Rajendra Nath Roy Choudhuri	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 339	795
Fazuluddin Mahammad v. Khetra Ghora	...	30 C. W. N. 59; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 167	866
Firm Bhogi Lal-Trikam Lal v. Firm Amar Nath-Lajpat Rai	...	2 L. C. 135; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 47	1042
Firm Mangal Chand-Paramsukh Das v. Zainab Bibi	...	L. R. 6 A. 595 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 177	266
Firm of Hira Singh-Pritam Singh v. Secretary of State for India	...	2 L. C. 158; 7 L. L. J. 583; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 40	1054
Gajadhar v. Aulad Husain	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 80	373
Gajendra Narain Maity v. Sita Nath Das	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 310	637
Gan Mallu Dora, In re	...	48 M. L. J. 308; (1925) M. W. N. 192; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 690; 26 Cr. L. J. 1513; 49 M. 74	297

Ganesh Prasad v. Sant Din	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 140	760
Ganeshdas v. Harilal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 212	279
Ganpati Kondaji Sandohar v. Maruti Gangaji Sandbhar	..	27 Bom. L. R. 1115; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 522	654
Gaya Nath Sahi v. Malhiji Vaidya	...	(1925) Pat. 160; 6 P. L. T. 507; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 588	276
Ghulam Sarwar v. Ghulam Mustafa	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 479; 7 L. L. J. 285	603
Ghutur Singh v. Phulang Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 55	119
Gobind Prasad v. Narbhir Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 35	577
Gobinda Bauri v. Kristo Sardar	..	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 64	489
Gokul v. Shyamlalsingh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 35	76
Gopal Das v. Maghi Ram	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 439; 7 L. L. J. 252; 26 Cr. L. J. 1508	292
Gopala v. Laxmansingh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 216	162
Gopala Iyengar v. Mahomed Ibrahim Rowther	...	22 L. W. 320; 48 M. 509; 49 M. L. J. 606; (1925) M. W. N. 783 & 824; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1119	759
Gopalakrishna Konar v. Vilanga Konar	..	A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 132	819
Gopi Chand v. Kirpa Ram	...	A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 26	1030
Gour Chandra Das v. Subashini Dasi	...	42 C. L. J. 200; 30 C. W. N. 39; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 240	523
Govinda Krishna Yachendra v. Srinivasa Ramacharlu	...	49 M. L. J. 420; (1925) M. W. N. 629; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1237	748
Govindas Chaturbhujdas v. Ramadoss	..	48 M. L. J. 252; (1925) M. W. N. 148; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 593; 21 L. W. 733; 48 M. 521	92
G. I. P. Railway v. Datti Ram	...	(1925) Pat. 305; 5 Pat. 118; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 148	812
G. I. P. Railway Co. v. Rameshwar Prasad	...	(1925) Pat. 311; 7 P. L. T. 90; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 190	687
G. I. P. Railway Co. v. Tarmahomed Hasam	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1111; 49 B. 827; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 534	562
Ilab Dei v. G. I. P. Railway	...	L. R. 6 A. 615 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 129; A. I. R. 1926 All. 146; 48 A. 217	99
Gurbachan Kaur v. Satwant Kaur	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 493; 7 L. L. J. 288	620
Gurditta Mal v. Muhammad Khan	...	7 L. L. J. 544; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 37	41
Haidri Khanam v. Ahmad Ali	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 31	430
Haq Dad v. Emperor	...	6 L. 392; 26 Cr. L. J. 1631; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 19	927
Har Pershad v. Sheo Shanker	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 68	679
Harbans Narain Singh v. Mohammad Sayeed	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1511; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 51	295
Harendra Nath Chaudhury v. Sona Gazi	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 259	504
Hari Barman v. Khatijan	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 343	737
Hari Chandana Jogadeva v. Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd	...	A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 690; 52 C. 239	86
Hari Har Bakhsh Singh v. Mohammad Usman Khan	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 144	804
Hari Mohan Dalal v. Purendra Nath Nag Chowdhury	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 356	955
Harihar Singh v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1498; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 182	154
Harnandan Das v. Atul Kumar Prasad	..	26 Cr. L. J. 1502; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 57	158
Haro Mandal v. Dhiranath Das	..	(1925) Pat. 288; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 784; 7 P. L. T. 67	691
Hayat Mohammad v. Bhawani Das	...	2 L. C. 135; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 146	1037
Hazara Singh v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1497; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 60	153
Hem Chandra Kundu v. Jnanendra Chandra Kundu	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 116	624
Hem Raj v. Nihal Singh	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 506; 7 L. L. J. 352	678
Hemchandra Mahto v. Prem Mahto	...	(1925) Pat. 330; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 154; 7 P. L. T. 295	739
Hira Lal v. Benarsi Das	..	6 L. 411; 2 L. C. 114; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 576	982
Hochanuddi v. Abdul Hakim Mridha	...	7 L. L. J. 453	816
Homesbar Singh v. Jugal Kishore	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 158
Ibad Ali v. Dwarka	..	A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 223; 49 M. L. J. 800; 43 C. L. J. 8; 28 Bom. L. R. 187 P. C.	596
Inder Kuer v. Mohammad Taqi	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 145	736
Indra Narayan Ghose v. Tarini Prasad Guin	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 64	505
Ishar Das v. Lal Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 165	746
Jabed Ali v. Surendra Nath Bandopadhyia	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 497; 2 L. C. 151; 7 L. L. J. 290	632
Jabeda Khatun v. Mahommed Mozaffar Ali	...	42 C. L. J. 477; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 351	333
Jag Mohan Singh v. Sheo Mangal Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 322	781
	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 17	332

Jagannath Sahu v. Sheogobind Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat 128	217
Jagardeo Ramsumer Tewari v. Emperor	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1043; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 489; 49 B. 804; 26 Cr. L. J. 1526	310
Jagat Narain Lal v. Hawaldar	...	L. R. 6 A. 597; 24 A. L. J. 63; A. I. R. 1926 All. 158	287
Jagehwar Tukaram v. Pandurang	..	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 215	270
Jai Karan Singh v. Umrai Kunwar	...	2 O. W. N. 751; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 749	674
Jaidat Singh v. Baldeo Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 160	1051
Jamna Pershad v. Ramlal	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 24	327
Jamu v. Muhammad Ibrahim	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 194	378
Janakinath Singha Roy v. Nirode Baran Roy	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 175	811
Jatindra Nath Roy Chowdhury v. Narayan Das Khettry	...	52 C. 862; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 97	901
Jethanand v. Chetumal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Sindh 66	970
Jeut Koeri v. Mathura Koeri	...	L. R. 6 A. 628 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 171; 24 A. L. J. 125	787
Jogendra Narayan Das v. Satyendra Chandra Ghose	...	29 C. W. N. 640; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 790	380
Jogendra Prasad Narayan Sinha v. Mangal Prasad Sahu	..	(1925) Pat. 315; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 383	847
Jogesh Chandra Ghose v. Chapala Sundari Basu	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 383	594
Jorina Aktar Khatun v. Hafezuddin Khan	...	30 C. W. N. 178; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 242	633
K. Rajagopala Chariar v. Jamal Ayisha Bibi	...	21 L. W. 312; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 571	337
Kabatulla v. Emperor	...	42 C. L. J. 212; 26 Cr. L. J. 1582; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1241; 53 C. 157	542
Kahan Singh v. Natha Singh	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 414; 7 L. L. J. 184	123
Kailash Chandra Mitra v. Brojendra Kumar Chakravarti	...	29 C. W. N. 1000; 42 C. L. J. 232; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 1056; 53 C. 197	122.
Kamal Mandalini v. Paramasukh Chakrabutty	...	29 C. W. N. 1033; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 289	26 68
Kamini Kumar Roy v. Rajendra Nath Roy	...	42 C. L. J. 219; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 233	...
Kanai Lal Ghosh v. Basanta Behari Sen	..	29 C. W. N. 1020; 42 C. L. J. 490; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 451	4.
Kancherla Kanakayya v. Venkataramayya Apparao	...	49 M. L. J. 443; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1287	1049R.
Kanhaiya Lal Sahu v. Suga Kuer	..	6 P. L. T. 593; 4 Pat. 824; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 90	65
Kanhya Lal Sewbux, In the matter of	..	29 C. W. N. 1019; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 176	449
Kaniz Fizza Bibi v. Data Din	.	2 O. W. N. 650; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 678	184
Karam Din v. Mehr Din	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 409; 7 L. L. J. 185	161
Karimmannessa Bibi v. Hamedulla	...	30 C. W. N. 129; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 401	218
Kartar Singh v. Emperor	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 406; 7 L. L. J. 217; 26 Cr. L. J. 1500	156
Karuna Charan Das v. Krishna Sundar Majumdar	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 179	480
Kasem Molla v. Emperor	...	42 C. L. J. 114; 26 Cr. L. J. 1560; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 410	440
Kasiwar De v. Aswini Kumar Pal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 249	527
Kawleshwar Lal v. Satya Brata Banerji	...	7 P. L. T. 138; (1926) Pat. 121	194
Kedar Nath v. Bismillah Begam	..	L. R. 6 A. 614 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 67; A. I. R. 1926 All. 156	72
Kesho Prasad Singh v. Ram Sarup	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 175	621
Keshub Prasad Singh v. Harihar Prasad Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 54	703
Khatemy Ohhaikuddin v. Ram Narain Ghose	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 364	617
Khazan Chand v. Paras Ram	...	7 L. L. J. 459; 6 L. 524; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 646	1045
Kishen Dei v. Sheo Paltan	..	L. R. 6 A. 557 Civ.; 23 A. L. J. 981; A. I. R. 1926 All. 1; 48 A. 126	358
Kizhakkapet Krishnamadar v. Marambatte Unnimammu	..	49 M. L. J. 99; 22 L. W. 186; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1222	999
Kondagunta Mrutyjanjaiah v. Malle Venkatapathigadu	...	49 M. L. J. 333; 22 L. W. 734	834
Krishnados Vittalados v. Ghanshamdoss	...	(1925) M. W. N. 395; 22 L. W. 160; 49 M. L. J. 311; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1084	188
Krishnaji v. Kashirao	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 220	450
Krishnamurthi Iyer v. Narayanaswami Iyer	..	49 M. L. J. 93; 22 L. W. 402; (1925) M. W. N. 746; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1085; 26 Cr. L. J. 1618	914
Krishnaswami Bhagavathar v. Thirumalai Iyer	...	A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 101	410
Kruthiventi Peeraju Garu v. Sitaramchandra	...	48 M. L. J. 584; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 897; 22 L. W. 568	458
Kumud Charan Roy v. Sambhu Chandra Ghosh	...	*Calcutta High Court	827
Kunhahomed v. Sara Umma	...	49 M. L. J. 121; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1158	849

Kuppa Mudali, In re	... 49 M. L. J. 421; 22 L. W. 339; (1925) M. W. N. 795; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1206; 26 Cr. L. J. 1587; 49 M. 71	659
Kuppuswami Iyer v. Rajeswara Sethupathi	... 22 L. W. 258; 49 M. L. J. 462; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1282	973
Lachhman Das v. Bhagirath	... A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 41	487
Ladli Begum v. Ram Das	... (1925) Pat. 167; 6 P. L. T. 448; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 488	321
Lakshmana v. V. V. Ramalinga Mudaliar	... 48 M. L. J. 522; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 888	206
Lakshmichand Ghandamal v. Firm of Gokuldas Ranchordas	... A. I. R. 1926 Sind 75	242
Lal Bahadur Lal v. Kamleshar Nath	... A. I. R. 1925 All. 624; L. R. 6 A. 591 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 52; 48 A. 183 F. B.	988
M. Sanyasayya Naidu v. Public Prosecutor	... 22 L. W. 156; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1224; 26 Cr. L. J. 1593	665
Ma E Mya v. U Pe Lay	... 3 R. 281; A. I. R. 1926 Rang. 65	958
Ma E Sein v. Mg Hla Min	... A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 280; 3 R. 455; 26 Cr. L. J. 1613; 4 Bur. L. J. 123 F. B.	717
Ma Hnin Yi v. Chew Whee Shein	... A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 261; 4 Bur. L. J. 93	635
Ma Nyein E v. Maung Maung	... A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 340; 4 Bur. L. J. 189; 3 R. 549	341
Made Gouda v. Chenne Gouda	... 21 L. W. 709; 49 M. L. J. 150; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1174	331
Mahadeo v. Shioram	... A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 9	51
Mahadeo Govind v. Lakshminarayan	... 27 Bom. L. R. 1150; 49 B. 839; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 521	610
Mahammad Moyenuddin v. Baharuddin Choudhuri	... A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 113	557
Mahammad Smail v. Sharfatullah	... *Calcutta High Court	763
Mahammadagar v. Baldeo Narain	... 26 Cr. L. J. 1585; 1926 (Pat) 16	657
Mahammad Hussain v. Hoosain Hamadane & Co	... 3 R. 293; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 290; 4 Bur. L. J. 103	967
Man Mapa v. Monindra Nath Bose	... 42 C. L. J. 83; 26 Cr. L. J. 1615; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1260	719
Mamundi Singh v. Parbhu Dayal	... L. R. 6 A. 200 Rev.; 23 A. L. J. 993; A. I. R. 1926 All. 169; 48 A. 97	2
Mamundi Konar v. Shamsuddin Sahib Bahadur	... 49 M. L. J. 381; 22 L. W. 507; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1207	771
Mangtu v. Lachhi Ram	... A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 424; 7 L. L. J. 192	227
Mania Manikha Padayachi, In re	... 49 M. L. J. 155; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1061; 22 L. W. 755; 48 M. 874; 26 Cr. L. J. 1570	530
Manindra Chandra Nandi v. Bhagabati Devi	... 30 C. W. N. 45; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 335	986
Manmatha Nath Choudhury v. Jamini Nath Mallick	... A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 246	768
Maung Bya v. Maung Kyi Nyo	... 42 C. L. J. 156; 49 M. L. J. 282; A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 236; 27 Bom. L. R. 1427; 3 R. 494; (1925) M. W. N. 894; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 209; 30 C. W. N. 218; 52 L. A. 385 (P. C.)	198
Maung Myint v. Official Assignee	... 3 R. 313; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 351	969
Maung Po Aung v. U Bya	... 3 R. 310; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 344	910
Maung Po Ka v. Maung San Pe	... 3 R. 295; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 369	907
Maung Sit Paung v. Maung Tun	... A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 278; 4 Bur. L. J. 104	728
Maung Tok v. Emperor	... 3 R. 352; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 354; 26 Cr. L. J. 1622	918
Meah v. Durga Churn Dutta	... 29 C. W. N. 1027; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 243	456
Meghji Moorji v. Tyeballi Kamruddin	... 26 Bom. L. R. 1019; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 64	189
Mehr Dad v. Mohammad Ali Shah	... A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 434; 7 L. L. J. 195	250
Mengha Singh v. Sucha Singh	... A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 267; 3 R. 307; 4 Bur. L. J. 108	995
Mittar Sain v. Data Ram	... 24 A. L. J. 185; A. I. R. 1926 All. 194	1000
Mohammad Kamil v. Hedayet Ullah	... A. I. R. Cal. 380	492
Mohammad Mazhur-ud-din Hasan v. Zahur-ud-din	... A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 131	547
Mohammad Sadiq v. Basgit Sah	... A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 159	834
Mohammad Usman v. Abdul Rahman	... 42 C. L. J. 74; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1151	100
Mohammad Yakub v. Emperor	... 2 O. W. N. 688; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 690; 26 Cr. L. J. 1525	309
Mohan Dei v. Balmukund Rastogi	... 12 O. L. J. 543; 2 O. W. N. 737; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 702	256
Mohini Mohan Saha Chowdhury v. Meajan	... A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 333	673
Monoranjan Adya v. Bijoy Kumar Adya	... A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 180	729
Moos v. Abdul Husain	... 27 Bom. L. R. 1147; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 523	600

Motilal Gopaldas v. Krishnabai Gopalrao	..	27 Bom. L. R. 1156; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 513	604
Muhammad Abdul Hamid Khan v. Uda	..	L. R. 6 A. 131 & 212 Rev.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 161	996
Muhammad Batcha Sahib v. Arunachallem Chettiar	..	(1925) M. W. N. 596; 49 M. L. J. 396; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 39	875
Muhammad Sahib v. Alagappa Chettiar	...	49 M. L. J. 445; 22 L. W. 423; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 31.	1042
Mula v. Emperor	...	L. R. 6 A. 159 Cr.; 23 A. L. J. 924; 26 Cr. L. J. 1494; A. I. R. 1926 All. 33	150
Mulchand Sobhraj v. Radhakishin Parumal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 27	932
Mulibai v. Shewaram Menghraj	...	A. I. R. 1926 Sindh 78	111
Municipal Corporation v. Ranchordas Vandravandas	..	27 Bom. L. R. 1130; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 538	695
Muqim-un-nisa v. Ahmad-un-nisa	..	2 O. W. N. 704; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 605; 26 Cr. L. J. 1581	541
Murtaza Begum v. Jogendra Nath Roy	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 344	724
Murugappa Chettiar v. L. K. S. S. Firm	...	A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 135	721
Musi Kazim v. Haji Mutasaddi	...	7 P. L. T. 293	841
Muthia Chettiar v. Venkatasubbarayulu Naidu	...	22 L. W. 67; 49 M. L. J. 394; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 160	1033
Muthualagappa Chettiar v. Ahmed Ibrahim Alim Saheb	...	22 L. W. 347; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1276	789
Muthukaruppa Muthirian v. Sivabhagyathammal	...	49 M. L. J. 358; 22 L. W. 511; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 33	860
Mutsaddi Lal v. Bhagwan Das	...	L. R. 6 A. 596 Civ.; 23 A. L. J. 1059; A. I. R. 1926 All. 172; 48 A. 164	120
N. M. Khajamiyan Rowther v. Appavu Pillai	...	(1925) M. W. N. 493; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 126	642
Nabin Chandra Biswas v. Abdul Aziz	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 337	998
Nabin Chandra Kapali v. Gour Mohan Mistiri	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 369	6
Nagalla Kottaya v. Koganti Kottappa	...	49 M. L. J. 117; 23 L. W. 178; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 141; (1925) M. W. N. 722	6
Nagendra Nath v. Jugal Kishore Roy	...	29 C. W. N. 1052; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1097; 43 C. L. J. 83	281
Nagoor Meera v. Moideen Nainar Meera Ali	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 264; 4 Bur. L. J. 110	639
Narain Das v. Debi Din Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 38	566
Narain Das v. Ram Chandra	..	L. R. 6 A. 610 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 26; A. I. R. 1926 All. 124; 48 A. 209	116
Narasimha Charyulu v. Govindoss Krishnadoss	..	49 M. L. J. 185; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1196	496
Narayan Reddy v. Enumula Bojamma	...	(1925) M. W. N. 652; 49 M. L. J. 423; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1280; 26 Cr. L. J. 1596	668
Nasaruddin Mandal v. Anath Nath Chowdhury	...	52 C. 943; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 279	700
Nathan Prasad Shah v. Kali Prasad	...	(1925) Pat. 317; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 77; 7 P. L. T. 158	785
Nepaldas Mukherjee v. Probhas Chandra Mukerjee	...	42 C. L. J. 221; 30 C. W. N. 357; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 460	499
Nilambur Thacharakavil v. Parry & Co., Ltd	...	49 M. L. J. 390; 48 M. 815; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1277	729
Niranka Sashi Roy v. Swarganath Banerjee	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 95	121
Nowroji Rustomji Wadia v. Government of Bombay	...	23 A. L. J. 803; 2 O. W. N. 691; A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 211; 49 M. L. J. 233; 27 Bom. L. R. 1140; 42 C. L. J. 143; L. R. 6 A. (P. O.) 154; 49 B. 700; 23 L. W. 46; 30 C. W. N. 386; (1926) M. W. N. 278; 52 I. A. 367 P. C.	48
Nrisinha Charan Nandi v. Batasi Dashi	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 108	602
Nur Mahommad v. Lalchand	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 436; 7 L. L. J. 201	254
Nur Mohammad v. Nur Muhammad	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 490; 7 L. L. J. 367; 26 Cr. L. J. 1596	668
Nur Muhammad v. Emperor	..	26 Cr. L. J. 1492	148
Official Assignee of Madras v. The Zemindar of Udayarpalayam	...	22 L. W. 326; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 150	1054
Onkar v. Dhan Singh	..	21 N. L. R. 102; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 10	963
Rachaiappa Chetti v. Venkatachariar	..	(1925) M. W. N. 577; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1198	952
Palaniappa Chettiar v. Krishnaswamy Chettiar	...	48 M. L. J. 696; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 877; 22 L. W. 429; (1925) M. W. N. 759	368
Panchi Dasi v. Kshiroda Dasi	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 171	727
Pandu Joti Kadam v. Savla Piraji Kate	..	27 Bom. L. R. 1109; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 472	561
Parameswar Bhartigal v. T. P. S. Issoop Rowthan	...	48 M. L. J. 299; 21 L. W. 587; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 800	106
Parshuram Dattaram Shamdasani v. Tata Industrial Bank	...	26 Bom. L. R. 987; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 49	580

Peari Dai v. Naimish Chandra Mitra	...	7 P. L. T. 183; 5 Pat. 40; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 184	822
Peddi Reddi Jogi Reddi v. Paneen Chinnabireddi	..	22 L. W. 116; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1195	1016
Pereira v. East Indian Railway	..	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 102; 7 P. L. T. 256	723
Perumal Naick, In re	...	(1925) M. W. N. 317; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 672; 22 L. W. 209; 26 Cr. L. J. 1550	398
Peta Nagayya, In re	...	22 L. W. 332; 49 M. L. J. 438; (1925) M. W. N. 767; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1247; 48 M. 941	991
Phul Chand-Fateh Chand v. Chote Lal-Amba Pershad	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 513; 7 L. L. J. 360	654
Ponnappa Reddi v. Thiruvengada Pillai & Co.	..	49 M. L. J. 104; 22 L. W. 455; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1179; (1925) M. W. N. 713	509
Prasana Kumar Banerji v. Kaleyam Charan Mandal	...	7 P. L. T. 71; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 80	352
Prasanna Kumar Datta v. Kedarnath Samanta	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 299	497
Prasanna Kumar De Mahajan v. Nanigopal De	..	42 C. L. J. 134; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1175	561
Pratap Chandra Guha Roy v. Emperor	...	29 C. W. N. 904; 42 C. L. J. 178; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1121; 26 Cr. L. J. 1539	387
Prathipati Suryanaryana v. Prathipati Seshayya	...	A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 122	843
Premji Mulji v. Garlick & Co.	..	A. I. R. 1925 Sind 254	573
Pria Nath Chatterjee v. Lakshmi Narayan Bhatta-charjya	...	42 C. L. J. 160; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1139	835
Purna Chandra Singha v. Radhika Mohan Dey	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 370	722
Purusottam Mahesri v. Panchanan Mazumdar	..	42 C. L. J. 197; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 373	805
Radha Krishan v. Mehtab Mian	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 496; 7 L. L. J. 364	620
Radhe Lal v. East Indian Railway	..	7 P. L. T. 57; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 40; 5 Pat. 128	690
Rahimanshah v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1552; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 202	400
Rahmat Ali v. Daulat Bibi	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 501; 7 L. L. J. 301	640
Raj Bahadur Lal v. Suraj Bax Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 138	792
Raj Kristo Ghose v. Bata Kristo Ghose	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 354	114
Rajendra Biswas v. Panchanon Mondal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 350	793
Ram Lal Nandkeolyar v. Alam Ara Begum	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 28	82
Ram Chandra Bardhan v. Prosad Chandra Chatter-	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 73	229
Ram Chandra Mondal v. Gour Gopal Dutta	..	42 C. L. J. 137; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1085	486
Ram Asrey v. Qubul Ahmad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 183	103
Ram Autar v. Shankar Dayal	...	(1925) Pat. 338; 7 P. L. T. 150; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 87	622
Ram Chandra Agarwala v. Syameswari Dasya	...	42 C. L. J. 71; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1171	98
Ram Chandra Singh v. Jang Bahadur Singh	..	7 P. L. T. 52; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 17; (1926) Pat. 70; 5 Pat. 198	553
Ram Charan v. Emperor	..	2 O. W. N. 638; 12 O. L. J. 646; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 674; 26 Cr. L. J. 1609	713
Ram Charan v. Sirtaji	...	2 O. W. N. 849; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 22	766
Ram Gopal Goenka v. Corporation of Calcutta	...	29 C. W. N. 898; 52 C. 962; 26 Cr. L. J. 1533; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1251	317
Ram Harakh v. Ram Autar	...	2 O. W. N. 660; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 539	1036
Ram Harakh Pathak v. Emperor	...	L. R. 6 A. 131 Cr.; 23 A. L. J. 990; 26 Cr. L. J. 1617; A. I. R. 1926 All. 57; 48 A. 140	913
Ram Kumari v. Deonandan Singh	..	(1925) Pat. 151; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 452	79
Ram Pershad Tewari v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1589; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 5	661
Ram Prasad Babu v. Paul Brothers	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 46	381
Ram Rakhi v. Daulat Ram	...	2 L. C. 132; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 31	1056
Ram Sarup v. Gaya Prasad	..	A. I. R. 1925 All. 610; L. R. 6 A. 601 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 56; 48 A. 175	180
Rama Raja Thevar v. Papammal	..	49 M. L. J. 348; 22 L. W. 710; 48 M. 805; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1230	983
Ramalinga Iyer v. Budda Varadarajulu Iyer	...	22 L. W. 390; 49 M. L. J. 544; (1925) M. W. N. 753; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1211; 26 Cr. L. J. 1594	666
Ramasubramania Pillai v. Sivakami Ammal	...	21 L. W. 606; (1925) M. W. N. 371; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 841	165
Ramaswami Naicker v. Narayanswami Naicker	...	(1925) M. W. N. 41; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 762	906
Rambhatlu v. Anniahbhatlu	..	49 M. L. J. 152; 22 L. W. 360; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 144	605
Ramdhani Singh v. Kewal Mani Bibi	..	(1926) Pat. 29; 7 P. L. T. 145; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 156	929
Ramdulari Kuer v. Upendranath Basu	...	(1925) Pat. 143; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 462; 6 P. L. T. 483; 4 Pat. 619	251
Ramesh Chandra Guha v. Dinesh Chandra Guha	..	42 C. L. J. 224; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1010	512
Rameshwar Marwari v. Upendra Nath Das Sarkar	...	29 C. W. N. 1029; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 455	463

Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Durga Mandar	...	7 P. L. T. 42; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 14	454
Rameswar Narain Singh v. Mahabir Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 47	325
Ramjee Prasad v. Bishundutt	..	7 P. L. T. 61; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 194	244
Ramkhelawan Sahu v. Kuldip Sahay	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 152	777
Ramprasad Shivilal v. Shrinivas Balmukund	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1122; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 527	685
Ramprit Ahir v. Emperor	..	26 Cr. L. J. 1608; 7 P. L. T. 218	712
Ramsakal Rai v. Emperor	..	26 Cr. L. J. 1627; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 139	923
Ramsekhar Prasad Singh v. Mathura Lal	..	(1925) Pat. 215; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 557; 4 Pat. 820	249
Rasappa Pillai v. Doraisami Reddiar	...	49 M. L. J. 88; (1925) M. W. N. 486; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1041	545
Ratanlal v. Govind	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 29	349
Raza Hussain Khan v. Subhani	..	2 O. W. N. 838; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 53	525
Renganatha Iyer v. Srinivasa Iyengar	22 L. W. 274; 49 M. L. J. 656; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 42	1037
Rewachand Fatehcand v. Karachi Municipality	...	A. I. R. 1925 Sind 322	44
Rez Muhammad v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1510; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 424	294
Sahdeo Singh v. Kishun Behari Pandey	...	(1925) Pat. 292; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 820; 7 P. L. T. 47	559
Sajjad Ali Khan v. Jagmohan Das	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 13	371
Sajjad Husain v. Mul Chand	..	2 O. W. N. 822; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 18	951
Sajjan Singh v. Emperor	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 418; 6 L. 437; 7 L. L. J. 259; 26 Cr. L. J. 1489	145
Salakshi Ammal v. Doraimanikka Nadan	...	49 M. L. J. 341; (1925) M. W. N. 582; 48 M. 827; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 51	829
Saligram v. Mohan Lal	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 407; 7 L. L. J. 470	143
Samba z. Paiki	...	21 N. L. R. 84; A. I. R. 1925 Nag. 463	550
Sankaran v. Vatakkimyedath Kiran Ghat	...	48 M. L. J. 691; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 894; 23 W. 205
Sansari v. Rahmi	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 405; 7 L. L. J. 206
Sant Bakhsh v. Oudh Ram	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 118	74
Sarba Sundari Dassi v. Panchanon Ray	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 112	67
Sardari Mal v. Abdul Samad	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 430; 7 L. L. J. 208	39
Sarjabai v. Yadeosa	..	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 64	58
Sashj Mohan Tarkasastry v. Meajan Haji	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 255	570
Satish Chandra Ghosh v. Debendra Nath De	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 264	820
Satya Niranjan Chakravarty v. Sushila Bala Dasi	...	4 Pat. 799; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 103	513
Sawan Singh v. Emperor	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 499; 7 L. L. J. 339; 26 Cr. L. J. 1585	657
Secretary of State for India, In re	...	49 M. L. J. 418; 22 L. W. 330; (1925) M. W. N. 788; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1241; 48 M. 939	601
_____ v. Bishan Narain Bhargava	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 44	524
_____ v. Gokal Chand	...	6 L. 451; 2 L. C. 99; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 636	1026
Shabbar Hussain v. Abbas Ali	...	23 A. L. J. 935; L. R. 6 A. 567 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 152	324
Shama Charan v. Emperor	...	(1925) Pat. 263; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 610; 6 P. L. T. 766; 26 Cr. L. J. 1562	442
Shamsher Narain Singh v. Mohammad Sale	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 29	329
Shanmuga Mudaliar v. Kumaraswami Mudali	...	21 L. W. 403; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 870; (1925) M. W. N. 655; 48 M. 661	420
Sheikh Muhammad v. Ramchandra	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 179	74
Sheo Behari v. Sheo Ratan Singh	..	A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 740	345
Sheo Dani Kuer v. Ramji Upadhyay	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 76; (1926) Pat. 310	757
Sheo Darshan v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1503; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 27	159
Sheo Nath v. Puran Mal	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 425; 7 L. L. J. 212	228
Sheo Prasad v. Narainibai	...	A. I. R. 1926 All. 95; 24 A. L. J. 137	938
Sheobux v. Jagganath	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 184	364
Sheocharan v. Emperor	...	21 N. L. R. 88; 26 Cr. L. J. 1537; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 117	385
Sheodayal v. Ram Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 222	247
Sher Khan v. Prabh Dayal	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 507; 7 L. L. J. 319	683
Shyama Bhai v. Purushotamadoss	..	21 L. W. 551; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 645	124
Sib Sahai Lal v. Bijai Chand Mahtab	...	(1926) Pat. 19; 5 Pat. 157; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 197	862
Sidik Haji Yacub v. Mahomed Faruq	..	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 71	1007
Sinnanna Goundan v. Veerappa Goundan	...	(1925) M. W. N. 282; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 681
Sita Ram Singh v. Ansari Lal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 152	900
Sitaran v. Himatrao	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 161	38

Sitla Bux Singh v. Ram Niwaz	...	2 O. W. N. 811; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 20	..	741
Siva Subramania Pillai v. Piramu Ammal	..	49 M. L. J. 128; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1111	...	1024
Sivaswami Iyer v. Tirumudi Chettiar	...	49 M. L. J. 665; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1057; (1925) M. W. N. 541 & 841	593
Sobhit Mallah v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1504; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 70	...	160
Srambikkal Malikkal Moideen Koya v. Kattaparambath Moideen	..	49 M. L. J. 354; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1229	...	968
Sri Kishan v. Debi Dayal	...	2 O. W. N. 823; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 739; 26 Cr. L. J. 1619	..	915
Sripat v. Hubdar	...	2 O. W. N. 678; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 643	...	115
Srish Chandra Ghose v. Abani Nath Hazra	...	42 C. L. J. 139; 26 Cr. L. J. 1584; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 266	...	544
Subedar Rai v. Rambilas Rai	...	5 Pat. 8; 7 P. L. T. 257; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 162	...	817
Subramania Iyer v. A. Subban Chettiar	..	21 L. W. 696; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1130	..	1047
Subramania Iyer v. Narayanaswami Iyer	...	(1925) M. W. N. 601; 22 L. W. 445; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1240	..	1020
Sudha Krishna Mukherji v. East Indian Railway Company	...	7 P. L. T. 45; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 137	...	1
Sudhanya Kumar Das v. Ismail	...	29 C. W. N. 733; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 956	...	844
Sukhdeo Singh v. Kashi Singh	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 119	...	340
Sultan v. C. De M. Wellbourne	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 364; 26 Cr. L. J. 1532; 3 R. 577; 4 Bur. L. J. 261	...	316
Sultan Muhammad Khan v. Emperor	..	L. R. 6 A. 194 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 1630; 24 A. L. J. 80; A. I. R. 1926 All. 176	...	926
Sumer Singh v. Dalthamman Singh	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 151	..	911
Sundar Singh v. Bhan Singh	...	2 L. C. 155; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 62	..	1032
Suraj Singh v. Phul Kumari	23 A. L. J. 997; A. I. R. 1926 All. 202; 48 A. 226	...	904
S. Narain Deb v. Nityendra Narain	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 173	...	267
Chandra Samaddar v. Mathura Nath Gain	...	42 C. L. J. 66; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1187	...	47
Crane Govinda Rao v. Anugoda Matada Rudrayya	...	(1925) M. W. N. 228; 49 M. L. J. 14; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 830	...	465
Jarni Singh v. Satnarain Maharaj	...	(1925) Pat. 281; 6 P. L. T. 787; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 9	...	895
Tawakkul Khan v. Muhammad Mehdi Ali Khan	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 49	...	375
Tegh Indar Singh v. Harnam Singh	...	6 L. 457; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 568; 7 L. L. J. 424	...	1035
Thadiappan v. Veraperumal	...	21 L. W. 646; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1139; 26 Cr. L. J. 1501	...	157
Tirumala Tirupati v. Venkatasubba Rao	...	49 M. L. J. 313; 22 L. W. 335; (1925) M. W. N. 768; 48 M. 821; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 55	...	725
Tiruvengadam Pillai v. Sabbapathi Pillai	..	(1925) M. W. N. 608; 49 M. L. J. 361; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1217	..	767
Tokh Narayan Puri v. Ram Rachhya Singh	...	(1925) Pat. 265; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 743; 5 Pat. 96; 7 P. L. T. 233	...	806
Tulshi Prasad Ram v. J. A. W. Wilson	...	7 P. L. T. 35; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 181	...	74
Tunia v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1611; A. I. R. 1926 168	...	715
U Tha Nyo v. Mg. Kyaw Tha	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 273; 3 R. 379; 4 Bur. L. J. 99	...	693
Upendra Mohan Roy Choudhuri v. Narendra Mohan Roy	...	30 C. W. N. 180; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 155	..	878
Vagha Jesang v. Jagjivan Amritlal Desai	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1107; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 542	..	558
Valluru Appalasuri v. Sasapu Kannamma Nayuralu	...	22 L. W. 287; (1925) M. W. N. 622; 49 M. L. J. 479; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 6	..	881
Varadarajulu Chetti v. Velayudha Udayan	..	22 L. W. 230; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1160	...	743
Vavaru Ambalam v. President, Taluk Board	...	21 L. W. 274; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 620	...	803
Veerarayan v. Ayyakutti	..	48 M. L. J. 499; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 742	..	794
Venkatarama Iyer, In re	...	(1925) M. W. N. 606; 22 L. W. 327; 49 M. L. J. 440; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1236	..	616
Venkataramiah v. Subbireddi	...	22 L. W. 24; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1173	...	1055
Vidyavaradhak Sangh Company v. Sangirimallappa	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1152; 49 B. 842; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 524	..	614
W. R. T. Forbes v. Muhammad Ali Haidar Khan	..	42 C. L. J. 131; 26 Cr. L. J. 1524; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1246; 53 C. 46	...	308
Wajihunnissa Begam v. Babu Lal Mahton	...	(1925) Pat. 298; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 42; 5 Pat. 46	...	871
Walter Mitchell v. A. K. Tennent	...	52 C. 677; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1007	..	59
Wishnu Ram v. Emperor	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 524; 6 L. 445; 7 L. L. J. 341; 26 Cr. L. J. 1588	...	660
Yendluri Nagabhushanam v. Yendluri Jagannikulu	...	22 L. W. 234; 49 M. L. J. 671; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1031	...	775
Yerlagadda Venkanna, In re	...	48 M. L. J. 605; (1925) M. W. N. 396; 22 L. W. 98; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 856; 26 Cr. L. J. 1556	...	436

Table showing seriatim the pages of Volume 90 of Indian Cases and the corresponding Pages of other Law Journals and Reports.

An asterisk (*) denotes cases not reported yet elsewhere.

Page.	Names of cases reported.	Where reported.
1	Sudha Krishna Mukerji v. The East Indian Railway Company	7 P. L. T. 45; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 137.
9	Makundi Singh v. Parbhu Dayal	L. R. 6 A. 200 Rev.; 23 A. L. J. 993; A. I. R. 1926 All. 169; 48 A. 97.
4	Barbar v. Debenham	42 C. L. J. 87; 30 C. W. N. 274; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 469; 53 C. 123.
5	Adams v. Gray	(1925) M. W. N. 123; 48 M. L. J. 707; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 599.
13	Bhagchand v. Secretary of State for India	A. I. R. 1924 Bom. 1; 26 Bom. L. R. 1; 48 B. 87.
38	Sitaram v. Himatrao	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 161.
38	Sita Ram Singh v. Ansari Lal	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 152.
39	Sardari Mal v. Abdul Samad	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 480; 7 L. L. J. 208.
40	Ahmed Yar Khan v. Dina Nath Sadhukhan	42 C. L. J. 69; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1148.
41	Gurditta Mal v. Muhammad Khan	7 L. L. J. 544; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 37.
43	Balkrishna v. Raghunath	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 201.
44	Rewachand Fatehchand v. Karachi Municipality	A. I. R. 1925 Sind 322.
46	Agent, Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railway v. Gouri Lal	2 O. W. N. 749; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 68.
47	Suresh Chandra Samaddar v. Mathura Nath Gain	42 C. L. J. 66; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1187.
48	Nowroji Rustomji Wadia v. Government of Bombay	23 A. L. J. 803; 2 O. W. N. 691; A. I. R. 1925 (P. C.) 211; 49 M. L. J. 233; 27 1140; 42 C. L. J. 143; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 49 B. 700; 23 L. W. 46; 30 C. W. N. 386; 1 M. W. N. 278; 52 I. A. 367 P. C.
51	Mahadeo v. Shioram	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 9.
52	Burn & Co. v. Lukhdirji of Morvi State	23 A. L. J. 806; A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 186; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 147; 30 C. W. N. 145 P. C.
58	Sarjabai v. Yadeosa	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 61.
59	Walter Mitchell v. A. K. Tennent	52 C. 677; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1007.
64	Chotumal-Bulchand v. Firm of Lilaram-Lakhmi-chand	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 34.
65	Kanhaiya Lal Sahu v. Suga Kuer	6 P. L. T. 593; 4 Pat. 824; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 90.
71	Bejoy Chand Mahtab v. Beni Madhab Chaudhury	52 C. 689; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 936.
72	Kedar Nath v. Bismillah Begam	L. R. 6 A. 614 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 67; A. I. R. 1926 All. 156.
74	Tulshi Prasad Ram v. Mr. J. A. W. Wilson	7 P. L. T. 35; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 181.
74	Sheikh Muhammad v. Ramchandra	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 179.
76	Gokul v. Shyamlalsingh	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 35.
79	Ram Kumari v. Deonandan Singh	(1925) Pat. 151; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 452.
80	Ahmad Husain v. Muhammad Qasim Khan	L. R. 6 A. 598 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 88; A. I. R. 1926 All. 46; 48 A. 171.
82	Rajkishore Lal Nandkeolyar v. Alam Ara Begum	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 28.
83	Dip Prakash v. Dwarka Prasad	L. R. 6 A. 606 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 91; A. I. R. 1926 All. 71; 48 A. 201.
86	Hari Chandana Joga Deva v. Hindustan Co-operative Insurance Society, Ltd.	A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 690; 52 C. 239.
92	Govindas Chaturbhujdas v. Ramadoss	48 M. L. J. 252; (1925) M. W. N. 148; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 593; 21 L. W. 733; 48 M. 521.
98	Ram Chandra Agarwala v. Syameswari Dasya	42 C. L. J. 71; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1171.
99	Gulab Dei v. G. I. P. Railway	L. R. 6 A. 615 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 120; A. I. R. 1926 All. 146; 48 A. 217.
100	Mohammed Usman v. Abdul Rahman	42 C. L. J. 74; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1151.
103	Ram Asrey v. Qubul Ahmad	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 183.
104	Bidhumukhi v. Gobinda Chandra Pal	42 C. L. J. 78; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 215.
106	Parameswar Bhartigal v. T. P. S. Issoop Rowthian	48 M. L. J. 299; 21 L. W. 587; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 800.
111	Mulibai v. Shewaram Menghraj	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 78.
114	Raj Kristo Ghose v. Bata Kristo Ghose	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 354.
115	Sripat v. Hubdar	2 O. W. N. 678; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 648.
116	Narain Das v. Ram Chandra	L. R. 6 A. 610 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 26; A. I. R. 1926 All. 124; 48 A. 209.

119	Ghutur Singh v. Phulang Singh	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 55.
120	Mutsaddi Lal v. Bhagwan Das	...	L. R. 6 A. 596 Civ.; 23 A. L. J. 1059; A. I. R. 1926 All. 172; 48 A. 164.
121	Niranka Sashi Roy v. Swarganath Banerjee	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 95.
123	Kahan Singh v. Natha Singh	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 414; 7 L. L. J. 184.
124	Shyama Bhai v. Purshotamados	...	21 L. W. 551; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 645.
135	Agent, G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Jasrup Shrinath	..	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 57.
138	Dronamraju Lakshmi v. Immani Seshayya	..	48 M. L. J. 363; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 825.
143	Saligram v. Mohan Lal	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 407; 7 L. L. J. 470.
145	Bhagwantrao v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1489; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 217.
145	Sajjan Singh v. Emperor	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 418; 6 L. 437; 7 L. L. J. 259; 26 Cr. L. J. 1489.
147	Emperor v. Baldeo	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1491; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 184.
148	Nur Muhammad v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1492.
149	Dadu v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1493; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 221.
150	Mula v. Emperor	...	L. R. 6 A. 159 Cr.; 23 A. L. J. 924; 26 Cr. L. J. 1494; A. I. R. 1926 All. 33.
151	Bhura v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1495; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 89.
152	Chairman, Municipal Council, Chicacole v. Gajireedi Seetharamayya	...	21 L. W. 280; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 584; 26 Cr. L. J. 1496.
153	Hazara Singh v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1497; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 60.
154	Harihar Singh v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1498; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 182.
156	Kartar Singh v. Emperor	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 406; 7 L. L. J. 217; 26 Cr. L. J. 1500.
157	Thadiappan v. Veeraperumal	...	21 L. W. 646; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1139; 26 Cr. L. J. 1501.
158	Hernandan Das v. Atual Kumar Prasad	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1502; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 57.
159	Darshan v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1503; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 27.
160	Abhit Mallah v. Emperor	..	26 Cr. L. J. 1504; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 70.
161	Karam Din v. Mehr Din	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 409; 7 L. L. J. 185.
162	Gopala v. Laxmansingh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 216.
164	Sansari v. Rahmi	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 405; 7 L. L. J. 206.
165	Ramasubramania Pillai v. Sivakami Ammal	...	21 L. W. 606; (1925) M. W. N. 371; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 841.
180	Ram Sarup v. Gaya Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1925 All. 610; L. R. 6 A. 601 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 56; 48 A. 175.
184	Kaniz Fizza Bibi v. Data Din	...	2 O. W. N. 650; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 678.
188	Krishnadoss Vittaldoss v. Ghanshamdoss	...	(1925) M. W. N. 395; 22 L. W. 160; 49 M. L. J. 311; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1084.
189	Meghji Moorji v. Tyeballi Kamruddin	...	26 Bom. L. R. 1019; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 64.
194	Kawleshwar Lal v. Satya Brata Banerji	...	7 P. L. T. 138; (1926) Pat. 121.
196	Daulat v. Ramappa	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 197.
198	Maung Bya v. Maung Kyi Nyo	..	42 C. L. J. 156; 49 M. L. J. 282; A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 236; 27 Bom. L. R. 1427; 3 R. 494; (1925) M. W. N. 894; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 209; 30 C. W. N. 218; 52 A. 385 P. C.
206	Lakshmana v. V. V. Ramalinga Mudaliar	..	48 M. L. J. 522; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 888.
209	E. I. Railway Co. v. Badrilal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 192.
210	Choturam Bhikraj v. Narayan	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 49.
211	Kailash Chandra Mitra v. Brojendra Kumar Chakraverti	..	29 C. W. N. 1000; 42 C. L. J. 232; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1056; 53 C. 197.
217	Jagannath Sahu v. Sheogobind Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 128.
218	Karimannessa Bibi v. Hamedulla	...	30 C. W. N. 129; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 401.
227	Mangtu v. Lachhi Ram	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 424; 7 L. L. J. 192.
228	Banshibadan Mandal v. Chhaunat Bibi	...	42 C. L. J. 176; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 400.
228	Sheo Nath v. Puran Mal	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 425; 7 L. L. J. 212.
229	Rakhal Chandra Bardhan v. Prosad Chandra Chatterjee	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 73.
236	David Sassoon & Co. Ltd. v. Shivjiram Devidas	...	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 50.
238	Bachan Singh v. Bijai Singh	...	24 A. L. J. 130; A. I. R. 1926 All. 180; 48 A. 221.
239	Dulichand v. Soni	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 75.
242	Lakhmichand-Ghandamal v. Firm of Gokaldas-Ranchordas	..	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 75.
243	Ahmad Husain Khan v. Hardial	..	L. R. 6 A. 586 Civ.; 24 A. L. J. 120; A. I. R. 1926 All. 142; 48 A. 199.
244	Ramjee Prasad v. Bishundutt	...	7 P. L. T. 61; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 194.
247	Sheodayal v. Ramprasad	..	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 222.

249	Ramsekhar Prashad Singh v. Mathura Lal	...	(1925) Pat. 215; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 557; 4 Pat. 820.
250	Mehr Dad v. Mohammed Ali Shah	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 434; 7 L. L. J. 195.
251	Raundlari Kuer v. Upendranath Basu	..	(1925) Pat. 143; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 462; 6 P. L. T. 483; 4 Pat. 619.
254	Nur Mahommed v. Lalchand	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 436; 7 L. L. J. 201.
256	Mohan Dei v. Balmukund Rastogi	...	12 O. L. J. 543; 2 O. W. N. 737; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 702.
262	Baijulal Marwari v. Thakur Prasad Marwari	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 33; 7 P. L. T. 153.
263	Beharilal v. Gorelal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 203.
266	Firm Mangal Chand-Paramsukh Das v. Zainab Bibi	...	L. R. 6 A. 595 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 177.
267	Surendra Narain Deb v. Nityendra Narain	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 173.
269	Chakiri Subayya v. Yeradoddi Mal Reddy	...	21 L. W. 694; 49 M. L. J. 126; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1081.
270	Jageshwar Tukaram v. Pandurang	..	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 215.
272	Debi Charan v. Deo Mukhi	...	2 O. W. N. 702; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 621.
273	Chakauri Lal v. Deo Chand Mahton	..	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 61.
274	Begam Sultan v. Sarvi Begam	..	23 A. L. J. 977; L. R. 6 A. 582 Civ. A. I. R. 1926 All. 93; 48 A. 121.
276	Gayan Nath Sahi v. Malhiji Vaidya	...	(1925) Pat. 160; 6 P. L. T. 507; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 588.
279	Ganeshdas v. Harilal	..	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 212.
281	Nagendra Nath v. Jugal Kishore Roy	...	29 C. W. N. 1052; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1097; 43 C. L. J. 83.
287	Jagat Narain Lal v. Hawaldar	..	L. R. 6 A. 597; 24 A. L. J. 63; A. I. R. 1926 All. 158.
287	Demello v. New Victoria Mills Co., Ltd.	..	23 A. L. J. 948; L. R. 6 A. 555 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 17.
289	E. J. Judha v. Emperor	...	29 C. W. N. 1011; 26 Cr. L. J. 1505; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 464; 53 C. 174.
290	Dwarka Prasad v. Mukand Sarup	...	L. R. 6 A. 630 Civ. & 213 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 1506; A. I. R. 1926 All. 21; 24 A. L. J. 122.
292	Gopal Das v. Maghi Ram	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 439; 7 L. L. J. 252; 26 C. L. J. 1508.
294	Rez Muhammad v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1510; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 424.
295	Harbans Narain Singh v. Mohammed Sayed	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1511; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 51.
297	Gam Mallu Dora, In re	...	48 M. L. J. 308; (1925) M. W. N. 192; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 690; 26 Cr. L. J. 1513; 49 M. 74.
308	W. R. T. Forbes v. Muhammad Ali Haidar Khan	...	42 C. L. J. 131; 26 Cr. L. J. 1521; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1246; 53 C. 46.
309	Mohammad Yakub v. Emperor	...	2 O. W. N. 688; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh. 690; 26 Cr. L. J. 1525.
310	Jagardeo Ramsumer Tewari v. Emperor	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1043; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 489; 49 B. 804; 26 Cr. L. J. 1526.
316	Sultan v. O. De M. Wellbourne	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 364; 26 Cr. L. J. 1532; 3 R. 577; 4 Bur. L. J. 261.
317	Ram Gopal Goenka v. Corporation of Calcutta	...	29 C. W. N. 898; 52 C. 962; 26 Cr. L. J. 1533; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1251.
320	Basappa Rachapa Hundekar v. Emperor	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1056; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 526; 26 Cr. L. J. 1536.
321	Baijnath v. Ramdas Sahu	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 62.
321	Ladli Begum v. Ram Das	...	(1925) Pat. 167; 6 P. L. T. 448; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 488.
323	Diwan Bahadur Ballabh Das v. Narain Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Rag. 206.
324	Shabbar Hussain v. Abbas Ali	...	23 A. L. J. 935; L. R. 6 A. 567 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 152.
325	Rameshwar Narayan Singh v. Mahabir Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 47.
327	Jamna Pershad v. Ramlal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 24.
329	Shanusher Narain Singh v. Muhammad Sale	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 29.
331	Made Gouda v. Chenne Gouda	...	21 L. W. 709; 49 M. L. J. 150; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1174.
332	Jag Mohan Singh v. Sheo Mangal Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 17.
333	Jabed Ali v. Surendra Nath Bandopadhyaya	...	42 O. L. J. 477; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 351.
337	K. Rajagopala Chariar v. Jamal Ayisha Bibi	...	21 L. W. 312; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 571.
340	Sukhdeo Singh v. Kashi Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 119.
341	Ma Nyein E v. Maung Maung	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang 340; 4 Bur. L. J. 189; 3 R. 549.
345	Sheo Behari v. Sheo Ratan Singh	...	A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 740.
346	Sankaran v. Vatakkimyedath Kiran Ghat	...	48 M. L. J. 691; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 894; 23 L. W. 205.

349	Ratanlal v. Govind	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 29.
351	Ahmad Hasan v. Kodi Lal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 76.
352	Prasana Kumar Banerji v. Kaleyam Charan Mandal	...	7 P. L. T. 71; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 80.
353	Bisheshar Prasad v. Raghubir	...	L. R. 6 A. 255 Rev.; 24 A. L. J. 83; A. I. R. 1926 All. 58; 48 A. 168.
356	Abdul Ghani v. Harnam Singh	..	(1925) Pat. 250; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 748; 7 P. L. T. 260.
358	Kishan Dei v. Sheo Paltan	...	L. R. 6 A. 557 Civ.; 23 A. L. J. 981; A. I. R. 1926 All. 1; 48 A. 126.
364	Sheobux v. Jagan Nath	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 184.
368	Palaniappa Chettiar v. Krishnaswamy Chettiar	..	48 M. L. J. 696; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 877; 22 L. W. 429; (1925) M. W. N. 759.
371	Sajjad Ali Khan v. Jagmohan Das	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 13.
373	Gajadhar v. Aulad Husain	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 80.
374	Agent of the B. N. Ry. Co. Ltd. v. Hamir Mull-Chagan Mull	...	6 P. L. T. 565; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 727; 5 Pat. 106; (1926) Pat. 114.
375	Tawakkul Khan v. Muhammad Mehdi Ali Khan	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 49.
378	Jamu v. Muhammad Ibrahim	...	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 194.
380	Jogendra Narayan Das v. Satyendra Chandra Ghose	...	25 C. W. N. 640; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 790.
381	Ram Prasad Babu v. Paul Brothers	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 46.
385	Sheocharan v. Emperor	...	21 N. L. R. 88; 26 Cr. L. J. 1537; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 117.
387	Pratap Chandra Guha Roy v. Emperor	...	29 C. W. N. 904; 42 C. L. J. 178; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1121; 26 Cr. L. J. 1539.
398	Perumal Naick, In re	..	(1925) M. W. N. 317; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 672; 22 L. W. 209; 26 Cr. L. J. 1550.
399	Emperor v. Nisar Ali Khan	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1551; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 179.
400	Shanishah v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1552; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 202.
401	Annamdevula Tata v. Ahamadulla Khan Sahib Bahadur	...	48 M. L. J. 701; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 890; 22 L. W. 528.
404	Bhagwati Prashad v. Lall Bahadur	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 33.
405	Durlav Chandra Chowdhuri v. Jamiruddin Ahamed Chowdhuri	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 314.
408	Dunya Singh v. Ganga Dhar	..	2 O. W. N. 684; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 650.
410	Krishnaswami Bhagavathar v. Thirumalai Iyer	...	A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 101.
418	Bhawani Prasad Singh v. Ram Rati Kunwar	..	28 O. C. 261; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 649.
420	Shanmuga Mudaliar v. Kumaraswami Mudali	...	21 L. W. 403; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 870; (1925) M. W. N. 655; 48 M. 661.
426	Agent, B. N. Ry. v. Behari Lal Dutt	..	29 C. W. N. 614; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 716; 52 C. 783.
430	Haidri Khanam v. Ahmad Ali	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 31.
431	Dhirendra Nath Ghose v. Charushashi Debya	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 191.
432	Kamini Kumar Roy v. Rajendra Nath Roy	..	42 C. L. J. 219; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 233.
433	Fazaruddin v. Emperor	...	42 C. L. J. 111; 26 Cr. L. J. 1553; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 105.
434	Emperor v. Nabu	..	26 Cr. L. J. 1554; A. I. R. 1926 Sind 1.
435	Yerlagadda Venkanna, In re	...	48 M. L. J. 605; (1925) M. W. N. 396; 22 L. W. 98; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 856; 26 Cr. L. J. 1556.
439	Barhamdeo Rai v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1559; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 36; 7 P. L. T. 272.
440	Kasem Molla v. Emperor	..	42 C. L. J. 114; 26 Cr. L. J. 1560; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 410.
442	Shama Charan v. Emperor	...	(1925) Pat. 263; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 610; 6 P. L. T. 766; 26 Cr. L. J. 1562.
444	Chhutkau v. Emperor	..	28 O. C. 258; 26 Cr. L. J. 1564; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 36.
445	Faujdar Rai v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1565; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 25; 7 P. L. T. 199.
447	Emperor v. Gajadhar Prasad	..	2 O. W. N. 707; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 610; 26 Cr. L. J. 1567.
449	Kanhya Lal Sewbux, In the matter of	...	29 C. W. N. 1019; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 176.
450	Krishnaji v. Kashirao	..	A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 220.
451	Kanai Lal Ghosh v. Basanta Behari Sen	...	29 C. W. N. 1020; 42 C. L. J. 490; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 451.
454	Rameshwar Singh Bahadur v. Durga Mandar	..	7 P. L. T. 42; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 14.
456	O. S. Meah v. Durga Churn Dutta	...	29 C. W. N. 1027; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 243.
458	Kruthiventi Perraju Garu v. Sitaramachandra	...	48 M. L. J. 584; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 897; 22 L. W. 568.

463	Rameshwar Marwari v. Upendranath Dass Sarkar ...	29 C. W. N. 1029; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 455.
465	Sutrama Govinda Rao v. Anugoda Matada Rudrayya ...	(1925) M. W. N. 228; 49 M. L. J. 14; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 830.
468	Attorneys, In the matter of ...	29 C. W. N. 1047; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 964.
470	Achal Singh v. Shaghunath Kuer ...	2 O. W. N. 713; 12 O. L. J. 603; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 2; 29 O. C. 51.
480	Karuna Charan Das v. Krishna Sundar Majumdar ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 179.
481	Arunachelam Chetty v. Krishna Iyer ...	(1925) M. W. N. 324; 22 L. W. 265; 49 M. L. J. 530; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1168.
486	Rakhal Chandra Mondal v. Gour Gopal Dutta ...	42 C. L. J. 137; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1085.
487	Lachhman Das v. Bhagirath ...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 41.
488	Kamal Mandalini v. Paramasukh Chakrabutty ...	29 C. W. N. 1033; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 289.
489	Gobinda Bauri v. Kristo Sardar ...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 64.
492	Mohammed Kamil v. Hedayetulla ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 380.
496	Narasimha Charyulu v. Govindoss Krishnadoss ...	49 M. L. J. 185; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1196.
497	Prasanna Kumar Datta v. Kedarnath Samanta ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 299.
498	Albert Karunakaran Stephen v. Administrator-General, Madras ...	(1925) M. W. N. 308; 49 M. L. J. 197; 22 L. W. 94; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 686.
499	Nepaldas Mukherjee v. Probhas Chandra Mukherjee ...	42 C. L. J. 221; 30 C. W. N. 357; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 460.
501	Christian F. F. v. Prasad Raut ...	(1925) Pat. 220; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 615; 4 Pat. 760; 7 P. L. T. 280.
504	Harendra Nath Ohaudhury v. Sona Gazi ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 259.
505	Inder Kuer v. Mohammad Taqi ...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 64.
509	Ananda Chandra Kacharu v. Barada Kanta Dey ...	42 C. L. J. 203; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 177.
509	Ponnoppa Reddi v. Thiruvengada Pillai & Co. ...	49 M. L. J. 104; 22 L. W. 455; A. I. R. 1179; (1925) M. W. N. 713.
512	Ramesh Chandra Guha v. Dinesh Chandra Guha ...	42 C. L. J. 224; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1010.
513	Satya Niranjana Chakravarty v. Sushila Bala Dasi ...	4 Pat. 799; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 103.
523	Gour Chandra Das v. Subashini Dasi ...	42 C. L. J. 200; 30 C. W. N. 39; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 240.
524	Secretary of State for India v. Bishan Narain Bhargava ...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 44.
525	Raza Husain Khan v. Subhani ...	2 O. W. N. 838; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 53.
527	Kasiwar De v. Aswini Kumar Pal ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 249.
529	Chandra Kumar Sen v. Mathuriya Debya ...	29 O. W. N. 1035; 42 C. L. J. 120; 52 C. 1009; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1228; 26 Cr. L. J. 1569.
530	Mania Manikha Padayachi, In re ...	49 M. L. J. 155; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1061; 22 L. W. 755; 48 M. 874; 26 Cr. L. J. 1570.
534	Ahmed Ali v. Emperor ...	42 O. L. J. 215; 26 Cr. L. J. 1574; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 224.
536	Emperor v. Mohammad Shafi ...	26 Cr. L. J. 1576; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 57.
537	Abdul Gani Bhuya v. Emperor ...	42 C. L. J. 205; 26 Cr. L. J. 1577; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 235; 53 C. 181.
541	Muqim-un-nisa v. Ahmad-un-nisa ...	2 O. W. N. 704; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 605; 26 Cr. L. J. 1581.
542	Kabatulla v. Emperor ...	42 C. L. J. 212; 26 Cr. L. J. 1582; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1241; 53 C. 157.
544	Srish Chandra Ghose v. Abani Nath Hazra ...	42 O. L. J. 139; 26 Cr. L. J. 1584; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 260.
545	Rasappa Pillai v. Doraisami Reddiar ...	49 M. L. J. 88; (1925) M. W. N. 436; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1041.
547	Mohammad Mazhar-ud-din Hasan v. Zahur-ud-din ...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 131.
548	Commissioner of Income-Tax v. Thillai Chidambara Nadar ...	49 M. L. J. 124; 22 L. W. 206; 48 M. 602; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1018.
550	Samba v. Paiki ...	21 N. L. R. 84; A. I. R. 1925 Nag. 463.
551	Nagalla Kottayya v. Koganti Kottappa ...	49 M. L. J. 117; 23 L. W. 178; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 141; (1925) M. W. N. 722.
553	Ram Chandra Singh v. Jang Bahadur Singh ...	7 P. L. T. 52; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 17; (1926) Pat. 70; 5 Pat. 198.
555	Chennapragada Narayanamurthy v. Secretary of State for India ...	48 M. L. J. 682; 22 L. W. 482; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 963.
557	Mahammad Moyenuddin v. Baharuddin Choudhuri ...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 113.
558	Vagha Jesang v. Jagjivan Amritlal Desai ...	27 Bom. L. R. 1107; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 542.
559	Sahdeo Singh v. Kishun Behari Pandey ...	(1925) Pat. 292; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 820; 7 P. L. T. 47.

561	Pandu Joti Kadam v. Savla-Piraji Kate	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1109; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 472.
561	Prasanna Kumar De Mahajan v. Nanigopal De	...	42 C. L. J. 134; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1175.
562	G. I. P. Railway Co. v. Tarmahomed Hasam	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1111; 49 B. 827; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 534.
564	Dukhu Mia v. Jagadish Nath Roy	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 359.
566	Narain Das v. Debi Din Singh	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 38.
567	Behari Lal Manna v. Murali Dhar	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 287.
569	Bhondai Miser v. Ram Prasad Miser	...	2 O. W. N. 710; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 607.
570	Sashi Mohan Tarkasastri v. Meajan Haji	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 255.
572	East Indian Railway Co. v. Moea Ram-Gaja Nand	...	2 O. W. N. 689; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 615.
573	Premji Mulji v. Garlick & Co.	...	A. I. R. 1925 Sind 254.
575	Ambika Charan Bhakta v. Ram Prosad Chatterjee	...	30 C. W. N. 163; 42 C. L. J. 578; A. I. R. 1926 Cal 377.
577	Gobind Prasad v. Narbhir Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 35.
577	Bathoor Gramathil v. Munnambeth Ambanair	..	49 M. L. J. 379; 22 L. W. 487; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1264.
579	Bhagwan Singh v. Lachuman Prasad Sahu	...	3 Pat. L. R. 225; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 754.
580	Parshuram Dattaram Shamdasani v. Tata Industrial Bank	...	26 Bom. L. R. 987; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 49.
593	Sivaswami Iyer v. Tirumudi Chettiar	...	49 M. L. J. 665; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1057; (1925) M. W. N. 541 & 841.
594	Jogesh Chandra Ghose v. Chapala Sundari Basu	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 383.
596	Homeshwar Singh v. Jugal Kishore	...	A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 223; 49 M. L. J. 800; 43 C. L. J. 8; 28 Bom. L. R. 187 P. C.
600	Moos v. Abdul Husain	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1147; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 523.
601	Secretary of State for India, In re	..	49 M. L. J. 418; 22 L. W. 330; (1925) M. W. N. 788; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1241; 48 M. 939.
	Sinha Charan Nandi v. Batasi Dashi	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 106.
	Ghulam Sarwar v. Ghulam Mustafa	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 479; 7 L. L. J. 285.
604	Motilal Gopaldas v. Krishnabai Gopalrao	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1156; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 513.
605	Rambhatlu v. Anniahbhatlu	...	49 M. L. J. 152; 22 L. W. 366; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 144.
607	Bhupendra Narayan Singh v. Narapat Singh	..	A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 226; 42 C. L. J. 227; 49 M. L. J. 722; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 206; (1925) M. W. N. 724; 52 I. A. 355; 53 C. 6 P. C.
610	Mahadeo Govind v. Lakshminarayan	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1150; 49 B. 839; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 521.
611	Chandra Wati v. Jagan Nath Singh	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 489; 7 L. L. J. 281.
613	Bunyad Singh v. Naubat Singh	...	2 O. W. N. 753; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 59.
614	Vidyavardhak Sangh Company v. Sangirimallappa	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1152; 49 B. 842; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 524.
616	Venkatarama Iyer, In re	...	(1925) M. W. N. 606; 22 L. W. 327; 49 M. L. J. 440; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1236.
617	Khatemy Chhaikuddin v. Ram Narain Ghose	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 364.
620	Gurbachan Kaur v. Satwant Kaur	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 493; 7 L. L. J. 288.
621	Kesho Prasad Singh v. Ram Swarup	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 175.
622	Ram Autar v. Shankar Dayal	...	(1925) Pat. 338; 7 P. L. T. 150; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 87.
624	Hem Chandra Kundu v. Jnanendra Chandra Kundu	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 116.
629	Radha Krishan v. Mehtab Mian	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 496; 7 L. L. J. 364.
630	Dhirajuddin Bepari v. Baharulla Sheikh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 318.
632	Ishar Das v. Lal Singh	..	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 497; 2 L. C. 151; 7 L. L. J. 290.
633	Jorina Aktar Khatun v. Hafezuddin Khan	...	30 C. W. N. 178; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 242.
635	Ma Hnin Yi v. Chew Whee Shein	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 261; 4 Bur. L. J. 93.
637	Gajendra Narain Maity v. Sita Nath Das	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 310.
639	Nagoor Meera v. Moideen Nainar Meera Ali	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 264; 4 Bur. L. J. 110.
640	Rahmat Ali v. Daulat Bibi	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 501; 7 L. L. J. 301.
642	N. M. Khajamiyan Rowther v. Appavu Pillai	...	(1925) M. W. N. 493; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 126.
643	Abdul Hamid Choudhuri v. Brojendra Kumar Roy	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 290.
654	Ganpati Kondaji Sandbhar v. Maruti Gangaji Sandbhar	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1115; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 522.
654	Phul Chand-Fateh Chand v. Chote Lal-Amba Pershad	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 513; 7 L. L. J. 360.
656	B. S. Jorapur v. Venkatesh Balvant Joshi	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1116; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 472.
657	Sawan Singh v. Emperor	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 499; 7 L. L. J. 339; 26 Cr. L. J. 1585.
657	Mahari Dhangar v. Baldeo Narain	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1585; (1926) Pat. 16.
659	Kuppa Mudali, In re	...	49 M. L. J. 421; 22 L. W. 339; (1925) M. W. N. 795; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1206; 26 Cr. L. J. 1587; 49 M. 71.

660	Wishnu Ram v. Emperor	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 524; 6 L. 445; 7 L. L. J. 341; 26 Cr. L. J. 1588.
661	BaliJeppalli Seshayya v. BaliJeppalli Subbarayudi	...	(1925) M. W. N. 470; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1157; 26 Cr. L. J. 1589.
661	Ram Pershad Tewari v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1589; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 5.
665	M. Sanyasayya Naidu v. Public Prosecutor	...	22 L. W. 156; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1224; 26 Cr. L. J. 1593.
666	Ramalinga Iyer v. Budda Varadarajulu Iyer	..	22 L. W. 390; 49 M. L. J. 544; (1925) M. W. N. 753; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1211; 26 Cr. L. J. 1594.
668	Nur Mohammad v. Nur Muhammad	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 490; 7 L. L. J. 367; 26 Cr. L. J. 1596.
668	Narayan Reddy v. Enumula Bojamma	...	(1925) M. W. N. 652; 49 M. L. J. 423; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1280; 26 Cr. L. J. 1596.
669	E. C. Kent v. E. E. L. Kent	...	49 M. L. J. 335; 26 Cr. L. J. 1597; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 59.
673	Mohini Mohan Saha Chowdhury v. Meajan	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 333.
674	Jai Karan Singh v. Umrai Kunwar	...	2 O. W. N. 751; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 749.
675	Sarba Sundari Dassi v. Panchanon Ray	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 112.
676	Ally Moolla Industrial Co., Ltd. v. M. A. Esmail	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 284; 4 Bur. L. J. 131 & 174.
678	Hem Raj v. Nihal Singh	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 506; 7 L. L. J. 352.
679	Har Pershad v. Sheo Shanker	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 68.
680	Radhe Lal v. East Indian Railway	...	7 P. L. T. 57; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 40; 5 Pat. 128.
683	Sher Khan v. Prabh Dayal	...	A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 507; 7 L. L. J. 319.
685	Ramprasad Shival v. Shrinivas Balmukund	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1122; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 520.
687	G. I. P. Railway Co. v. Rameshwar Prasad	...	(1925) Pat. 311; 7 P. L. T. 90; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 190.
689	Dayaram Surajmal v. Chandulal Dayabhai	..	27 Bom. L. R. 1118; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 520.
691	Haro Mandal v. Dhiranath Das	...	(1925) Pat. 288; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 784; 7 P. L. T. 67.
693	U Tha Nyo v. Mg. Kyaw Tha	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 273; 3 R. 379; 4 Bur. L. J. 99.
695	Municipal Corporation v. Ranchordas Vindravandas	...	27 Bom. L. R. 1130; A. I. R. 1925 Bom. 538.
700	Nasaruddin Mandal v. Anath Nath Chowdhury	...	52 C. 943; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 279.
703	Keshub Prasad Singh v. Harihar Prasad Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 54.
705	Bhabataran Mahto v. Emperor	...	(1925) Pat. 278; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 706; 26 Cr. L. J. 1601.
706	Bishambhar Nath Tondon v. Emperor	..	26 Cr. L. J. 1602; 2 O. W. N. 760; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 161.
712	Rampriit Ahir v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1608; 7 P. L. T. 218.
713	Ram Charan v. Emperor	...	2 O. W. N. 638; 12 O. L. J. 646; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 674; 26 Cr. L. J. 1609.
715	Tunia v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1611; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 168.
717	Ma E Sein v. Mg. Hla Min	...	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 280; 3 R. 455; 26 Cr. L. J. 1613; 4 Bur. L. J. 123 F. B.
719	Makhan Mapa v. Monindra Nath Bose	..	42 C. L. J. 83; 26 Cr. L. J. 1615; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1260.
721	Murugappa Chettiar v. L. K. S. S. Firm	...	A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 135.
722	Purna Chandra Singha v. Radhika Mohan Dey	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 370.
723	Pereira v. East Indian Railway	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 102; 7 P. L. T. 256.
724	Murtaza Begum v. Jogendra Nath Roy	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 344.
725	Tirumala Tirupati v. Venkatasubba Rao	..	49 M. L. J. 313; 22 L. W. 335; (1925) M. W. N. 768; 48 M. 821; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 55.
727	Panchi Dasi v. Kshiroda Dasi	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 171.
728	Maung Sit Paung v. Maung Tun	..	A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 278; 4 Bur. L. J. 104.
729	Monoranjan Adya v. Bijoy Kumar Adya	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 180.
729	Nilambur Thacharakavil v. Parry & Co., Ltd.	...	49 M. L. J. 390; 48 M. 815; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1277.
732	Baijnath Rai v. Mangla Prasad Narayan Sahi	..	(1925) Pat. 271; 6 P. L. T. 731; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 1.
736	Ibad Ali v. Dwarka	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 145.
737	Hari Barman v. Khatijan	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 348.
739	Hemchandra Mahto v. Prem Mahto	...	(1925) Pat. 330; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 54; 7 P. L. T. 295.
741	Sitla Bux Singh v. Ram Niwaz	...	2 O. W. N. 811; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 20.
743	Varadarajulu Chetti v. Velayudha Udayan	..	22 L. W. 230; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1160.
745	Sant Bakhsh v. Oudh Ram	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 14.
746	Indra-Narayan Ghose v. Tarini Prosad Guin	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 100.
748	Govinda Krishna Yachandra v. Srinivasa Ramacharlu	..	49 M. L. J. 420; (1925) M. W. N. 629; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 237.

749	Brij Raj v. Ram Sarup	...	L. R. 6 A. 488 Civ.; 23 A. L. J. 901; A. I. R. 1926 All. 36; 48 A. 44.
754	Appa Pai v. Somu	...	22 L. W. 145; 49 M. L. J. 327; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1017; (1925) M. W. N. 547.
756	Nabin Chandra Kapali v. Gour Mohan Mistiri	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 369.
757	Sheo Dani Kuer v. Ramji Upadhya	..	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 76; (1926) Pat. 310.
759	Gopala Iyengar v. Mahomed Ibrahim Rowther	..	22 L. W. 320; 48 M. 509; 49 M. L. J. 606; (1925) M. W. N. 783 & 824; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1119.
760	Ganesh Prasad v. Sant Din	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 140.
761	Bhupendra Narain Mander v. Janeswar Mander	...	*Patna High Court.
763	Mahammed Ismail v. Sharfatullah	..	*Calcutta High Court.
766	Ram Charan v. Sirtaji	..	2 O. W. N. 849; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 22.
767	Tiruvengadam Pillai v. Sabhapathi Pillai	...	(1925) M. W. N. 608; 49 M. L. J. 361; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1217.
768	Manmatha Nath Choudhury v. Jamini Nath Mallik	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 246.
769	Ashloke Singh v. Bodha Ganderi	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 125.
771	Mamundi Konar v. Shamsuddin Sahib Bahadur	...	49 M. L. J. 381; 22 L. W. 507; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1207.
774	Achola Sundari Debi v. Doman Sundari Debi	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 150.
775	Yendluri Nagabhushanam v. Yendluri Jagannaikulu	...	22 L. W. 234; 49 M. L. J. 671; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1031.
777	Ramkhelawan Sahu v. Kuldip Sahay	..	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 152.
779	Ameer Mirza Beg v. Udit Pershad	..	2 O. W. N. 816; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 709.
781	Jabeda Khatun v. Mahommed Mozaffar Ali	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 322.
785	Khan Prasad Shah v. Kali Prasad Shah	...	(1925) Pat. 317; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 77; 7 P. L. T. 158.
	Jeet Koeri v. Mathura Koeri	..	L. R. 6 A. 628 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 171; 24 A. L. J. 125.
89	Muthualagappa Chettiar v. Ahmad Ibrahim Alim Saheb	...	22 L. W. 347; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1276.
790	East Indian Railway Co. v. Gobardhan Das	..	(1925) Pat. 333; 7 P. L. T. 140; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 165.
792	Raj Bahadur Lal v. Suraj Bax Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 138.
793	Rajani Kanta Biswas v. Panchanon Mondal	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 350.
794	Veerarayan v. Ayyakutti	..	48 M. L. J. 499; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 742.
795	Fazle Ahmed v. Rajendra Nath Roy Choudhuri	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 339.
799	Deonarayan Singh v. Ram Prasad	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 143.
802	Amir Chand Khanna v. Anukul Chandra Bhandari	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 160.
803	Vavaru Ambalam v. President, Taluk Board	...	21 L. W. 274; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 620.
804	Hari Har Bakhsh Singh v. Mohammad Usman Khan	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 144.
805	Purusottam Mahesri v. Panchanan Mazumdar	..	42 C. L. J. 197; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 373.
806	Tokh Narayan Puri v. Ram Rachhya Singh	..	(1925) Pat. 265; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 743; 5 Pat. 96; 7 P. L. T. 233.
811	Janakinath Singha Roy v. Nirode Baran Roy	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 175.
812	Great Indian Peninsula Railway v. Datti Ram	...	(1925) Pat. 305; 5 Pat. 118; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 148.
816	Hochanuddi v. Abdul Hakim Mridha	..	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 158.
817	Subedar Rai v. Rambilas Rai	...	5 Pat. 8; 7 P. L. T. 257; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 162.
819	Gopalakrishna Konar v. Vilanga Konar	..	A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 132.
820	Satish Chandra Ghosh v. Debendra Nath De	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 264.
822	Peari Dai v. Naimish Chandra Mitra	...	7 P. L. T. 183; 5 Pat. 40; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 184.
825	Dirbijoy Singh v. Dirgpal Singh	..	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 126.
827	Kumud Charan Roy v. Sambhu Chandra Ghosh	...	*Calcutta High Court.
829	Salakshi Ammal v. Doraimanika Nadan	..	49 M. L. J. 341; (1925) M. W. N. 582; 48 M. 827; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 51.
832	Chandra Kumar Shaha v. Mafizar Rahman	...	*Calcutta High Court.
834	Mohammad Sadiq v. Basgit Sah	...	A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 159.
834	Kondagunta Mrutyantjaiah v. Malle Venkatapathigadu	...	49 M. L. J. 333; 22 L. W. 734.
835	Pran Nath Chatterjee v. Lakshmi Narayan Bhattacharya	...	42 C. L. J. 100; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1139.
841	Musi Kozim v. Haji Mutasaddi	...	7 P. L. T. 293.
843	Prathipati Suryanaryana v. Prathipati Seshayya	...	A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 122.
844	Sudhanya Kumar Das v. Ismail	...	29 C. W. N. 733; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 956.
847	Jogendra Prasad Narayan Sinha v. Mangal Prasad Sahu	..	(1925) Pat. 315; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 160.
849	Kunhahomed v. Sara Umma	...	49 M. L. J. 121; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1158.
851	Eastern Mortgage and Agency Co. v. Mohammad Fazlul Karim	...	41 C. L. J. 571; 42 C. 914; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 385.

862	Sib Sahai Lal v. Bijai Chand Mahtab	...	(1926) Pat. 19; 5 Pat. 157; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 197.
866	Fazuluddin Mahammad v. Khetra Ghorai	...	30 C. W. N. 59; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 167.
869	Ayisa Bovi Ammal v. Sokara Booi	...	49 M. L. J. 375; 22 L. W. 740; 6 A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1265.
871	Wajihunnissa Begam v. Babu Lal Mahton	...	(1925) Pat. 298; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 42; 5 Pat. 46.
875	Muhammad Batcha Sahib v. Arunachallem Chettiar	...	(1925) M. W. N. 596; 49 M. L. J. 396; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 39.
878	Upendra Mohon Roy Choudhury v. Narendra Mohon Roy	...	30 C. W. N. 180; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 155.
880	Muthukaruppa Muthirian v. Sivabha Gyathammal	49 M. L. J. 358; 22 L. W. 511; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 33.
881	Valluru Appalasuri v. Sasapu Kannamma Nayuralu	...	22 L. W. 287; (1925) M. W. N. 622; 49 M. L. J. 479; A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 6.
887	Beni Chand v. Ekram Ahmad	...	L. R. 6 A. 617 Civ.; A. I. R. 1926 All. 181; 24 A. L. J. 128.
893	Ashraf Ali v. Arman Khan	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 162.
895	Tarni Singh v. Satnarain Maharaj	...	(1925) Pat. 281; 6 P. L. T. 787; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 9.
900	Sinnanna Goundan v. Veerappa Goundan	...	(1925) M. W. N. 282; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 681.
901	Jatindra Nath Roy Chowdhury v. Narayan Das Khetry	...	52 C. 862; A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 97.
904	Suraj Singh v. Phul Kumari	...	23 A. L. J. 997; A. I. R. 1926 All. 202; 48 A. 226.
906	Ramaswami Naicker v. Narayanaswami Naicker	...	(1925) M. W. N. 41; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 762.
907	Maung Po Ka v. Maung San Po	...	3 R. 295; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 369.
910	Maung Po Aung v. U Bya	...	3 R. 310; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 344.
911	Sumer Singh v. Dalthamman Singh	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 151.
913	Ram Harakh Pathak v. Emperor	...	L. R. 6 A. 181 Cr.; 23 A. L. J. 990; 24 A. L. J. 1617; A. I. R. 1926 All. 57; 48 A. 140.
914	Krishnamurthi Iyer v. Naryanaswami Iyer	...	49 M. L. J. 93; 22 L. W. 402; (1925) M. W. 746; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1065; 26 Cr. L. 1618.
915	Sri Kishan v. Debi Dayal	...	2 O. W. N. 823; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 739; 26 Cr. L. J. 1619.
917	Emperor v. Mewa Ram	...	L. R. 6 A. 202 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 1621; 23 A. L. J. 1051; A. I. R. 1926 All. 178; 48 A. 208.
918	Maung Tok v. Emperor	...	3 R. 352; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 354; 26 Cr. L. J. 1622.
923	Ramsakal Rai v. Emperor	...	26 Cr. L. J. 1627; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 139.
925	Ali Bahadur v. Emperor	...	2 O. W. N. 868; 26 Cr. L. J. 1629; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 146.
926	Sultan Muhammad Khan v. Emperor	...	L. R. 6 A. 194 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 1630; 24 A. L. J. 80; A. I. R. 1926 All. 176.
927	Haq Dad v. Emperor	...	6 L. 392; 26 Cr. L. J. 1631; A. I. R. 1926 Lah. 19.
929	Ramdhani Singh v. Kewal Mani Bibi	...	(1926) Pat. 29; 7 P. L. T. 145; A. I. R. 1926 Pat. 156.
932	Mulchand Sobhraj v. Radhakishin Parumal	...	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 27.
936	Bankateshwar Rawan Bahadurpal Singh v. Dina Nath-Balgobind	...	A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 180.
937	Beli Ram & Bros. v. Ram Lal	...	6 L. 380; A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 644.
938	Sheo Prasad v. Narainibai	...	A. I. R. 1926 All. 95; 24 A. L. J. 137.
944	Bharat Chandra Chakraverty v. Kiron Chandra Chandan Singh v. Laxman	...	52 C. 766; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 1069.
949	Sajjad Husain v. Mul Chand	...	21 N. L. R. 98; A. I. R. 1925 Nag. 438.
951	Pachaiappa Chetti v. Venkatachariar	...	2 O. W. N. 822; A. I. R. 1926 Oudh 18.
952	Hari Mohan Dalal v. Purendra Nath Nag Choudhury	...	(1925) M. W. N. 577; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1198.
955	Ma E Mya v. U Pe Lay	...	A. I. R. 1926 Cal. 356.
958	Onkar v. Dhan Singh	...	3 R. 281; A. I. R. 1926 Rang. 65.
963	Mahomed Hussain v. Hoosain Hamadane & Co.	...	21 N. L. R. 102; A. I. R. 1926 Nag. 10.
967	Srambikkal Maliakkal Moideen Koya v. Kattaparambath Moideen	...	3 R. 293; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 290; 4 A. L. J. 103.
968	Maung Myint v. Official Assignee	...	49 M. L. J. 354; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1229.
969	Jethanand v. Ohetumal	...	3 R. 313; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 31.
970	Kuppuswami Iyer v. Rajeswara Sethupathi	...	A. I. R. 1926 Sind 66.
973	Ohannu Dutta Vyas v. Swami Gyannandji Maharaj...	...	22 L. W. 258; 49 M. L. J. 462; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 1282.
976	Ohambu v. Pazani	...	A. I. R. 1926 All. 100.
980		...	21 L. W. 78; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 740.

B—conold.

	Page.
Bejoy Chand v. Krishna Chandra, 66 Ind. Cas. 357; 34 C. L. J. 275; A. I. R. 1922 Cal. 281. (Distinguished)	607
Bestwick, In re , Hodgkinson, Ex parte , (1876) 2 Ch. 485; 45 L. J. Bk. 118; 31 L. T. 784; 24 W. R. 938. (Relied on)	92
Bhadrayya v. Venkataratnam, 11 Ind. Cas. 515; 21 M. L. J. 803; 10 M. L. T. 54, held no longer law	401
Bhagwanta v. Sukhi, 22 A. 33; A. W. N. (1899) 159; 9 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 1054 (F. B.). (Dissented from)	1022
Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukdari Prashad Singh, 53 Ind. Cas. 317; 47 C. 466; 46 I. A. 259; 37 M. L. J. 513; 17 A. L. J. 1036; (1919) M. W. N. 860; 1 P. L. T. 1; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 27; 22 Bom. L. R. 477; 24 C. W. N. 274; 12 L. W. 105 (P. C.). (Relied on)	1024
Bhairab Chandra Dutt v. Kali Kumar Dutt, 74 Ind. Cas. 1038; 37 C. L. J. 491; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 603. (Relied upon)	426
Bitragunta Appayya v. Addanki Venkataramanayya, 82 Ind. Cas. 864; 20 L. W. 620; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 150. (Followed)	1033
Bloom v. Ford, (1897) A. C. 156; 66 L. J. 205; 45 W. R. 449; 4 Manson (Followed)	547
Lal v. Sarja Nand, 9 Ind. Cas. 829; 105 P. R. 1911; 68 P. W. R. 1911. (Followed)	1045
Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai, 77 Ind. Cas. 689; 21 A. L. J. 931; 46 M. L. J. 23; 5 P. L. T. 1; 28 C. W. N. 253; (1924) M. W. N. 68; 19 L. W. 72; 2 Pat. L. R. 41; 10 O. & A. L. R. 82; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 50; 33 M. L. T. 457; 46 A. 95; 26 Bom. L. R. 500; 11 O. L. J. 107; 51 I. A. 129; 1 O. W. N. 48; 41 C. L. J. 232 (P. C.). (Followed)	210
Buddhoo Lal v. Mewa Ram, 63 Ind. Cas. 15; 19 A. L. J. 558; 43 A. 564 (F. B.). (Distinguished)	287

C

Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad, 12 Ind. Cas. 60; 39 C. 862; 15 C. L. J. 228; 16 C. W. N. 510. (Relied on)	451
Challagundla Varama v. Madala Gopaladasayya, 43 Ind. Cas. 202; 41 M. 659; 35 M. L. J. 57; 24 M. L. T. 115; 8 L. W. 62; (1918) M. W. N. 431. (Relied on)	1022
Chandra Benode Kundu v. Sheikh Alla Bux, 58 Ind. Cas. 353; 48 C. 181; 24 C. W. N. 818; 31 C. L. J. 510. (Relied on)	938
Chhubu Mian v. Har Charan Das, 18 Ind. Cas. 529; 119 P. R. 1912; 101 P. L. R. 1913; 48 P. W. R. 1913. (Followed)	1012
Chockalinga Pillai v. Vythealinga Pundara Sannady, 6 M. H. C. R. 164. (Relied on)	491
Chunni Lal Haldar v. Mikshada Debi, 52 Ind. Cas. 309; 23 C. W. N. 652. (Relied upon)	223
Clark v. Cullen, (1832) 9 Q. B. D. 355; 47 L. T. 307. (Followed)	242
Collector of Jaunpur v. Jamna Prasad, 66 Ind. Cas. 171; 44 A. 350; 20 A. L. J. 140; 4 U. P. L. R. (A.) 59; A. I. R. 1922 All. 37. (Not followed)	1033
Corporation of Calcutta v. Shyama Charan Pal, 32 C. 277; 9 C. W. N. 217. (Distinguished)	44
Crawley v. Luchmeo Ram, 1 Agra H. C. R. 129. (Distinguished)	1019

D

Dal Singh v. Pluiman, 80 Ind. Cas. 264; A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 626. (Followed)	1047
Daulat Ram v. Asa Ram, 46 P. R. 1886. (Followed)	1042
Davis v. Hedges, (1871) 6 Q. B. 687; 40 L. J. Q. B. 276; 25 L. T. 155; 20 W. R. 60. (Followed)	465
Deb Narain Dutt v. Ram Sadhan Mondal, 20 Ind. Cas. 630; 41 C. 137; 17 C. W. N. 1143; 18 C. L. J. 603. (Relied upon)	721
Devaramani Bhogappa v. Pedda Bhimaka Gowd, 28 Ind. Cas. 51; (1915) M. W. N. 148. (Relied on)	555
Dhonendra Chunder Mookerjee v. Mutty Lal Mookerjee, 2 I. A. 18; 23 W. R. 6; 14 B. L. R. 276; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 408; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 53 (P. C.). (Relied upon)	835
Digumber Row Chowdhry v. Moti Lal Bundopadhyaya, 9 C. 563; 12 C. L. R. 201; 7 Ind. Jur. 529; 4 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 1023. (Followed)	499

E

East Indian Railway Company v. Changa Khan, 28 Ind. Cas. 245; 42 C. 888; 19 C. W. N. 1034; 22 C. L. J. 212. (Followed)	209
East Indian Railway Co. v. Ram Lakhan Ram, 78 Ind. Cas. 312; 3 Pat. 230; (1924) Pat. 9; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 37; 6 P. L. T. 415. (Followed)	426
Edwards v. Coomba, (1872) 7 C. P. 519; 41 L. J. C. P. 202; 27 L. T. 315; 21 W. R. 107. (Relied on)	92
Edwards v. Hancher, (1876) 1 C. P. D. 111; 33 L. T. 575. (Relied on)	92
Emperor v. Ayyan, 24 M. 675; 2 Weir. 699. (Relied on)	439
Emperor v. Gulabjap, 64 Ind. Cas. 669; 46 B. 441; 23 Bom. L. R. 1203; 23 Cr. L. J. 45; A. I. R. 1922 Bom. 290. (Followed)	434
Emperor v. Nga Aung Po, U. B. R. 1905 Penal Code, 13; 2 Cr. L. J. 474. (Not followed)	316
Emperor v. Surendra Nath Ghosh, 7 Ind. Cas. 629; 14 C. W. N. 1076 at p. 1085; 12 C. L. J. 277; 11 Cr. L. J. 505; 38 C. 75. (Followed)	534
Empress v. Porehollah Sheikh, 7 C. L. R. 143. (Distinguished)	706
Empress and Sagambar, In the matter of , 12 C. L. R. 120. (Relied on)	440

F

Farid Ahmed v. Dulari Bibi, 6 A. 233; A. W. N. (1884) 45; 3 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 842. (Dissented from)	287
Fatima Begam v. Imdad Ali, 58 Ind. Cas. 560; 18 A. L. J. 351; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 83. (Followed)	287
Fernandez v. Emperor, 59 Ind. Cas. 129; 45 B. 672; 22 Bom. L. R. 1040; 22 Cr. L. J. 17. (Followed)	434
Flint v. Barnard, (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 90; 58 L. J. Q. B. 53; 37 W. R. 185. (Distinguished)	92
Forwood v. Watney, (1880) 49 L. J. Q. B. 447. (Relied upon)	932

G

Ganesh Prasad v. Rewa Bai, 41 Ind. Cas. 883; 13 N. L. R. 116. (Followed)	949
---	-----

G—conold.

Page.

Ganga Varapu Krishna Vonamma v. Marapara- raju Venkata Mukunda Row, 4 Ind. Cas. 303; 7 M. L. T. 33; 33 M. 216. (Relied on)	973
Ganpat v. Trimbak, 19 Ind. Cas. 759; 9 N. L. R. 54. (Relied on)	279
Gaya Din v. Jhuman Lal, 28 Ind. Cas. 910; 37 A. 400; 13 A. L. J. 510. (Not followed)	1033
Girbi Rani Misrani v. Chandra Lal Kanth, 17 Ind. Cas. 885; 17 C. W. N. 62. (Followed)	331
Gooroo Gobind Shaha v. Anand Lal Ghosh, 13 W. R. F. B. 49 at p. 59; 5 B. L. R. F. B. 15. (Followed)	499
Gouri Pattra v. Reily, 20 C. 579; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 392. (Relied on)	557
Goverdhandas Vishindas Ratanchand v. Ram- chand Manjimal, 47 Ind. Cas. 783; 12 S. L. R. 41. (Relied upon)	932
Govindaswami Thevan v. Doraiswami Pillai, 6 Ind. Cas. 781; 34 M. 119; 20 M. L. J. 380; 8 M. L. T. 132; (1910) M. W. N. 390. (Relied on)	767
Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Ganpat Rai, 10 Ind. Cas. 122; 33 A. 544; 8 A. L. J. 543. (Relied on)	135
G. I. P. Ry. Company v. Raisett Chandmull, 19 B. 165; 10 Ind. Dec (N. s.) 112. (Relied on)	135
Guddalur Ruthna v. Kunnathur Arumuga, 7 M. H. C. R. 189. (Relied upon)	929
Gulam Muhammad v. Punna Ram, 72 Ind. Cas. 433; A. I. R. 1924 Lah. 374. (Followed)	254
Gulam Rasul v. Emperor, 61 Ind. Cas. 715; 6 P. L. J. 174; 22 Cr. L. J. 427; 2 P. L. T. 390. (Followed)	434
Gupta Nand Bharti v. Hari Shankar, 78 Ind. Cas. 1016; A. I. R. 1925 All. 39. (Relied on)	1047

H

Hafiz-un-nisa v. Jawahir Singh, 66 Ind. Cas. 24; 24 O. C. 374. (Not followed)	41
Haidar Khan v. Jahan Khan, 50 P. R. 1902; 65 P. L. R. 1902. (Not followed)	41
Haji Ajam Goolam Hossein v. Bombay and Persia Steam Navigation Company, 26 B. 562; 4 Bom. L. R. 447. (Relied on)	135
Hallifax v. Wilson, (1809) 16 Ves. Jur. 168; 33 E. R. 947; 10 R. R. 146. (Relied on)	5
Hamlet, In re ; Stephen v. Cunningham, (1888) 39 Oh. D. 426 at p. 433; 59 L. T. 745; 37 W. R. 245. (Relied on)	5
Hardy, In re ; Hardy v. Former, (1896) 1 Ch. 904; 65 L. J. Ch. 401; 74 L. T. 403; 44 W. R. 503; 3 Manson 150. (Relied on)	92
Hari Bhumali v. Emperor, 9 C. W. N. 974; 2 Cr. L. J. 836. (Distinguished)	439
Hari Narain Majumdar v. Makund Lal Mundal, 4 C. W. N. 814. (Approved)	607
Hathim Mondal v. Emperor, 56 Ind. Cas. 849; 31 O. L. J. 310; 24 C. W. N. 619; 21 Cr. L. J. 545. (Relied on)	542
Hemanta Kumari v. Banku Behari Sikdar, 9 O. W. N. 794. (Distinguished)	64
Henderson v. Bank of Australasia, (1890) 45 Ch. D. 330 at p. 343; 59 D. J. Oh. 794; 2 Meg. 301. (Followed)	560
Hnin Yin v. Than Pe, 44 Ind. Cas. 337; 9 L. B. R. 92; 19 Or. L. J. 321; 11 Bur. L. T. 58. (Re- lied upon)	668
Hobbs v. Morey, (1904) 1 K. B. 74; 73 L. J. K. B. 47; 68 J. P. 132; 52 W. R. 348; 89 L. T. 531; 20 T. L. R. 50; 2 L. G. R. 7. (Followed)	759

H—conold.

Page.

Hriday Govinda Sur v. Emperor, 82 Ind. Cas. 767; 40 C. L. J. 149; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 1035; 25 Cr. L. J. 1375; 52 C. 148. (Not followed)	308
Hunnoman Pershad Panday v. Babooee Munraj Konweree, 6 M. I. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81n; Sevestre 253n; 2 Suth P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147. (Followed)	345
I
Imam-ud-din v. Mumtaz-un-Nissa, 27 Ind. Cas. 118; 18 O. C. 34; 1 O. L. J. 747. (Relied on)	741
Imamuddin v. Sadarat Rai, 5 Ind. Cas. 897; 32 A. 301; 7 A. L. J. 228. (Followed)	324
Indian General Navigation and Railway Co. v. Nanda Lal, 3 Ind. Cas. 469; 13 C. W. N. 851. (Relied on)	135
Indian General S. N. & R. Coy. Ltd. v. Lal Mohan Saha, 31 Ind. Cas. 35; 43 C. 441; 22 C. L. J. 241. (Followed)	420
Irrigation Co. of France, In re ; Fox, Ex parte , (1871) 6 Cr. App. 176 at p. 186; 40 L. J. Ch. 433; 24 L. T. 336. (Followed)	580
Ishan Chandra Kundu v. Nilratan Adhikari, 72 Ind. Cas. 1049; 2 Pat. 538; 4 P. L. R. 217; (1923) Pat. 184; A. I. R. 1923 Pat. 375. (Relied on)	9
Iyyanar Kone v. Bidoomada Kone, 1 S. D. 1858 p. 54. (Relied on)

J

Jackson v. Barry Ry., (1893) 1 Ch. 238; 2 R. 207; 63 L. T. 472. (Relied upon)	932
Jafri Begam v. Syed Ali Raza, 23 A. 383; 28 I. A. 111; 5 C. W. N. 585; 11 M. L. J. 149; 3 Bom. L. R. 311; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 27 (P. C.). (Followed)	184
Jai Kumar v. Gauri Nath, 28 A. 718; 3 A. L. J. 506; A. W. N. (1906) 212. (Relied upon)	463
Jainab Bibi Saheba v. Hyderally Saheb, 56 Ind. Cas. 957; 43 M. 609; 38 M. L. J. 532; 28 M. L. T. 23; (1920) M. W. N. 360; 12 L. W. 64 (F. B.). (Relied upon)	743
Jalon Venkatasubba Rao v. The Asiatic Steam Navigation Co. of Calcutta, 30 Ind. Cas. 840; 39 M. 1; 29 M. L. J. 312; 2 L. W. 805; 18 M. L. T. 236; (1915) M. W. N. 644 (F. B.). (Relied on)	135
Jankibai v. Shrinivas Ganesh Valsankar, 20 Ind. Cas. 533; 38 B. 120; 15 Bom. L. R. 684. (Not followed)	970
Jaques v. Miller, (1877) 6 Ch. D. 153; 47 L. J. Ch. 544; 37 L. T. 151; 25 W. R. 846. (Relied on)	635
Jenner v. Morris, (1861) 3 De. G. F. & J. 45; 45 E. R. 795 at p. 798; 1 Dr. & Sm. 218; 30 L. J. Ch. 361; 3 L. T. 871; 7 Jur. (N. s.) 375; 9 W. R. 391; 130 R. R. 22. (Relied upon)	465
Jita Singh v. Man Singh, 62 Ind. Cas. 794; 2 L. 161; 4 L. L. J. 211; A. I. R. 1922 Lah. 166. (Relied on)	1049
Jivraj Lakhamai v. Talikandas Mohandas, 58 Ind. Cas. 790; 14 S. L. R. 91 at p. 93. (Relied upon)	932
Jobeda Khatun v. Tulai Charan Das, 77 Ind. Cas. 584; 36 O. L. J. 472; A. I. R. 1923 Cal. 82. (Relied on)	1037
Jogeswar Narain Deo v. Ram Chandra Dutt, 23 C. 670; 23 I. A. 37; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 13; 6 M. L. J. 75; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 445 (P. C.). (Distinguish- ed)	640

J—concl'd.

Page.

- Jogeswar Narain Deo v. Ram Chandra Dutt, 23 C. 670; 23 I. A. 37; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 13; 6 M. L. J. 75; 12 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 445 (P. C.). (Relied on) 523
- Jureidini v. National British & Irish Millers Insurance Co., (1915) A. C. 499; 84 L. J. K. B. 640; (1915) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 239; 112 L. T. L. T. 531; 59 S. J. 205; 31 T. L. R. 132. (Distinguished) 932

K

- Kali Dayal Bhattacharjee v. Nagendra Nath Pakrashi, 54 Ind. Cas. 822; 24 C. W. N. 44; 30 C. L. J. 217. (Relied on) 986
- Kali Rai v. Karn Singh, 42 Ind. Cas. 462; 3 P. L. J. 78; 3 P. L. W. 210. (Relied on) 1031
- Kaliappa Nadar v. Sami Iyer, 62 Ind. Cas. 762; (1921) M. W. N. 381. (Followed) 1033
- Kalliyanasundaram Pillai v. Subba Moopavar, 14 M. L. J. 139. (Relied on) 881
- Kamakshi Achari v. Appavu Pillai, 1 M. H. C. R. 448. (Relied on) 420
- Kamikhya Nath Mukerjee v. Hari Charn Sen, 26 C. 607; 13 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 990. (Relied upon) 229
- Kamla Sahai v. Babu Nandan Mian, 2 Ind. Cas. 13; 13 L. R. 39. (Relied on) 450
- Kanad Bose v. Hur Chand Manoo, 14 C. 120; 5 B. L. R. App. 71. (Relied on) 266
- Kar Singh v. Lal Singh, 59 Ind. Cas. 238; 11 L. R. 1921; 9 P. W. R. 1921. (Not followed) 41
- Kar Achan v. Lakshmi Nettiyyar Ammal, 18 Ind. Cas. 234; (1913) M. W. N. 379. (Distinguished) 849
- Kenaram Pal v. Kinu Mandal, 75 Ind. Cas. 379; 50 C. 508; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 52. (Relied on) 998
- Kesheo v. Mansha, 44 Ind. Cas. 212; 14 N. L. R. 129. (Distinguished) 43
- Khunnu Mal v. Indarpal Singh, 71 Ind. Cas. 278; 45 A. 273; 21 A. L. J. 39; A. I. R. 1923 All. 183. (Relied upon) 754
- Kirty Churn Mitter v. Annath Nath Deb, 8 C. 757; 11 C. L. R. 95; 4 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 488. (Relied on) 813
- Kissorimohan Roy v. Harsukh Das, 17 C. 436; 17 I. A. 17; 13 Ind. Jur. 452; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 472; 8 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 830 (P. C.). (Relied on) 286
- Kocherilakota Venkatakrishna Row v. Vadrevu Venkappa, 27 M. 262. (Relied on) 1057
- Kozilla v. Ishri Singh, 6 Ind. Cas. 188; 7 A. L. J. 420; 32 A. 499. (Relied on) 274
- Krishna Aiyar v. Chakrapani, 29 Ind. Cas. 475. (Relied upon) 754
- Kristo Das Laha v. Jatindra Nath Basu, 14 Ind. Cas. 145; 16 C. W. N. 561. (Relied on) 405
- Kusum Kumari Roy v. Satya Ranjan Das, 30 C. 999; 7 C. W. N. 784. (Distinguished) 61
- Kutti Ammu v. Raggi Seth, 8 Ind. Cas. 851; 21 M. L. J. 526; 9 M. L. T. 120; (1911) 1 M. W. N. 45. (Relied on) 639

L

- Lachakkammal v. Sokkayya Naick, 48 Ind. Cas. 191; (1918) M. W. N. 586. (Followed) 1033
- Lachman Das v. Khunnu Lal, 19 A. 26; A. W. N. (1896) 183; 9 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 17. (Followed) 276
- Lachmi Narayan v. Balmakund, 81 Ind. Cas. 747; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 198; 35 M. L. T. 143; 47 M. L. J. 441; 20 L. W. 491; (1924) M. W. N. 707; 10 O & A. L. R. 1033; 5 P. L. T. 623; 40 C. L. J. 439; 26 Bom. L. R. 1129; 22 A. L. J. 990; 51 I. A. 221; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 171; 29 C. W. N. 391; A. O. W. N. 629; 4 Pat. 91 (P. C.). (Followed) 247

L—concl'd.

Page.

- Lakhi Narain Shaw v. Dhanada Kumar Ghose, 15 Ind. Cas. 686; 17 C. L. J. 230 at p. 232; 19 C. W. N. 1099. (Followed) 729
- Lakshminarayana v. Standard Oil Company of New York, 72 Ind. Cas. 669; 17 L. W. 627; 44 M. L. J. 488; 32 M. L. T. 296; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 581. (Followed) 1042
- Lal Mohan Hazra v. East Indian Railway Company, 70 Ind. Cas. 857; A. I. R. 1922 Cal. 330. (Relied on) 135
- Leader v. Duffey, (1888) 13 A. C. 294; 58 L. J. P. C. 13; 59 L. T. 9. (Relied on) 5
- Lilo Sonar v. Jhagru Sahu, 85 Ind. Cas. 25; 3 Pat. 853; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 123; 6 P. L. T. 313; 3 Pat. L. R. 97. (Followed) 41
- Loola v. Pyare, 33 Ind. Cas. 497; 12 N. L. R. 57 at p. 60. (Followed) 263
- Lyon Lord & Co. v. Firm of Champsi Umersi, 49 Ind. Cas. 135; 12 S. L. R. 55. (Relied upon) 932

M

- Ma Ba We v. Mi Sa U, 2 L. B. R. 174. (Overruled) 341
- Madhu Sudan Chowdhri v. Chandrabati Chowdhurain, 42 Ind. Cas. 527; 6 L. W. 437; 21 C. W. N. 897; (1917) M. W. N. 518 (P. C.). (Relied on) 775
- Madhu Sudan Sen v. Kamini Kanta Sen, 32 C. 1023; 9 C. W. N. 895. (Relied on) 380
- Mahabir Pershad Singh v. Macnaghten, 16 C. 682; 16 I. A. 107; 13 Ind. Jur. 133; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 345; 8 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 451 (P. C.). (Distinguished) 465
- Mahabir Prasad Tewari v. Jamina Singh, 66 Ind. Cas. 88; 1 Pat. 429; 3 P. L. T. 289; (1922) Pat. 193; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 33; A. I. R. 1222 Pat. 255. (Relied on) 601
- Mahant Biharidasji v. Parshothamdas Ramdas, 32 B. 345; 10 Bom. L. R. 293. (Relied on) 432
- Mahendra Ram v. Singi Lal, 48 Ind. Cas. 197; 3 P. L. J. 651. (Followed) 217
- Maitland v. Charlie (1822) 6 Madd. 243; 56 E. R. 1084; 23 R. R. 209. (Relied on) 5
- Manavala Chetty v. Emperor, 29 M. 569; 1 M. L. T. 409; 5 Cr. L. J. 91. (Distinguished) 706
- Manavala Chetty v. Emperor, 29 M. 569; 1 M. L. T. 409; 5 Cr. L. J. 91. (Followed) 914
- Mangu v. Emperor, 25 Ind. Cas. 978; 35 P. W. R. 1914 Cr.; 227 P. L. R. 1914; 15 Cr. L. J. 650. (Not followed) 316
- Manindra Chandra Nandi v. Kanlat Shaik, 79 Ind. Cas. 852; 50 C. 957; 28 C. W. N. 264; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 374. (Relied on) 557
- Mata Tahal v. Bhagwan Singh, 63 Ind. Cas. 477; 19 A. L. J. 406. (Relied on) 249
- Mathunsa Rowthan v. Apsa Bin, 12 Ind. Cas. 444; 35 M. 194; 21 M. L. J. 969; 10 M. L. T. 373; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 425. (Relied on) 555
- Maung Chit Saya v. Ma Meinkale, U. B. R. (1892-96) Vol. II, 93. (Discussed) 341
- Maung Po v. Ma Shwe Ma, 84 Ind. Cas. 992; 2 R. 445; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 95. (Not followed) 41
- Mavulu Ammal v. Mavula Maracoir, 30 M. 212; 17 M. L. J. 376. (Followed) 794
- Madai Dalavay Terumalaipappa Mudaliar v. Veerabudra, 4 Ind. Cas. 1000; 19 M. L. J. 750. (Relied on) 464

M—concl'd.

	Page.
Megraj v. Johnson, 31 Ind. Cas. 880; 11 N. L. R. 189 at p. 192. (Followed)	378
Mi So v. Mi Hmat Tha, S. J. 177. (Overruled)	341
Mirza Shamsher Bahadur v. Munshi Kunj Behari Lal, 3 M. L. T. 212; 12 C. W. N. 273; 7 C. L. J. 414. (Relied on)	775
Mohan Singh v. Dewa Singh, 21 P. W. R. 1907. (Relied on)	1022
Mohesh Lal v. Mohant Bawan Das, 9 C. 961; 10 I. A. 62; 13 C. L. R. 221; 7 Ind. Jur. 382; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 421; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1291 (P. C.). (Relied on)	767
Mohesh Majhi v. Paran Krishna Mandal, 1 C. L. J. 138. (Relied on)	489
Mohr Singh v. Laukra Mal, 181 P. R. 1833. (Distinguished)	254
Mondel v. Steel, (1841) 8 M. & W. 858; 151 E. R. 1288; 6 Dowl. (N. S.) 1; 10 L. J. Ex. 426; 58 R. R. 890. (Followed)	465
Mooljee Dharsee & Co. v. M. E. Moolla, 88 Ind. Cas. 740; 4 Bur. L. J. 61; A. I. R. 1925 Rang. 225; 3 R. 255. (Followed)	995
Moseley v. Hanford, (1830) 10 B. & C. 729; 8 L. J. K. B. (O. S.) 261; 109 E. R. 621. (Relied on)	1020
Moti Ram v. East Indian Railway Co., 108 P. R. 1906; 2 P. L. R. 1907; 30 P. W. R. 1907. (Relied on)	135
Muhammad Bakhsh v. Emperor, 65 Ind. Cas. 618; 23 Cr. L. J. 154; 4 L. L. J. 230; A. I. R. 1922 Lah. 45 (Followed)	434
Muhammad Nur Khan v. Lachhmi Narayan, 66 Ind. Cas. 401; 9 O. L. J. 88; A. I. R. 1922 Oudh. 31. (Relied on)	741
Murray v. Queen-Empress, 21 C. 103; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 701. (Relied upon)	666
Muthuveera Vandayan v. Secretary of State for India, 29 M. 461; 1 M. L. T. 278. (Relied on)	555
Mutsaddi Lal v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Company, 58 Ind. Cas. 547; 42 A. 390; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 81; 18 A. L. J. 377. (Relied on)	135

N

Nabin Chandra Shaha v. Wajid, 58 Ind. Cas. 598; 24 O. W. N. 382; 31 C. L. J. 199. (Distinguished)	793
Nafar Chandra Pal v. Shukur Sheikh, 51 Ind. Cas. 760; 45 I. A. 183 at p. 189; 46 C. 189; 23 O. W. N. 305; 9 L. W. 552 (P. C.). (Relied on)	209
Nagappa Pillai v. Arunachalam Chetty, 85 Ind. Cas. 1016; 47 M. L. J. 876; A. I. R. 1925 Mad. 281. (Not followed)	420
Naina Pillai Marakayar v. Ramanathan Chettiar, 82 Ind. Cas. 226; 47 M. 337; A. I. R. 1924 P. C. 65; 19 L. W. 259; 22 A. L. J. 130; 34 M. L. T. 10; (1924) M. W. N. 293; 46 M. L. J. 546; 10 O. & A. L. R. 464; 28 O. W. N. 809; 51 I. A. 83; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 33 (P. C.). (Relied on)	401
Nanda Lal Dhur Biswas v. Jagat Kishore Acharyya Chowdhuri, 36 Ind. Cas. 420; 44 O. 186; 20 M. L. T. 335; 31 M. L. J. 563; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 336; 4 L. W. 458; 18 Bom. L. R. 868; 14 A. L. J. 1103; 24 C. L. J. 487; 1 P. L. W. 1; 21 C. W. N. 225; 10 Bur. L. T. 177; 43 I. A. 249 (P. C.). (Followed)	404
Nanibala Dasi v. Ichhamoyee Dasi, 84 Ind. Cas. 674; 40 O. L. J. 201; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 218. (Relied on)	380

N—concl'd.

	Page
Nanjappa Chettiar v. Ganapathi Gounden, 12 Ind. Cas. 507; 35 M. 598; 10 M. L. T. 365; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 414; 21 M. L. J. 1052. (Distinguished)	266
Narain Ganesh Ghatati v. Bahiran, 48 Ind. Cas. 141; 14 N. L. R. 165; 24 M. L. T. 315; 28 C. L. J. 447; (1918) M. W. N. 885; 23 C. W. N. 297; 21 Bom. L. R. 53; 46 C. 76 (P. C.). (Distinguished)	162
Narayana Aiyar v. Sankaranarayana Aiyar, 24 Ind. Cas. 910; 1 L. W. 369. (Relied on)	555
Narayanan Chetty v. Muttiah Servi, 8 Ind. Cas. 520; 35 M. 63; 9 M. L. T. 142; 21 M. L. J. 44; (1910) M. W. N. 743. (Relied on)	1016
Narna v. Ammani Ammal, 35 Ind. Cas. 418; 39 M. 981; 4 L. W. 77; 20 M. L. T. 174; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 125; 31 M. L. J. 865. (Followed)	1033
Narna v. Ammani Amma, 35 Ind. Cas. 418; 39 M. 981; 4 L. W. 77; 20 M. L. T. 174; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 125; 31 M. L. J. 865. (Relied on)	249
Narsidas Nanji v. Dosa Kalian, 8 Ind. Cas. 925; 4 S. L. R. 149. (Relied upon)	932
Nathi v. Tursi, 63 Ind. Cas. 886; 43 A. 671; 19 A. L. J. 712. (Not followed)	1033
Nga Po Thit v. Mi Thaing, S. J. 13. (Discussed)	341
Nilvarn v. Nilvarn, 6 B. 110; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 531. (Relied on)	460
Nubeen Chanderpaul v. Mr. Cecil Stephens, W. R. 534. (Followed)	26

P

Panangipalli Suranna v. Suryanarsyana Jagapathiraju, 48 Ind. Cas. 794; 42 M. 114; 35 M. L. J. 443; (1919) M. W. N. 25; 25 M. L. T. 355. (Distinguished)	551
Panchapakesa Odayan v. Kenaka Ammal, 42 Ind. Cas. 314; 33 M. L. J. 455; 6 L. W. 408. (Followed)	983
Pandurang Krishnaji v. Markandeya Tukaram, 65 Ind. Cas. 954; 49 I. A. 16; 26 C. W. N. 201; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 85; 20 A. L. J. 305; 42 M. L. J. 436; 15 L. W. 486; 30 M. L. T. 249; 35 C. L. J. 409; 24 Bom. L. R. 557; 18 N. L. R. 1; A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 20; 49 C. 334 (P. C.). (Followed)	547
Pankaj Mohan Bal v. Bipin Behary Chakladar, 76 Ind. Cas. 511; 38 C. L. J. 220; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 118. (Relied on)	1037
Parathi Valappil Moideen, In re , 21 Ind. Cas. 469; 25 M. L. J. 355; 14 M. L. T. 223; (1913) M. W. N. 997; 19 Cr. L. J. 597. (Followed)	669
Parchomal Vasandmal v. Pamandas Alamchand, 4 Ind. Cas. 600; 3 S. L. R. 108. (Followed)	970
Parmeshwar Lal Mitter v. Emperor, 67 Ind. Cas. 616; 3 P. L. T. 347; 23 Cr. L. J. 440; A. I. R. 1922 Pat. 296. (Followed)	434
Pattu Nethiar Amma v. Thazhatha Meladatte Dharman Achan, 21 Ind. Cas. 755. (Distinguished)	849
Phul Kumari v. Ghanshyam Misra, 35 O. 202; 7 O. L. J. 36; 12 O. W. N. 169; 10 Bom. L. R. 1; 5 A. L. J. 10; 17 M. L. J. 618; 2 M. L. T. 506; 14 Bur. L. R. 41; 35 I. A. 22 (P. C.). (Relied on)	196
Phulwanti Kunwar v. Janeshar Das, 83 Ind. Cas. 782; 22 A. L. J. 521; 46 A. 575; A. I. R. 1924 All. 625; L. R. 5 A. 785 Civ. (Relied on)	1049
Pichaikuttia Pillai v. Renganandan, 28 Ind. Cas. 490; 28 M. L. J. 323; 17 M. L. T. 264. (Followed)	743
Pichaiyar v. Subbrayar, 29 Ind. Cas. 34; 28 M. L. J. 513. (Relied upon)	465

P—concl'd.

Page.

- Ponnusami Odayar v. Ramasami Thatham, 74 Ind. Cas. 945; 46 M. 758; 45 M. L. J. 224; (1923) M. W. N. 519; 18 L. W. 478; 24 Cr. L. J. 833; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 15. (Dissented from) ... 434
- Prosunno Coomar Paul Chowdhury v. Koylash Chunder Paul Chaudhury, 8 W. R. 428; B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 759; 2 Ind. Jur. (n. s.) 827. (Relied on) ... 279
- Pym v. Campbell, (1856) 6 El. & Bl. 370; 25 L. J. Q. B. 277; 2 Jur. (n. s.) 641; 4 W. R. 528; 119 E. R. 993; 106 R. B. 632. (Relied upon) ... 929

Q

- Queen-Empress v. Gundaya, 13 B. 502; 13 Ind. Jur. 469; 7 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 333. (Relied on) ... 439

R

- R. v. Isacc Schama, (1914) 11 Cr. App. Rep. 45 at p. 49; 84 L. J. K. B. 396; 112 L. T. 480; 79 J. P. 184; 59 S. J. 288; 81 T. L. R. 88. (Relied on) ... 542
- R. v. Bainu Chowdhury, 25 W. R. 43 Cr. (Relied on) ... 385
- R. v. ... (1912) 1 K. B. 453 at p. 487; 81 L. J. 106 L. T. 305; 76 J. P. 143; 22 Cox J. 727; 56 S. J. 188; 28 T. L. R. 173. (Followed) ... 242
- Radha Krishna Chanderji v. Ram Bahadur, 43 Ind. Cas. 268; 34 M. L. J. 97; 27 C. L. J. 191; 16 A. L. J. 33; 23 M. L. T. 26; 4 P. L. W. 9; 7 L. W. 149; 22 C. W. N. 330; (1918) M. W. N. 163; 20 Bom. L. R. 502 (P. C.). (Relied on) ... 1037
- Radha Krishna Saha v. Kamal Kamini Debya, 70 Ind. Cas. 517; 35 C. L. J. 345; A. I. R. 1922 Cal. 456. (Relied upon) ... 426
- Radha Sham Bisak v. Secretary of State for India, 34 Ind. Cas. 130; 44 C. 16; 23 C. L. J. 547; 20 C. W. N. 790. (Distinguished) ... 135
- Radharaman Chowdhuri v. Gopal Chakravarty, 56 Ind. Cas. 122; 31 C. L. J. 81; 24 C. W. N. 316. (Distinguished) ... 499
- Raghu Bhumji v. Emperor, 58 Ind. Cas. 49; 5 P. L. J. 430; 1 P. L. T. 241; 21 Cr. L. J. 705. (Followed) ... 434
- Raja of Karvetnagar v. Venkata Reddi, 29 Ind. Cas. 231; 39 M. 570; 29 M. L. J. 96; (1912) M. W. N. 334; 17 M. L. T. 457. (Distinguished) ... 869
- Rajah of Venkatagiri v. Isakapalli Subbiah, 26 M. 410. (Distinguished) ... 1037
- Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi, 82 Ind. Cas. 507; 27 C. W. N. 765; 37 C. L. J. 447; A. I. R. 1924 Cal. 408. (Distinguished) ... 333
- Rajanikanta Pal v. Jagmohanpal, 73 Ind. Cas. 252; 50 C. 439; A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 57; 44 M. L. J. 531; 32 M. L. T. 149; 25 Bom. L. R. 683; 37 C. L. J. 515; (1923) M. W. N. 438; 18 L. W. 387; 27 C. W. N. 997; 9 O. & A. L. R. 805; 50 I. A. 173 (P. C.). (Relied upon) ... 124
- Rajaram v. Ganesh Hari Karkhavis, 21 B. 91; 11 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 63. (Followed) ... 209
- Rajeswara Muthuramalinga Sethupathi v. Mahalinga Raju, 52 Ind. Cas. 468; 9 L. W. 287; (1919) M. W. N. 365. (Followed) ... 973
- Ram Awatar v. Tulsi Prasad Singh, 11 Ind. Cas. 713; 16 C. W. N. 137; 14 C. L. J. 507. (Relied on) ... 450

R—contd.

Page.

- Ram Dass Sein v. Mr. Cecil Stephenson, 10 W. R. 366; 2 B. L. R. S. N. 6 (A.); 1 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 1011. (Followed) ... 426
- Ram Gopal v. Secretary of State for India, 55 Ind. Cas. 425; 31 C. L. J. 363. (Dissented from) ... 991
- Rama Bakhsh v. Durjan, 9 A. 392; A. W. N. (1887) 65; 5 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 696. (Relied on) ... 450
- Ramadh Bibi Ammal v. Kandasami Pillai, 51 Ind. Cas. 724; 9 L. W. 479; (1919) M. W. N. 82; 25 M. L. T. 154. (Followed) ... 1033
- Ramanadhan Chetty v. Katha Velan, 42 Ind. Cas. 931; 41 M. 353; 33 M. L. J. 627; 6 L. W. 753; (1917) M. W. N. 843; 22 M. L. T. 458 (Followed) ... 1047
- Ramaswami Pattar v. Gopalan, 37 Ind. Cas. 659; 32 M. L. J. 97. (Relied on) ... 849
- Ramendra Nath Roy v. Brojendra Nath Doss, 41 Ind. Cas. 944; 21 C. W. N. 794; 45 C. 111; 27 C. L. J. 158. (Relied upon) ... 970
- Rameshwar Mahton v. Dwarka Prasad, 84 Ind. Cas. 320; 3 Pat. 778; A. I. R. 1925 Pat. 36; 6 P. L. T. 309. (Followed) ... 79
- Rameshwar Singh v. Hitendra Singh, 81 Ind. Cas. 576; 47 M. L. J. 286; 5 P. L. T. 491; 20 L. W. 456; 35 M. L. T. 182; 26 Bom. L. R. 1153; 29 C. W. 413; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 175; 22 A. L. J. 968; 40 C. L. J. 431; 3 Pat. L. R. 180; A. I. R. 1924 (P. C.) 202; 1 L. C. 457 (P. C.). (Relied on) ... 683
- Ramier v. Runa Cheena Mana Navanna Ona and Bros, 78 Ind. Cas. 326; 19 L. W. 654. (Dissented from) ... 206
- Ramjibun Serowgy v. Oghore Nath Chatterjee, 25 C. 401. 2 C. W. N. 188; 13 Ind. Dec. (n. s.) 236. (Relied on) ... 1020
- Ramkishore Kedarnath v. Jainarayan Ramrampal, 20 Ind. Cas. 958; 40 C. 966; (1913) M. W. N. 661; 14 M. L. T. 163; 17 C. W. N. 1189; 18 C. L. J. 237; 15 Bom. L. R. 867; 11 A. L. J. 865; 25 M. L. J. 512; 10 N. L. R. 1; 40 I. A. 213 (P. C.). (Followed) ... 331
- Ramlal Ohandra Karmokar v. Gobinda Karmokar, 4 C. W. N. 304. (Relied on) ... 450
- Rangasami Goundan v. Nachiappa Goundan, 50 Ind. Cas. 498; 46 I. A. 72; 36 M. L. J. 493; 17 A. L. J. 536; 29 C. L. J. 539; 21 Bom. L. R. 640; 23 C. W. N. 777; (1919) M. W. N. 262; 42 M. 523; 26 M. L. T. 5; 10 L. W. 105; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 66 (P. C.). (Explained) ... 1024
- Rangiah Chetty v. Subramania Chetty, 8 Ind. Cas. 512; 21 M. L. J. 21; (1910) M. W. N. 755; 9 M. L. T. 3. (Relied on) ... 843
- Ranjit Singh v. Kali Dasi Debi, 40 Ind. Cas. 981; 44 C. 841; 44 I. A. 117; 21 C. W. N. 609; 32 M. L. J. 535; 15 A. L. J. 390; 25 C. L. J. 499; 19 Bom. L. R. 462; (1917) M. W. N. 459; 6 L. W. 101; 2 P. L. W. 1; 22 M. L. T. 289 (P. C.). (Distinguished) ... 607
- Ranjit Singh v. Maharaj Bahadur Singh, 48 Ind. Cas. 262; 46 C. 173; 45 I. A. 162; 16 A. L. J. 964; 25 M. L. T. 8; 29 C. L. J. 193; 21 Bom. L. R. 506; 10 L. W. 83; 35 M. L. J. 728; 23 C. W. N. 198; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 23 (P. C.). (Approved) ... 607
- Ranodip Singh v. Parmeshwar Pershad, 86 Ind. Cas. 249; 2 O. W. N. 1; A. I. R. 1925 P. C. 33; 48 M. L. J. 29; 21 L. W. 236; 23 A. L. J. 176; 27 Bom. L. R. 175; 12 O. L. J. 74; 26 P. L. R. 113; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 47; (1925) M. W. N. 262; 27 O. C. 343; 29 C. W. N. 666; 47 A. 165 (P. C.). (Relied on) ... 184

R—concl'd.	Page.	S—contd.	Page.
Rawson v. Walker, (1815) 1 Stark 361. (Relied on)	1020	Singaravelu Mudaliar v. Chokka Mudaliar, 70 Ind. Cas. 994; 46 M. 525; 16 L. W. 514; 31 M. L. T. 298; (1922) M. W. N. 676; 43 M. L. J. 737; A. I. R. 1923 Mad. 88. (Relied on)	1037
Raynor v. Sungheer Singh, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 211. (Relied on)	266	Sitaramaya v. Ramappaya, 39 Ind. Cas. 100; 5 L. W. 207. (Not followed)	721
Ridnamma v. Venkataramappa, 3 M. H. C. R. 268. (Dissented from)	881	Sobh Nath Singh v. Emperor, 12 C. W. N. 158; 6 Cr. L. J. 431. (Relied upon)	668
Rup Narain Bhattacharya v. Gopi Nath Mandal, 11 C. W. N. 933. (Relied on)	249	Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 19 Ind. Cas. 291; 35 A. 227; 13 M. L. T. 437; 17 C. W. N. 605; 11 A. L. J. 389; (1913) M. W. N. 470; 17 C. L. J. 488; 15 Bom. L. R. 489; 25 M. L. J. 131; 40 I. A. 74 (P. C.). (Dissented from)	274
S		Soobjan Beebee v. Sheikh Shureentollah, 12 W. R. 329; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 413. (Relied on)	266
		Soonabai v. Tribhovandas, 32 B. 602; 10 Bom. L. R. 337. (Not followed)	995
Sadasuk Jauki Das v. Kishan Pershad, 50 Ind. Cas. 216; 46 C. 663; 29 C. L. J. 310; 17 A. L. J. 405; 25 M. L. T. 258; 26 M. L. J. 429; 21 Bom. L. R. 605; (1919) M. W. N. 310; 23 C. W. N. 937; 10 L. W. 143; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 37; 46 I. A. 33 (P. C.). (Relied on)	639	Sowcar Lodd Govinda Doss v. Munappa Naidu, 31 M. 534; 4 M. L. T. 341. (Followed)	1047
Sadler v. Whiteman, (1910) 1 K. B. 868 at p. 889. (Followed)	242	Srinivasa Moorthy v. Venkatavarada Iyengar, 11 Ind. Cas. 447; 34 M. 257; 15 C. W. N. 741; 8 A. L. J. 774; 13 Bom. L. R. 520; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 375; 14 C. L. J. 64; 21 M. L. J. 669; 10 M. L. T. 263 (P. C.). (Relied on)	188
Sahasram v. Sheonath, 31 Ind. Cas. 303; 11 N. L. R. 121. (Relied on)	364	Srish Chandra Roy v. Bonomali Roy, 31 C. 584; 8 C. W. N. 594; 6 Bom. L. R. 501; 14 M. L. J. 185; 2 A. L. J. 31; 31 I. A. 103; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 677 (P. C.). (Distinguished)	973
Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 44 I. A. 126; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 493; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213 (P. C.) (Not followed)	210	Stebbing v. Liverpool and London and Insurance Co., (1917) 2 K. B. 433; 86 L. J. B. 1155; (1917) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 241; 117 L. T. 247; 34 T. L. R. 395. (Relied upon)
Salig Ram v. Badhawa, 73 Ind. Cas. 759; 4 L. 254; 5 L. L. J. 471; A. I. R. 1923 Lah. 501. (Followed)	1045	Subbaiya Pandaram v. Muhamad Mustappa Maracayar, 74 Ind. Cas. 492; 46 M. 751; 21 A. L. J. 730; A. I. R. 1923 P. C. 175; 45 M. L. J. 588; 25 Bom. L. R. 1275; 18 L. W. 903; (1924) M. W. N. 65; 28 C. W. N. 493; 2 Pat. L. R. 104; 33 M. L. T. 285; 50 I. A. 295; 40 C. L. J. 20 (P. C.). (Relied on)	1037
Sankarannuni v. Appavu Pillay, 16 Ind. Cas. 571; 12 M. L. T. 556. (Relied on)	980	Subbaraya Chetty v. Nachiar Ammal, 44 Ind. Cas. 863; (1918) M. W. N. 199; 7 L. W. 403. (Followed)	906
Sankunni v. Ikora Kutti, 52 Ind. Cas. 989; (1919) M. W. N. 570; 10 L. W. 155; 37 M. L. J. 209. (Not followed)	420	Subbe Goundan v. Krishnamachari, 68 Ind. Cas. 869; 45 M. 449 at p. 454; 30 M. L. T. 217; 42 M. L. J. 372; 15 L. W. 537; (1922) M. W. N. 269; A. I. R. 1922 Mad. 112. (Relied on)	789
Sant Prasad v. Bhawani Prasad, 60 Ind. Cas. 831; 43 A. 403; 19 A. L. J. 72; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 416. (Followed)	794	Subramanian Chetti v. Racku Sarvai, 20 M. 232; 7 M. L. J. 100; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 165. (Followed)	743
Saraspur Manufacturing Co. Ltd. v. B. B. & C. I. Railway Co., 73 Ind. Cas. 1027; 47 B. 785; 25 Bom. L. R. 513; A. I. R. 1923 Bom. 452. (Distinguished)	426	Sumitra Kuer v. Ram Kair Chowbey, 57 Ind. Cas. 561; 5 P. L. J. 410; 1 P. L. T. 702; (1921) Pat. 17. (Relied on)	678
Sarat Chandra Maiti v. Bibbabati Debi, 66 Ind. Cas. 433; 34 C. L. J. 302. (Distinguished)	1037	Sundari Dasse v. Mudhoo Chunder Sircar, 14 C. 592; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 392. (Relied on)	405
Sarat Chandra Maiti v. Bibbabati Debi, 66 Ind. Cas. 433; 34 C. L. J. 302. (Relied on)	775	Sundaramayya v. Mummareddi Yanadamma, 9 Ind. Cas. 139; 21 M. L. J. 180; 9 M. L. T. 258. (Relied on)	767
Sardhari Lal v. Ambika Pershad, 15 C. 521; 15 I. A. 123; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 172; 12 Ind. Jur. 210; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 931 (P. C.). (Relied on)	196	Surajmal v. Manekchand, 6 Bom. L. R. 704. (Distinguished)	266
Satish Chandra Mukherjee v. Ahara Prasad Mukherjee, 34 C. 403; 5 C. L. J. 247; 2 M. L. T. 123; 11 C. W. N. 329. (Followed)	768	Surat Bahadur v. Emperor, 81 Ind. Cas. 986; 11 O. L. J. 640; 25 Cr. L. J. 1162; A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 158; 1 O. W. N. 362. (Distinguished)	706
Satya Charan Manna v. Emperor, 88 Ind. Cas. 515; 52 C. 223; A. I. R. 1925 Cal. 666; 26 Cr. L. J. 1155. (Relied on)	542	Sureshwar Misser v. Maheshrani Misrain, 57 Ind. Cas. 325; 48 C. 100; (1920) M. W. N. 472; 39 M. L. J. 161; 28 M. L. T. 154; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 128; 12 L. W. 461; 18 A. L. J. 1069; 47 I. A. 233; 25 C. W. N. 194; 41 C. L. J. 433 (P. C.). (Relied on)	1024
Seaton v. Deerpurst, (1895) 1 Q. B. 853; 64 L. J. Q. B. 430; 14 R. 523; 72 L. T. 453; 43 W. R. 436; 59 J. P. 357; 2 Manson 355. (Distinguished)	92
Seetharami Reddi v. Venku Reddi, 11 M. L. J. 344. (Followed)	1037
Seshagiri Row v. Nawab Askur Jung Aftab Dowla, 26 M. 502. (Not followed)	995
Seturathan Iyer v. Venkatachala Goundan, 56 Ind. Cas. 117; 43 M. 567; (1920) M. W. N. 61; 27 M. L. T. 102; 11 L. W. 399; 38 M. L. J. 476; 22 Bom. L. R. 578; 18 A. L. J. 707; 25 C. W. N. 485; 47 I. A. 76 (P. C.). (Relied on)	401
Shiam Sarup v. Nand Ram, 63 Ind. Cas. 366; 43 A. 555; 19 A. L. J. 511. (Followed)	349

S—concl'd.

	Page.
Suryanarayana v. Patanna, 48 Ind. Cas. 689; 41 M. 1012; 45 I. A. 209; 25 M. L. T. 30; (1918) M. W. N. 859; 23 C. W. N. 273; 9 L. W. 126; 29 C. L. J. 153; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 11; 36 M. L. J. 585; 21 Bom. L. R. 547; (1919) M. W. N. 463 (P. C.). (Relied on)	401
Syed Serapat Hossein v. Tarini Prasad Dobey, 11 C. W. N. 141. (Relied on)	561

T

Thakdi Hajji v. Budrudin Sahib, 29 M. 208. (Distinguished)	266
Torbock v. Lord Westbury, (1902) 2 Ch. 871; 71 L. J. Ch. 815; 87 L. T. 165; 57 W. R. 133. (Followed)	580
Trasi Deva Rao v. Parameshraya, 27 Ind. Cas. 144; 39 M. 74; 29 M. L. J. 451. (Relied on)	254
Trench Tubeless Tyre Co. Ltd., In re ; Bethell v. Trench Tubeless Tyre Co. Ltd., (1900) 1 Ch. 408; 69 L. J. Ch. 213; 48 W. R. 310; 82 L. T. 247; 16 T. L. R. 207. (Followed)	580
Tuljaram Row v. Gopala Aiyar, 40 Ind. Cas. 611; (1917) M. W. N. 231; 21 M. L. T. 229; 32 M. L. J. 434. (Relied upon)	642

U

Ulagappa Chettiar v. Periakaruppan Chetty, 15 Ind. Cas. 195; (1912) M. W. N. 361. (Followed)	577
Umabai v. Bhavu Balvant, 3 Ind. Cas. 165; 34 B. 358; 11 Bom. L. R. 499. (Not followed)	970
Umayammai v. Muthiah Nadar, 17 M. L. J. 99. (Distinguished)	577
Umra v. Ghulam, 22 P. R. 1907; 27 P. L. R. 1908; 89 P. W. R. 1907. (Relied on)	1022
Umra v. Muhammad Hayat, 79 P. R. 1907; 194 P. L. R. 1908; 133 P. W. R. 1907. (Followed)	123
Umrao Singh v. Lachhman Singh, 10 Ind. Cas. 285; 33 A. 314; 15 C. W. N. 497; 8 A. L. J. 465; 13 C. L. J. 519; 9 M. L. T. 507; 13 Bom. L. R. 404; 21 M. L. J. 637; 14 O. C. 133; 38 I. A. 104; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 242 (P. C.). (Relied upon)	124
Upadrashtu Venkata Sastrulu v. Divisetharomudu, 51 Ind. Cas. 304; 43 M. 166; 46 I. A. 123; 17 A. L. J. 725; 37 M. L. J. 42; 21 Bom. L. R. 925; 26 M. L. T. 175; 30 C. L. J. 441; 10 L. W. 633; 24 C. W. N. 129; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 16 (P. C.). (Relied on)	401
Upendra Nath Hazra v. Ram Nath Chowdhury, 33 C. 630. (Relied on)	489

V

Vadali Mamidigadu v. Kotipalli Ramayya, 26 M. 334. (Relied on)	881
Vagliano Anthrairte Collieries, In re , (1910) 79 L. J. Ch. 769; 103 L. T. 211; 54 S. J. 720. (Followed)	242
Varada Ramaswami v. Vamma Venkataratnam, 67 Ind. Cas. 546; 42 M. L. J. 473; 30 M. L. T. 178; 15 L. W. 421; (1922) M. W. N. 184; A. I. R. 1922 Mad. 99. (Distinguished)	869
Vasudevan Nambudri v. Mammod, 22 M. 212; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 151. (Relied on)	420

V—concl'd.

	Page.
Vedalingam Pillai v. Veerathal, 54 Ind. Cas. 530; 37 M. L. J. 547 at pp. 553, 554; 26 M. L. T. 513; (1920) M. W. N. 77. (Relied on)	196
Veeriam Chettiar v. Ponnusawmi Chettiar, 12 Ind. Cas. 421; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 340; 10 M. L. T. 328; 36 M. 362; 24 M. L. J. 509. (Followed)	1047
Venkatakrishna Pattar v. Venkatakrishna Pattar, 37 Ind. Cas. 900; 31 M. L. J. 820; 26 M. L. T. 238; 2 L. W. 324. (Distinguished)	869
Venkatarammanna v. Venkayya, 14 M. 377; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 254. (Not followed)	743
Venkayyamma Garu v. Venkataramanayyamma Bahadur Garu, 25 M. 678 at p. 687; 29 I. A. 156; 7 C. W. N. 1; 12 M. L. J. 299; 4 Bom. L. R. 657; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 286 (P. C.). (Followed)	880
Vidya Varuthi Thirtha Swamigal v. Babusami Ayyar, 65 Ind. Cas. 161; 48 I. A. 302; (1921) M. W. N. 449; 41 M. L. J. 346; 44 M. 831; 3 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 62; 15 L. W. 78; 30 M. L. T. 66; 3 P. L. T. 245; 26 C. W. N. 537; 24 Bom. L. R. 629; 20 A. L. J. 497; A. I. R. 1922 P. C. 123 (P. C.). (Followed)	781
Vishnu Ramchandra v. Ganesh Krishna, 63 Ind. Cas. 673; 45 B. 1155; 23 Bom. L. R. 488. (Relied on)	1020
Vizagapatam Sugar Development Company v. Mutharamareddi, 76 Ind. Cas. 886; 46 M. 919; 45 M. L. J. 528; (1924) M. W. N. 14; A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 271; 33 M. L. T. 53. (Distinguished)	1016

W

W. B. Todd, In the matter of the petition of , 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 237. (Followed)	669
Walian v. Banke Behari Pershad Singh, 30 C. 1021; 7 C. W. N. 774; 5 Bom. L. R. 822; 30 I. A. 182; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 512 (P. C.). (Distinguished)	754
Wallingford v. Mutual Society, (1880) 5 A. C. 685; 50 L. J. Q. B. 49; 43 L. T. 258; 29 W. R. 81. (Relied on)	420
Watt v. Barnett, (1878) 3 Q. B. D. 183. (Followed)	236
Wazir Begam v. Mohammad Ishaq Khan, 4 O. C. 158. (Followed)	679
Woodall v. Pearl Assurance Co., (1919) 1 K. B. 593; 88 L. J. K. B. 705; (1919) W. C. & Ins. Rep. 181; 120 L. T. 556; 34 Com. Cas. 237; 83 J. P. 125; 63 S. J. 352. (Relied upon)	932
Woodbridge v. Spooner, (1819) 3 B. & Ald. 233; 103 E. R. 647; 1 Chitty 661; 22 R. R. 365. (Relied on)	1020
Woodward v. Sarsons, (1875) 10 C. P. 733 at p. 748; 44 L. J. C. P. 293; 32 L. T. 867. (Followed)	771

Y

Young v. Turner, (1861) 30 L. J. Q. B. 268; 1 B. & S. 550; 5 L. T. 56; 8 Jur. (N. S.) 52; 121 E. R. 819; 124 R. R. 645. (Relied on)	5
--	---

Z

Zamindar of Viziangaram v. Behara Suryanarayana Patru, 25 M. 587; 12 M. L. J. 249. (Relied on)	635
---	-----

INDIAN CASES

1925.

VOLUME 90.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 37
OF 1922.

May 22, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Adami
and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

Babu SUDHA KRISHNA MUKHERJI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY THROUGH AGENT—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Carriage of goods—Goods consigned to Railway Company for carriage—Risk Note Form "A"—Loss of goods—Suit to recover damages—Burden of proof.

Where goods are consigned to a Railway Company for carriage under Risk Note Form "A", the Company is absolved from any responsibility for loss of the goods owing to the bad condition of the consignment throughout the period of transit, and the period of transit commences from the time that the goods are received and are carried to the train. [p. 2, col. 1.]

The question of onus is not the same in a case based on the terms of a Risk Note in Form "A" as it is in a case based on the terms of a Risk Note in Form "B". The two indemnities are quite different in their effect. In a suit based on the terms of a Risk Note in Form "A" where it appears from the admission of the plaintiff himself that there has been such loss or damage as is contemplated in the Risk Note, it is not necessary for the Railway Company to prove that there has been such loss. [ibid.]

Appeal from a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Hazaribagh, dated the 27th September 1921, modifying that of the Munsif, Giridih, dated the 26th January 1921.

Mr. B. C. De, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. N. Bose, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Adami, J.—The plaintiff-appellants are merchants in Giridih. They ordered a consignment of rice from Burma and this consignment duly arrived at the Kidderpur docks in Calcutta. Their agent in Calcutta delivered this rice, which on weighment was found to amount to 2,473 maunds, to the East Indian Railway at the Kidderpur dock. The Railway Company seeing that the bags in which the rice was contained were unsound and had holes in them and that the seams were weak, refused to take the consignment unless the consignor agreed to sign a Risk Note in Form "A". The Risk Note was signed by the consignor and showed that the weight of the rice delivered to the Railway Company was 2,473 maunds. The consignment was received 3rd November and was delivered at Giridih. On arrival at Giridih and on weighment the consignment it was found that there were 2,268 maunds in the bags. The plaintiff thereafter instituted the suit out of which the second appeal arises claiming damages for the shortage of the consignment delivered. The Munsif decreed the plaintiff's suit but the Subordinate Judge has reversed the finding on appeal and has dismissed the suit except as regards the freight paid by the plaintiff for 108 maunds of the rice.

The line of argument taken up before us is that though it has been found that no loss can have happened during the time that the rice was actually in the train, since the seals on the wagon were found to be in tact, the defendant Railway Company would have to show that the loss did not occur after the rice was received on the 3rd November and before it was put into the Railway wagon. It is argued that the Risk Note in Form "A" does not cover this period.

Now, in the first place, there is no evidence to show that the Railway Company stored the rice for any time before putting it into the train. It appears that it was taken from the steamer in the dock and put into the Railway wagon as soon as possible. In the second place, there can be no doubt that from the time when the rice was delivered to the Railway Company up to the time it was delivered at Giridih the consignment was in transit and was covered by the Risk Note in Form "A".

The material portion of the Risk Note in Form "A" is as follows:—

"Whereas the consignment.....is in bad condition and liable to damage, leakage or wastage in transit, I the undersigned do hereby agree and undertake to hold the said Railway administration.....harmless and free from all responsibility for the condition in which the aforesaid goods may be delivered to the consignee at destination and for any loss arising from the same."

It is clear in my mind that this Risk Note would absolve the Company from any responsibility for loss owing to the bad condition of the bags throughout the period of transit, and the period of transit would commence from the time that the bags were received and were carried to the train. It may be true that it was not found that any escaped while the rice was in the wagon, but it is quite possible that the bags were being taken to the train when the loss occurred owing to their bad condition. The Risk Note frees the Railway Company from responsibility for any loss arising from the condition in which the goods packed in these unsound bags might be delivered to the consignee. The learned Subordinate Judge has come to a definite finding that the loss was due to the defective condition of the packing and I think that that finding is sufficient to absolve the Company from responsibility.

It has been argued that the onus would fall on the defendant-Company in the first place to show that the loss was one such as is contemplated by the Risk Note, and, I think that the admission of the plaintiffs that the bags were in poor condition was sufficient to save the defendant from discharging such onus if such discharge was necessary. The question of onus will not be the same in regard to the Risk Note in Form "A" as it is in regard to the Risk Note in Form "B". The two indemnities are quite different. It is not necessary for the defendant Company to prove that there has been such loss or damage as is contemplated in the Risk Note, because it is clear from the admissions that there was such loss and damage.

There is no reason, I think to interfere with the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge and I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 146 OF 1924.

June 26, 1925.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

MAKUNDI SINGH AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

PARBHU DAYAL AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, rr. 8, 8, 9—Some defendants present—Plaintiff absent—Suit dismissed in default—Application of r. 9.

Where on the day fixed for the hearing of a suit, one out of the several defendants appears, but neither the plaintiff nor the rest of the defendants are present, and the suit is dismissed in default, the order of dismissal, so far as the defendant who is present is concerned, must be regarded as one under O. IX, r. 8, C. P. C., and as against the absentees under O. IX, r. 3. Consequently, a fresh suit on the same cause of action against the absentee defendants is not barred by provisions of O. IX, r. 9. [p. 4, col. 1.]

Bukharam v. Ramji, 23 Ind. Cas. 878; 10 N. L. R. 39 and Damu Diga v. Vakrya Nathu, 56 Ind. Cas. 455; 44 B. 767; 22 Bom. L. R. 328, referred to.

Letters Patent Appeal against a judgment of Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal, dated the 4th August 1924.

Mr. P. L. Banerji, for the Appellants.

Mr. U. S. Bajpai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the defendants, arising out of a suit for arrears of rent. On a previous occasion the plaintiffs had instituted a suit against the defendants to the present suit, namely, Tirbhuwan Singh and two others, on the same cause of action, for recovery of the same arrears of rent. On the day fixed for the hearing of the previous suit Tirbhuwan Singh alone appeared before the Court, but neither the plaintiffs nor the other two defendants were present. The Court did not question Tirbhuwan Singh whether he admitted any part of the claim or not—nor did it take down his statement. It simply dismissed the suit for default.

The plaintiffs made an attempt to have the dismissal set aside and the suit restored, but their application was infructuous. They then brought the present suit on the same cause of action against the same defendants.

The Courts below held that the present suit was barred by the provisions of O. IX, r. 9, and the plaintiffs' only remedy was to have the previous dismissal set aside, and not to institute a fresh suit.

A learned Judge of this Court on second appeal, however, came to the conclusion that although the plaintiffs were not entitled to maintain a second suit against Tirbhuwan Singh, who had appeared on the former occasion, they were not debarred from maintaining a suit against the other defendants who also had been absent. He came to the conclusion that the dismissal should be deemed to have taken place under O. IX, r. 3 so far as the other defendants were concerned and under O. IX, r. 8 as far as Tirbhuwan Singh was concerned. He accordingly dismissed the suit against Tirbhuwan Singh but decreed the claim against the other two defendants. Inasmuch as all the defendants were jointly and severally liable for the arrears of rent the learned Judge passed a decree for the whole amount claimed against these other defendants.

The defendants have come up in appeal under the Letters Patent, and the learned Advocate for them has conceded that if the suit is maintainable against the defendants other than Tirbhuwan Singh, then there can be no doubt that they are liable for payment of the entire amount of the arrears. His main contention has been that the whole claim as against all the defendants was barred by the provisions of O. IX, r. 9. His argument is two-fold. In the first place his contention is that inasmuch as at least one of the defendants was present on the former occasion it cannot be said that neither party appeared within the meaning of O. IX, r. 3, and that, therefore, the previous dismissal could not have been under that rule. He further contends that that dismissal must be taken to have been under the first portion of r. 8, namely, where the defendant appeared and the plaintiff did not appear.

His second contention is that even if the suit was dismissed partly under r. 3 and partly under r. 8, the provisions of r. 9 still apply and the second suit is barred.

With regard to the second contention, we may say at once that it has clearly no force. If it be assumed that the previous dismissal was partly under r. 3 and partly under r. 8, then r. 9 can only apply to the dismissal so far as it was under r. 8 and not so far as it was under r. 3. The words in r. 9 are "where a suit is wholly or partly dismissed under r. 8." That expression obviously means a suit dismissed in part or in its entirety. It does not mean 'where a suit is dismissed wholly or partly under r. 8 or partly under some other rule'. This is the only grammatical meaning which can be given to the expression. The words "wholly or partly" modify the verb "is dismissed" and not the expression "under r. 8." The partial dismissal under r. 8 refers to the dismissal of the claim in part.

As to the first contention it must be conceded that if the language of r. 3 were to be considered alone, there would be much to be said in favour of the appellants' contention, for in common parlance the expression 'neither party' would mean "not any one of two or more parties." This is the meaning assigned to the word "neither" in Murray's Dictionary. It would, therefore, look at first sight as if r. 3 would be applicable only if no one whose name appears on the record as a party is present. We, however, find that the words "the plaintiff" or "the defendant" in the Code various rules refer to the plaintiff the defendant or the party, whose case is being considered. For instance in O. V wherever the word 'defendant' appears, it is obvious it means the particular defendant whose case is being considered. Similarly in O. IX, rr. 1 and 2 the word 'defendant' would mean the defendant with whom we are concerned and this would be the meaning attached to the word 'defendant' in r. 6. Examining r. 8 in detail, we find that it consists of two portions. Under its first portion when the defendant appears and the plaintiff does not appear the suit is to be dismissed. Clearly the word 'defendant' does not necessarily mean all the defendants, it may mean any one of the defendants or it may mean the particular defendant with whose case we are concerned. Under the second portion of the same rule if a defendant appears and admits part of the claim the suit is to be decreed against him in part and is to be dismissed so far as it relates to the remainder. There is no express provision in the second portion of the rules under which the suit is to be dismissed in its entirety. It follows that unless the word 'defendant' is taken to mean the particular defendant with whose case we are concerned, there would be no ground for the dismissal of the whole suit when one of the several defendants appears and admits a part of the claim. The language of the rules is certainly not very happy—but on the whole we have come to the conclusion that this is the best interpretation which could be put on the rules in this order.

The result would be that the case of each defendant has to be considered separately. So far as the defendant who had appeared is concerned the suit must be deemed to have been dismissed against him under r. 8; and the only remedy open to the plaintiffs as against him would be to have it set aside under r. 9—they cannot maintain a second suit, so far as the other defendants, who never appeared in Court, are concerned, the case is one where neither party appeared, namely, neither the plaintiffs nor those defendants. The provision of r. 3 would, therefore, apply as between these two sets of parties.

The learned Judge of this Court has referred to the case of Bukharam v Ramji (1) decided by the Officiating Judicial Commissioner of Nagpur, which on facts is very similar to the case before us. We may also refer the case of Damu Diga v. Vakrya Nathu (2), where Crump, J., remarked that it was difficult to follow the reasoning that for the purposes of r. 8 it is sufficient if one or some of several defendants appear. In this opinion it was necessary to take the case of each defendant on its own merits. In the case of several defendants the consequences of an order of dismissal need not necessarily be the same for all—the suit being dismissed against one set under r. 3 and against others under r. 8.

We accordingly uphold the decree of the learned Judge of this Court, and dismiss the appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 878; 10 N. L. R. 39.

(2) 56 Ind. Cas. 455; 44 B. 767; 22 Bom. L. R. 328.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL RULE No. 497 OF 1925.

July 7, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Ewart Greaves, Kt., and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

D. D. BARBAR—PETITIONER

versus

I. W. C. DEBENHAM AND ANOTHER—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Calcutta Rent Act (III of 1920), s. 2 (c)—Premises, whether include fans and lights—Intention of parties—Standard rent, whether can be fixed including fixtures

In the case of a demise it depends on the intention of the parties and on the nature of the agreement to be gathered from the same, whether such fixtures as fans and lights are intended to go with and to form part of the premises or building demised. [p. 5, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where fans and lights are attached to the premises demised and are intended to be used with them, they must be taken, according to the intention of the parties, to be part of the demised building for the purposes of the Calcutta Rent Act and it is open to the Rent Collector to fix a standard rent in respect of the premises which comprises these fixtures. [p. 5, col. 2.]

Rule against an order of the President of the Tribunal, dated the 26th February 1925, affirming that of the Controller, dated the 19th August 1924.

Babu Suresh Chandra Taluqdar, for the Petitioner.

Messrs. H. L. Ganguli, Satindra Nath Mukerjee and Babu Saroj Kumar Dutt, for Opposite Party No. 1.

Babus Hiralal Ganguli, Asita Ranjan Ghose and Profulla Chandra Chakraborty, for Opposite Party No. 2.

JUDGMENT.

Greaves, J.—By an agreement in writing contained in two letters dated respectively the 29th and 31st August 1923, the first of which was addressed by the petitioner to the respondent Debenham and the second by Debenham to the petitioner, the respondent Debenham agreed to let and the petitioner agreed to take for a period of 21 months from the 1st September 1923 with an option of renewal as therein mentioned, the Lower Flat of No. 4 Rawdon Street comprising the following accommodation, sitting room with one electric fan and lights, three bed rooms with bath rooms each bed room with one electric fan and lights also lights in the bath room, south verandah with space under stairs with electric lights and other accommodation as therein mentioned at a rental of Rs. 320 per month inclusive of taxes and without any other extra charge but excluding the cost of electric current. An application was subsequently made to the Rent Controller by the petitioner to fix the standard rent of the premises and the Rent Controller on the 20th August 1924 fixed the standard rent at Rs. 232 per month holding that the fans, electric lights and fittings formed part of the premises.

[90 I. O. 1925]

An appeal was preferred against this order to the President of the Tribunal who held that a standard rent under the Rent Act could not be made to cover fans, light or any other thing not forming part of a building or hut.

He arrived at the same figure as the Rent Controller for the standard rent of the premises exclusive of fans, lights, etc.

The decision of the President was based on the definition of premises in s. 2 (e) of the Calcutta Rent Act and he held that the word premises could not cover fans and lights, etc., as they did not form part of the building.

Against the order of the President of the Tribunal the present Rule was obtained on the 24th April 1925. Premises in s. 2 (e) of the Calcutta Rent Act are defined as meaning any building or hut let separately for residential, charitable, educational or public purposes or for the purposes of a shop or an office and by s. 15 of the Act the Rent Controller is empowered to certify the standard rent of any premises.

In Sewell v. Angerstein (1), Wills, J., held that gasaliers formed part of the free hold. The finding was arrived at in the case of a lease which was conveyed or assigned by the defendant to the plaintiff and included in the conveyance or assignment were the fixtures which were held to include the gasaliers attached by screws to the gas pipes.

In Smith v. Maclure (2), Pearson, J., held that gas fittings, gasaliers and a table lamp screwed to a pipe were fixtures and that this expression included whatever articles were substantially part of the house so that they could not be removed without depriving the building of that which was intended to be used with it.

I cite these authorities not as authorities for showing what are or are not fixtures, as what are deemed fixture in England may not be fixtures according to Indian Law and vice versa but as showing that it depends on the intention of the parties and on the nature of the agreement to be gathered from the same whether such findings as fans and lights are intended to go with and to form part of the premises or building demised.

(1) (1868) 18 L. T. 300.

(2) (1884) 32 W. R. 459.

I think that in the present case the fans and lights which were attached to the part of the building demised and which were intended to be used with it must be taken according to the intention of the parties to be part of the demised building for the purposes of the Rent Act and that it was open to the Rent Controller to fix a standard rent which comprised these.

The case of Ellen Eveline Wells v. John Dickinson & Co. (3) to which we were referred has, in my opinion, no bearing on the present case. In that case a furnished flat was demised and it was held that although the Rent Controller had jurisdiction under the Act to fix a rent for the premises apart from the furniture he had no jurisdiction to fix a standard rent which included the furniture.

That case is distinguishable. Early the furniture could by no stretch of imagination have been intended to form part of the building for the purposes of the let whereas in the present case the fans and lights which were attached to the building formed part of the building for the purposes of the demise according to the true intention of the parties as indicated in the agreement. I would make the Rule absolute with costs five gold mohurs. The matter will now go back to the President of the Tribunal in order that he may consider what is the standard rent of the premises including the fans and lights.

B. B. Ghose, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Rule made absolute.

(3) 81 Ind. Cas. 853; 28 O. W. N. 774; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 868.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 97 OF 1923.

December 15, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Victor Murray Coutts-Trotter, Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

ERNEST WILLIAM ADAMS—

APPELLANT

versus

MESSRS H. S. F. GRAY AND ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL OF MADRAS—

RESPONDENTS.

Will, construction of—Principles applicable—Bequest, vested or contingent—Gift over, effect of—De-feasance.

The first principle to be borne in mind in regard to the construction of a Will is that as far as possible, the real intentions of the testator as expressed in the Will should be gathered and ascertained and given effect to. The so-called rules of construction are merely aids to enable the Court to discern or discover the real intentions of the testator. [p. 6, col. 2; p. 7, col. 1.]

In construing a Will by an Englishman in the English language drawn up by a Solicitor and bristling with highly technical expressions and clauses, it must be assumed that the technical expressions employed were employed with the meaning and significance generally understood to attach to them in the particular branch of the law. [p. 7, col. 1.]

Leader v. Duffey, (1888) 13 A. C. 294; 58 L. J. P. C. 13; 59 L. T. 9, relied on.

A bequest to a person for life and after his death to his children, becomes vested in each child as and when he or she is born and the vesting is not postponed till the death of the life-tenant. The expression "after the death" is taken to indicate merely the time when the gift over becomes reduced to possession and not the time when the right to such possession vests. The principle underlying this rule is that a contingency is imported by the fact that the gift is given after a life-estate in the property bequeathed. As nothing is more certain than that every person who lives must die, the death of a life-tenant is an event not contingent but certain; and, therefore, a gift on the death of a life-tenant is a bequest to take effect not on a contingency but on an event certain to happen; and, therefore, the donees of the gift are held to obtain a vested interest in it as and when they come into being. But if from the words of the bequest the intention of the testator is clear that the persons taking should be only such persons as survive or are alive on the death of the life-tenant, then it is a contingent bequest contingent upon the donee surviving the life-tenant. In such a case till such contingency is fulfilled, there can be no vesting. The principle underlying this rule of construction is that though the death of the life-tenant is certain, still it is by no means certain that the donee will survive the life-tenant. [p. 9, col. 1.]

Hallifax v. Wilson, (1809) 16 Ves. Jun. 168; 33 E. R. 947; 10 R. R. 146 and Maitland v. Chalie, (1822) 6 Madd. 243; 56 E. R. 1084; 23 R. R. 209, relied on.

The law does not favour the divesting of an estate already vested and in any case the condition for divesting and the intention to divest should be clearly made out. If, however, from a gift over clause the intention of the testator is to be clearly gathered that any estate that may have vested previously should be divested on the contingency referred to in the gift over clause then such intention should be given effect to and not otherwise. [p. 11, col. 2; p. 12, col. 1.]

In re Hamlet, Stephen v. Cunningham, (1888) 39 Ch. D. 426 at p. 433; 59 L. T. 745; 37 W. R. 245 and Young v. Turner, (1861) 30 L. J. Q. B. 263; 1 B. & S. 550; 5 L. T. 56; 8 Jur. (N. S.) 52; 121 E. R. 819; 124 R. R. 645, relied on.

A testator made a bequest to his daughter as follows:—"As to the sum of Rs. 30,000 unto my daughter Alice Gray for her life for her sole and separate use and after her death in trust for the lawful children or any lawful child of the said Alice Gray who being sons or son shall attain the age of 21 years." A later clause provided: "If the said Alice Gray shall die leaving no child living at her death who being a son shall attain the age of 21 years, then after her death and such default or failure of children, I bequeath the said monies and investments, or so much thereof as shall not have become vested, unto my son Campbell Gray whom I hereby appoint as my residuary legatee." Alice Gray died leaving no issue living, her only son having predeceased her after attaining 21 years of age. On her death the widow and representative of Campbell Gray, the son and residuary legatee, claimed the monies on the ground that there was no vesting in the deceased son and that in any case there was a defeasance, while the father and representative of the deceased son of Alice Gray claimed that the estate had vested in her son on his attaining 21 years of age:

Held, on a construction of the Will, (1) that the contingent bequest in favour of Alice Gray's son became vested in him on his attaining 21 years of age, without reference to the death of his mother; [p. 9, col. 2.]

(2) that the intention of the testator in the gift over clause was that it should not affect any interest already vested and that the clause did not operate to divest Alice Gray's son of the estate which had vested in him; [p. 11, col. 2.]

(3) that, therefore, the father and legal representative of Alice Gray's deceased son was entitled to the monies in dispute. [p. 13, col. 1.]

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Devadoss, dated the 19th September 1923, passed in the exercise of the Original Testamentary Jurisdiction of the High Court in the matter of the last Will and Testament of Charles Gray deceased and in the matter of the Administrator-General's Act III of 1913.

Messrs. Moresby and Taylor, for the Appellant.

Messrs. King and Partridge and the Administrator-General, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The task before us in this appeal is, as Lord Loughborough the Lord Chancellor observed in a case, to find out the meaning of words which the party using them did not understand. It relates to the construction of the Will of one Charles Gray. The matter came up before Mr. Justice Devadoss on the Original Side on a summons taken out by the Administrator-General of Madras for the purpose of construing the Will and determining the rights thereunder of two claimants on behalf of each of whom it was urged that in the events that have happened, he or she has become entitled to the part of the estate in question. There can be no doubt that the first principle to be borne in mind in regard to construction of Wills is that as far as possible, the real intentions of the testator as expressed in the Will should be gathered and ascertained and given effect to. The so-called rules o construction to be found in such abundance, more especially in English decisions, are merely aids to enable us to discern, or discover the real intentions of the testator and not artificial rules which should be allowed to override in any given case the expressed intentions of the testator.

Lord Halsbury, the Lord Chancellor, referred in the case of Leader v. Duffey (1) to the modern view which he thought was in accord with reason and common sense that whatever the instrument, it must receive a construction according to the plain meaning of the words and sentences therein contained. Referring to this observation of the learned Lord Chancellor, Lord Justice Cotton in the case of In re Hamlet, Stephen v. Cunningham (2) observes that rules of construction are only intended to aid us where there is ambiguity and not to enable us to get rid of the express words of the testator if expressed in clear language. This would, undoubtedly, be so in the case of an instrument expressed in plain language by a layman. When, however, we come to an instrument, which having regard to the form and the technical language employed may aptly be described as being in a language which the party using did not himself understand, we come to a state of things in which we cannot altogether ignore even the technical rules of construction. The Will before us was not only by an Englishman and in the English language but was apparently drawn up by one of the leading Solicitors in Madras at the time, and bristles with technical expressions and clauses which are to be found in all common forms and in most of the cases. When such highly technical expressions are used in an instrument, it is not possible entirely to ignore the construction placed on such technical expression by eminent and learned Judges in the Courts of Chancery in England; because it must be assumed that the technical expressions employed have been employed with the meaning and significance generally believed to attach to them in the particular branch of the law.

We may observe in this connection that in view of the very difficult questions involved, we enquired of both the parties whether they did not consider it would be the better course to have the matters finally decided in an action instead of on an application; but both of them have agreed that any decision come to on this application should have the same effect as a decision in a suit between them so as to bind them finally.

The facts are these:—The testator left a son and two daughters and the contest here relates to the sum of Rs. 30,000 left to the younger daughter Hester Alice Gray and her branch.

The clauses in the Will relating to the disposition of this sum of Rs. 30,000 are as follows: "And as to the sum of rupees thirty thousand a further part of the said investments upon trust to pay the dividends and interest and income arising from the same unto my daughter the said Hester Alice Gray for her life for her sole and separate use free from the debts and control of any husband that she may marry and her receipt alone to be a sufficient discharge for the same and after the death of the said Hester Alice Gray in trust for the lawful children or any of lawful child of the said Hester Alice Gray who being sons or a son shall attain the age of twenty one years or being daughters or daughter shall attain that age or marry, and if more than one in equal shares. Provided also that the said trustees or trustee may after the death of either of them the said Mary Harriet Annie Wilson or the Hester Alice Gray or previously thereto if she shall so direct in writing raise any part or parts not exceeding one half part of the then expectant, presumptive or vested share or fortune of any child under the trusts hereinbefore declared and apply the same for his or her advancement or benefit and I declare that the said trustees or trustee shall, after the death of the mother of any child entitled in expectancy under the trusts hereinbefore declared, apply the whole or such part as they or he shall think fit, of the annual income of the share or fortune to which any child shall for the time being be entitled in expectancy under the trusts hereinbefore declared, for or towards the maintenance or education of such child either directly or to his or her guardians without seeing to the application thereof or requiring any account of the same; and shall during such suspense of absolute vesting accumulate the residue (if any) thereof in the way of compound interest by investing the same and the resulting income thereof in or upon any such stocks, funds or securities as are here inbefore mentioned for the benefit of the person or persons who under the trusts herein contained shall become entitled to the principal fund from which the same respectively shall have proceeded, with power for the said trustees or trustee to resort to the accumulation of any preceding year or years and apply the same for or towards the maintenance or education of the child for the time being presumptively entitled to the same respectively."

(1) (1838) 13 A. C. 291; 58 L. J. P. C. 13; 59 L. T. 9.

(2) (1888) 39 Oh. D. 426 at p. 433; 59 L. T. 745; 37 W. R. 245.

Later on in the Will there is the following clause:—"And if either of them the said Mary Harriet Annie Wilson and the said Hester Alice Gray shall die leaving no child living at her death who being a son shall attain the age of twenty-one years or being a daughter shall attain that age or marry, then after the death of either of them the said Mary Harriet Annie Wilson and the said Hester Alice Gray and on such default or failure of children, I bequeath the said monies and the investments representing the same or so much thereof as shall not have become vested or has been applied under the trust aforesaid unto my son Charles Thomas Campbell Gray whom I hereby appoint as my residuary legatee."

The facts material for the purpose of understanding the claims and contentions before us have been admitted. Hester Alice Gray died on the 28th of November 1922. When she died she had no issue living. Her only son E. G. Adams had died in June 1918 after having attained twenty-one years of age. The claimants before us are Mrs. Gray the widow and representative of Charles Thomas Campbell Gray son of the testator, and Rev. Mr. Adams the father and representative of E. G. Adams. The case for Mrs. Gray has been put in two ways and it is contended that in either of those two ways she would be the person entitled to the monies now representing the bequest aforesaid of Rs. 30,000. It is firstly contended that the interest created in favour of the children of Hester Alice Gray is a contingent interest and on a proper construction of the various clauses in the Will no child of Hester Alice Gray could get a vested interest in it, unless both of the two contingencies are satisfied, namely, completion of the twenty first year and surviving Hester Alice Gray the mother. On this it is argued that as E. G. Adams did not survive his mother but died before her, he took no vested interest although he completed his twenty first year. In default therefore of any children of Hester Alice Gray taking it is said that Mrs. Gray who now represents the son of the testator has become entitled. Secondly, in the alternative, it is contended that assuming that E. G. Adams took a vested interest in the fund, the later clause in the Will above recited containing the gift over is in the nature of a defeasance clause and on a proper construction thereof when he did not survive his mother, his vested interest, if any became divested and devolved by way of gift over upon the representative of the testator's son.

The contention on behalf of Rev. Mr. Adams was that on a proper construction of the Will the son of Hester Alice Gray took a vested interest on his completing his twenty first year even before the death of his mother and that the gift over clause could not on a proper construction thereof operate by way of defeasance at any rate with regard to any interest already vested.

What we have, therefore, to decide is which of these two sets of contentions should be upheld as being the right one. The learned Judge on the Original Side came to the conclusion that as E. G. Adams did not survive his mother he took no vested interest in the estate and he accordingly decided that Mrs. Gray was entitled to the fund. We have heard full arguments from the learned Counsel on both sides and after a careful consideration of all the contentions we have come to the conclusion that the decision of the learned Judge was wrong.

The learned Judge appears to have misdirected himself by a consideration of the terms of the gift over clause in arriving at a conclusion with regard to the question of vesting. Holding that there was no vesting he concluded that the gift over clause should have operation.

The questions for solution, therefore, are, firstly, whether on a true construction of the several clauses in the Will, E. G. Adams obtained a vested interest in the fund in question, and secondly, if he did, whether such interest became divested by the gift over taking effect on his dying before his mother and not surviving her.

There is no dispute about the life-interest bequeathed to Hester Alice Gray. The remainder is given to the lawful child of the said Hester Alice Gray who, being a son shall attain the age of 21 years. This is the clause, therefore, which has to be looked at for the purpose of determining the question regarding the nature of the estate given or bequeathed. And unless a contrary intention to be gathered from any other clause in the Will should be found to affect the nature of the estate given under this clause, it follows that the question whether or not E. G. Adams obtained a vested interest in the fund should be determined solely by reference to this clause. We shall advert later to the other clauses in the Will bearing in any manner on the present question. It is perfectly clear from all the text books and the decided cases that if a bequest is to a person for life and after his death to his children, the bequest becomes vested in each child as and when he or she is born and the vesting is not postponed till the death of the life-tenant. The expression "after the death" is taken to indicate merely the time when the gift over becomes reduced to possession and not the time when the right to such possession vests. See Hallifax v. Wilson (3). The principle underlying this rule is that no contingency is imported by the fact that the legacy is given after a life-estate in the property bequeathed. As nothing is more certain than that every person who lives must die, the death of a life-tenant is an event not contingent but certain; and, therefore, a gift on the death of a life-tenant is a bequest to take effect not on a contingency but on an event certain to happen; and, therefore, the donees of the gift are held to obtain a vested interest in it as and when they come into being. But if the bequest had been not merely after the death of the life-tenant but to such of her children as may survive her or should be alive at her death, then clearly the condition of surviving or being alive at her death would be a condition precedent to the vesting itself, and in such a case, therefore, no child that does not so survive will acquire a vested interest in the bequest. The obvious principle underlying this rule of construction is that though the death of the life-tenant is certain, still it is by no means certain that the donee will survive the life-tenant. And if from the words of the gift the intention of the testator is clear that the persons taking should be only such persons as survive or are alive on the death of the life-tenant, then it follows necessarily that it is a contingent gift upon the donee surviving the life-tenant. Till such contingency is fulfilled, there can be no vesting. But there are no such words in the clause creating the bequest under reference. The words merely are "after the death of Haster Alice Gray" and there are no such words as "to such of the children of Haster Alice Gray as may survive her or should be alive at her death." It, therefore, follows that if the words of the gift had been merely "to Haster Alice Gray and after her death to her children or child" E. G. Adams would have taken a vested interest in the fund on his birth. But then there are further words in the clause, viz., "who being a son shall attain the age of 21 years". There can be no doubt whatever that the attaining of 21 years is clearly a condition and the intention of the testator was, (apart from other clauses in the Will, that no son of Hester Alice Gray who does not attain 21 years should take. The requirement, therefore, that the son of Hester Alice Gray to take should be one who had attained 21 years is a contingency and would make the bequest a contingent bequest. The position then is this: that a bequest to E. G. Adams which would otherwise have vested on his birth is made contingent on his attaining 21 years. It logically follows from this position that the contingency being fulfilled on his attaining 21 years the bequest becomes vested in him immediately on his attaining 21 years without any reference whatever to the death of his mother Hester Alice Gray whether such death takes place either after or before he should attain that age.

(3) (1809) 16 Ves. Jun. 168; 33 E. R. 947; 10 R. R. 146.

This was what was decided in Maitland v. Charlie (4). The principle or correctness of this case has never been doubted. Thus, it is clear that under the terms of the clause in the Will creating the bequest and on its proper construction, E. G. Adams obtained a vested interest in the fund on his attaining 21 years.

Having arrived at this result without any consideration whatever to the other clauses in the Will, we may now consider the bearing of such other clauses on this conclusion. The provision in the Will with regard to the application upto one half out of the corpus of the fund for the advancement of any child of Hester Alice Gray with her consent in writing during her lifetime and after her death at the discretion of the trustees, is also a clear indication of the intention of the testator as deduced above. For, it clearly points to a considerable benefit in the legacy accruing to such children even before the arrival of the period of distribution. Again it is significant that the testator in that part of the clause should have used the words "the then expectant, presumptive or vested share or fortune of that child"—words which are obviously calculated to suggest the possibility contemplated by the testator of a vesting in a child even before the death of the mother. The provisions in the Will in the succeeding clause relating to the gift of the interest or income relating to the share or fortune of each child is also a clear indication regarding the intention of the testator as to the vesting. This rule was laid down by Jessel, M. R. in Fox v. Fox (5).

(4) (1822) 6 Madd. 243; 56 E. R. 1084; 23 R. R. 209.

In re Turney, Turney v. Turney (6), Lord Justice Lindley referred to this case of Fox v. Fox (5) and followed it as good law, and In re Ussher, Foster v. Ussher (7), Justice Astbury also followed it.

It is also significant that in this part of the Will the testator while referring to a minor child of Hester Alice Gray speaks of it as entitled in expectancy but at the same time refers to the share or fortune of each child as separate and the income accruing from it also as distinct. The provision for the accumulation of the interest and compound interest relating to the share of each child separately for its own benefit is absolutely inconsistent with the idea of the share not vesting in the child even before the child should attain 21 years of age. It is further very significant that the testator, should refer to the period of such accumulation as a period during which there is suspense of absolute vesting. From all these indications the inference is strengthened, which has been arrived at already independently of them, that the estate taken by E. G. Adams was a vested interest on his completing 21 years. There is no question in this case of the quantity of the interest so vested, because E. G. Adams was admittedly the only son of Hester Alice Gray and what vested in him was the whole of the fund in question.

It only remains then to consider the question whether on this basis of the fund having vested in E. G. Adams on his attaining 21 years, there resulted any divesting under the clause containing the gift over.

The clause containing the gift over which has been contended to operate by way of defeasance or divesting any estate vested in E. G. Adams has already been set out. It is significant to begin with that in this clause there are no words of defeasance or divesting. But at the same time the words of the gift over are perfectly clear. According to the clause, in the event of there being no child living at the death of Hester Alice Gray the gift over is to take effect. If the words had been merely that on the death of Hester Alice Gray "without leaving children" there should be a gift over, those words "without leaving" children would by construed only as meaning "without leaving or having had children who have attained vested interest", and would not be held to be apt to disturb any vested interest as was held in the case of In re Cobbold, Cobbold v. Lawton (8). But the words are not merely "without leaving children" but "leaving no children living at her death", and there being no possible ambiguity about such words, it has been held that such words should be construed literally and be given effect to. The leading case on this point is the case of In re Hamlet, Stephen v. Cunningham (2). The learned Judge in the First Court following this case held that E. G. Adams did not obtain a vested interest in the fund in question. It is impossible to understand how the learned Judge treated this case as an authority for coming to the conclusion that he did that there was no vesting of the fund in E. G. Adams. The case is undoubtedly an authority with regard to the gift over clause. But as regards the vesting itself, Lord Justice Cotton in that case held that two of the children who had attained 21 years before their mother's death had acquired a vested interest. At page 432* he says this: "The daughter was under age and unmarried at the testator's death. She afterwards married and had several children, two of whom attained 21 and so acquired a vested interest." (8) (1903) 2 Ch. 299; 72 L. J. Ch. 588; 88 L. T. 745.

*Page of (1888) 39 Ch. D.—[Ed.]

(5) (1875) 19 Eq. 286; 23 W. R. 314.

(6) (1899) 2 Ch. 739; 69 L. J. Ch. 1; 48 W. R. 97; 81 L. T. 548.

(7) (1922) 2 Ch. 321; 91 L. J. Ch. 521; 127 L. T. 453.

terest; but all the children died before their mother." Again at page 435* the same learned Judge observes as follows: "The argument which appeared to me to deserve most consideration is that these words were to be considered as a mere continuation of the limitation which was to take effect if no vested interest was obtained by the children under the preceding words. Both the Counsel for the appellant relied on the words of the introduction. 'And in the case my said daughter' They said that those were not words which would be naturally used if the testator was defeating a previously vested interest. But I am struck with this, that in the latter part of the Will, where the testator disposes of the unsold part of his real estate, he first gives it to the children by words which clearly would give them vested interest on their births, and then introduces a gift over by the same words as those we are now considering. I do not much rely on that clause as showing us what his intention was, but only as showing us that he used the words "And in case" to introduce a limitation displacing a previous vested gift, a limitation which clearly was intended to displace a previous vested interest, and which could not be contended to be merely carrying out a series of limitations to take effect on failure of the previous objects of the gift." And further on at page 438* he states "but there is no inconsistency in a gift over defeating a previous vested interest" and concludes with the following sentence: "In my opinion, on the true construction of this instrument, the words express the event on which the gift over was to take effect too clearly. . . . notwithstanding any view we may have that it would have been much better if the testator had made a different disposition".

In re Hamlet, Stephen v. Cunningham (2), therefore, far from being an authority for the fund not vesting is strong authority in favour of its vesting. As regards the divesting, however, it is, no doubt, a clear decision in favour of the contention on behalf of the respondent. We should have felt ourselves bound to follow that decision and hold that the estate that had vested in E. G. Adams became divested by reason of his not surviving his mother but for the presence in the clause of the following words, namely: "Or so much thereof as shall not have become vested". The law, it has been said, does not favour divesting, and in any case the condition for divesting and the intention to divest should be clearly made out. As it has been already pointed out there are no words in the clause indicating any defeasance or divesting. But as observed by Lord Justice Cotton in the case of In re Hamlet, Stephen v. Cunningham (2), if the gift over is absolutely clear it may necessarily involve a defeasance or divesting. The raison d'être of such decisions as In re Cobbold, Cobbold v. Lawton (8) is that such words as "leaving no children" should be construed merely as meaning "leaving or having had no children who have not obtained vested interest" and should be construed so as not to disturb or divest any vested interest. In other words, unless from the gift over clause the intention is perfectly unambiguous, clear and definite that any vested interest whatever should cease and become divested, the gift over will not be held to have that effect. In the present case, however, the intention of the testator is perfectly clear from the words he had used that the gift over should not operate in respect of any interest that has vested. It, therefore, follows from this that the intention of the testator in the gift over clause was not to divest any vested interest.

The learned Counsel for the respondents contended in effect that the gift over clause should be read as if the words "or so much thereof as shall not have become vested" were not there. We could not possibly accede to any such contention. He also relied strongly for his argument on the case of Young v. Turner (9). So far as the question of the gift over and divesting is concerned that case is undoubtedly a case quite similar to the case In re Hamlet, Stephen v. Cunningham (2).

This case of Young v. Turner (9) undoubtedly bears many points of resemblance to the case before us, and it, therefore, follows that if there were no points of distinction between that case and this, we might have felt bound to follow the decision in that case of the very learned Judges who constituted that Court.

The questions considered and decided in that case were exactly the same that have arisen for decision in this case, namely, whether in the first place any estate did vest in a child that attained 21 years but died before the termination of the life-estate and in the second place, whether even if the estate did vest there was no divestment by the gift over if on the death of the life-tenant there should be no issue of her body alive. The main decision in the case was that even if there had been vesting, there was a divesting as the result of the clause containing the gift over. This is what Justice Blackburn who delivered the judgment of the Court in that case has said "And if an estate did vest in the issue of the body of the niece attaining twenty-one it would be divested upon the death of such issue in her lifetime under the terms of the Will." In this view it was unnecessary for the learned Judges to consider the question whether having regard to the terms of the particular Will the estate had or had not vested in such a child. We must take it that it is for that reason that the case is generally cited only as an authority for the position that the general rule that a gift over which is directed to take effect on the death of some person without leaving issue should not be construed in such a manner as to divest any estate already vested is not applicable to cases where the intention is perfectly clear from the language of the instrument that what was clearly intended was that the gift over should take effect if on the death of the life-tenant there should be no issue living of the deceased life-tenant. The rule laid down by this case is that if from the gift over clause the intention of the testator is to be clearly gathered that any estate that may have vested previously should be divested on the contingency referred to in the gift over clause then such intention should be given effect to and not otherwise.

(9) (1861) 30 L. J. Q. B. 968; 1 B. & S. 550; 5 L. T. 56; 8 Jur. (N. S.) 52; 121 E. R. 819; 124 R. R. 645.

*Pages of (1888) 39 Ch. D.—[Ed.]

It is the same rule that following this case of Young v. Turner (9) that was again laid down in In re Hamlet, Stephen v. Cunningham (2) and it is accepting the rules so laid down that we came to the conclusion that having regard to the particular words of the gift over clause in the Will before us the testator's intention clearly was that no estate which had become vested should be divested by the gift over clause. So far, therefore, as the construction of the gift over clause is concerned, the conclusion we have arrived at is clearly in consonance with the rule laid down in the case of Young v. Turner (9).

But that case was also sometimes referred to as an authority with regard to the question of vesting though the decision in the case as already observed turned only on the construction of the gift over clause. It is clear, however, that in that case Justice Blackburn delivering the judgment of the Court found that the object of the testator was to provide only for such of the issue of his niece as may be living at the time of her death. The words in the Will before the Court were "and if my said niece shall depart this life leaving only one child of her body lawfully begotten, then I give and devise the property unto such only child and his or her heirs as soon as he or she attains the age of twenty-one years aforesaid." From the terms apparently of this clause of the Will the Court came to the conclusion in that particular case that the intention of the testator was that only such children should take as survived the mother. So far, therefore, as the question of vesting is concerned: Young v. Turner (9) should be deemed to belong to that class of cases where having regard the language used in the particular instrument it was held that the intention of the testator was that surviving the mother or being alive at her decease was one of the conditions of the vesting of the estate.

We have already referred to that class of cases and held that on the language of the Will before us it was clear that E. G. Adams obtained a vested interest in the fund. If, therefore, the intention of the testator in the gift over clause was that the clause should not affect any interest already vested it necessarily follows that any estate vested in E. G. Adams could not be held to be vested or defeated by anything contained in the gift over clause.

The learned Counsel for the respondent contended that in the view taken by us of the gift over clause there could be no case of vesting of a part of the estate as would seem to have been contemplated in the words in the gift over clause already referred to, namely, "or so much thereof as shall not have become vested." But what we have been concerned with was the intention of the testator; and we cannot adopt a construction which would have the effect of defeating the clear intention of the testator merely because the words used by him might refer to a contingency which might never arise, more especially having regard to the fact that no one can be certain in the case of such complicated provisions what contingencies may or may not arise.

In our judgment, therefore, the learned Judge below was wrong and the appeal succeeds and should be allowed. It will be declared that the estate having become vested in E. G. Adams there was no divesting of that estate and that, therefore, on his death it passed to his representative his father. Having regard, however, to the extremely difficult nature of the questions involved, we think this a proper case in which we should direct that the taxed costs as between attorney and client of both parties in this appeal also should come out of the estate. We certify for two Counsel on both sides.

V. N. V.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 64 OF 1923.

August 15, 1923.

Present:—Justice Sir Lallubhai Shah, Kt.,
Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Kemp.

BHAGCHAND DAGADUSHA

GUJARATI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS

versus

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA

AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bombay District Police Act (IV of 1890), ss. 25, 25A, 26, 79, 80, 81—Bombay General Clauses Act (I of 1904), s. 21—Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4(f)—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 80—Suit against Secretary of State and Public Officer—Injunction, suit for—Notice, whether necessary—Suit instituted before expiry of period of notice, maintainability of—Disturbance—Compensation, levy of—Police charge, levy of—Notification, alteration in terms of, legality of—Suit for declaration of illegality of notification, whether maintainable—Irregularity in notification, effect of—"Final" in s. 25A (4), meaning of—Power of Courts to interfere with action of Government and District Magistrate.

Per Shah, J.—The rule contained in s. 80 of the C. P. C. is a rule of procedure and does not affect in any way the cause of action or the rights of the parties. Where the cause of action requires an immediate remedy by way of injunction the Courts have power to entertain the suit before the expiry of two months specified in the section, where they are satisfied as to the need of an immediate remedy by way of prevention of the wrong complained of. [p. 21, col. 2.]

Where a class of persons is taxed heavily and the payment of the tax is about to be enforced by measures which would cause serious apprehension in the minds of the persons taxed that irremediable damage might be caused to their business unless the enforcement of the orders imposing the tax were stopped at once, the remedy by way of injunction is appropriate and necessary to safeguard their interests, and in such a case the suit might be entertained even if instituted before the expiry of the period limited in s. 80 of the C. P. C. [p. 23, cols. 1 & 2.]

Section 81 of the Bombay District Police Act provides an additional remedy which the party concerned may follow but it does not bar a suit, which it may be otherwise open to the party to file. [p. 23, col. 2.]

Government is not empowered by s. 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act to levy any cess or rate. Section 4 (f) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act refers to a cess or a rate authorized by Government and not to a cess or rate authorized by the District Magistrate with the previous sanction of the Commissioner such as is contemplated in s. 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act. [ibid.]

Section 4 (f) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act applies to a cess or rate which is legally authorized by Government. It does not apply to a case in which the legality of the order of the Government is questioned. [ibid.]

Section 21 of the Bombay General Clauses Act is intended to be of general application and applies to a notification issued by the Government under s. 25 of the Bombay District Police Act. It is, therefore, open to the Government to alter the terms and operation of a notification issued under the latter provision if minded to do so. [p. 24, col. 2.]

Under s. 25 of the Bombay District Police Act Government has no power to call upon A to make a payment on behalf of B. It is open, however, to the Government under sub-s. (2) (b) of the section to charge any section or sections or class or classes of persons, and under the powers mentioned in s. 21 of the Bombay General Clauses Act, it is open to them to add to, amend, or vary a previous order on this point. So long as in substance the tax or rate is a tax or rate levied on another class of persons living within area concerned, it is within the legal authority of the Government to make the alteration. [p. 24, col. 2; p. 25, col. 1.]

The Court is not concerned with the propriety of the tax or rate; it is concerned only with its legality. It is for the Government to consider its propriety, as the Legislature has laid the obligation of determining the questions mentioned in the section upon that authority. [p. 25, col. 1.]

The mere fact that a notification, under s. 25 of the Bombay District Police Act, calls upon the Collector to collect the rate or tax imposed and does not in the first instance call upon the Municipality to pay the amount as required by sub-s. (4) of the section does not render the notification illegal. The direction to the Collector to make the collection is in the nature of an irregularity which does not affect the legality of the tax or rate imposed. [p. 25, cols. 1 & 2.]

The express provision as to the finality of an order made by a District Magistrate under sub-s. (1) of s. 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act which is contained in sub-s. (4) of the section excludes the application of s. 21 of the Bombay General Clauses Act to such an order. [p. 26, col. 2.]

Quære:—Whether the Commissioner has power to revise such an order from time to time and to introduce changes into it?

Where, however, the District Magistrate has not yet made a requisition on the Collector under sub-s. (1)

(b) of the section, the stage of finality contemplated by the provisions of sub-s. (4) has not been reached and the subject is still open to the District Magistrate. [p. 28, col. 1.]

It is for the District Magistrate with the previous sanction of the Commissioner to require the Collector under s. 25-A (1) (b) of the Bombay District Police Act, to recover the amount of compensation determined under the section in such proportions as he may, with the like sanction, draw from all inhabitants of the area declared under sub-s. (1) (a) (ii) or from any section or sections or class or classes of such persons and it is for the Government to determine the same questions under s. 25 of the Act with regard to Police charges. A Civil Court can interfere only when the discretion is exercised in such a manner as to enable the Court to say that it is not an exercise of the discretion within the meaning of these sections. [p. 30, col. 2; p. 31, col. 1.]

Section 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act does not provide for any enquiry as to an order under sub-s. (1) (b) of the section. The words "after such enquiry as he deems necessary" are to be found in sub-s. 1 (a) and do not govern cl. (b). [p. 31, col. 1.]

The omission to hold an enquiry departmentally arranged is not sufficient to vitiate a direction given by the District Magistrate under s. 25-A (1) (b). The provisions of s. 79 of the Bombay District Police Act would condone such an irregularity in the procedure. [ibid.]

An obligatory provision in a Statute cannot be allowed to be ignored without adequate grounds. [p. 25, col. 2.]

Per Kemp, J.—So far as a suit against the Secretary of State is concerned the words of s. 80 of the C. P. C. are imperative and make no exception in the case of suits for an injunction and a Court of Law is not entitled to graft on to the plain wording of the section a qualifying clause excepting suits for an injunction from the operation of the section. Relief by way of injunction is a kind of relief which must have been in the contemplation of the framers of the Code when the section was drafted and re-drafted. It makes no difference that the injury apprehended is immediate or irreparable. No suit may be instituted against the Secretary of State until the expiration of the two months' notice required by the section. [p. 31, col. 2.]

Where, however, a suit is for an injunction against a public servant in respect of a threatened act, the section has no application and no notice is necessary under the section before the institution of the suit. [p. 32, col. 1.]

Section 4 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act does not stand in the way of a suit in respect of a wholly illegal and unauthorized cess or rate purporting to be authorized by a Government or a Public officer. [p. 33, col. 1.]

Section 80 of the Bombay District Police Act refers to suits for damages against a Commissioner, Magistrate, or Police Officer and has no application to a suit for an injunction restraining the District Magistrate from collecting a rate or tax illegally imposed by the Government or by the District Magistrate, nor does such a suit fall within the purview of s. 81 of the Act. [p. 33, cols. 1 & 2.]

There is nothing in s. 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act to suggest that no fresh order can be passed by the District Magistrate in accordance with the revision of his first order by the Commissioner. The word "final" in sub-s. (4) of the section does not mean that the District Magistrate can only make his order under that section once and for all. The use of the word "final" merely excludes the jurisdiction of the Courts and not the power of the Commissioner or the District Magistrate to alter an order passed under the section. [p. 31, cols. 1 & 2.]

The finality provided for an order under s. 25-A cl. (4) of the Bombay District Police Act means to give a final effect to the ultimate order which the District Magistrate, with the previous assent of the Commissioner may, subject to the revision of the Commissioner or in accordance with any such revision, pass. The clause is not intended to exclude the powers which by s. 21 of the Bombay General Clauses Act are included in a power to issue an order. [p. 35, col. 1.]

If a charge for Additional Police levied under s. 25 of the Bombay District Police Act is not a rate on property, it is a tax, however it may be described in the notification and is, therefore, within the powers of Government to levy under the section. Any objection to the form of such a notification is cured by s. 79 of the Bombay District Police Act. [p. 35, col. 2.]

The Courts are not concerned with whether Government or the District Magistrate have judged correctly the party who should pay the Police charge, or the amount of compensation under ss. 25 and 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act, provided the Government or the District Magistrate has exercised its or his judgment on the point. That is a matter left to Government under s. 25 and to the District Magistrate, with the previous sanction and subject to revision by the Commissioner, under s. 25-A. Section 25-A was not intended to permit the Court to enquire into the question as to who were the persons really responsible for the occurrences in respect of which the cess is levied. [p. 36, cols. 1 & 2.]

First appeal against a decision of the District Judge, Nasik, in Suit No. 3 of 1922.

Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, Messrs. G. N. Thakore and R. J. Thakore, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Kanga, (Advocate-General) and S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Shah, Ag. C. J.—This is an appeal from the judgment of the District Judge of Nasik in a suit filed by 58 shop-keepers of Malegaon against the Secretary of State for India in Council and the Collector of Nasik. The suit was filed for a declaration that the Government Notification, dated 6th June 1922, directing a levy of the costs of certain additional Police and of the amount of compensation from the shop-keepers of Malegaon whether Hindus or Muhammadans was illegal and for an injunction restraining the defendants from making the recoveries authorised by the said notification.

It will be necessary to state in some detail the facts which led to this notification. But before doing so, I may state that the suit was defended on various grounds which are indicated by the issues raised at the trial. The first five issues relate to the preliminary objections to the suit, and the next four issues (Nos. 5 to 8) relate to the merits of the case. The learned District Judge found that the suit was barred by s. 80 of the C. P. C. as it was filed before the expiration of two months after the notice of action was given and that the suit was barred by the provisions of s. 81 of the Bombay District Police Act (IV of 1890 as amended by various subsequent Acts.) Issues Nos. 2, 3 and 4 were found in favour of the plaintiffs. On the merits the issues were decided against the plaintiffs. In the result the suit was dismissed with costs.

[90 I. C. 1925]

It may be mentioned that original plaintiffs Nos. 4, 10, 11, 24, 27, 46, 53, 54, and 55 withdrew from the suit; and it was heard as regards the remaining 48 plaintiffs.

They have all appealed to this Court, and practically all the points raised in the lower Court have been raised in the course of the arguments before us. We have heard the parties fully and we have been assisted by the clear arguments of the learned Counsel on both sides. Broadly speaking the important points are two. One is a preliminary point relating to the notice required by s. 80 of the C. P. C., and the other relates to the legality of the new tax or rate levied on the plaintiffs (a) in respect of the additional Police and (b) in respect of the amount of compensation determined under s. 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act. The other preliminary issues are not so important, and the point relating to the merits covers a number of points of varying degrees of importance, which I shall notice when I come to deal with the question.

The facts which led to the notification and then to the suit have been fully stated in the judgment of the lower Court. I shall, however, state them briefly, confining the detailed statement only to the essential facts.

At the outset I may state that two letters one of the 7th December 1921 and the other of the 15th December 1921 by the District Magistrate to the Commissioner have been put in here. The learned Counsel for the appellants made an oral application for the production of these letters in the course of the argument, and the learned Advocate General for the defendant No. 1 expressed his willingness to put them in. As these letters were referred to in the correspondence which was already put in, as they were likely to be useful for a general understanding of the facts from beginning to end and as the parties consented we have admitted them in evidence in appeal.

The facts are briefly these. Serious riots took place at Malegaon on the 25th of April 1921, which resulted in the loss of a life and some property. A notice was issued on the 13th May by the District Magistrate relating to an inquiry under s. 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act inviting all the persons to be present with proof of their claims for compensation which had been duly presented and all persons who wished to oppose the same (Ex. 102). On the 17th May the Commissioner, C. D. authorised the District Magistrate to declare the area included within the boundaries of the Municipality of Malegaon as the local area inhabitants of which had caused or contributed to the riots and unlawful assemblies at Malegaon on the 25th and 26th April and to determine the amount of compensation awardable under the section; and he further authorized the District Magistrate to require the collection to recover the amount so determined from the adult male Muhammadan inhabitants of the said local area.

Further proposals from the District Magistrate as to the proportions in which the compensation should be recovered from such inhabitants were awaited. In communicating this authority to the District Magistrate he gave the following further directions:—

“(2) The Commissioner does not think that participation by Hindu merchants in the collecting and accounting of Khilafat Fund subscriptions affords sufficient ground for making them liable to contribute to the compensation.

The Commissioner agrees that the recovering authority should be the Collector and not the Municipality.

* * * *

(4) The District Magistrate should himself personally conduct the enquiries for determining the amount of compensation recoverable.

For this purpose he should hold regular public proceedings and should allow to all parties concerned or their Pleaders full opportunity for stating their case and for cross-examining witnesses. These proceedings should be held at Malegaon. A finding should be separately recorded and published on each claim for compensation." (Ex. 101).

On the 20th May 1921 the declaration as to the area under s. 25-A (a) (ii) was made by the District Magistrate. (Ex. 142). The previous sanction of the Government there referred to appears to be a mistake for the sanction of the Commissioner.

On the 4th July 1921, after making the necessary inquiry the District Magistrate decided the questions of compensations and sent the file of the proceedings to the Commissioner (Ex. 102).

On the 17th August 1921, the Commissioner varied the amounts in some of the awards and confirmed all the other awards. The total sum sanctioned by him amounted to Rs. 5,04,546 (Ex. 104).

On the 16th August the Commissioner also settled the list of exemptions under s. 25-A, sub-s. (2) and passed the following order:—

"The total amount of compensation payable according to the awards as finally revised by the Commissioner under s. 25-A of the District Police Act, 1890, comes to Rs. 5,04,546.

2. This amount should be assessed and recovered in the following manner subject to the exemptions of which a list is hereto attached, from the following two classes of male adult Muhammadan inhabitants of the town of Malegaon in the Nasik District and such other inhabitants of the said town as may be hereafter notified.

Class 1—Payers of income-tax—Each to pay 9 times the amount of the income-tax payable by him in 1920-21.

Class 2—All others—Each to pay an equal share of the balance of the total charges after deduction of the amounts recoverable from persons of class 1.

Provided that if any person in this class is the owner of more than one hand loom he shall pay an extra share for every loom owned by him in excess of one.

3. The amounts due to be recovered in instalments spread over three years ending July 31st, 1924." (Ex. 134). The only thing that remained for the District Magistrate to do at the time was to give a direction to the Collector to realise the amount of compensation in the above proportion under s. 25-A, (1) (b). But apparently that was not done.

The Government also acted under s. 25 and imposed additional Police upon Malegaon. On 1st July 1921 the Government issued a notification directing additional Police of the strength indicated therein to be employed at Malegaon for one year and ordering "the cost of such additional Police to be defrayed wholly by a tax imposed on the male adult Muhammadan inhabitants of the said town as may be hereafter notified by a rate assessed on their property." The estimated cost of such Police was about Rs. 46,174 (Ex. 96).

On the 11th July 1921, they further directed that the cost of the additional Police should be recovered as follows:—

"Class I—Payers of income-tax—Each person to pay an amount equal to the amount payable by him as income-tax for the years 1920-21.

Class II—All others to pay in equal share the balance of the charges after deduction of the amounts recoverable from person in class I.

Provided that if any person in this class is the owner of more than one hand loom he shall pay an extra share for every loom owned by him in excess of one." (Ex. 97).

On the 21st July 1921, the District Magistrate communicated this notification to the Municipality under s. 25, sub-s. (4) with the letter from the Commissioner dated 19th July and gave direction as to the method of collection (Ex. 100).

On the 8th October 1921, the Government slightly altered the first notification according to which the cost of the additional Police was Rs. 46,473 (Ex. 98).

The Municipality was unable to make the collections as required. The President of the Municipality wrote to the Collector on the 1st December 1921 explaining at length the difficulties of the Municipality the unwillingness and objectionable conduct of the Momins to make the payments and the poverty of a large number of the Momin adults at Malegaon, and asking for advice as to what should be done. This is a long letter and explains the situation as it then existed according to the President of the Municipality (Ex. 105).

Then the District Magistrate wrote two letters, one on the 7th December and the other on the 15th December 1921, which are admitted in evidence in appeal. He practically agreed that the Municipality would not be able to make the collection and suggested that both the collections—the Police charges and compensation—should be lumped together to be collected by the Collector by taking the saris woven by the Momins, that is by taxing the shop keepers, who purchase saris from them. He observes at the end of the second letter as follows:

"The shop-keepers were easily made to collect the Khilafat Funds. Let them now be made to Collector our compensation." (Exhibits A and B in appeal).

On 30th December the Commissioner wrote the Collector pointing out the difficulties in accepting his suggestions as to the shop-keepers being made to pay as it would result in shifting the burden from the Momins to the shop-keepers who were not covered by the notifications and were in fact excluded by the Government. He suggested some method of collecting the amounts by taxing the sari as it would be sold by the Momins to the shop-keeper. The Collector's endorsement dated 6th January 1922 on this letter shows, however, that he thought that the Commissioner's suggestion was practically the same as his suggestion (Ex. 146). The Commissioner then wrote to the Government on the 14th January 1922 recommending in effect that the Collector's recommendations might be accepted (Ex. 147). It seems that the matter was making slow progress for reasons which may not be all known on this record and it is possible that they were waiting for the final result of the appeals to the High Court by those who were convicted and sentenced in the Malegaon riot cases as it appears from the letter of the 7th December.

Then comes the confidential letter of the 7th March addressed by the District Magistrate to the Commissioner in which he reviewed the whole question and recommended that the shop-keepers should be taxed. The whole of this letter is important and is really the genesis of the new notification which forms the bone of contention between the parties. I shall only state that in para. 4 he explains that the suggestion of the Commissioner made in the letter of the 30th December is unworkable, and suggests in para. 5 the reasons for taxing the shop-keepers. In that paragraph he suggests the following inquiry in the case of the Hindus if necessary:—"If it be suggested that the non-Mohammadans are not to be held responsible for any payment and that this proposal brings in a certain number of Hindus then I go back to the original issue between Mr. Simcox and Mr. Pratt and would suggest that the views of Mr. Simcox based on many years' knowledge of Malegaon and concurred in by every local official, be now accepted by Government, namely, that the Hindus were either actively behind the Khilafat movement (as shown, for example, by their collecting money for the Khilafat Paisa Fund) or passively sympathised with it and in any case took no line in support of law and order and that, as a matter of fact, the whole town should be held responsible for the mis-deeds of certain of its inhabitants unless any individual can prove that he was actively and publicly on the side of Government throughout the trouble. Not one of these shop-keepers and shop-keepers is known to come within this category. Nevertheless to prevent any injustice being done to the Hindus, I would propose that the Deputy Collector in charge of Malegaon Sub-Division should hold a summary inquiry at which the Hindu shop-keepers in these two lists should be called upon to be present and that they should be given any opportunity of furnishing proof, that before, during and after the riots they were actively and publicly on the side of Government: the decision of the Deputy Collector on confirmation by the District Magistrate to be final and conclusive."

He proposes a scheme and in para. 7 summarises the arguments.

"7. In support of this scheme I would summarise the following argument.—

(1) The shop-keeper who actually makes the payments will not be out of pocket. He will naturally pay less for the sari to the Momin from whom he buys it and in selling he may put up the price of the finished article and he will charge the Momin more for the yarn which he sells to him. He will cover himself at every point and the maker of the sari will pay as Government intend. Therefore, there is no hardship in making the shop-keeper, the agent for the collections.

(2) Instead of having to deal with a whole community we confine our collections to not more than 84 men. The machinery for collection is made correspondingly easier and cheaper.

(3) The Momin weaver, even if he did not abandon the town in large numbers, as he conceivably might if recoveries were to be made direct from him, would be a certain defaulter, and none of the coercive measures of the Land Revenue Code for recovery would be practicable or advisable. His moveable or immoveable property is negligible and to put him in the Civil Jail would provoke a riot.

(4). On the other hand the shop-keepers own both moveable and immoveable property, they are residents of the town, they are few in number and coercive measures can be used against them. Since it has been shown that they can shift the burden on to others it is reasonable to assume that they will do so, and will pay what is demanded of them rather than make themselves liable to such measures. Contumacy, on their part is less likely to provoke a riot and to cause any disturbance." (Ex. 107)

The Commissioner sent this letter to the Government on the 9th March endorsing the Collector's recommendations (Ex. 107). The Government wrote to the Commissioner on the 5th April 1922 approving of the District Magistrate's suggestions as follows:— With reference to correspondence ending with your memorandum No. P. O. L. 3-181 dated the 9th March 1922, on the subject noted above, I am directed to inform you that Government approve all the District Magistrate's proposals contained in his letter No. P. O. L. 100-A, dated the 7th March 1922. The Collector should be told that His Excellency the Governor has personally read his report and thinks it excellent.

2. I am to forward herewith a copy of the opinion of the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs and to request that you will be so good as to submit revised draft notifications. Your report should indicate the grounds for holding that the Municipality has made default in accordance with the proviso to s. 26 of the District Police Act IV of 1890. Meantime the summary inquiry proposed by the District Magistrate Nasik, in para. 5 of his letter quoted above should be proceeded with." (Ex. 146.)

* * * *

The District Magistrate wrote to the Commissioner with reference to the above letter (Ex. 109) on the 21st April and on the same day directed the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to make an inquiry in the terms of the following memorandum:—

"The Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Malegaon, is informed that Government have approved all the proposals made by the District Magistrate in his letter No. P. O. L. 100-A of 7th March 1922 for recovering the monies due from the people of Malegaon. The necessary notifications authorising the recoveries are being prepared and as soon as they are issued by Government, the work of recovering must be taken in hand. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate will remember that in all sum of Rs. 2,14,619 is to be recovered before July 31st.

2. Meanwhile the summary inquiry proposed in para. 5 of the original letter should be taken in hand, and the Sub-Divisional Magistrate is requested to arrange to hold this inquiry at Malegaon at as early a date as possible. The inquiry should be conducted summarily. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate will see that no inquiry is necessary in the case of the Momins whose names are in the lists, as to their liability to make payment since this point was determined last year. The inquiry as to the liability only extends to the Hindus. On the other hand the estimate of the number of saris and of the bales of yarn is to be made in respect of all the persons, both Momins and Hindus, and if the Sub-Divisional Magistrate thinks that the assistance of the Income-Tax Inspector will be of advantage to him in making these estimates he should apply for it.

3. Each man's case should be taken up separately and orders recorded and these should be reported to the District Magistrate who will pass final orders under s. 25(a) (1) (b) of the Police Act.

4. The District Magistrate hopes that it will be possible for the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to finish these inquiries by the time that the notifications are issued by Government, so that the orders to the Collector for the recovery of the sums due can forthwith be issued.

5. Both the Sub-Divisional Magistrate and the mamlatdar are requested to give as wide a publicity as possible to the principle on which Government have now decided to recover the charges. The more generally these principles are known the easier it should be for the money to be recovered, and in any case there need be no secrecy about the matter." (Ex. 108).

The Sub-Divisional Magistrate issued the following public notice:—

"All the people of the town of Malegaon are hereby informed as follows:—The amount of costs of additional Police and the compensation amount in connection with the riots that took place at Malegaon in the year 1921 are to be recovered as herein below set forth:—

The shop-keepers who sell yarn to the Momins of Malegaon or who purchase saris from them are to be considered as agents for the purpose of the recovery of these amounts.

From every such shop-keeper purchasing saris or selling yarn, annual recovery will be made for three years on behalf of the Momins at the rate of 6 annas per sari purchased and of Rs. 5 per bale of yarn sold. Before such recovery is made, we shall give notices to the respective shop-keepers in that behalf and make inquiries at Malegaon on the date fixed. This inquiry will commence very shortly. May this be known. Date the 21st April 1922". (Ex. 89).

It may be mentioned that there was no reference either in Ex. 108 or Ex. 109 to the nature of the summary inquiry proposed by the District Magistrate in his letter as to the liability of the Hindu shop-keepers; and it is noticeable that Ex. 89 is practically silent on the point of this summary inquiry as to the Hindu shop-keepers. On the 25th April the Sub-Divisional Magistrate issued notices to the individual shop-keepers which related to the proposed amount of the tax (Exhibit 92). On the 20th May 1922, the District Magistrate published the following public notice:—"All the people of the town of Malegaon are hereby informed as follows:—It has been decided to recover the amount of cost of additional Police and the amount of compensation for damages sustained in the riots that took place at Malegaon on the 25th and 26th of April in the year 1921 from the shop-keepers dealing in yarn and saris by levying a rate on each bale of yarn sold and on each sari purchased at Malegaon. And pending publication of Government notification authorising the levy of such rate, the people concerned are hereby informed by the District Magistrate, Nasik, that the amount to be recovered in the first year will be recovered in three equal instalments instead of in one instalment as originally proposed and the said amount will be recovered at the rate of Rs. 5 per bale of yarn and at the rate of 3 annas per sari instead of 6 annas per sari as originally proposed.

The amounts to be recovered in the next two years will be recovered in those years. But it will be determined later on as to in how many instalments and at what rate those amounts are to be recovered.

The dates of instalments and the amounts to be paid by individual merchants as settled by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Malegaon, on a recent enquiry made by him as regards the annual average dealings of merchants dealing in yarn and saris will be duly communicated to the persons concerned by notice. May this be known. Date the 20th May 1922." (Ex. 90).

On 6th June 1922 the Government published the notification, the legality of which is in question.

The material terms of the notification are these:—
"No. 152:—Whereas it appears to His Excellency the Governor in Council that the conduct of the inhabitants of the town of Malegaon in the Nasik District has rendered it expedient to employ additional Police in the said town, the Governor in Council in supersession of Government Notifications Nos. 6423 dated 1st July 1921, 6801, dated 11th July 1921 and 9911, dated 5th October 1921, is pleased in exercise of the powers conferred by s. 25 of the Bombay District Police Act, 1890, (Bom. IV of 1890), (1) to direct the employment in local area of the said town of additional Police of the strength and cost herein below set forth for a period up to the 31st May 1923 with effect from 1st July 1921, and (2) to direct the cost of such additional Police as here-in-below set forth shall be defrayed wholly by a tax imposed on the Muhammadan income-tax payers who are inhabitants of the said town and by a rate assessed on the property of such other inhabitants of the said town as are here-in-below notified in the manner here-in-below set forth":—

* * * *

[The annual charges for the additional Police are estimated at Rs. 46,437].

"The Governor in Council is pleased further to direct that the cost of the additional Police as above set forth and the total amount of compensation of Rs. 5,04,546 awarded by the District Magistrate, Nasik, to claimants who suffered damages in the riots of 25th and 26th April 1921, under s. 25 A of the said Act, shall be assessed and recovered as here-in-below set forth:—

Class I—Payers of Income-tax—Each person to pay nine times the amount of the income-tax payable by him in 1920-21, to be recovered in three equal instalments.

payable on the 1st August 1921, 1922 and 1923.

Class II—The balance of the combined charges, after the amount recoverable from persons of class I has been deducted, shall be recovered on behalf of the Momin adult weavers of Malegaon, from both Muhammadans and Hindu shop-keepers of Malegaon dealing in saris and yarn, who shall pay every year upto 31st May 1923 beginning from 1st July 1921 a rate calculated by the District Magistrate, Nasik, at a sum not exceeding 6 annas multiplied by the average number of saris hitherto purchased by them from Momin weavers of Malegaon annually or a sum not exceeding Rs. 5 multiplied by the number of bales of yarn hitherto sold by them to Momin weavers of Malegaon annually, as the case may be.

And whereas the Municipality of Malegaon has made a default in the recovery of charges on account of the said additional Police, the Governor in Council is pleased to direct, under the proviso to s. 26 (1) of the said Act, that the recovery of the said charges shall be made by the Collector of the District, along with the compensation money as an arrear of land revenue due by the persons as described in classes I and II". (Ex. 99).

After the notification was published the District Magistrate wrote to the Collector (Ex. 110) asking him to make both the recoveries. The direction as to Police charges is given under s. 26 and that is really the direction of the Government communicated to the Collector. As regards the compensation it is mentioned in para. 3 of the letter that the Municipality is unable to recover the said amount. But it may be remembered that as regards the compensation from the beginning it was decided by the Commissioner that the amount should be recovered by the Collector (see Ex. 101).

On the same day several merchants of Malegaon presented a petition to the Collector (Ex. 111) in which they complained of the illegality and injustice of the Government notification of the 6th June, but they were informed orally by the Collector that the orders would not be changed. Notices were served on the same day upon the merchants to pay the respective amounts. Exhibit 94 is a sample of these notices. After referring to the Government notification each merchant was informed as to what was payable by him for the year ending 30th June 1922, and that it was payable in three instalments falling due on 1st July 1922, 1st October 1922 and 1st January 1923. The merchants were further informed that in case of default in the payment of any of the instalments the whole amount for the three years will be liable to be recovered at once as an arrear of land revenue. On the 24th June 1922, some of the shop-keepers sent a memorial to the Government through the Collector (Ex. 120).

On the 26th June the notice of this action required by s. 80 of the C. P. C., was given. It was received by the Collector on the 27th. The present suit was filed on the 27th June and an application for temporary injunction was made on the same day. On 30th June the application was rejected by the District Court. The plaintiffs appealed to the Court from the order of the 30th June. On 22nd September 1922 this Court granted a temporary injunction on the plaintiffs giving security on the grounds indicated in the judgment (Ex. 25). There were two other similar suits (Nos. 4 and 5 of 1922) in that Court but there are no appeals in those suits: and we are no longer concerned therewith. The written statement need not be detailed as the defences are indicated by the orders. I may, however, quote para. 6 of the statement in which the defence as to the nature of the new tax or rate has been stated in these terms:—With further reference to para. 7 and with reference to paras. 8 and 9 of the plaint, defendants submit that the words "on behalf of the Momin adult weavers of Malegaon" occurring in the said Government Notification No. 152 dated the 6th June 1922 and certain words to the same effect occurring in a notice issued by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate on 21st April 1922 have been wrongly construed by the plaintiffs. The true intention of the order as finally passed by Government under s. 25 and those passed by the District Magistrate and the Commissioner under s. 25-A was that payments should be made by both the Hindu and Muhammadan shop-keepers and merchants dealing in saris and yarn in their own individual capacity as being primarily responsible therefor and not as agents for the weavers. It was, however, intended that the said shop-keepers and merchants should be at liberty to recover the payments made by them from the weavers by charging them more for the saris they purchased from them and the yarn sold to them. It is not correct to say that the Hindu and Muhammadan shop-keepers as a class were held not to be responsible for the riot, directly or indirectly. It is also not correct to say that the notification was made to operate retrospectively. The additional Police was entertained from 1st July 1921. The cost thereof was accordingly payable on and from that date".

The defences are sufficiently indicated by the following issues raised in the lower Court:—

"1. Whether the suit is bad for want of due notice as required by s. 80 of the C. P. C.?

2. Whether the suit is liable to be dismissed for failure to give a notice as required by s. 80, cl. 4 of the Bombay District Police Act, 1890?

Note:—Mr. Akut states that this issue can affect defendant No. 2 only.

2-A. Whether the suit is liable to be dismissed under s. 81 of the Bombay District Police Act, 1890?

3. Whether the suit is barred under s. 4 cl. (f) para. 3 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act of 1876?

4. Whether this Court has jurisdiction to decide legality or otherwise of the Notification No. 152 of the Home Department dated the 6th June 1922 and other orders passed under the Bombay District Police Act, 1890?

Note:—This issue has reference to s. 79 of the Bombay District Police Act of 1890.

5. Whether the Government Notification No. 152 of the Home Department dated the 6th June 1922 is ultra vires?

6. Whether the said Notification contemplates retrospective effect? If so, whether this portion of it is legal?

Note:—Mr. Akut objects to the form of this issue.

7. Whether the amounts have been arbitrarily and illegally fixed behind the back of the plaintiff?

8. Whether a permanent injunction as prayed for should be granted?

9. What order should be made as to costs?

10. What should be the valuation for Pleaders' fees?

11. What should the decree be?"

I have already referred to the findings and the result of the suit.

I shall first deal with the preliminary points raised in the arguments before us in appeal. The most important among them is the point as to notice under s. 80 of the C. P. C. The section provides as follows:—

"No suit shall be instituted against the Secretary of State for India in Council, or against a public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity, until the expiration of two months next after notice in writing has been, in the case of the Secretary of State in Council, delivered to or left at the office of, a Secretary to the Local Government or the Collector of the district, and, in the case of a Public officer, delivered to him or left at his office, stating the cause of action, the name, description and place of residence of the plaintiff and the relief which he claims..."

There is no objection to the form of the notice given in this case: but it is urged that as the suit was instituted before the expiration of two months next after the notice, it should be dismissed. On the one hand it is urged that it makes no difference whether the suit be against the Secretary of State for India in Council or against a Public Officer and that whatever the nature of the suit, it cannot be instituted before the expiration of two months. On the other hand it is urged that the principle of not requiring the aggrieved party to wait for two months when the circumstances require that the proposed act should be immediately prevented with a view to stop an irremediable loss to the party the Courts have entertained suits in spite of the peremptory provisions as to notice in the interests of justice and various decisions have been referred to in support of that view. It is urged that the provision is a rule of procedure and does not affect the right; and where the right requires an immediate remedy the Courts have entertained the suits, where they have been satisfied as to the need of an immediate remedy by way of prevention of the wrong complained of.

After considering the arguments on both sides, I am content to accept the view taken by this Court in Secretary of State for India v. Gajanan Krishna (1) and Secretary of State for India v. Gulam Rusul (2) as to the powers of the Court to entertain suits for injunction against the Secretary of State for India before the expiration of two months from the service of notice. As I understand the observations in Dagal Khushal v. Secretary of State for India (3) they do not in any way conflict with or modify the view taken in the two cases just referred to. As regards a similar suit against a public officer in respect of any act purporting to be done by such public officer, I accept the view taken by this Court in Naginlal Chunilal v. Official Assignee (4). The question whether a suit for injunction could be filed against the Secretary of State for India in spite of the provisions of s. 80 of the Code before the expiration of two months from the date of the notice was not decided in Agar Hari v. Secretary of State for India (5), but the case was decided on the ground that in that suit and under the circumstances of that case no injunction could be claimed against the Secretary of State. The observations in that case at page 451* that the Court should, if possible, always require notice, however short, to be given related to an ex parte injunction during the pendency of the proceedings and has nothing to do with the point we have to consider.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 637; 35 B. 362; 13 Bom. L. R. 273.

(2) 31 Ind. Cas. 535; 40 B. 392; 18 Bom. L. R. 213.

I am aware of the weight due to the contrary view taken in Secretary of State for India v. Kalekhan (6) and in Muradally Shamji v. Long (7). I have carefully considered these decisions, and the wording of s. 80 in the light of the arguments urged at the Bar; but I still think that the view taken in the Bombay decisions, which I have above referred to is the right view. I agree that the words, "in respect of any act purporting to be done" apply to the "public officer" only and not to the Secretary of State for India in Council. But as I understand the principle underlying the decisions, which I am prepared to follow, it is independent of these words and in my opinion, applicable to suits against the Secretary of State for India as well as to suits against public officers. The really difficult question is whether the imperative provisions of the section do not exclude the application of the principle based upon such considerations as may arise in suits for injunction where the necessity for the remedy by way of an injunction is made out. In applying this principle, this Court has

(3) 59 Ind. Cas. 122; 22 Bom. L. R. 1089.

(4) 17 Ind. Cas. 876; 37 B. 243; 14 Bom. L. R. 1148,

(5) 27 B. 424; 5 Bom. L. R. 431.

(6) 16 Ind. Cas. 947; 37 M. 113; 23 M. L. J. 181; (1912) M. W. N. 786; 12 M. L. T. 224.

(7) 53 Ind. Cas. 627; 44 B. 555; 21 Bom. L. R. 980.

*Page of 27 B.—[Ed.]

followed the ratio decidendi of the English decisions in Attorney-General v. Hackney Local Board (8) and Flower v. Local Board of Low Leyton (9). In the sections which were under consideration in these two cases, the provisions as to notice were not less imperative than the words of s. 80 of the Code; and the decisions were not in any sense dependent upon the view whether the expression was "act purporting to have been done" or "purporting to be done". They are based on the broad consideration of the object of the notice and of the necessity for a speedy remedy according to the nature of the wrong complained of. It is true that in virtue of the provisions of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893 (56 and 57 Vict. c. 61) these English decisions have not the same value now as they had before the Act was passed so far as their actual application is concerned. When this Court adopted that view in dealing with the point as to notice under the old District Municipal Acts of 1873 and 1884 it was based upon this broad consideration though partly it was based upon the effect of the words "anything done or purporting to have been done" used in s. 48 of Bombay Act II of 1884. [See Shidmallappa Nurandappa v. Gokak Municipality (10) and Harilal Ramchandlal v. Himat Manekchand (11)]. The rule contained in s. 80 is a rule of procedure and does not affect in any way the cause of action or the rights of the parties. If the cause of action requires an immediate remedy by way of injunction, and if s. 80 is literally applied, the party aggrieved would have no remedy. It seems to me that this Court has accepted a view which is in consonance with justice, equity and good conscience, which is not in any sense based upon any technical rule of English Law, and which is in accordance with the rule that has been followed in England in cases where the provisions as to notice were no less stringent than we have here.

It is desirable that this question should be decided one way or the other in a manner which would be practically final and leave no scope for such elaborate argument as is unavoidable under the present state of the decisions. I have not overlooked the desirability of having this question considered

(8) (1875) 20 Eq. 626; 44 L. J. Ch. 545; 33 L. T. 244.

(9) (1877) 5 Ch. D. 347; 46 L. J. Ch. 621; 36 L. T. 760; 25 W. R. 545.

(10) 22 B. 605; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 985.

(11) 22 B. 636; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1006.

[90 L. O. 1925]

BHAGCHAND V. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

by a Full Bench of this Court, but under the circumstances of this case, we both agree, it is not necessary to do so.

It remains to consider whether this is a case, in which the relief by way of injunction was essential to meet the requirements of the case. On a consideration of the admitted facts it seems to me that it was. It appears that the shop-keepers as a class were not taxed in 1921 either as to the additional Police or compensation charges. In April and May 1922 the Sub-Divisional Magistrate made enquiry as to the extent of their business in saris in the next preceding year; and in the result in June 1922 the shop-keepers were required to pay Rs. 92,874 for Police charges and Rs. 5,04,546 during three years ending with June 1924. The amount payable for the first year was one-third of the total amount and it was payable in three instalments. In default of payment of any one instalment, the whole amount for all the three years was to become payable. It appears that the plaintiffs, (exclusive of the plaintiffs who have withdrawn from the suit) had to pay on the 1st July 1922 a substantial sum; and in default of payment they were liable to pay the whole amount for all the three years (see notice Ex. 94). We also know that on the 12th June the Collector had told them that the orders were not likely to be modified. We also know that when the temporary injunction was refused on the 30th June, the Collector immediately proceeded to enforce the notices, with the result that the shop-keepers had either to pay the 1st instalment or to incur the risk of the liability to pay the whole amount at once. It is urged that after all it was a case of money payment, and plaintiffs could have waited for two months. It appears, however, that the waiting would have been more or less formal so far as the defendants were concerned, as it is clear from the conduct of the Revenue Authorities immediately after the temporary injunction was refused by the Trial Court that they were not going to reconsider the question. In a case of this kind where a class of persons is taxed heavily, as in this case, it would not be fair to treat the position as one of ordinary pecuniary liability of an individual only. I am satisfied that this is a case in which at the date of the suit a situation had arisen which was calculated to cause serious apprehension in the minds of the plaintiffs that irremediable damage might be caused to their business as dealers in saris, unless the enforcement of the orders were stopped at once. The remedy sought by way of injunction was appropriate and necessary to safeguard their interests under the circumstances. I think, that the suit is not open to the objection based on s. 80 of the O. P. C.

The other preliminary objections raised on behalf of the defendants may be briefly dealt with. It is urged that ss. 80 and 81 of the District Police Act are a bar to this suit. I do not think that this argument is sound. Section 80 is no application as this is not a suit of that character contemplated by s. 80 sub-s. (4). As regards s. 81 also it seems to me that it creates no bar to the present suit. The orders published by the Government do not require a particular class of persons to perform some duty or act or to conduct or order themselves in a particular manner. It is an order practically directing the Collector to recover the particular amounts from a class of persons. That does not appear to me to be an order to any particular class of persons (i. e., in this case the shop-keepers) to perform any duty or act or to conduct or order themselves in a particular manner. Besides it seems to me that s. 81 provides an additional remedy which the party concerned may follow but it does not bar a suit, which it may be otherwise open to the party to file.

It is further urged that the suit is barred by s. 4 cl. (f) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, as it is in effect a suit to set aside a cess or rate authorised by Government, under the provisions of the Bombay District Police Act. This clause cannot apply in terms to the order as to compensation amount as the Government is not empowered by s. 25 A of the Bombay District Police Act to levy any cess or rate and the section refers to cess or rate authorised by Government and not to cess or rate authorised by the District Magistrate with the previous sanction of the Commissioner. Apart from this ground it is clear that the provision cannot apply where the legality of the order of the Government is questioned. It would apply to a cess or rate which is authorised, that is, legally authorised by the Government. In the present case the legal basis for the action of Government is questioned, and I think that the suit is not barred by this clause even as regards the tax relating to the additional Police charges, provided it is established that the rate is not legal. Thus the objection would apply to the Police charges, if it be proved that the rate is legally authorised. It is necessary, therefore, to determine the merits of the objections as to the legality of the rate or tax.

As regards the merits it will be convenient to deal with the questions as to the additional Police, and the compensation money quite separately. The provisions of ss. 25 and 25-A, though similar in certain respects, are different in material particulars and in order to avoid confusion I shall deal with the two matters quite independently of each other.

As regards the additional Police, the authority of the Government is derived from ss. 25 and 26.

* * * *

The objections taken to the legality of the Government Notification of the 6th June, 1922 so far as it relates to the Police charge are these :—

(a) First that the Government having once decided to levy the Police charges from the male adult Momins of Malegaon, they could not alter the order and direct the whole of it to be levied from the shop-keepers.

(b) That the Government have no power under the section to make A pay for B, and that the order requiring the shop-keepers to pay on behalf of the Momins is illegal.

(c) That after the Municipality made a default in payment of the rate levied in the first instance the Government could direct the Collector to recover such rate or tax but the Government could not impose a new tax or a rate instead of the first rate or tax and ask the Collector to recover it directly without first calling upon the Municipality to pay the amount or assess the rate under sub s. (4) of s. 25.

(d) That the rate in question is not a rate on property ;

(e) That the powers are not exercised by the Government fairly but wantonly, arbitrarily and oppressively :

(f) And lastly that no retrospective operation could be given to the notification.

As regards the first objection it is true that the Government first ordered the additional Police for one year and ordered the charges to be levied by a tax imposed upon the male adult Momins of Malegaon. The Momins are weavers and form nearly three-fourths of the population of that town.

The second notification directed employment of the Police in effect for two years. As regards the second year's charges the objection would not apply. But that is not a sufficient answer to the objection. Under the section the Government have the power to give directions as to how the charges shall be recovered: and s. 21 of the General Clauses Act (Bombay Act I of 1904) provides that "Where by any Bombay Act, a power to issue notifications, orders..... is conferred, then that power includes a power, exerciseable in the like manner and subject to the like sanction and conditions (if any), to add to, amend, vary or rescind any notifications, orders..... so issued". If this section applies it affords a complete answer to the objection raised on behalf of the plaintiffs. The Act was passed long after the Bombay District Police Act of 1890, and unless it were clear that this provision applies to Acts already passed it would not help the defendants. The scheme of the Act is to distinguish between the provisions which are intended to apply to all Bombay Acts and those which are intended to apply to Bombay Acts made after the commencement of the Act. The use of the words "any Bombay Act" in s. 21 indicates that the section was intended to be of general application. Therefore, it was perfectly open to the Government to alter the first Notification if minded to do so.

The second objection is more difficult. It is clear that the Government have no power under the section to call upon A to pay for B as an agent of B. It is open to the Government under sub-s. (2) cl. (b) to charge any section or sections or class or classes of persons, and under the powers mentioned in s. 21 of the General Clauses Act it is open to them, to add, to amend or vary the first order on this point. But under the section the Government cannot call upon A to pay on behalf of B. The proposition as thus stated is not seriously contested by the learned Advocate-General. The plaintiffs' case rests upon the use of the words "on behalf of the Momins" in the notification and the facts disclosed in the correspondence commencing with 7th December, 1921 and ending with the notification of the 6th June, 1922, between the District Magistrate, the Commissioner and the Government. The notice issued by the Sub Divisional Magistrate refers to the new class of persons as agents of the Momins, and the evidence of the District Magistrate (Ex. 131) shows that the plaintiffs were regarded as the agents of the Momins. The use of expression "on behalf of the Momins" in the Government notification is consistent only with that view. If the matter rested there I think the objection would be good, as the plaintiffs or the shop keepers of Malegaon are in no sense the agents of Momins.

[90 I. C. 1925]

But the effect of the notification in law is clearly to impose a new tax on the shopkeepers. In the written statement this is made clear. I have already quoted that passage from the written statement and in my opinion, this paragraph has been justly criticised by the learned Counsel for the plaintiffs as involving a change of front on the part of the defendants. That, however, does not enable him to get over the difficulty of the notification. We have to consider the true legal effect of the notification; and taking its effect to be that a new tax or rate is imposed upon shopkeepers of Malegaon, it is within the powers of the Government, under the section. It is hardly reasonable to declare it to be illegal, when on that footing it is within the powers of the Government to impose the tax or rate which has been imposed. I am, therefore, unable to allow this objection as the effect of the notification is within the scope of the authority of the Government. It may be said that this view is subject to the criticism that it is practically allowing the Government to substitute a new notification for one which cannot be justified in its entirety. But so long as in substance it is a tax or rate on another class of persons living within the area concerned, it is within the legal authority of the Government and as the Government have sought to support it on that footing, I do not see how it can be declared to be illegal. I need hardly observe that the Court is not concerned with the propriety of the new tax or rate. We are concerned with its legality and that is the only point with which I am dealing. It is for the Government to consider its propriety as the Legislature has laid the obligation of determining the questions mentioned in that section upon that authority.

As regards the objection (c) it is clear that under sub-s. (4) the Government have to ask the Municipality of Malegaon to pay the amount and assess the tax or rate conformably to their orders. In the present case the Government asked the Municipality to recover the tax or rate levied in the first instance (Ex. 96). The Municipality was unable to recover it from the Momins and made a default in payment. The Government then reconsidered the position and imposed a tax or rate which was a new tax on a different section or class of inhabitants. If the Government were re-imposing the old tax or rate they would be justified in acting upon the default of the Municipality which had undoubtedly taken place. But if the tax is to be levied as a different tax or rate and not the old rate on the Momins the legality of the course adopted by the Government must be considered on that footing. It is clear under the proviso to s. 26, sub-s. (2), that the Government can ask the Collector to recover the tax or rate in respect of which the Municipality has made a default. And I think it was obligatory upon the Government to ask the Municipality under sub-s. (4) of s. 25 to recover this amount; but in the notification they acted upon the default already made by the Municipality. As a practical proposition it may be a correct view to take; and even legally it would be correct if the same tax or rate were to be levied. But in the present case the legality of the tax or rate can be established only on the footing of its being a different tax or rate on another section or class of the public of Malegaon; and the Municipality was not called upon to pay or to recover that tax. We have to consider the effect of this omission. I think that an obligatory provision in the Statute cannot be allowed to be ignored without adequate grounds. The effect of this omission on the legality of the levy by the Collector is a question of some difficulty. In the present case, it is clear, that the Municipality had been unable to do anything in the first instance; and the Municipality had in effect said so. I am not prepared to hold that though the tax or rate may be legal its recovery by the Collector is illegal under the circumstances. At least as regards the class of income-tax payers undoubtedly there was a default by the Municipality and to that extent the direction to the Collector is quite regular. And when it is partially legal, for the rest the direct reference to the Collector is in the nature of an irregularity, which cannot affect the legality of the tax.

The objection that it is not a rate on property as described by the Government in the notification has no substance in it. It does not matter to my mind whether it is a tax or rate on property. It is a tax determined on the footing of the extent of the business done during the previous years by the shop-keepers. It is in no way dependent upon their continuing the business during the period of the recovery of the rate: nor does it depend upon the extent of the business actively done during the period. Therefore, it is preferably a tax on the shop-keepers as a class of persons living in the Malegaon; but it is undoubtedly one of the other and the objection appears to be to be profitless.

The next objection is that this tax or rate on the shop-keepers is wanton, arbitrary, and oppressive. This objection can be more appropriately dealt with along with the similar objection as to compensation charges.

As to the last objection about the retrospective operation of the notification I doubt whether it is really retrospective for it is an order to recover during the period after the notification certain charges incurred and to be incurred. But whether retrospective or not in its operation it is clear that it is within the powers of the Government under s. 25 read with s. 21 of the General Clauses Act. I hold, therefore, that the notification so far as it relates to the Police charges is not illegal or ultra vires.

As regards the compensation charges the powers of the authorities are defined by s. 25-A which is as follows:—

* * * * *

The facts about the compensation money have been already stated. It is relevant to note that after the Commissioner passed his orders on the 16th and 17th August (Exs. 134 and 104), there is nothing to show that under s. 25-A, sub-s. (1), cl. (b), the District Magistrate asked the Collector to realise the amount as had been directed by the Commissioner. The District Magistrate does not appear to have been satisfied with the Commissioner's orders as to the method of realisation; and whether on that account or for any other reason he refrained from taking the step required by sub-s. (1), cl. (b). Then in December the District Magistrate started the correspondence again. Ultimately in March 1922 the District Magistrate re-opened the subject with the result that the Government issued the notification in question and then the Commissioner and the District Magistrate were all agreed as to how the amount was to be recovered. Then on the 12th June the District Magistrate took for the first time the step contemplated by sub-s. (1), cl. (b) and he wrote to the Collector to recover the amount in the manner indicated in his letter of the 12th June (Ex. 110). It is not obligatory to ask the Municipality to recover the amount under this section. It may also be observed that the authorities mentioned in the section are the District Magistrate and the Commissioner and not the Government.

The objections urged against the notification so far as it relates to this amount are these:—

(a) The District Magistrate having once decided the question and the Commissioner having passed his orders on revision the question as to who were liable to pay was finally settled and could not be re-opened.

(b) The Government have no power to interfere in this matter under s. 25-A.

(c) The direction that the money should be recovered from the "shop-keepers" on behalf of the Momins is illegal.

(d) That the powers are arbitrarily, wantonly and oppressively exercised by the District Magistrate and the Commissioner in so far as they make shop-keepers pay the whole amount, which is justly payable by the Momins.

(e) That no further inquiry was made as is contemplated by s. 25-A or as was suggested by the District Magistrate in his letter of 7th March 1922 before the plaintiffs were taxed.

As regards the first objection the Advocate-General has relied upon s. 21 of the Bombay General Clauses Act; but there is a difficulty in holding that s. 21 applies to orders made by the District Magistrate under s. 25-A, sub-s. (1). Sub-section (4) provides that every declaration, assessment, direction and order made by the District Magistrate under sub-s. (1) shall be subject to revision by the Commissioner but save as aforesaid shall be final. The express provision as to finality would apparently exclude the application of s. 21 of the Bombay General Clauses Act. It is difficult to reconcile this provision as to finality with the idea of his being able to vary it from time to time. The question whether the Commissioner can revise it from time to time is more difficult. Having regard to the nature of the powers conferred by the section, it has been argued that with the reference to the orders and the directions made under sub-s. (1) the Legislature intended finality and that the idea of revising the same from time to time is repugnant to the scheme and purpose of the section. I do not desire to decide this point, as in the view I take of the facts of the case on this point, it is not necessary to do so. Assuming, without deciding, that the declarations, orders, etc., made under sub-s. (1) with the previous sanction of the Commissioner would be final, and that the Commissioner could not revise the same from time to time thereafter, in the present case it is not shown that the District Magistrate passed any orders under sub-s. (1) cl. (b) requiring the Collector to recover the amount in any particular proportions from the inhabitants of the local area or from any defined class before he wrote the letter of the 12th June 1922 (Ex. 110). It is true that the Commissioner passed his orders on or before the 17th August 1921: but as apparently there was a difference between the District Magistrate and the Commissioner as to the class of persons from whom and the proportion in which the compensation money was to be recovered, the District Magistrate appears to have waited until he got an opportunity to re-open the matter on the 7th December. But finally the matter was taken up by his successor in March 1922, and as a result the Government and the Commissioner accepted the District Magistrate's proposals. Then with the sanction of the Commissioner for the first time the District Magistrate required the Collector to recover the amount on the new basis. Whether the District Magistrate was thus justified in waiting from August 1921 to June 1922 in taking action under cl. (b) is quite a different matter. In determining the legality of the present orders I am not concerned with the propriety of that attitude on the part of the District Magistrate. But the order of 12th June 1922 made with the sanction of the Commissioner and communicated to the Collector is the first order of its kind on the record. I may here refer to Ex. 150 which is a memo signed by the District Magistrate and Collector and addressed to the Mamlatdar asking him to realise the amounts to be recovered from the class of income-tax payers who were Momins.

It is to be remembered that the Commissioner had specified two classes of the Momins adults of Malegaon. As regards class I, there was no difference between the District Magistrate and the Commissioner. Though there is no letter by the District Magistrate asking the Collector to recover the amount payable by the income-tax payers under class I, this memo would indicate that without any formal compliance with the requirements of s. 25-A. (1) (b), the District Magistrate and Collector ordered the Mamlatdar to realise the amount or that this letter itself was a formal requisition in respect of this class of persons. At any rate the fact remains that as regards class II there was no letter from the District Magistrate to the Collector before 12th June 1922. As regards the class of income-tax payers the letter (Ex. 150) was the first intimation to the local officer at Malegaon to recover the amount payable by that class under the Commissioner's order dated 16th August 1921 (Ex. 134). There is no such intimation in the case of class II, as to which the correspondence had been started again by the District Magistrate by his letter of the 7th March 1922. As against this it may be urged that the letter of the 30th December 1921 addressed by the Commissioner to the Collector would not be appropriate unless the District Magistrate had already written to the Collector to recover the compensation. I do not think that such an inference can arise, as the letter relates to the Police charges also, with respect to which it is clear that no intimation could have been given to the Collector to realise the charges. It is true that s. 25-A makes a clear distinction between the District Magistrate and the Collector. In fact the same officer occupies two capacities. This circumstance at times tends to obscure the essential legal distinction in official correspondence. But on the present record it is a fair inference that until the 8th March 1922 no attempt whatever was made to recover the amount and that until 12th June the District Magistrate did not require the Collector to recover the amount as provided in s. 25-A (1) (b). This inference is consistent with and derives support from the wording of para. (4) of the memorandum of the District Magistrate (Ex. 108), in which he refers to the orders to be issued to the Collector for the recovery of the sums due.

Therefore, the final direction under sub-s. (1) (b) revised by the Commissioner as contemplated by sub-s. (4) is that given by Ex. 110 at least as regards class II of shop-keepers.

Apart from this consideration it is clear that when the Commissioner made his order of the 16th August, 1921, a reservation was made as to "such other inhabitants of the said town as may be hereafter notified". But as the new class of shop-keepers now notified is not in addition to the class of Momins but in the place of the law in substitution of class II of the adult male Muhammadan inhabitants other than income-tax payers as previously notified, it involves a substantial change: and its validity must depend upon the Commissioner's power to alter it. As the stage of finality contemplated by the provisions of sub-s. (4) was not reached, and as the subject was still open to the District Magistrate in consequence of his having made no requisition on the Collector under sub-s. (1) (b), it does not matter to my mind whether there was any such reservation in the Commissioner's order of the 16th August. This objection, therefore, fails.

As regards the second objection the section does not refer to the Government at all. The Commissioner was substituted for the Government in the section by Bombay Act III of 1915: and while the position that the District Magistrate and the Commissioner may consult the Government is intelligible, the Government has no authority under the section in the purely legal aspect of the question. The District Magistrate and the Commissioner are the authorities we are concerned with under s 25-A, and the legality of their action as such is to be considered.

As regards the third objection I would not repeat what I have said with reference to the same objection as to Police charges. The really effective document in this matter is not the Government notification, but the order that was communicated by the District Magistrate on the 12th June 1922 with the sanction of the Commissioner as disclosed in the correspondence. As I have already pointed out the order to make A pay for B would not be legal: but the simple order to make A pay would be legal. That is the effect of the order: and I take the same view, as in the case of Police charges, on this point. It does not matter whether A is able to recover it in any indirect form from B or not; nor does it matter whether ultimately A is able to recoup himself in trade by taxing the article in his dealings with any other persons. So far as the legality of the tax is concerned, in my opinion, it does not matter whether the intended economic adjustment takes place as between the persons taxed and those who deal with them in saris and yarn at all and if so, to what extent.

This brings me to the next objection that this tax or rate is wanton, arbitrary and oppressive and as such not legally recoverable. Sir Chimanlal Setalwad has relied upon the observations of West, J., in Nagar Valab Narasi v. Municipality of Dhandhuka (12) and generally upon the summary given in Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes under the heading "Construction to prevent abuse of powers" in Ch. IV, s. II (pages 226-34, 6th Edition.). It is necessary to bear in mind the basic principle of interference by Civil Courts in matters which are assigned primarily to the discretion of public authorities by the Legislature. Different Judges have expressed in different language what appears to me to be the same principle, the language being adapted to the requirements of the particular case. I shall quote a few passages as containing an enunciation of the principle which underlies the particular objection:

In Duke of Bedford v. Dawson (13) Sir George Jessel, M. R. (page 358*) observes:—"This means that when the words 'for the purpose', are used, that does not imply what the plaintiff or some body else may think the purpose, or what the Court may think is for the purpose, but it means what the public body entrusted with the power by the Legislature may in their honest and reasonable exercise of judgment think necessary for the purpose. They are to be the Judges, subject to this, that if they are manifestly abusing their powers, and purporting to use the land for a purpose for which manifestly it is not intended, the Court will say it is not a fair and honest judgment, and will not allow it. But subject to that limit they are the persons to decide." It may be stated in the words of Lord Esher, M. R. in R. v. Vestry of St. Pancras (14) (page 375*) "If people who have to exercise a public duty by exercising their discretion take into account matters which the Courts consider not to be proper for the guidance of their discretion, then in the eye of the law they have not exercised their discretion." In Sharp v. Wakefield (15), Lord Halsbury, L. C. observes as follows (page 179†):—"An extensive power is confided to the justices in their capacity as justices to be exercised judicially; and 'discretion' means when it is said that something is to be done within the discretion of the authorities that that something is to be done according to the rules of reason and justice, not according to private opinion: Rooke's case (16), according to law and not humour. It is to be, not arbitrary, vague, and fanciful, but legal and regular. And it must be exercised within the limit, to which an honest man competent to the discharge of his office ought to confine himself." I have selected these passages as indicating the range of the Court's powers to interfere with matters confided by the Legislature to public authorities.

(12) 12 B. 490; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 810.

(13) (1875) 20 Eq. 353; 41 L. J. Ch. 549; 33 L. T. 156.

*Page of (1875) 20 Eq.—[Ed.]

In dealing with this point we have to bear in mind the special purpose of s. 25-A, the extent of the powers given to the District Magistrate and the Commissioner for determining the amount and fixing the proportion in which it may be recovered from different classes and the manner of recovering it, and the wide discretion given to them to meet the exigencies in a disturbed area. This is equally true of the powers conferred upon the Government under s. 25 also. On the other hand we have the fact that a large sum of nearly 5,00,000 (in round figures) on account of compensation, and if we include about Rs. 93,000 for the Police charges for two years nearly six lacs were to be recovered. It was the view of the public authorities at least of the Commissioner and the Government in 1921, that the inhabitants of this area responsible for the amount were the Momins and they were proposed to be taxed then in two ways: income-tax payers to pay on certain scale and the adult male Momins to pay equally, provided

(14) (1390) 24 Q. B. D. 371; 51 L. J. Q. B. 211; 62 L. T. 440; 38 W. R. 311; 54 J. P. 339.

(15) (1891) A. C. 173; 60 L. J. M. O. 73; 61 L. T. 180; 30 W. R. 551; 55 J. P. 197.

(16) 5b Co. Rep. 93 at p. 103a; 773 R. 203.

*Page of (1811) 24 Q. B. D.—[Ed.]

†Page of (1801) A. C.—[Ed.]

that a Momin having more looms than one was to count as an extra unit for each loom in excess of one. Apparently there was difficulty felt by the Municipality in realising even the amount of about Rs. 50,000 (fifty thousand), which was then the only charge under s. 25, and apparently no effort was made to recover the bigger sum of compensation, under s. 25-A. When this difficulty was realised the authorities on a re-consideration taxed the inhabitants in a different way within the limits prescribed by law as now found. The class of income-tax payers kept exactly the same: but for class of adult male Momins a comparatively small class of shop-keepers was substituted and they were required to make up the whole of the balance of both the charges in three years. This class consisted of Momins and non-Momins. In effect about a hundred shop-keepers were called upon to pay nearly six lacs of rupees in three years: and if we exclude Rs. 38,000 the total amount payable by the class of income-tax payers according to the figures supplied by the learned Advocate General, the balance payable by the shop-keepers would be, nearly, 5,60,000.

Out of 102 shop-keepers 48 are Hindu shop-keepers and their total liability compared to the total liability of the Muhammadan shop-keepers would be roughly in the ratio of 17 to 7 that is the Hindu shop-keepers would have to pay nearly 3,96,000 and the Muhammadan shop-keepers would have to pay about 1,64,000. I have taken this ratio from the figures given by the Advocate-General, according to which out of a total of Rs. 2,37,000 and odd the Hindu shop-keepers (48 in number) would have to pay Rs. 1,68,000 and odd and the Muhammadan shop-keepers would have to pay Rs. 68,000 and odd which works out roughly the ratio of 17 to 7. Both the ratio and the figures are rough and intended only to indicate broadly the effect of the orders passed in June 1922. In a population of about twenty-five thousand persons only about 100 people are selected to pay up such a heavy amount. The Momins generally, who according to the authorities even now are responsible but from whom it is either inconvenient or impossible to recover the amount, are to be left practically exempt so far as the direct taxation is concerned. They will have to pay indirectly to some uncertain extent if they are effectively taxed through the medium of the saris. It is also pointed out that this class of shop-keepers is determined without any special inquiry with the result that the list includes according to the appellants three or four persons and according to both sides one person in whose (favour) an order for compensation has been in fact made. This has been stated on a comparison of the lists Exts. 164 and 166. In view of these facts it is urged for the appellants that the tax is wanton, arbitrary and oppressive. On the other hand we have the fact that the amounts are to be levied from the inhabitants of Malegaon. An attempt to recover it from the adult male Momins had failed in the case of Police charges and for the compensation money such an attempt was not or could not be made. The levy was of an emergent nature and for nearly one year nothing could be done. The Government and the authorities had to decide upon the best method of recovering it under difficult and somewhat baffling circumstances. They acted upon a basis which is intelligible. I have referred to these facts as representing the other side of the question. But we have to consider only whether there is any sufficient ground to hold that their judgment is so unreasonable under the circumstances as to make it practically not a valid decision under the sections, or, in the words used in Duke of Bedford v. Dawson (13) whether it amounts to a manifest abuse of the powers conferred upon the authorities. I am of opinion that no manifest abuse of power by the authorities is made out; nor can I say that they have taken into consideration any matter which it was not legally proper for them to consider. To adopt the words of the argument urged on behalf of the appellants I am unable to hold this tax to be wanton or arbitrary. There is a method in the taxation which is intelligible and according to the opinions of the authorities, the adult male Momins will be taxed indirectly. As regards its being oppressive it must be remembered that there is a certain degree of hardship in such punitive taxation in a disturbed area, which may be treated almost as a normal incident of it. We need not take that into account. There is no doubt a certain degree of extra hardship, and in my opinion a real hardship, in such taxation when only a small group is selected to make up such a large amount. But what we have to consider is whether its operation is calculated to be oppressive so as to render it liable to be set aside. On the materials on this record I am unable to hold that it could be justly described as oppressive in that sense. In my opinion the evidence led on behalf of the plaintiffs to prove that this has dislocated the business of some shop-keepers is not satisfactory and I hold that the allegation is not proved. But the nature of the tax still has to be considered with references to its probable effect upon those who are taxed. It is clear that the nature of the tax is certain in its operation as regards the shop-keepers and very uncertain in its operation as regards its ultimate adjustment among the dealers with the shop-keepers. After all it is a point in favour of the appellants that the class of shop-keepers is taxed more because the amount cannot be recovered from the adult male Momins than because the shop-keepers are themselves primarily liable. It is clear, however, that the orders represent an honest effort on the part of the authorities to arrive at the best working method of recovering the amounts leviable under the two sections, and they have proceeded with calculation and consideration in dealing with a difficult situation. I am, therefore, unable to accept the contention that these orders of the authorities are illegal on the ground of their being wanton, arbitrary and oppressive. I must say that I have found this point more difficult than the other questions of law in the case. It is difficult to draw the line beyond which Civil Courts cannot examine this question. We have not to consider whether this is a proper and just mode of taxing the inhabitants or any class of inhabitants within the area. It is for the District Magistrate with the previous sanction of the Commissioner to require the Collector under s. 25-A (1) (b) to recover the amount so determined in such proportions as he may, with the like sanction, draw from all inhabitants of the area declared under sub-s. (1) cl. (a) (ii) or from any section or sections or class or classes of such persons and it is for the Government to determine the same questions under s. 25 as to Police charges. A Civil Court can interfere only when the discretion is exercised in such a manner as to enable the Court to say that it is not an exercise of the discretion within the meaning of these sections. I am unable to hold that the discretion is exercised in that manner in this case. Beyond this I express no opinion either as to the justice or the propriety of the direction given by the District Magistrate under s. 25-A (1) (b) or by the Government under s. 25, sub-s. (2).

As to the mistake of including a person or persons in whose favour compensation is allowed, I have no doubt it can be and will be corrected by the Commissioner under s. 25-A (2). In dealing with a large number of persons a casual mistake of this kind is apt to occur; and it cannot be accepted as a ground for holding that the discretion is not validly exercised.

As regards the omission to make any inquiry it may be pointed out that s. 25-A does not provide for any inquiry as to orders under s. 25-A (1) (b). The words "after such inquiry as he deems necessary" are to be found in sub-s. (1) cl. (a) and do not govern cl. (b). There is no legal basis for this contention. The District Magistrate referred in his letter of the 7th March 1922 to some kind of inquiry as regards the Hindus; and the Government in their letter of the 5th April required the District Magistrate to make such inquiry. No such inquiry has been made. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate made inquiry as to the extent of the business done by each shop-keeper. I agree with the view of the Trial Court that this inquiry was fair, though it is possible that in such rough and ready calculation of the extent of the business some mistakes might have crept in. But the Sub-Divisional Magistrate Mr. Hulyal says in his evidence (Ex. 135, para. 9) that he made no other inquiry. Thus in point of fact even the inquiry suggested by the District Magistrate was not made. But as there is no legal obligation for making such an inquiry, I cannot attach any real importance to this omission. I cannot agree that the omission to hold an inquiry which was only departmentally arranged, is sufficient to vitiate the direction given by him under s. 25-A (1) (b). The provisions of s. 79 of the District Police Act would condone such an irregularity in procedure.

Lastly, I may mention that the point that it is not a rate on property was raised with reference to this part of the case also.

But the point has been already dealt with; and I doubt whether it can apply to the compensation charges. Clause (b) of s. 25-A (1) is silent on this point. It does not refer to tax or rate assessed on property as sub-s. (2) of s. 25 does.

It is not suggested before us on behalf of the appellants that it was obligatory upon the District Magistrate to require the Municipality to assess and recover the amount of compensation under sub s. (1), cl. (c); and I do not see how it could be suggested in view of the wording of that clause.

I may mention that a notification issued in May 1923 was referred to in the argument. It reduces the police charges to some extent, and imposes the additional Police for the third year. In other respects it proceeds on the same lines as the notification in question, and does not affect the decision in this suit.

The result is that the appeal fails.

As to costs, though it may be said that the wording of the notification affords a basis for the suit, I do not think that there is any good ground to depart from the usual rule that the costs must follow the event.

I would confirm the decree of the lower Court with costs.

Kemp, J.—[After setting out the facts His Lordship proceeded:—] The first point raised is the question of notice under s. 80 of the C. P. C., (Act V of 1908). The suit here is against two defendants, the Secretary of State and the District Magistrate and Collector. So far as the Secretary of State is concerned the words of the section are clear. No suit may be instituted against him until the expiration of the two months' notice required by the section. The terms of the section are imperative and make no exception in the case of suits for an injunction and I do not consider that a Court of Law is entitled to graft on to the plain wording of the section a qualifying clause excepting suits for an injunction—a kind of relief which must have been in the contemplation of the framers of the Code when the section was drafted and re-drafted. Nor does it to my mind make any difference that the injury apprehended is immediate or irreparable. On this point I entirely agree with the judgment of Sadasiva Ayyar, J. in Secretary of State v. Kalekhan (6).

The case of a public officer requires a little more consideration. The Secretary of State acts through his subordinates and an injunction against his subordinate can afford sufficient relief. The words of the section restrict in the public officer's case the necessity of the notice to a suit for an act purporting to be done by him in his official capacity. The appellants contend that there was no such act by the District Magistrate or Collector but merely a threatened act. They say that at the date of the suit the District Magistrate had rejected their petition (Ex. 111) to him and that what they are suing him for is to prevent him carrying on in his capacity as District Magistrate the order (Ex. 110) to the Collector to carry out the Government Notification No. 152 of 6th June 1922 and in his capacity as Collector the notices (Ex. 94) to the separate shop-keepers demanding the amounts at which they had been assessed under the same Government notification. They say the suit is in respect of something the 2nd respondent is going to do not in respect of something he has done. It is not in respect of the order Ex. 110 or the notices Ex. 94 but in respect of the further acts threatened under them. Paragraph 10 of the plaint states the appellants' grievance on this point and prayer (b) of the plaint prays that both the defendants may be restrained from making the recoveries which were demanded by the Collector (purporting to act pursuant to Government Notification No. 152 of 6th June 1922 in Ex. 94). In my opinion, therefore, no notice is necessary so far as the suit is one for an injunction against the 2nd defendant in respect of the amount of compensation mentioned in prayer (b) of the plaint.

I think, however, in so far as the suit is for the declaration in prayer (a) so far as it relates to the compensation which is imposed under s. 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act, 1890, by the District Magistrate with the previous sanction and subject to revision by the Commissioner, the suit is one in respect of an act purporting to be done by the District Magistrate and Collector in his official capacity. The act purporting to be done in the case is, as regards this particular relief, the passing of Ex. 110 and the notices Ex. 94. So far, therefore, as this relief is concerned notice under s. 80 of the C. P. C. is necessary.

The case of Flower v. Local Board of Low Layton (9) cannot be relied upon in considering the question of notice to the Secretary of State as the wording of s. 80, C. P. C., is, so far as the Secretary of State is concerned, entirely different to the wording of the particular Statute in that case.

I think that those decisions of the Bombay High Court which have been cited in the argument and which hold that where the damage threatened is immediate or irreparable, no notice is necessary either in the case of the Secretary of State or of any public officer in respect of an act purporting to be done by such public officer in his official capacity can be explained on the recognition of the application of equitable principles to the case of an act operating harshly or in a manner in which it was not intended to operate. Assuming that such equitable considerations could be admitted to override the plain words of s. 80 where the Secretary of State is sued, I am of opinion, for the reasons given hereafter, that the present is not a case of irreparable damage.

The respondents contend that the suit does not lie by virtue of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4 (f) which provides that no Civil Court shall exercise jurisdiction as to certain matters one of which in cl. (f) is claims against Government to set aside any cess or rate authorised by Government under the provisions of any law for the time being in force. The appellants say that this is not a cess and that in so far as it is, if at all, a rate it is, as regards the order for compensation under s. 25-A of the District Police Act (Bom. Act IV of 1890) an order which it is only competent for the District Magistrate with the previous consent of the Commissioner to pass and not one that can be authorised by Government. They also say that the Act does not apply where an order is wholly illegal or ultra vires. [See Maganchand v. Vithalrao (17) and Gangaram v. Dinkar Ganesh (18)]. They further say that under s. 5 (a) of Act X of 1876 where they contest the liability altogether the Court may entertain the suit. To understand this last argument it must be mentioned that Government Notification Ex. 94 of 6th June 1922 makes these charges under it recoverable as an arrears of land revenue under s. 26 (2) of Bombay Act IV of 1890; and by s. 3 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), the definition of "land revenue" would cover such charges.

I think in so far as the objection that the compensation must be imposed by the

(17) 17 Ind. Cas. 148; 37 B. 37; 14 Bom. L. R. 793.

(18) 20 Ind. Cas. 526; 37 B. 542; 15 Bom. L. R. 665.

District Magistrate with the previous consent of the Commissioner under s. 25-A of Act (IV of 1890) is concerned, Exs. Nos. 107, 108, 109, 90 and 110 and the Government Notification No. 152 (Ex. No. 99) show that even if Government notified the charge by Government Notification No. 152 the District Magistrate was the originator of the proposal and adopted the terms of the Government notification in his letter to the Collector Ex. 110, dated 12th June 1922 under the terms of s. 25-A (b). Any defect there may have been in this procedure was, in my opinion, cured by the provisions of s. 79 of Bombay Act IV of 1890. The proposal for the recovery of the compensation emanated from the District Magistrate was ultimately approved by the Commissioner and notified by Government.

It seems, however, on the decided cases in this Court that there is more substance in appellants' contention that the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876), s. 4, does not stand in the way of a suit in respect, of a wholly illegal and unauthorized cess or rate purporting to be authorized by Government or a public officer [See Maganchand v. Vithalrao (17), Gangaram v. Dinkar (18)]. The validity of the respondents' objection on this point would, therefore, depend on the illegality of the Government Notification No. 152.

As, however, appellants contend they are not the persons liable to pay the charges on the ground that they are not the persons responsible for the riot the Court has, under s. 5 (a) of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act, jurisdiction to entertain this suit. Nor can the respondents' objection apply to the compensation which is imposed by the Commissioner and the District Magistrate under s. 25-A of the Bombay District Police Act, 1890 and not by Government.

Then the respondents contend that the suit is barred for want of notice under s. 80 (4) of Bombay Act IV of 1890. Section 80, however, seems to refer to suits for damages against a Commissioner, Magistrate or Police Officer, and as this is not a suit of such a character, cl. (4) of s. 80 would not apply.

Nor does s. 81 of the same Act bar this suit. That section refers to orders of the nature of those mentioned in s. 38 of the same Act. The Advocate-General was constrained to admit that s. 81 had no application to the present case. Moreover, the order as to compensation has to be made by the District Magistrate under s. 25-A of Bombay Act IV of 1890 and not by Government.

The respondents' next contention is that the District Magistrate's order under s. 25-A (1) of Bombay Act IV of 1890 is final under cl. (4) of that section, i. e., it cannot be questioned by a Civil Court. The appellants say it can, and further, that the District Magistrate having once made his order under s. 25-A, cannot review it by passing a fresh order under Government Notification No. 152, dated 6th June 1922 (Ex. 99). The order, too, says, the District Magistrate first made his order under the Commissioner's order on 25th August 1921 (Ex. 134). Now it will be seen that the scheme of s. 25-A of Bombay Act IV of 1890 is that the District Magistrate can make orders with the previous sanction of, and subject to revision by, the Commissioner. With these qualifications the District Magistrate's order is to be final. The Commissioner is the reviewing authority. Now what were the facts here? On 16th August 1921 the Commissioner passed his order Ex. 134 and the appellants say that the District Magistrate must have given effect to it by passing an order under s. 25-A in accordance with its terms. I may point out, incidentally, that there is no such order of the District Magistrate on the record. Exhibit 146 dated 30th December 1921 which has been relied on, is 4 months later, and in any case is no such order. Exhibit 150 dated 8th March 1922 is still later and refers to the Muhammadan income-tax payers whose liability is continued in the Government Notification No. 152, dated 6th June 1922 (Ex. 99). Assuming, however, he made such an order, could the District Magistrate legally pass the fresh order of 12th June 1922 (Ex. 110) in review of the first order? I think with the previous sanction of the Commissioner and subject again to revision by him the District Magistrate may. In effect, he obtains the revision of the reviewing authority. That the District Magistrate's order, Ex. 110 was approved by the Commissioner is clear because the latter passed the District Magistrate's proposals on to Government and signified his agreement with them in his letters Ex. 107, dated 9th March 1922, and Ex. 147, dated 14th January 1922. The review of the first order was clearly, therefore, by the authority having power to review. Indeed, I am not at all certain that under the General Clauses Act (Bom. Act I of 1904), s. 21 the District Magistrate himself may not review his first order subject to the prior assent of and revision by the Commissioner. That it had such assent, I have already pointed out, is clear from Ex. 107, dated 9th March 1922, and, Ex. 147, dated 14th January 1922. Further, I wish to point out that although the Commissioner by his order, dated 16th August 1921 (Ex. 107), specifically provided for other inhabitants of the town being assessed for compensation by any subsequent order that might be passed, if it be contended he substituted another class of persons, the District Magistrate passed no orders on Ex. 134.

I see nothing in the scheme of s. 25-A to suggest that no fresh order can be passed by the District Magistrate in accordance with a revision of his first order by the Commissioner. It might lead to unfortunate results to adopt such a construction because the Commissioner and District Magistrate would be unable to correct any order passed under s. 25-A on a misapprehension of the true facts or by mistake. To understand the way in which the word "final" is used by the Legislature, it is permissible, though with caution, to look at other instances in which the Legislature has used the word. In s. 629 of the C. P. C. of 1882 an order made under that section was described as "final" i. e., non-appealable. The new C. P. C., of 1908, O. XLVII, r. 7, substituted the word "shall not be appealable" for the word "final." This was merely a verbal alteration and shows the Legislature meant to exclude any appeal from the order. See also the use of the word in the Court Fees Act (VII of 1870) s. 5 and the case of Balkaran Rai v. Gobind Nath Tiwari (19); and in the Public Demands Recovery Act (Ben. Act I of 1895) s. 19, sub-s. (4) and the case of Matangini v. Girish Chunder (20). A similar meaning is given to the use of the word "final" in s. 13 of the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act (X of 1876); and to the word "determinative" in s. 121 of the Land Revenue Code (Bom. Act V of 1879). [Bai Ujam v. Valiji Rasulbhai (21)]. But if we limit the scope of the discussion to the Bombay District Police Act (Bom. Act IV of 1890), s. 25-A alone—and the case of the Bank of England v. Vagliano (22) lays down that the particular Statute should be considered with reference to its language—I see nothing in that section or in the Act to suggest the word "final" means the District Magistrate can only make his order under that section once and for all. To adopt this construction would limit the power of the Commissioner to exercise of a single revision and the words of this clause do not justify this. In Stroud's Judicial Dictionary, Second Edition, the word 'final' is defined thus:—"Where a Statute provides that a specified determination shall be 'final,' e.g., the decision of a Poor Law Auditor qua an untaxed Solicitor's Bill, s. 39, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101—it is not open to review even though the Court does not see the reasonableness of the provision." It might easily be that facts might come to the notice of the District Magistrate after passing an order under s. 25-A which would require it to be reviewed by a fresh order. The scheme of the section is to make the Commissioner and not the Court the reviewing authority. Clause (5) of the same section specifically excludes a suit in respect of loss or injury for which compensation has been granted under the section. I think this shows that the jurisdiction of the Courts was intended to be excluded. The order of the District Magistrate, Ex. 110, dated 12th June 1922, under s. 25-A not having been revised by the Commissioner is, therefore, as regards the recovery of compensation final and cannot be reviewed by the Court.

Then, the appellants contend that Government having once declared by Government Notifications 6423 (Ex. 96) and 6801 (Ex. 97) who were responsible for the riots and, therefore, to pay the additional Police charges and the Commissioner by Ex. 134 having decided who was to pay compensation under s. 25-A no fresh order under Government Notification No. 152, Ex. 99, could be passed. In other words, that the powers given, once exercised, were exhausted. Moreover, they say that it was not open to the Commissioner in Ex. 134 to make a reservation for others to be brought in afterwards as liable to compensation. As regards this it will be noted that both with regard to the additional Police charges (19) 12 A. 129; A. W. N. (1890) 39; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 831 (F. B.).

(20) 30 C. 619; 7 C. W. N. 433.

(21) 10 B. 456; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 692.

(22) (1891) A. C. 107; 60 L. J. Q. B. 145; 64 L. T. 353; 39 W. R. 657; 55 J. P. 676.

and the compensation the right to include others is reserved (see Ex. 96 and 134). I see nothing wrong in this. As to the power once exercised being exhausted it seems to me that the case is covered by s. 21 of the General Clauses Act (Bom. Act I of 1904). The finality provided for an order under s. 25-A, cl. (4) of Bombay Act IV of 1890 means, in my opinion, to give a final effect to the ultimate order that the District Magistrate with the previous assent of the Commissioner may, subject to revision by the Commissioner, or in accordance with any such revision pass. Clause (4) is not, in my opinion, intended to exclude the powers which by s. 21 of Bombay Act I of 1904 are included in a power to issue an order.

The next objection raised by the appellants is that when the Government Notification No. 152 Ex. 92 was passed it lay on the Municipality in the first instance under s. 25, cl. (4), of Bombay Act IV of 1890 to attempt to recover the tax and rate for the additional Police. Whatever obligation there may have been on Government or the District Magistrate [I note that it has not been contended that the District Magistrate's "discretion" in s. 25-A (1) (c) is only for one of the two alternatives of a tax or a rate] to use the Municipality in the first instance as the collecting agency, it is clear from the correspondence that the Municipality were afforded an opportunity to recover the cost of additional Police and were utterly unable to collect it. Government were, therefore, justified in directing the Collector under s. 26 (1) proviso to recover it. There was no point in directing the Municipality again to recover the charges after the fresh Government Notification No. 152 (Ex. 99) when it was clear the same circumstances existed then as prevailed when the Municipality attempted to recover the cost of additional Police after the Government Notification No. 6801 (Ex. 97) of 11th July 1921. On 19th July 1921 the District Magistrate wrote to the President of the Municipality asking the Municipality to raise the cost of the additional Police by a rate on the male adult Muhammadans of Malegaon. The Municipality appears to have made every effort to do so but without success. The failure of their attempt is recorded in the President of the Municipality's letter of 1st December 1921 (Ex. 105), and the Collector himself recognized that the Municipality was powerless in the matter. Any attempt to raise the money by indirect taxation of the Momins through the shop-keepers must have met with the same fate. Nor am I satisfied that any liability there may have been in this respect is not covered by s. 79 of Bombay Act IV of 1890. Moreover, the Municipality has neither paid the charge from the Municipal fund nor assessed the rate under s. 25, cl. (4) of Bombay Act IV of 1890. The obligation is on them to do so and there has, therefore, been a default in recovery under s. 26 (1) proviso of the Act. The force of this argument might, however, be affected by the fact that although the Municipality had notice of Government Notification No. 152 of 6th June 1922, that Government Notification requires the compensation to be recovered by the Collector. The objection cannot affect the validity of the Government Notification No. 152 (Ex. 99 itself).

Again, the appellants urge that the rate under Government Notification No. 152 of 6th June 1922 levied on the purchases of saris and sales of yarn by the shop-keepers was not a rate on property. In this connection it is to be noted that s. 25-A does not require the rate for the compensation to be assessed on property although the word "rate" would seem to imply the ownership of property. The point, however, is immaterial as if the charge for additional Police is not a rate on property, it is a tax, however it may be described and is, therefore, within the powers of Government to levy under s. 25. Any objection to the form of this Government Notification is, in my opinion, cured by s. 79 of Bombay Act IV of 1890.

A further point has been raised by the appellants that there was no summary enquiry as required by s. 25-A of Bombay Act IV of 1890. This refers to the compensation. But it appears that on 21st April 1922 the District Magistrate by Ex. 108 directed the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to make the summary enquiry. Such an enquiry was held. It was such an enquiry as the District Magistrate "deemed necessary" and there was no obligation on him, that I can see, to repeat it after the Government Notification No. 152 of 6th June 1922.

We now come to the appellants' main contention. Shortly put, it may be illustrated by the proposition that Government cannot tax A to recover a tax or charge due by B. Appellants say that the real offenders responsible for the riots were the Momin weavers of Malegaon and that Government so regarded them and have merely taxed the Muhammadan and Hindu shop-keepers referred to in order to make them a collecting agency for the amounts the Momins refused to pay. I think the correspondence shows clearly the charges could not be recovered from the Momins. It is unnecessary to refer in detail to the letters on this point. Exhibit 105, dated 1st December 1921 from the President of the Municipality to the Collector clearly states the reasons for the cost of additional Police cannot be recovered from the Momins. Obviously, an attempt to recover the compensation charges from the Momins would have been equally futile. Government Notification No. 152 of 6th June 1922 speaks of recovering the balance of the charges from the shop-keepers "on behalf of the Momin adult weavers". Exhibit 106 dated 7th March 1922 calls the shop-keepers "agents for collection". But in para. 6 of the written statement defendants plead they intended to recover the charges from the shop-keepers in their own individual capacity as being primarily responsible and not as agents for the weavers. Certainly Government and the District Magistrate apparently considered it would be a good thing to punish the weavers but I think Government also acquiesced in the suggestion to tax the shop-keepers because the District Magistrate in his letters of 7th December 1921 (Ex. A), 15th December 1921 (Ex. B) and 7th March 1922 (Ex. 106) considered the shop-keepers had fostered the movement which led to the disturbances and should, therefore, participate in the collection of the charges imposed. It is not, therefore, a case of taxing an innocent party A for a guilty party B but a case of recovering the charges for which both A and B were answerable by making A recover B's share of the charges. If Government thought, rightly or wrongly, that they could recover the charges to be imposed on both the shop-keepers and Momins by recovering them from the shop-keepers leaving them to recover wholly or in part from Momins that surely was a case of leaving the parties responsible to decide between themselves how they should apportion the payment. The Court is not concerned with whether Government have judged correctly the party who should pay, provided Government has exercised its judgment on the point. That is a matter left to Government under s. 25 and to the District Magistrate, with the previous sanction and subject to revision by the Commissioner under s. 25-A. Section 25-A was not, I think, intended to permit the Court to enquire into the question of who were the persons really responsible for an outbreak of this sort. There seem ample grounds for holding that the shop-keepers were not the innocent persons they profess they were. The majority of them are Muhammadans and as the persons to whom the Momins sold saris and from whom the Momins bought yarn were in a position to have exercised control over them. The contention that they were coerced into subscribing to Khilafat Funds and ranging themselves on the side of those actively assisting in fomenting discontent in Malegaon is theoretically untenable, whatever may have been the real facts, because theoretically there was always the protection of the law to fall back upon, and if the authorities were tolerant of the activities of the fomentors of trouble in Malegaon that was no reason for the shop-keepers to lend their influence to the forces of disorder and discontent in the town. I am unable, therefore, to hold that the imposition of these charges on the shop-keepers was tyrannical, oppressive or arbitrary. If the appellants had come before this Court as admittedly innocent parties the position might have been different.

I have held that Government had power to make the Government Notification No. 152 of 6th June 1922, at any rate as regards the charges for additional Police, and that the District Magistrate may be considered under the circumstances as having passed the order for compensation under s. 25-A. The order in the Government Notification to recover the compensation was made at the direct request of the District Magistrate and with the consent of the Commissioner (see Exs. 109 dated 21st April, 1922, 147, dated 14th January 1922 and A, dated 7th December 1921). The Collector, who in this connection is also the District Magistrate, was also responsible for the suggestion to lump the two charges together (Ex. 147), dated 14th January 1922 and Ex. B dated 14th December 1921). The District Magistrate on 12th June 1922 (Ex. 10) subsequently asked the Collector to carry out the Government Notification of 6th June 1922. Both impositions were, therefore, according to law and I fail to see how the lumping of the two sums for the purposes of recovery into one—which after all is a defect that could in any case be cured by s. 79—is a breach of the terms of cl. (1) (b) of s. 25-A. The convenience of the procedure adopted speaks for itself.

Therefore, I think, the orders passed were not illegal or ultra vires. This really disposes of the appeal.

We may, however, consider whether the injury threatened by defendants was irreparable. Here, I wish to observe that the appellants all had an opportunity of objecting to the manner in which they have been assessed. Section 25-A (2) gives any person aggrieved the right to apply to the Commissioner for exemption. Admittedly, none of the appellants availed themselves of this right. They preferred to come to the Courts. Appellants complain that the effect of collecting these charges has been to compel many shop-keepers to close their businesses and will drive others to do the same. I will review the oral evidence on this point. Champalal, the 4th plaintiff and the manager of the shop of Rangildas Devchand, says his shop has been assessed at 90,000 saris and he has stopped purchasing saris since the Sub-Divisional Magistrate served the notice dated 21st April 1922 (Exs. 89-91) on him. He also says other firms have also stopped purchasing saris. He does not say whether this was by way of passive resistance or inability or reluctance to recover the tax from the Momins. We are asked to infer his business has been ruined. It appears from his evidence that from 1st July 1921 to 30th June 1922 his shop purchased 27,103 saris. He has been assessed in 90,000 saris. It appears that he did not care to attend even under protest before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to assist in calculating the amount at which he should, if liable at all, be charged. If he has been over-assessed it looks to me that, having the opportunity of going to the Commissioner and appearing before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate he preferred to cease purchasing saris. As to the amount at which he has been assessed I cannot see that under the circumstances I can now listen sympathetically to his complaint. The next witness Bhika Dugdu, apparently the 25th plaintiff, of the firm of Bajirao Ramchandra was assessed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate at 5,000 saris. He says he purchased on 798 saris between 1st July 1921 to 5th September 1921. He was arrested for not paying the amount claimed from him and committed to the civil Jail. It appears that the shop of Bajirao his master was going on and making purchases of saris. The witness says that he stopped when the suit was filed. The next witness is Lala Tarachand, the muni of the firm of Lalchand Lakmi and is apparently the 39th appellant. He says that his business in saris stopped after the imposition of punitive charges. He appeared before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate and says he told him that only 13,558 saris had been purchased whilst he has been assessed in 25,000 saris. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate has given evidence showing how he arrived at the calculation of the amount due from such shop-keepers. He swears that the shop-keepers are making the collection of the cess and that since 21st April 1922 no new merchant has come to Malegaon to trade in saris and yarns.

On this evidence, the distress and general imminent stoppage of business alleged by the appellants sinks to insignificant proportions. Only 3 witnesses for the appellants swear to stopping their own businesses. One of them, Bhikoba Dagdu, admits that his master's business is still going on and making purchases of saris. Nor does any of these witnesses swear that his business was stopped as it was ruinous to carry it on any longer. They merely swear they have stopped business. I am not at all satisfied on this evidence that the stoppage of these three businesses is unconnected with the desire to defeat the recoveries which the authorities are attempting to make. Champalal says other firms have stopped purchasing saris but none of the representatives of the other firms has been called to give evidence; which is surprising. Nor has a single witness been called to prove that new firms have ousted the old ones in consequence of the action taken by the District Magistrate and Collector. In fact, this complaint of oppression and injustice appears to me, on investigating the evidence, to be without foundation. No irremediable damage appears to have threatened or done. In my opinion, the suit was properly dismissed and I would confirm the order of the lower Court and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 327-B OF 1923.

April, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Ankhedde, A. J. C.

SITARAM—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

HIMATRAO—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1859), s. 35—Perepatraks, value of—Admissibility.

The very underlying idea of preparing Perepatraks is to know year by year how much land has been under crop and how much left fallow, with a view to know the actual state of cultivation in each village.

Perepatraks are, therefore, admissible in evidence for the purpose of ascertaining the area under crop.

Appeal against the decree of the Additional District Judge, Amraoti, dated the 9th July 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 7 of 1923.

Dr. H. S. Gour and Mr. M. B. Niyogi, for the Appellant.

Messrs. G. L. Subhedar and D. T. Mangalmurti, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The First Court had dismissed the plaintiff's claim for possession of 3 gunthas of land out of S. No. 217, Pot Hissa No. 1, area 1-32-G. of M. Ganori and for mesne profits. The lower Appellate Court has decreed the claim. Hence this second appeal by the defendant.

The decree is challenged on the ground that it is not based on evidence proper for consideration. The lower Appellate Court has found that plaintiff has shown that he is owner of 7A-31-G. of land and that he was in possession of it till 1914 or thereabout, and that the defendant has failed to prove the contrary.

Attempt is made to show that in arriving at this finding the lower Appellate Court has taken an erroneous view of the evidence on record and it is also said that what is regarded as evidence is no evidence. I have gone through the evidence both oral and documentary and I am satisfied that the finding is well-supported by evidence proper for consideration. Exhibits P-3 and P-4 which are Perepatraks are sought to be discredited on the ground that it is not the duty of the patwari to specify the area under crops in them. No authority is shown to me in support of this contention. On the contrary I would consider that the very underlying idea of preparing Perepatraks is to know year by year how much land has been under crop and how much left fallow, with a view to know the actual state of cultivation in each village.

The oral evidence which has been discarded by the lower Appellate Court is being pressed against the finding and it is contended that the oral evidence does not justify it. I am not at all prepared to disturb the finding arrived at by the lower Appellate Court after fully considering the legally admissible evidence on record.

On the whole the conclusion arrived at by the lower Appellate Court is correct and I uphold the same. The appeal stands dismissed with costs. The costs in the lower Courts will be paid as already ordered.

K. S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 152 OF 1925.

August 26, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

SITA RAM SINGH AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

ANSARI LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), s. 108 (10)—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VII, r. 10—Suit to recover possession of land filed in rent suit—Objection to jurisdiction of Court—Order directing return of plaint for presentation to proper Court—Suit instituted in Civil Court—Defendant, whether can object to jurisdiction of Civil Court—Estoppel.

A suit for the recovery of a plot of land and for damages was instituted in the Rent Court as a suit falling under s. 108 (10) of the Oudh Rent Act. The defendants objected to the jurisdiction of the Rent Court to entertain the suit with the result that the Rent Court returned the plaint to be presented to the Civil Court. The suit was accordingly laid before the Civil Court and the defendants objected that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit:

Held, that the Rent Court having returned the plaint for presentation to the Civil Court as the result of the defendants' objection to the jurisdiction of the Rent Court, they could not be permitted to turn round and object that the Civil Court had also no jurisdiction to entertain the suit.

Second appeal from the judgment and decree of the Sub-Judge, Unao, dated the 9th December 1924, upholding that of the Munsif, Safipur, District Unao, dated the 28th July 1924.

Mr. M. A. Khan, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This is the defendants' appeal in a suit for possession of plot No. 280, measuring 2 bighas 11 biswas, situate in patti Din Singh of village Bawahua, pargana Safipur, in the District of Unao and for damages. The suit was instituted in the Court of the Munsif of Safipur and was decreed by that Court. On an appeal by the defendants the decree of the Munsif was confirmed by the Subordinate Judge of Unao.

The only point urged in support of this appeal is that the cognizance of the suit by the Civil Court was barred by cl. (10) of s. 108 of the Oudh Rent Act. It appears that originally a suit for the relief now claimed was instituted by the plaintiff in the Rent Court as a suit falling under s. 108, cl. (10) of the Oudh Rent Act. The defendants, that is the present appellants, objected to the jurisdiction of the Rent Court to entertain that suit. The result was that the Rent Court returned the plaint to be presented to the Civil Court. The suit was accordingly laid before the Civil Court as already stated. The defendants cannot be permitted now to turn round and say that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain it. The appeal fails and is dismissed.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 2663 OF 1921.

February 26, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice LeRossignol and Mr. Justice Fforde.

SARDARI MAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

ABDUL SAMAD—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 16—Undue influence of third person, effect of—Debts incurred by profligate young man consolidated into mortgage—Undue influence, proof of.

Undue influence exercised by a third person over a mortgagor is no defence to the mortgagee's claim on the mortgage. [p. 40, col. 2.]

The facts that a mortgagor was a profligate young wastrel unaccustomed to the possession of any money, that on his father's death he embarked upon a career of debauchery and that the mortgagee, a professional money-lender, advanced him moneys on various documents, which debts were subsequently consolidated in the mortgage in suit, do not justify a finding of undue influence. [ibid.]

First appeal from a decree of the Sub-Judge, Delhi, dated the 5th August 1921.

Messrs. Sardha Ram and Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Badr-ud-di
Chand; for the Respon

JUDGMENT.—

this appeal arises with to recover Rs. 5,363 defendant on a mortgage of the principal sum of Rs. 5,000 and interest. The mortgage was executed on the 30th July 1919 and on the 31st August of that year the defendant's only plea was that he had just attained majority and that the plaintiff had taken undue advantage of him and had received by him Rs. 300, which sum was the only consideration received by the defendant for the mortgage. The Trial Court found that the plaintiff knew that the defendant was frequenting bad company and that he deliberately lent money to a young man to enable him to continue a life of gambling and debauchery and the learned Judge gave the plaintiff a decree for Rs. 780 only being Rs. 600 which he found to have been received by the defendant and Rs. 180 interest at the rate of Rs. 1-4 per cent, stipulated in the contract.

From this decree the plaintiff has appealed to this Court and having gone through the record and heard Counsel we have no hesitation in holding that the appeal must succeed. The consideration for the mortgage is recited in the instrument of mortgage as follows:—

Rs. 2,001 paid before the Sub-Registrar, and balance due on various documents, promissory notes, receipts and bonds marked Exs. P-1 to P-15.

Now it is defendant's story that he did not receive a pie at the time of the execution of these documents Exs. P-1 to P-15 and that at the time of the execution of the mortgage-deed he received only Rs. 300. These documents Exs. P-1 to P-15 all bear the thumb-impression of the defendant. They all have been proved by the attesting witnesses before whom they purport to have been executed by the defendant and there is the usual evidence that these documents were executed for the consideration therein set forth. This evidence the Trial Court has completely rejected on what we hold to be very inadequate grounds. Inasmuch as the signatures of the witnesses appear to be written with a different ink and pen from that used to write the body of the document it comes to the conclusion that the witnesses were not present when the documents were ent.

Kureshi and Sagar

The action out of which the mortgage was granted on the 30th July 1919 and on the 31st August of that year the defendant's only plea was that he had just attained majority and that the plaintiff had taken undue advantage of him and had received by him Rs. 300, which sum was the only consideration received by the defendant for the mortgage. The Trial Court found that the plaintiff knew that the defendant was frequenting bad company and that he deliberately lent money to a young man to enable him to continue a life of gambling and debauchery and the learned Judge gave the plaintiff a decree for Rs. 780 only being Rs. 600 which he found to have been received by the defendant and Rs. 180 interest at the rate of Rs. 1-4 per cent, stipulated in the contract.

executed. Although is remarks apply to Ex. P-1 also the Judge nevertheless concludes that the Rs. 9 referred to in Ex. P-1 were actually paid. The learned Judge appears to be under impression that if a money-lender advances loans to a young wastrel knowing that the money will be squandered he has no right to recover. This is a case which is not set up by the defendant himself. The only defence set up by the defendant is his pleas was that, as a matter of fact he had received only Rs. 300 as consideration for execution of a document which is reported to be a mortgage for Rs. 5,000. Neither the defendant is illiterate and a person in no position and were the plaintiff attempting to prove his debt merely on the documents Exs. P-1 to P-15 it might be held that the proof tendered by him was scarcely adequate; but the plaintiff's case reposes not merely on the documents Exs. P-1 to P-15 but on the registered mortgage-deed at the registration of which the defendant admitted before the Registrar full receipt of consideration.

The defence witnesses called by the defendant are, generally speaking, men of low position and their evidence such as it is does not go much further than to establish that the defendant was squandering money on drink and prostitutes. There is an attempt to suggest that the plaintiff was joining with the defendant in these pastimes but this was not pleaded by the defendant and in view of the fact that the plaintiff was a big money-lender and 62 years of age and that he has died during the pendency of the suit we hold this part of the defendant's evidence to be entirely without foundation. The defendant's own evidence as a witness for himself is quite general. He does not give any details of the circumstances in which he executed the documents, Exs. P-1 to P-15. His statement suggests that he was intoxicated on every occasion when the documents Exs. P-1 to P-15, were executed but this suggestion has been repudiated before us by his Counsel whose arguments we have had some difficulty in following. He admits that there was no undue influence, no coercion and no fraud, and his suggestion is that the defendant took Rs. 300 and executed the mortgage for Rs. 5,000 in the exuberance of sentiment generated by slight intoxication. He further urges that it was the duty of the plaintiff to come into the witness-box and produce his books. We do not doubt that the plaintiff would have been well advised to produce his books but he was not called upon before issues to exhibit his books to the defendant nor was he summoned by the defendant to appear as a witness and disclose the state of his business books.

Undue influence is not even suggested. It is even denied before us and it would be hard to maintain the contention that there was undue influence because the terms of the contract in themselves are by no means exorbitant. The gist of the learned Counsel's argument before us so far as we could gather was that the defendant was prepared to sign any document because the dancing girl of whom he was enamoured exercised undue influence over him and was waiting for money. Undue influence of a third person is no defence to the plaintiff's claim.

Our conclusion is that the defendant was a profligate young wastrel unaccustomed to the possession of any money, that on his father's death he embarked upon a career of debauchery and that the plaintiff, a professional money-lender, advanced him monies on various documents which debts were subsequently consolidated in the mortgage in suit. We accept the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below and decree for plaintiff with costs throughout. The decree shall be in the form prescribed in O. XXXIV, rr. 4 and 5. The property mortgaged shall be sold if the decree is not paid within three months.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 177
OF 1922.

May 5, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Hugh Walmsley,
Kt., and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

Hafez AHMED YAR KHAN—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

DINA NATH SADHUKHAN AND

ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (XI of 1859), ss. 2, 3, 33—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 12—Sale for arrears of rent held before last date on which rent could be paid, legality of—Suit to set aside sale, whether necessary—Limitation.

In the case of a tenant paying rent into the Collectorate, where it appears that the practice of the Collector is to receive the rent of each Bengali year in May or June of the following year, a sale of a holding held by the Collector on account of arrears of rent under the provisions of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act before the last date of the month of June of the year following that in respect of which the rent is due, is illegal.

Where a revenue sale is illegal, there is no need to bring a suit to set it aside, and the provisions of s. 33 of the Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act or of Art. 12 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act have no application.

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, 24-Pergunnahs, dated the 26th April 1922.

Messrs. Mahendra Nath Ray, S. C. Mukerji and Babu Indu Bhusan Mukerjee, for the Appellant.

Babus Baranashibashi Mukerjee and Someswar Prosad Mukerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Walmsley, J.—This appeal arises out of a sale of a holding situated in dihi Panchannagram. The plaintiff was the owner of a portion of the holding No. 166. The share of rent which he had to pay was Rs. 1-3-9 per annum. The kabuliyat executed in respect of the whole holding No. 166 is dated the 6th February 1873. According to that, the tenant undertook to pay the agreed rent annually on or before the 28th day of June into the Collectorate. Now, it would be tedious to narrate the facts of the case of Haji Elahi Buksh which led to an alteration in the notification passed under s. 3 of Act XI of 1859. It is enough to record the fact that there has been a change made. The question of what is the latest date has been considered by the learned Judge, but, for the present purpose, I think the only point which we have to consider is what was the date on which the rent of each year was payable to the Collector. It has been urged before us that the stipulation in the kabuliyat means that the rent for 1320 B. S. would be payable by the tenant on the 28th of June 1913. That would be the interpretation which I should have placed on the kabuliyat if it had stood by itself. But the plaintiff has been able to produce a jamawasilbaki kept in the Collector's office containing entries of no less than six years and studying that jamawasilbaki I have come to the conclusion that it was the practice of the Collector to receive the rent of each Bengali year in May or June of the following year; that is to say, that the rent of 1320 B. S. would have been accepted if paid in May or June 1914. Now, if that was the practice, then I think it follows that the sale held by the Collector was not in accordance with law. The new notification under s. 3 of Act XI cannot apply to the subject-matter of this suit, if the rent for 1320 was not due to be paid into the Collectorate until the end of June 1914, it follows by a reference to s. 2 and the old notification that a sale held in the following May was not a good sale. The conclusion, therefore, to which I reached is that the learned Judge of the Court was right in holding as he did that the sale was not a good sale.

The other point which has been argued before us is one of limitation. It is said that the suit is really a suit to set aside a sale held under the provisions of Act XI (B. C.) of 1859, and that, under s. 33 of that Act, it should have been brought within one year of the date of the confirmation of the sale or, under Art. 12 of the Limitation Act, it should have been brought within one year again. The answer to that is that the sale was not a sale at all and, therefore, there was no need to bring in a suit to set it aside so that neither provision applies. The suit was brought within much less than 12 years of the date on which possession was given to the purchaser and consequently it is not barred by limitation.

In my opinion, the decision of the lower Court should be affirmed and this appeal dismissed with costs.

B. B. Ghose, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 307 OF 1921.

April 22, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof and Mr. Justice Fforde.

GURDITTA MAL AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
APPELLANTS

versus

MUHAMMAD KHAN AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, rr. 4 (1), 4 (2)—Representative of deceased respondent already on record—Appellant, whether relieved from making application—When whole appeal abates—Practice—Order of Division Bench, whether can be questioned before another Division Bench.

The mere fact that the deceased respondent are not relieve the appellant if an application under O. II, r. 4 (1), C. P. C. [p. 42, col. 2.]

Lilo Sonar v. Jhagru, 853; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat. R. 97, followed.

Kartar Singh v. Lal Singh, 66 Ind. Cas. 24; Jahan Khan, 50 P. R. 19; Po v. Ma Shwe Ma, 84 I. A. I. R. (R.) 95, not follo

Where the responder action against them is appeal abates if the re not impleaded in time

If an appellant of Division Bench off apply for an order appeal, under O. XXII, r. 4, C. P. C., it is not open to him to question the correctness of the order of the Division Bench wh his application is laid before another Division Bench for disposal. [p. 42, col. 2.]

First appeal from a decree of the Senior Subordinate Judge, Shahpur at Sargodha, dated the 3rd November 1920.

Messrs. Nanak Chand and C. L. Mathur, for the Appellants.

Lala Ram Chand Manchanda and Lala Nanwa Mal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This was a suit for a declaration that defendants Nos. 5-17 had no share in the shamilat land and that they were merely qabza maliks having purchased lands in certain khatas mentioned in the plaint without any share in the shamilat land measuring 10,523 kanals khewat No. 177. The suit was dismissed. Thereupon the present appeal was preferred by the plaintiffs. The defendants were made respondents.

The appeal came up for hearing before a Division Bench constituted by Mr. Justice Harrison and Mr. Justice Campbell on the 7th February 1925 when a preliminary objection was raised to the effect that inasmuch as respondent No. 28 Muhammad Akram and respondent No. 16 Musammat Jalal Bibi had died and their legal representatives had not been brought on the record within the period of limitation, the appeal had abated. The learned Judges made the following order:—It is shown by the affidavit of Muhammad Khan, which is not contested, that this appeal has abated against Musammat Jalal Bibi and Muhammad Akram, the former being shown to have died in 1922. Mr. Nanak Chand asks for an adjournment to enable him to apply for an order setting aside the abatement. Fresh date to be given, i. e., the 3rd March conditional on pay-egal representatives of a ready on the record does in the necessity of making II, r. 4 (1), C. P. C. [p. 42,

, 85 Ind. Cas. 25; 3 Pat. 6 P. L. T. 313; 3 Pat. L.

59 Ind. Cas. 238; 11 P. L. afiz-un-nissa v. Jawahir C. 374, Haidar Khan v. P. L. R. 1902 and Maung Cas. 992; 2 R. 445; (1925)

e joint and the cause of a joint one, the whole ntative of one of them is 43, col. 1.]

, an adjournment from a gh Court to enable him to aside the abatement of his 4, C. P. C., it is not open to correctness of the order of the his application is laid before another Division Bench for disposal. [p. 42, col. 2.]

ment of Rs. 50 costs by the appellant to respondents."

Mr. Nanak Chand, Counsel for the appellants, filed a petition on the 2nd of March 1925, by which instead of applying under O. XXII, r. 4, C. P. C., for the setting aside of the abatement, he contested the correctness of the order of the Division Bench dated the 17th February 1925 on the ground that no abatement had taken place at all inasmuch as the legal representatives of the deceased respondents were already on the record and that it was not necessary to make a formal application for the substitution of their names on the record in their character of the legal representatives of the deceased. When the appeal came on for hearing before us on the 17th March 1925 this application was placed before us and the following points were urged by Mr. Nanak Chand:—

(1) that the order of the 17th February 1925 was wrong.

(2) that, inasmuch as the right of appeal had survived against the surviving defendants-respondents alone it was not necessary to make an application under O. XXII, r. 4, C. P. C.

(3) that in any case the appeal must be held to have abated against the deceased respondents alone and that against the remaining respondents it could go on.

As regards the first point, we are clearly of opinion that it is not open to the appellants to question the correctness of the order passed by another Division Bench.

As regards the second point urged, in our opinion, the right of appeal had not survived against the surviving respondents alone but it had survived against the surviving respondents and the legal representatives of the deceased respondents. The mere fact that the alleged legal representatives were already parties to the appeal did not relieve the appellants from the necessity of making an application under O. XXII, r. 4 (1), C. P. C. Clause (2) of r. 4 provides that "any person so made a party may make any defence appropriate to his character as legal representative of the deceased defendant." This clearly indicates that the legal representative of a deceased defendant will have a right to make a defence appropriate to his character as legal representative only when he is substituted as such. Supposing no application is made to substitute as the legal representative of a deceased respondent the name of the legal representative who happens to be already on the record how is he to know that it has become necessary for him to file an appropriate defence? It is quite possible that he may already be a party to the suit and yet may not know of the death of a defendant whose legal representative he may be. How will he then file an appropriate defence? Our view is supported by a decision of the Patna High Court in Lilo Sonar v. Jhagru Sahu (1). A contrary view was expressed by one of us in Kartar Singh v. Lal Singh (2), but the question was not fully considered and no reasons were assigned for the view expressed. Similarly, a contrary view taken by the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court in Hafiz-un-nissa v. Jawahir Singh (3) is not supported by any reasoning. The same remarks apply to the case of Haidar Khan v. Jahan Khan (4) and Maung Po v. Ma Shwe Ma (5) was decided upon special facts, and moreover no reasons were assigned for the contrary view taken in that case also.

The next question, which we have to decide is whether the whole appeal has abated or not. It is clear that defendants Nos. 5-17 were joint owners and that the cause of action against them was a joint one. According to the test laid down in various cases decided in this Court what we have to see is whether the suit could proceed in the absence of the deceased defendants-respondents. It is obvious that it could not, vide Sardari Lal v. Ram Lal (6) and Jamna v. Sarjit (7). We must, therefore, hold that the whole appeal has abated. The respondents are entitled to their costs.

S. D.

Appeal abated.

(1) 85 Ind. Cas. 25; 3 Pat. 853; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 123; 6 P. L. T. 313; 3 Pat. L. R. 97.

(2) 59 Ind. Cas. 238; 11 P. L. R. 1921; 9 P. W. R. 1921.

(3) 66 Ind. Cas. 24; 24 O. C. 374.

(4) 50 P. R. 1902; 65 P. L. R. 1902.

(5) 84 Ind. Cas. 992; 2 R. 445; (1925) A. I. R. (R.) 95.

(6) 57 Ind. Cas. 199; 1 L. 225; 1 L. L. J. 225; 143 P. L. R. 1920.

(7) 52 Ind. Cas. 510; 67 P. R. 1919.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 318-B of 1923.

September 3, 1923.

Present :—

BALKRISHNA

RAGHUNATH.

—K

Berar Land Revenue from year to year—Suit whether necessary.

A suit for ejectment previous notice to quit 1 year to year.

Kesheo v. Mansha, 44 Ir. distinguished.

Bhiwaji v. Tukaram, 39 referred to.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Amraoti, dated 30th June 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 11 of 1923.

Mr. M. R. Indurker, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Y. Sharif, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff, a holder of a 2-annas share in the Jaghir village, sued to eject the defendants, alleging them to be annual tenants of the lands in suit which were his; he also sued for $\frac{1}{2}$ the batai valued at Rs. 1,035 in accordance with the terms of the contract, and for Rs. 650 the rent for 1920-21, for which year he had let the land to another tenant, who was prevented from taking possession by the defendants.

The defendants pleaded that they were tenants of antiquity and not liable to be ejected. They also pleaded the absence of notice under s. 79 of the Berar Land Revenue Code and objected to the amount of batai.

The First Court, Subordinate Judge, Yeotmal, held that defendants failed to prove that they were tenants of antiquity and passed a decree for ejectment and for Rs. 1,300 as batai and damages.

On appeal the District Judge, East Berar held that the defendants were not tenants of antiquity and that the damages were wrongly estimated by the lower Court, but that the suit must fail for want of notice under s. 79 of the Berar Land Revenue Code, the defendants having the status of annual tenants within that section, and he accordingly reversed the decree and dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

The plaintiff makes this second appeal and the defendants put in cross-objections as to the finding that they are not tenants of antiquity.

Baker, J. C.

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

de, 1896, s. 79—Tenancy ejectment—Notice to quit, maintainable without a case of a tenancy from

s. 212; 14 N. L. R. 129,

as. 15; 13 N. L. R. 11, of the District

30th June 1923,

11 of 1923.

It is contended on behalf of the appellant that plaintiff states defendants are annual tenants, meaning tenants for one year, and Exs. P-7 and P-13 show the same. No notice is, therefore, necessary under the ruling in Kesheo v. Bhiwaji (1), where it is held that a tenant for a year requires no notice for its termination. This ruling has been considered by the learned District Judge who has dismissed it, as also Bhiwaji v. Tukaram.

The distinction between the two cases is that no notice is necessary under the ruling in Kesheo v. Mansh (2), in the case of a tenant for one year, whereas it is necessary in the case of a tenancy from year to year. The District Judge has found on the admissions of plaintiff in cross-examination that defendant has been cultivating the fields since 1912 and 1915 respectively as an annual tenant, that the lease was not for a definite period of one year and, therefore, defendants could not be ejected without notice. This is a finding of fact, and as the District Judge has correctly stated the law the suit must fail and the appeal be dismissed on this point.

As regards the finding about the defendants not being tenants of antiquity, this is also a finding of fact. The onus of proof is on defendants as the lower Appellate Court holds. It is contended that the lower Appellate Court should not have gone into this question, but as this was a matter directly in issue between the parties it was fully justified in doing so.

The finding about the measure of damages is, of course, a pure finding of fact.

It is not shown that the Berar Alienated Villages Tenancy Law, 1921, applies to the village in question.

The result is that the decree of the lower Appellate Court is confirmed and the appeal and cross-objections are dismissed with costs.

K. S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 44 Ind. Cas. 212; 14 N. L. R. 129.

(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 15; 13 N. L. R. 11.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 1018 OF 1924.

February 18, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.

REWACHAND FATEHCHAND—

PLAINTIFF

versus

KARACHI MUNICIPALITY—DEFENDANTS.

Bombay District Municipal Act (III of 1901), s. 167—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), ss. 15 (2), 29—Suit against Municipality to recover refund of house tax—Limitation, commencement of—Notice, period of, whether can be excluded—Refusal to re-consider previous order, whether affords new cause of action.

Section 167 of the Bombay District Municipal Act prevents a claimant from commencing his suit after six months from the date of the act complained of and thereby expressly excludes time being extended under s. 15, cl. (2) of the Limitation Act. The period of a month's notice required to be given by the section cannot, therefore, be added to the said period of six months in counting the period of limitation. [p. 45, col. 2.]

Corporation of Calcutta v. Shyama Charan Pal, 32 C. 277; 9 C. W. N. 217, distinguished.

Plaintiff's claim for the refund of a certain sum of money paid by him as Municipal house tax was rejected on the 29th March by the Managing Committee of the defendant Municipality, to whom the powers of the General Body with reference to such matters had been delegated. The resolution of the Managing Committee was communicated to the plaintiff in a letter by the Chief Officer of the Municipality dated 10th April which was received by the plaintiff on 22nd April. Thereafter the plaintiff again addressed the President and the members of the Municipality requesting them to re-consider the matter whereupon the papers were re-submitted to the Managing Committee who, on July 25th, refused to re-consider the matter. Plaintiff instituted a suit on 30th October for the recovery of the amount from the defendant Municipality:

Held, (1) that assuming that the period of limitation under s. 167 of the Bombay District Municipal Act commenced from 22nd April when the resolution of the Managing Committee was communicated to the plaintiff, the suit was barred by time under the provisions of that section; [p. 45, col. 1.]

(2) that the refusal by the Managing Committee to grant a refund and not its subsequent refusal to re-consider the matter was the act which afforded the plaintiff his cause of action and that the limitation for the suit commenced from the date of the refusal of the Managing Committee and not from the date of their refusal to re-consider their previous refusal. [p. 46, col. 1.]

Mr. Kimatrai Bhojraj, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Kundanmal Dayaram, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff has instituted this suit for recovery of Rs. 1,200 as refund of Municipal house tax for the years 1922 and 1923 which he states was permissible to him under the rules of the defendants and was not paid to him though demanded.

The defendants have inter alia raised the plea that the suit is barred by limitation under s. 167 of the Bombay District Municipal Act III of 1901 having been filed more than six months after the act complained of.

The issue of limitation has been tried as a preliminary issue.

It appears from the correspondence Exs. 5-1 to 5-18 that the Chief Officer of the defendants definitely refused to pay him the refund on March 24, 1923 (Ex. 5-6). Thereafter the plaintiff carried on correspondence with the President who again by his letter dated May 29, 1923 (Ex. 5-9) informed the plaintiff that his claim for refund could not be admitted. As a result of some further correspondence carried on by the plaintiff and his Pleaders Messrs. Harchandrai and Co. with the President he placed the subject before the Managing Committee of the defendant for orders, the powers of the General Body with reference to such matters having been delegated under the rules by the General Body to the Managing Committee. On March 29, 1924 the Managing Committee passed a resolution that the refund was not admissible and could not be allowed. This resolution was communicated to the plaintiff by the Chief Officer's letter dated April 10, 1924 (Ex. 5-15) which according to his own admission was received by him on April 22, 1924. The plaintiff was again persistent and sent a letter addressed to "the President and members Karachi Municipality" requesting the President to re-consider the matter. This letter was received in the Municipal Office on July 2, 1924 and on August 7, 1924 the plaintiff was informed by the Chief Officer's letter No. 5/17 that the papers on the subject were re-submitted to the Managing Committee who at their meeting held on July 25, 1924 resolved that they adhered to their previous resolution and were not prepared to deviate from it.

The plaint in this suit was presented in Court on October 30, 1924. Assuming for the moment that the previous refusal of the Chief Officer afforded no cause of action to the plaintiff and that the period of limitation commenced from April 22, 1924 when the resolution of the Managing Committee of the defendants who were the final authority in the matter was communicated to the plaintiff, his claim became Statute barred on October 24, 1924.

The learned Pleader for the plaintiff has attempted to show that this suit is within time on two grounds. The first ground urged by him is that 167 of the Municipal Act requires as one of its conditions that a claimant should give one month's previous notice to the Municipality of the institution of his suit; the period of six months provided by this section, therefore, extends by one month beyond the period prescribed by s. 29 of the Limitation Act as recently amended by Act X of 1922. Section 1 of the Limitation Act makes the general provisions of the Limitation Act contained in Sections 9 to 18 applicable in computing the period of limitation prescribed by any special or local law subject, however, to the proviso that provisions "are not expressly excluded by such special or local law." The provisions of s. 15, cl. (2) are relied on in this case as extending the period of limitation. It is, therefore, necessary to examine s. 167 of the Municipal Act to see if s. 15, cl. (2) of the Limitation Act is not expressly excluded by it. This section prescribes two absolute unqualified and independent conditions precedent to the maintainability of a suit contemplated by it. It provides that "no suit shall be commenced.....without giving such Municipality.....one month's previous notice in writing of the intended suit and of the cause thereof, nor, after six months from the date of the act complained of." Unlike s. 634 of the Calcutta Municipal Act III of 1899 the second part of this section does not provide for the suit being filed within six months from "the accrual of the right to sue" which has been held not to mean "the accrual of the cause of action." Corporation of Calcutta v. Shyama Charan Pal (1). The plaintiff cannot, therefore, plead that so long as he has not served the requisite notice on the Municipality there is no accrual of the right to sue and that the period of limitation commences to run after the expiry of the month's notice. This section in plain and unambiguous terms prevents the claimant from commencing his suit after six months from the date of the act complained of and thereby expressly excludes the time being extended, under s. 15, cl. (2) of the Limitation Act. Public interests require such suits should be instituted without any delay and the period of six months is sufficiently long to enable a claimant to comply with both the conditions precedent required by s. 167 of the Municipal Act. This ground, therefore, fails.

The second ground is equally untenable. The subsequent request to the President and the Municipality for re-consideration in effect an appeal to the action of the Managing Committee and that so long as that request was not considered and finally refused, litigation did not run against the plaintiff and that even otherwise it affords a fresh cause of action. This argument is incorrect. Mr. Kimatrai has not been able to refer to any rule of the Municipal Rules or to any provisions of the Municipal Act permitting an appeal against the decision of the Managing Committee to the Board in respect of the exercise of power reservedly delegated by the Board to the Managing Committee. The plaintiff's letter though addressed to the President and members was a request for re-consideration by the Managing Committee and not an appeal to the Board. It was so dealt with. As an appeal to the Board it has not been disposed of upto now and cannot, therefore, be relied on as affording a separate or fresh cause of action. There is also nothing in the rules or in the Act making the filing of an appeal or its rejection by the Board a condition to the maintainability of this suit. The act complained of which affords the plaintiff his cause of action is the refusal to grant a refund by the authority competent to do so. It is not necessary for the purposes of this suit to decide if the Chief Officer was such competent authority. Assuming that he was not so competent, there is no doubt that the Managing Committee was the competent authority. The refusal by the Managing Committee and not its subsequent refusal to re-consider the matter is the act which affords the plaintiff his cause of action.

To yield to the somewhat ingenious and persuasive argument of Mr. Kimatrai that every application for re-consideration filed by his client afforded him a fresh cause of complaint would be to render the provisions of s. 167 of the Act nugatory and would enable a litigant to revive stale claims by repeating his requests.

The suit fails on the preliminary issue and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Suit dismissed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 406 OF 1924.

August 20, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

AGENT, ROHILKHAND AND KUMAON RAILWAY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GAURI LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Railway Company—Goods consigned for carriage—Risk Note Form "H"—Wilful neglect—Failure to place lock on wagon.

A Railway Company to whom goods are consigned for carriage under Risk Note Form "H" is liable for the loss of the goods only if the consignment is lost through the wilful neglect of the Railway Administration or through theft by or wilful neglect of its servants. [p. 46, col. 2.]

Failure of the Railway Company to place a lock on the wagon in which the goods are being carried does not amount to wilful neglect within the terms of the Risk Note. [p. 47, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the Additional Sub-Judge, Sitapur, dated the 6th August 1924, affirming that of the Munsif, Sitapur, dated the 10th December 1923.

Mr. R. K. Bose, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. Husain, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Gauri Lal plaintiff sued for the recovery of damages from the Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railway Company. The Agent of that Company was sued. The plaintiff had suffered loss of 20 tins of ghee in transit in a train of this Company running between Mailani and Kaurila Ghat. There can be no doubt that these tins were stolen while the train was running.

The goods were booked under Risk Note Form "H" which is on the record. By signing such Risk Note and taking upon himself part of the risk of loss in transit, the consignor secures reduction of freight. Under the contract of such a Risk Note the Railway Company is liable for the loss only if the consignment is lost through the wilful neglect of the Railway Administration or through theft or wilful neglect of its servants. The two Subordinate Courts held that there was wilful neglect of the Railway Company in this case because no lock was placed on the wagon.

The learned Judge of the lower Appellate Court has further stated that the lock was particularly necessary while the train was passing through the Oudh forest where such thefts are matters of common occurrence. I have looked through the record but find no evidence that the train was passing between these two stations through any locality known as the Oudh forest or that in this particular locality thefts were a matter of common occurrence. No other instance of running train theft between these two stations appears to have been cited in the Trial Court.

It was argued by the respondent's learned Counsel that the finding of the lower Court is a finding of fact under the circumstances of the present case. The finding, however, is vitiated by the lower Court importing reasons not supported by any evidence. It quoted a ruling of this Court reported as Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railway v. Bij Lal (1) but omitted to notice the distinction that in that case the wagon was not sealed either. In the present case evidence was led to prove that the wagon was sealed.

Wagons are not locked on any Railway system and security is obtained for the contents of the wagon by bolting it and having it sealed. It will be throwing an unwarranted burden on the Railway Company if it were held that they will be guilty of wilful neglect whenever the wagons are not locked. One can well-understand the difficulty of locking when the contents of the wagons have to be taken out at the destination. Either locks will have to be used of a common pattern of key which would, therefore, be easily available to the thieves or there would be no possibility of opening the lock when the wagon arrives at the destination. I disagree with the lower Appellate Court's deductions of wilful negligence from the fact that the wagon in which theft was committed was not locked.

I hold that the loss was not due to the wilful negligence of the Railway Company, set aside the decree of the lower Appellate Court and dismiss the plaintiff's suit but without costs in any of the Courts.

Z. K.

Decree set aside.

(1) 72 Ind. Cas. 428; 10 O. L. J. 58; 9 O. & A. L. R. 421; (1923) A. I. R. (O.) 212.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM A LATE DECREE

No. 237 1922.

April 25.

Present:—Justice S. Hart Greaves, Kt., and Mr. Justice Cuming.SURESH CHANDRA SAMADDAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

re.

MATHURA NATH GAIN AND OTHERS
—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Landlord and tenant—Dispossession of tenant from portion of holding—Rent, suit for, whether maintain-able.

Where a tenant has never been put in possession of the whole area comprised in the demise but has taken possession of a portion only of the area, the Court has power to fix a rate of rent for the area actually taken possession of by the tenant, to be paid by the tenant, on the ground that although he has contracted for the whole area he has elected to go into possession of a portion only of the area. Where, therefore, under circumstances over which the landlord had no control the tenant has not been given possession of the whole area, the Courts have decreed the rent in proportion to the area of the land of which the tenant has obtained possession. [p. 48, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where, however, a tenant has been in possession of the whole demised area and has subsequently been deprived of a portion thereof by the action of the landlord, it is not open to the landlord to come to Court and ask the Court to fix the rent for the portion of the area which remains in the possession of the tenant. In such a case the landlord is not entitled, after dispossessing the tenant from a portion of the demised area, to sue for rent in respect of the whole or of any portion thereof, where the rent is fixed for the whole holding and not at so much per bigha. [p. 48, col. 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the Officiating Subordinate Judge, Backergunj, dated the 7th June 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, Third Court, Perojpur, dated the 23rd December 1920.

Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak and Babu Radhica Ranjan Guha, for the Appellants.

Mr. Gunada Charan Sen and Babu Someswar Prasad Mukerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Greaves, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs against a decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Backerganj confirming a decision of the Munsif, of the Third Court of Perojpur. The plaintiffs sued for rent for the years 1322 to 1325 under a lease dated the 5th March 1879 whereby in respect of the demised area of 8 bighas rent at the rate of Rs. 35 a year was reserved for the whole area comprised in the demise. The defence of the defendants was firstly, that the rent had been paid and secondly, that after the lease the plaintiffs in the year 1897 let out a portion of the land comprised in the demise of 1877 to other persons. Consequently, they contend, and the Courts have so found, that the defendants were dispossessed of nearly half of the demised area and they accordingly say that under these circumstances they are not liable to pay rent. Both the Courts have taken this view and have dismissed the suit.

Various arguments were urged before us on behalf of the appellants. Firstly, it was stated that the rent had been paid by the defendants at the rate reserved in the kabuliyat even after the dispossession at any rate, from the year 1902 when the Courts found that the dispossession had taken place, and accordingly, it is urged before us that it would be inequitable that we should now hold that the rent should remain in suspension because a portion of the originally demised area has been taken away from the defendants and we were referred, in support of this argument, to the case of Ram Narain Chuckerbutty v. Poolin Behary Lall Singh (1). In that case the Chief Justice in delivering the judgment of the Court held that as 24 years had elapsed since a portion of the demised area had been taken away and the rent during that period had been paid at the old rate the Court would assume that there had been some arrangement in spite of the decrease of area and that the rent should be paid at the old rate. It is noticeable in that case that dispossession was not due to the direct act of the landlord but to the fact that a portion of the land was taken for the construction of a Railway. But in any case we do not think that it is possible for us to act on this view for there is no finding by either of the Courts below that the rent had been paid at the rate reserved by the kabuliyat since the date of dispossession in the year 1902 and in the absence of such a finding we do not think that we should be justified in presuming in second appeal that the rent had always been paid at this rate from the year 1902.

Then it was contended on the basis of certain decisions to which we were referred that in any case there should not be suspension of the whole rent but merely an abatement of rent corresponding to the area by which the tenancy has been diminished and we have been referred to numerous cases. We think broadly that the decisions lay down, that where a tenant has never been put in possession of the whole area comprised in the demise but has taken possession of a portion thereof, the Courts have fixed a rate of rent for the area taken possession of, to be paid by the tenant on the ground that although he has contracted for the whole area he has elected to go into possession of a portion only of the area. And where under circumstances over which the landlord had no control the tenant has not been given possession of the whole area the Courts have decreed the rent in proportion to the area of the land of which the tenant has obtained possession. But we do not think that there is any case which has decided that where a tenant has been in possession of the whole demised area and subsequently has been deprived of a portion thereof by the action of the landlord it is open to the landlord to come to Court and ask the Court to fix a rent for the portion of the area which remains in the possession of the tenant. We think that in all such cases the Courts have held that the landlord is not entitled after dispossessing the tenant from a portion of the demised area to sue for rent in respect of the whole or for any portion thereof.

In this view of the state of the law we think that the appeal must fail and that as the tenants have been dispossessed by the action of the landlord of a portion of the holding and as the rent is fixed for the whole holding and not at so much per bigha the landlord is not entitled either to the whole rent or to rent in proportion to the land which now remains in the possession of the tenants.

The appeal accordingly fails and is dismissed with costs.

Cuming, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE BOMBAY HIGH COURT.
June 12, 1925.

Present:—Lord Sumner, Lord Blanesburgh, Sir John Edge, Mr. Ameer Ali and Lord Salvesen.

NOWROJI RUSTOMJI WADIA—
PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY—
DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894), s. 54—Valuation.

question of—Appeal to Privy Council—Interference with decision of Indian Courts—Practice.

The value to be placed at a given moment on a plot of land, which is not in the market or the subject of bargain and sale, but owes a large part of any value it possesses to the prospective results of development work, to be undertaken thereafter at an uncertain time and at an estimated cost, is not only in its essence a question of fact but is one upon which, almost above any other, opinions will differ, without its being possible to give irrefragable reasons for any particular conclusion. [p. 49, cols. 1 & 2.]

The Privy Council will not review the decree of an Indian Appellate Court merely upon a question of valuation. Where their Lordships have neither the materials nor the experience on which to found an opinion of their own, in a matter where the opinions of competent Courts in India differ (and a fortiori where they concur), it is not their practice to interfere as an Appellate Tribunal, unless there appears to be some error in law or miscarriage of justice. [p. 50, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decree of the High Court (Macleod, C. J. and Shah, J.), dated the 20th September 1921, modifying that of the same Court (Kajiji, J.), dated the 30th August 1920.

Sir G. Lowndes, K. C., and Mr. E. B. Raikes, for the Appellant.

Messrs. A. M. Dunne, K. C., and A. M. Talbot, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Sumner.—In 1917 the Municipality of Bombay acquired a plot of land for purposes connected with an existing hospital, and the usual statutory proceedings took place before the Collector of Bombay to fix the amount of compensation to be paid for the land. The owner, being dissatisfied with the amount awarded, viz., Rs. 98,724, claimed a reference to the High Court, and in 1920 Kajiji, J., varied the Collector's award by increasing the rate to be allowed per square yard superficial from Rs. 8 to Rs. 10. This raised the total compensation to Rs. 1,39,970. Upon an appeal by the Municipality the High Court set aside the learned Judge's decree and dismissed the reference. They thus in effect confirmed the Collector's award. From this decision the claimant now appeals.

The value to be placed at a given moment on a plot of land, which is not in the market of the subject of bargain and sale, but owes a large part of any value it possesses to the prospective results of development work, to be undertaken thereafter at an uncertain time and at an estimated cost, is not only in its essence a question of fact but is one upon which, almost above any other, opinions will differ, without its being possible to give irrefragable reasons for any particular conclusion.

It has been decided in decisions of the Board, by which their Lordships are now bound, that appeals in valuation cases will only be entertained on questions of principle. Secretary of State for India v. Indian General Steam Navigation & Ry. Co. (Rangoon Botatoung Co., Ltd. v. Collector Rangoon (2), per Lord Macnaghten; Khan (3), per Lord Buckmaster—“this Board will not interfere with any question of valuation”—Secretary of State for India (4). Errors in law, including errors in appreciating or applying the rules of evidence or the judicial methods of weighing evidence, are matters that can and may be dealt with on appeal by this Board, but when, as in the present case, a difference of opinion has occurred between two Indian Courts upon the number of rupees per yard to be allowed for a plot of land, as to which their Lordships can form no opinion of their own, it would be alike unprofitable and impracticable to embark on a comparison of the decisions of these Courts. In cases relating to the acquisition of land the whole matter, both of fact and law, is a proper subject of appeal in India, for their local knowledge and experience enable the learned Judges to form useful judgments upon the whole case. The amending Act of 1921 declares awards under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894, to be decrees, so as to bring them within the general rules as to appeals to this Board, but it does not prescribe any special mode, in which they are to be treated. This Board has found it necessary to limit the extent of the inquiry, in order to spare the parties costly and fruitless litigation. Just as in cases where there are concurrent find-

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 448; 36 C. 967; 10 C. L. J. 281; 11 Bom. L. R. 1197; 14 C. W. N. 134; 19 M. L. J. 645; 36 I. A. 200 (P. C.).

(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 188; 39 I. A. 197 at p. 201; 16 C. W. N. 961; 12 M. L. T. 195; (1912) M. W. N. 781; 16 C. L. J. 245; 23 M. L. J. 276; 14 Bom. L. R. 833; 10 A. L. J. 271; 5 Bur. L. T. 205; 40 C. 21; 6 L. B. R. 150 (P. C.).

(3) 57 Ind. Cas. 606; 47 I. A. 255 at p. 264; 39 M. L. J. 195; 28 M. L. T. 149; 2 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 124; 18 A. L. J. 1095; 22 Bom. L. R. 1370; 13 L. W. 49; 25 C. W. N. 289; 3 P. W. R. 1921; 48 C. 110 (P. C.).

(4) 86 Ind. Cas. 556; 23 A. L. J. 113; 2 O. W. N. 137; 48 M. L. J. 386; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 91; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 64; 27 Bom. L. R. 783; 6 L. 69; 29 C. W. N. 822 (P. C.).

ings of fact in the Indian Courts, it has long been the general rule of the Board not to allow such findings to be re-opened here, Naraguntty Lu-gama Naidoo (5), Irshad Husain (6), and as now been settled that this Board will review the decree of an Indian Appellate Court merely upon questions of value. Where their Lordships have neither the materials nor the experience on which to form an opinion of their own, in a matter where the opinions of competent Courts in India differ (and a fortiori where they concur), it is not their practice to interfere, as an Appellate Tribunal, unless there appears to be error in law or miscarriage of justice.

In view of the practice the present case may be shortly dealt with. The plot to be acquired was irregular in shape and contour. Except at one point, and there only by a narrow passage, it had no access to any road. Part of it was hollow and low-lying, so that in the rains water accumulated there to the depth of several feet. No transactions were proved in respect of land closely adjacent to or precisely similar to this plot and such transactions as had occurred were cases of development and sale at dates not at or about the material time, viz., 1917. The question, whether or not there had afterwards been an upward trend in market values generally, was not only highly disputable as a matter of opinion, but was not affirmatively supported by any satisfactory proof.

Both parties admitted that the most satisfactory use, to which the land could be put, was the erection of workmen's dwellings, and the value of the land for this purpose accordingly became the question to which both directed their attention. Development of this kind required the dedication of a considerable part of the surface, in order to provide an access road, and also the raising of the whole surface to one level, free from risk of flooding, by permanently filling in the cavities with suitable loose material. Estimates of the area of land required for the road and of the cost of filling in per cubic yard were accordingly prepared, and were agreed on both sides. It does not appear, however, that any allowance was made for the time required to enable the made ground to settle, or for the risk that unexpected settlements might take place, and probably these factors were beyond any exact estimation. Of course the circumstances that might exist, when the work was done and the realisable value of the developed site could be ascertained, were alike beyond human foresight.

Kajiji, J., appears to have addressed himself to the question of the fair compensation for land taken in 1917, to be allowed as at that date, as if it were an algebraic problem, which could be solved by an abstract formula. He sought to ascertain what value per yard the land might be supposed to have, if improved at some uncertain date by treating the cost of filling in the cavities as a determined sum, to which there could not be any addition, and by deducting this sum alone from the supposed realisable value after future development. From these somewhat abstract factors he arrived at a concrete rate per superficial yard to be paid presently by way of compensation. In doing so he took no account of the factor of interest on the cost of the filling in and the other development work during the uncertain interval before the time of realisation might arrive.

From his conclusions thus arrived at the High Court dissented. Their reasons are not very clearly given, but this may be due to the fact that the evidence, which they discussed, is not very clearly recorded. At any rate, as it appears to their Lordships, they fell into no error of principle in their criticisms of the judgment of Kajiji, J., or in the process by which they arrived at their own conclusions. In dissenting from the method, which the learned Judge seems to have followed, they were certainly right. Factors such as he omitted to notice may be of great importance or of little, or even may be truly negligible, according to the circumstances of the particular case, but it cannot be right to ignore them altogether, as having no place at all in a rigid system of calculation. They were guided by their own view, as they were entitled to be, of the weight of the various pieces of evidence, nearly all of indirect bearing on the problem in hand—and in many cases only imperfectly developed. They thought, as they were entitled to think, that the grounds, on which the supposed rise in general market values was rested were so unsubstantial in themselves and so distantly related to the circumstances of the site in question, as not to amount to any evidence on which to rest the judicial conclusion that something should be allowed for a rising market.

(5) 9 M. I. A. 66 at p. 87; 1 W. R. P. C. 30; 1 Suth. P. C. J. 460; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 826; 19 E. R. 666.

(6) 21 I. A. 163; 21 C. 997; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 460; Rafique & Jackson's P. C. No. 135; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1298 (P. C.).

After carefully examining the evidence and the way in which the High Court appears to have dealt with it in arriving at the conclusion now under appeal, their Lordships are unable to find that there has been any error in principle or in law in the method of arriving at it. They will accordingly humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

z. k.

Appeal dismissed.

Solicitors for the Appellant:—Messrs. T. L. Wilson & Co.

Solicitor for the Respondent:—The Solicitor, India Office.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 151-B OF 1923.

April 23, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Hallifax, A. J. C.

MAHADEO—APPLICANT

versus

SHIORAM—NON-APPLICANT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 106—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 17 (d), 49—Lease, agricultural—Oral lease, validity of—Document containing admission of oral lease—Registration, whether necessary.

Section 106 of the Transfer of Property Act excludes agricultural leases from the operation of its own provisions and allows such leases or agreements to lease to be made without a written instrument. [p. 51, col. 2.]

The Registration Act only comes into operation when a written document has been executed either because the transaction cannot legally be carried out without one or because the parties choose to have one though it is not compulsory. [ibid.]

In proof of an oral lease granted by the defendant to the plaintiffs the latter produced a document executed by the defendant which ran as follows:—

"Of the annual rent for the two years 1918-19 and 1919-20 for the field of which I had given you a lease for five years, you have to-day paid me Rs. 65 as the rent for the current year, and you have already paid me the rent for last year and taken a receipt for it, leaving the rent for the next three years which I will take from you in each of those three years with a rent note":

Held, that the document contained nothing more than a mention of an oral agreement made previously and did not require registration, but could be used as evidence of an admission he had casually mentioned of a private letter. [p. 52,

Civil revision of a Cause Court, Khar July 1923, in Small 244 of 1923

Mr. G. R. Deo, for the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

JUDGMENT.

plaintiffs, who applied for revision of the Small Cause Court were as follows:

of the agricultural year 18-19 the defendant agreed by word a lease of his land for Rs. 65 in each of the following five years, taking a separate kabuliyat from them each year. He kept his promise for four years but refused to allow the plaintiffs to cultivate the field in the fifth year 1922-23 and gave it to another person. They, therefore, claimed damages for breach of the contract, assessing them at the amount of profit they would have made if the contract had not been broken, which they said was Rs. 160. The defendant denied the alleged oral agreement to lease and pleaded that it could only be made by a registered instrument.

The lower Court arrived at the following conclusions. Under ss. 17 (d) and 49 of the Registration Act the plaintiffs are not allowed to prove the terms of the agreement to lease for five years by oral evidence, at least in a suit for damages for breach of the contract though they probably would be allowed to prove it in that way in a suit for specific performance of it. (The reasoning behind the last sentence is obscure, but the matter is outside the case).

If oral evidence can be accepted then that given proves that the contract was made. The plaintiffs suffered loss to the extent of Rs. 85.

The learned Judge has forgotten s. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act which excludes agricultural leases from the operation of its own provisions and so allows such leases or agreements to lease to be made without a written instrument. The Registration Act only comes into operation when a written document has been executed, either because the transaction cannot legally be carried out without one or because the parties choose to have one though it is not compulsory. The only question, in this case is, therefore, whether the document produced by the plaintiff as part of the proof of the lease (Ex. P-1) is a writ-allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the

decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the

decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the

decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the

decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the

decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the

decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the

decree of the Small Cause Court, dated the 18th July 1923, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 244 of 1923

Applicant.

allegations of the defendant, just as if the agreement in the course of the ten instrument requiring registration or not.

The document called itself a receipt given by the defendant to the plaintiffs. It is dated the 11th of November 1919 and its contents may be summarised as follows: "Of the annual rent for the two years 1918-19 and 1919-20 for the land of which I had given you a lease for five years, you have to-day paid me Rs. 85 as the rent for the current year, and you have already paid me the rent for last year and taken a receipt for it, leaving the balance for the next three years which I will take from you in each of those three years with a rent note."

This is no more than a mention of an oral agreement made about eighteen months before; the document clearly does not require registration but can be used as evidence of an admission by the defendant, just as if he had casually mentioned the agreement in the course of a private letter. There is other evidence in support of the finding of the lower Court that the oral agreement was made, though it was hardly necessary. Further the finding that the extent of the damage caused to the plaintiffs was equivalent to Rs. 85 has been accepted by both parties, the plaintiffs expressly and the defendant by his failure to appear in this Court to oppose the application for revision.

For all these reasons the decree of the lower Court dismissing the suit will be set aside and in its place a decree will issue ordering the defendant to pay to the plaintiffs the sum of Rs. 85 and all the costs incurred by them in both Courts. In this Court the Pleader's fee to be shown in the schedule of costs will be fifteen rupees.

Z. K.

Revision allowed.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

June 18, 1925.

Present:—Lord Sumner, Sir John Edge and Mr. Ameer Ali.

BURN AND COMPANY, LIMITED—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

HIS HIGHNESS Thakur Sahib Sree
LUKHDIRJI OF MORVI STATE—
PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Vendor and purchaser—Contract for sale of goods—Time, whether of essence of contract—Breach by buyer—Supply of goods by seller—Subsequent breach by seller—Buyer, whether entitled to damages.

Plaintiff, a ruling Prince, entered into a contract with the defendant Company whereby the latter agreed to supply a certain number of goods wagons to be used for the purposes of the plaintiff's Railway on condition that one-third of the price was to be paid along with the order, another third at the time when the under-frames of the wagons should be wheeled and the balance on delivery. The wagons were required for a metre gauge Railway and delivery was to be made within six months from the date of the order. One-third of the price of the wagons was paid along with the order but there was considerable delay in the construction of the wagons due to war conditions and when the defendant Company called upon the plaintiff to pay the second instalment of the price of the wagons on the under-frames being wheeled, the plaintiff made default and failed to make the payment in accordance with the terms of the contract. The defendant Company thereafter completed the construction of the wagons and delivered a certain number of wagons to the plaintiff, and refused to deliver the remaining wagons until the whole of the price was paid by the plaintiff. As the plaintiff in spite of the repeated demands of the defendant failed to pay the balance of the price the defendant Company disposed of the remaining wagons elsewhere. Thereupon the plaintiff sent the defendant Company a cheque for the second instalment of the price of the wagons and called upon the Company to deliver the remaining wagons and receive the balance of the price. On the failure of the Company to comply with this demand plaintiff filed a suit against the Company to recover damages for non-delivery of the remaining wagons:

Held, (1) that having regard to the times when the three instalments of the contract price were according to the contract to become payable, and to the fact that the manufacture of the wagons involved considerable expenditure by the defendant Company in providing materials for their construction, and in the payment of men who would necessarily be employed in constructing them, and to the fact that it might be difficult to enforce in a British Court or in a Court of the State of which the plaintiff was the ruler payment by the plaintiff of the contract price, it must have been the intention of the parties when the contract was made that time should be of the essence of the contract as to the times when the three instalments of the contract price should be paid; [p. 57, col. 2.]

(2) that when plaintiff had, after he had notice that the under-frames of the wagons had been wheeled, made default in payment of the second instalment of the price, which, in fact, was a refusal by him to perform the contract in its entirety, the defendant Company was entitled to treat the contract as void and to rescind it; [ibid]

(3) that the defendant Company by delivering some of the wagons to the plaintiff treated the contract as a subsisting contract and that inasmuch as the contract price was not payable until all the wagons had been delivered, the defendant Company was not justified in refusing to deliver the remaining wagons till the whole of the price was paid; [ibid.]

(4) that, therefore, the defendant Company had committed a breach of the contract and were liable to the plaintiff in damages. [ibid.]

Appeal from an order of the Calcutta High Court (Sanderson, C. J., and Richardson, J.); dated 27th June 1923, reported as 83 Ind. Cas. 260.

Mr. A. M. Dunne, K. C., and Sir Robert Aoke, for the Appellants.

Sir G. Lowndes, K. C., and Mr T. J. O'Connor, M. P., for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Sir John Edge.—The suit in which this appeal has arisen was brought on the original civil jurisdiction side of the High Court at Calcutta on the 27th August, 1918, by His Highness the then Thakur Sahib of Morvi against Burn and Company, Limited, to recover damages for the alleged conversion of 42 Railway wagons, and for an alleged breach of contract to make and deliver the same wagons. The property in the wagons had never vested in His Highness of Morvi, who had never been, constructively or otherwise in possession of them. The claim for conversion has been dropped. The original plaintiff died and his son, who succeeded him as the Thakur Sahib of Morvi, was on the 19th July 1922, brought on the record as the plaintiff. The original plaintiff was, and his successor, the present plaintiff, is, the proprietor of the Morvi State Railway.

The contract was made between His Highness the then Thakur Sahib of Morvi through the Manager of the Morvi State Railway, his agent, and Burn and Company, Limited, of Howrah and Calcutta, in British India. The contract was for the manufacture of 50 Railway wagons by the defendant Company at the Company's works at Howrah and their delivery to the Morvi State Railway upon certain terms which will be later more fully mentioned. The contract was made by correspondence between the manager of the Morvi State Railway, who lived at Morvi, and the defendant Company at Calcutta. The suit has throughout been treated as a suit upon a contract to which the Indian Contract Act, 1872 (Act IX of 1872), applies.

The correspondence began on the 29th October 1914, by a letter to the defendant Company from the manager of the Morvi State Railway, asking the Company to quote rates for 25 covered wagons and 25 open wagons as per specifications and drawings which he enclosed. The specifications showed that the wagons were to be metre gauge Railway wagons. Between the 29th October, 1914, and the 23rd January, 1915, several letters passed between His Highness's agent and the defendant Company, the result of which was the contract in suit. By the contract which was entered upon the defendant Company agreed to manufacture and to deliver to the Morvi State Railway, upon terms as mentioned, 25 covered wagons, 50 Railway wagons in all, at the price of Rs. 1,825 for each covered wagon and at the price of Rs. 1,375 for each open wagon, the wagon to be in accordance with certain specifications and drawings and the 50 wagons to be delivered in six months from the date of the receipt by the defendant Company of an order for the wagons. The terms of payment were that His Highness of Morvi should pay to the defendant Company one-third of the contract price on the order for the wagons being given, and one-third of the contract price when the under-frames of the wagons should be wheeled, and the remaining one-third when the wagons should be delivered. One-third of the total contract price amounted to Rs. 30,833. The contract contained no provision that the contract time for the delivery of the wagons should be extended in case the defendant Company should be delayed in completing the wagons owing to the war or any other cause beyond the Company's control.

On the 23rd January 1915, His Highness of Morvi, through his agent, sent to the defendant Company his final order for the 50 wagons and said "we have no more drawings to send than we have already sent. From the specifications and drawings sent, you will kindly prepare working drawings in detail and send them for our approval."

After the receipt by the defendant Company of the order of the 23rd January 1915, for the wagons, the defendant Company was much delayed in performing the contract by the difficulties, owing to the war, of obtaining some of the necessary parts of the wagons and the wagons were not ready for delivery at the time specified by the contract. His Highness of Morvi did not at any time exercise such right, if any, as he may have had under the Indian Contract Act, 1872, of determining the contract because the defendants had failed to deliver the wagons in accordance with it.

The agreement that the second instalment of the contract price should be paid by His Highness to the defendant Company when the under-frames of the wagons should be wheeled, of course meant that the second instalment should be promptly paid when the defendants had Morvi, through the Company had fixed the under-frames of the 50 wagons. On the 25th October 1916, the defendants sent by post to the manager of the Morvi State Railway an account, dated 24th October 1916, for Rs. 30,833, for the second instalment, being one-third of the contract price due when the "under-frames are wheeled," and stated in the letter in which the account was enclosed, that it was submitted by them "for favour of payment at your convenience." That letter and the account which was enclosed were notice to His Highness's agent within the course of the post. They were received at Morvi, that the defendant Company had fixed the wheels to the under-frames of the 50 wagons. It was found by Mr. Justice Rankin, who tried the suit, and it has not been disputed, that at the date of that account, the 24th October, 1916, the under-frames had been wheeled. On the 19th November, 1916, the manager of the Morvi State Railway acknowledged the receipt of the Company's letter of the 25th October 1916 and enquired "when the wagons will be completed and despatched," but did not send any payment of the second instalment.

The position which His Highness, through his agent, then took up and maintained for months is illustrated by the following extract from the manager's letter of the 19th November 1916 :—

"It is now more than a year and a half and yet, as we understand from your letter you have come as far as the wheeling of under-frames and at the rate you have gone on there is no knowing when you will finish the work. When we placed the order, you certainly knew the condition of the market, because the war had then been on some months already. Till June even you talked of delay of a few weeks, but it is now several months which may perhaps run into years. In addition to loss of interest on the money locked up with you and trouble and inconvenience we had to pay hire to other Railways and even on payment of hire we could not get timely and sufficient supply and suffered in traffic. In consulting your convenience it was only fair and reasonable that you should have consulted ours. From your opening correspondence, we expected, beside solid and substantial work, that timely execution of this order might lead to future orders.

"We fear the payment of second instalment will remain locked up as the first and shall, therefore, be glad to know definitely when the wagons will be completed and despatched."

In reply to that letter of the 19th November, 1916, the defendant Company wrote to the manager of the Morvi State Railway on the 23rd November, 1916, as follows :—

"Your favour No. 4906 of 1916, dated 19th November 1916. We regret very much that you should write to us in this way as we can assure you we have done all possible to expedite and complete your work, the delay is entirely due to conditions brought about by the war.

"You ask when delivery will be made and we regret we cannot at present inform you, for instance the springs for your buffers although all ready in England cannot be despatched because the Munitions Board have so far not granted the necessary permit for them to be shipped. To help us will you kindly address the Railway Board stating that these springs are urgently wanted (i. e., 200 buffing springs) and should be supplied, send their reply to us and we can then enable our London Office to obtain shipping sanction.

"Your contract has been considered in every possible way and we trust that this trouble regarding one item alone, the buffing springs, will give you an example of the unprecedented and extraordinary conditions that have been in existence for the last 18 months and which grow more onerous and difficult every day."

The springs for the buffers referred to in that letter of the 23rd November, 1916, were apparently Ibbetson springs, which are patent springs and are made only in England. Their Lordships think it only fair to the parties to this suit that some of the difficulties of the situation should be illustrated by the passages which they have quoted.

On the 14th December, 1916, the 4th January, 1917, and the 25th January, 1917, the defendant Company wrote to the manager of the Morvi State Railway asking for payment of the second instalment and received no reply. On the 14th February, 1917, the defendant Company telegraphed to the manager of the Morvi State Railway: "Kindly wire when may expect settlement bill Rs. 30,833 account wagons." That was the account for the second instalment. In reply the Company received from the manager by telegraph the following reply on the 19th February 1917: "No. 87. Your telegram of 14th, matter is referred to proprietor of this Railway." The proprietor was His Highness of Morvi. The reference to His Highness of Morvi did not result in the payment of the second instalment. In their Lordships' opinion His Highness of Morvi had then decided not to perform his contract to pay the second instalment until some future time, and the defendant Company was then entitled under the Indian Contract Act, 1872, to rescind the contract but the Company did not rescind the contract.

By the 20th February, 1917, the defendant Company had completed eight of the contract wagons and on that date forwarded them to the Morvi State Railway and thereby treated the contract as subsisting. On the 27th February 1917, the defendant Company wrote to the manager of the Morvi State Railway enclosing an account dated the 26th February, 1917, for Rs. 5,000 in respect of the eight wagons, and in their letter said " . . . we have wired you to-day as follows: kindly wire why bill Rs. 30,833 account wagons not paid . . . we shall be obliged if you will arrange to remit the amount as well as the amount of the enclosed bill No. 8156 W. for Rs. 5,000 with as little delay as possible . . . "His Highness of Morvi was not bound to accept in part performance of the contract eight wagons, but he did receive them. To the telegram of the 27th February, 1917, the manager of the Morvi State Railway replied by the telegram on the 28th February as follows: "No. 88. Your wire. Refer to this office wire 87 dated 18. Matter referred proprietor." The defendant Company received no other reply to their telegram of the 27th February or to their letter of that date.

On the 5th March, 1917, the defendant Company wrote to the manager of the Morvi State Railway with reference to their account for the second instalment and his telegrams of the 19th and 28th February, and said that the Company had "decided not to despatch any more wagons till your proprietor has paid the bill before mentioned and also that for Rs. 5,000 sent you with our letter of the 27th ultimo." On the 11th April, 1917, the defendant Company wrote to the manager of the Morvi State Railway as follows

"DEAR SIR,

"As we have not received a cheque for the money due to us nor any reply to our letter dated the 5th March we find it necessary to address you again upon this matter and we desire to point out to you that by not paying our bills when they became due for payment you have broken the contract and we shall, therefore, take whatever action appears to us to be necessary for our own interests if we do not receive a satisfactory reply to the letter before the date specified below.

"The wagons could be delivered as soon as we could obtain trucks from the Railway to carry them, but we regret we cannot now permit another of your wagons to leave our works until you pay us in full for the whole order.

"Your action has put us to very considerable expense and very great inconvenience and at the present time your wagons are occupying much valuable space in our works. . . .

The date specified in that letter was the 20th April, 1917. The letter of the 11th April, 1917 was, their Lordships consider, a notice to His Highness of Morvi that the remaining 42 wagons were completely ready for delivery to him on payment of the balance of the contract price which would then be due. On the 21st April, 1917, the manager of the Morvi State Railway telegraphed to the defendant Company as follows: "Your letter though dated eleventh reached here yesterday. Matter referred to proprietor who now in Bombay." No other reply to the defendant Company's letter of the 11th April having been received, the defendant Company wrote to the manager of the Morvi State Railway on the 7th May, 1917, as follows:—

"Re WAGONS

"We desire to call your special attention to our letter, dated the 11th ultimo and to inform you that it is now imperative that we receive a satisfactory reply to this letter at once otherwise we shall have no option but to settle the matter without further reference to you. Kindly favour us with a reply by return."

To which the defendant Company re-received the following

May, 1917:—

"Re Y NS.
"With reference to your special reminder No. O M 231/H., dated the 7th instant, I have to inform you that His Highness the Thakore, proprietor of this Railway, is not here at present as he has gone to Matheran, a hilly station for the hot weather, and so I have forwarded your letter to him and I will let you know on hearing from him."

No other reply to the defendant Company's letter of the 7th May having been received, the Solicitors of the defendant Company on the 4th July, 1917, wrote to the manager of the Morvi State Railway as follows:—

"Sir,
"Supply of Wagons from Messrs. Burn and Co., Ltd.

"Our clients, Messrs. Burn and Co., Ltd., have instructed us to address you with reference to the contract for the purchase by your Railway of 50 goods wagons from them. The terms of the contract were: Payment as to $\frac{1}{3}$ rd with the order, $\frac{1}{3}$ rd when the under-frame was wheeled and the balance on delivery. The first instalment was duly paid but the second instalment has not yet been paid, in spite of repeated demands, and in spite of the fact that our clients have actually delivered 8 wagons. In the existing circumstances of the trade, it is obvious that our clients cannot keep the undelivered balance of the wagons locked up indefinitely and, as you have failed to carry out your part of the contract, the only course now open to them is to dispose of the wagons elsewhere as best they can but before doing so they are prepared to give you the opportunity of purchasing these wagons outright by paying the total amount of the original contract price outstanding and we are accordingly instructed to give you notice, as we hereby do, that unless the full amount of the original contract price is paid to our clients or to us as their agents within 10 days from the date hereof the undelivered wagons will be disposed of by our clients as they may think fit.

"Yours faithfully,

"Orr, Dignam and Co."

On the 18th July, 1917, the defendant Company's Solicitors wrote to the manager of the Morvi State Railway as follows:—

"Sir,

"As neither our clients nor ourselves have received any reply to our letter to you of the 4th instant our clients have now taken steps to dispose of the undelivered wagons elsewhere and have made up an account the balance due to the Railway after deducting the costs of the wagons delivered from the deposit made to be Rs. 15,833. We enclose you herewith copy of this account together with our cheque for Rs. 15,833 and shall be obliged if you will let us have a formal receipt for this amount by return.

"Yours faithfully,

"Orr, Dignam and Co."

After the 18th July, 1917, the defendant Company sold the 42 wagons to the Mysore State Railway. On the 22nd September, 1917, Messrs. Sanderson and Co., the Solicitors of His Highness of Morvi, wrote to the defendant Company's Solicitors saying that they were instructed to ask for the delivery of the 42 wagons still undelivered, enclosing a cheque for Rs. 30,833, the amount of the second instalment and stating that their clients would pay the third instalment, immediately on the receipt and erection of the wagons in accordance with the terms of the contract. It may be assumed that the cheque was returned. The rest of the correspondence is not material.

As has been mentioned, the suit was tried by Mr. Justice Rankin. It was contended on behalf of the defendant Company that the payments of the instalments of the contract price at the times specified for them were of the essence of the contract. In support of that contention it was urged that the terms as to the payment of the first and second instalments showed that time was of the essence of the contract; that the performance by the Company of the contract involved the expenditure of very considerable sums of money and the occupation of the Company's workshops by the large number of bulky articles; that metre gauge Railways did not form a market where such wagons could be easily disposed of; that the wagons had to be made in accordance with special specifications; and that plaintiff was a person who could not be sued as of right. Mr. Justice Rankin observed in his judgment that the case depended entirely upon the correspondence, the correct appreciation of the general cir-circumstances of the case, and of the rules of law to be applied, and he said:—

"On the whole and with some difficulty, I have come to the conclusion, looking at the circumstances and the letters, that in this case time was not of the essence of the contract."

The letters to which the learned Judge referred were letters of the 28th December, 1914, the 10th January, 1915, the 16th January, 1915, and the 23rd January, 1915, which in their Lordships' opinion do not support the conclusion at which he arrived.

Mr. Justice Rankin, having observed that the defendant Company had, on the 18th July, 1917, sent to the plaintiff's Solicitors the letter of that date enclosing a cheque for the balance due, on the footing that the contract was cancelled, held that the defendant Company had broken the contract, and gave His Highness of Morvi, the present plaintiff, a decree for damages, which, in their Lordships' opinion, were not excessive. The balance for which the cheque was sent was the balance due of the first instalment, which had been paid, after deducting the price of the 8 wagons.

From that decree the defendant Company appealed under the Letters Patent. The appeal was heard by Sir Lancelot Sander-son, C. J., and Mr. Justice Richardson. The Chief Justice in his judgment said:

"But for the conduct of the defendants, I should have thought that with regard to the payment of the second instalment time was of the essence of the contract. The defendants were under contract to build 50 wagons. In my judgment they were not bound to proceed with the work, after the wheels were attached to the under-frames, until the plaintiff paid the second instalment. They surely could not be expected to keep the wagons, partly built, standing in their works, for an indefinite time, or for so long as the plaintiff chose to keep them waiting for the second instalment. Having regard to the terms of the contract and the nature of the work to be done by the defendants, in my opinion, prima facie, time would be of the essence of the contract.

"The defendants, however, for some reason known to themselves, did not treat it as of the essence of the contract.

"They actually delivered 8 wagons in February, 1917, although the second instalment, which had been demanded in October, 1917 (1916), had not been paid, and although as far as could be seen there was no immediate prospect of the second instalment being paid."

The Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Richardson agreeing that the defendant Company broke the contract on the 18th July, 1917, the appeal was by their decree dismissed. From that decree this appeal has been brought.

Their Lordships, having regard to the times when the three instalments of the contract price were according to the contract to become payable, and to the fact that the manufacture of the 50 wagons would involve considerable expenditure by the defendant Company in providing materials for their construction, and in the payment of men who would necessarily be employed in constructing them, and to the fact that it might be difficult to enforce in a British Court or in a Court of the State of Morvi payment by His Highness of Morvi of the contract price, are of opinion that it must have been the intention of the parties when the contract was made that time should be of the essence of the contract as to the times when the three instalments of the contract price should be paid. When His Highness of Morvi had, after he had notice that the under-frames of the wagons had been wheeled, made default in payment of the second instalment of the contract, which was, in effect, a refusal by him to perform the contract in its entirety, the defendant Company was entitled to treat the contract as void and to rescind it, but the defendant Company did not rescind it; on the contrary, the defendant Company, by delivering 8 of the wagons in February, 1917, to the Morvi State Railway, treated the contract as a subsisting contract. The defendant Company was not on that delivery of the 8 wagons entitled to insist on a then payment for them. The contract price was not payable until the 50 wagons had been delivered.

In the view of the facts of this case which their Lordships take, and of the law which they consider is to be applied to those facts, they find that the defendant Company finally broke the contract in July, 1917. The 18th of that month may be taken as the date when defendant Company finally broke the contract.

Their Lordships are of opinion that this appeal should be dismissed with costs, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

Z. K.

Solicitors for Waltons & Co.

Solicitors for Watkins & Hunt

Appeal dismissed.

Appellants:—Messrs.

Respondent:—Messrs.

— —

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 186-B OF 1923.

July 18, 1924.

Present—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

SARJABAI—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

YADEOSA—DEFENDANT—NON-APPLICANT.

Practice—Evidence not relevant to pleas—Party, whether can succeed.

A party cannot succeed upon evidence which is not relevant to his pleas. [p. 58, col. 2.]

Civil revision against a decree of the Small Cause Court, Mehkar, in Civil Suit No. 329 of 1923, dated the 8th August 1923.

Mr. G. R. Deo, for the Applicant.

Mr. P. C. Dutt, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—On the basis of a bond, dated 14th December 1918, Ex. P-6, executed by Bhagwan and Deorao in favour of Gangaramsa Lad for Rs. 30, Gangaramsa instituted suit on 14th December 1921 against Deorao after the death of Bhagwan, alleging that the original was stolen away. Gangaramsa had also impleaded his own sons Yadeosa, Madhosa and Kesheosa as co defendants in the above Suit No. 1164 of 1921. The defence of Deorao was that the creditor's son Yadeosa made a demand for the debt and offered to return the bond as satisfied if he was paid 10 pailis of jewar of the Mehkar standard, that accordingly he delivered the jewar and got back the bond. This, defence, however, failed and the claim was decreed in that suit, against Deorao for Rs. 40-12-0 plus Rs. 10 as cost. Gangaramsa discharged the other defendants from that suit and got a decree against Deorao alone. Deorao afterwards on 7th March 1923 satisfied the decree by payment to Gangaramsa through his Pleader Ex. P-5. Before such payment was made Deorao filed present suit on 23rd February 1923 for the recovery of the value of the jewar Rs. 35 and for cost of Suit No. 1164 of 1921 decreed against him and for interest on both these sums, total Rs. 55, against Yadeosa to whom he had alleged the jewar was delivered and from whom he had obtained back the bond as satisfied. In the present case the defendant Yadeosa made no detailed defence but denied the allegations in the plaint and thus denied the plaintiff's claim also. This point blank denial was rather peculiar. The plaintiff examined four witnesses including himself and Gangaramsa and proved that he had delivered four pailis of jewar to Yadeosa and in return for the same got the bond dated 14th December 1918 Ex. P-6. He also proved that inspite of this payment Gangaramsa got a decree and realised the same from him. The Small Cause Court Judge found all these points in favour of the present plaintiff but on the question as to whether plaintiff could claim the jewar and costs of the Suit No. 1164 of 1921 from Yadeosa, he held that the payment of the jewar was made inspite of notice to the plaintiff's father asking him not to give the money to any of his sons. The Small Cause Court Judge thought apparently that the payment was a voluntary payment and could not be recovered. The claim has been dismissed and the plaintiff has consequently come up in revision to this Court.

I think this petition of revision must succeed. There was no plea on behalf of the defendant that the payment to him was voluntary and could not, therefore, be recovered back from him. He had simply denied the allegations in the plaint which only meant that he had not received the jewar and was, therefore, not liable for the claim. He never set up any alternative case, that assuming the delivery was made to him it was not recoverable from him for certain reasons. The evidence of Gangaramsa that he had given notice to Deorao's father asking him not to give the money to any of his sons was, therefore, outside the scope of his pleadings and, therefore, inadmissible. A party cannot succeed upon evidence which is not relevant to his pleas. The apparent injustice which the plaintiff has suffered by being required to pay the same debt to two persons has, it appears, not attracted the attention of the Judge. It is impossible under these circumstances to uphold his decision. The plaintiff is, in my opinion, clearly entitled to recover back the value of the jewar delivered by him to the defendant. As regards his claim for interest I do not think he can succeed in holding the defendant liable for the same, because I do not find that he served any written notice of demand on defendant intimating that he would charge interest. As regards his claim for Rs. 10 which he paid as costs of the former suit to Gangaramsa, I do not see any reason why he should not be held entitled to claim the same. If Yadeosa had given credit to the plaintiff and admitted the fact of the delivery, to his father, the previous litigation would in all probabilities have been saved and the costs avoided. The defendant is, therefore, liable for making good that amount also. The plaintiff's claim for Rs. 45 plus proportionate costs will have to be decreed and the rest of the claim dismissed. Since the filing of this petition of revision Deorao died and his widow has been substituted in his place. As she has not yet obtained the succession certificate for this debt due to her husband from the defendant, I cannot at once pass a decree in her favour and as the obtaining of the certificate may involve some delay, I think it more expedient to remand the case to the lower Court for passing a decree as soon as the succession certificate will be produced before it by the original plaintiff's widow. Costs of this application will be paid by the non-applicant who will bear his own.

K. S. D.

Case remanded.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.ORIGINAL CIVIL SUITS NOS. 1100 OF 1924 AND 621 OF 1925.

April 23, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Page.

WALTER MITCHELL—PLAINTIFF

versus

A. K. TENNENT—DEPENDENT.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92, proviso (3), scope of—Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881), s. 6—Post-dated cheque, whether can be sued upon as cheque—Stamp, necessary—Oral agreement that cheque is not to be presented till after the happening of a certain contingency, whether can be proved—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 23, 30—Obligation connected with betting—
Public policy.

Neither in India nor in England has the Legislature gone so far as to enact in express terms that betting transactions are illegal, but both in India and in England the Legislature regards it as undesirable in the public interest that any assistance should be afforded by Courts of Law to enforce obligations which have been created in co-ing transactions. [p. 60

A post-dated cheque payable otherwise than the meaning of s. 6 of and may be sued upon [p. 61, col. 2.]

A post-dated cheque although it bears a stamp in respect of a cheque payable in respect of [p. 61, col. 1.]

Oral evidence to contradict or vary or alter the terms of a negotiable instrument, the execution of which and the consideration for which are admitted, cannot be adduced having regard to the provisions of s. 92 of the Evidence Act. [p. 61, col. 2.]

The provisions of proviso (3) to s. 92 of the Evidence Act are inapplicable in a case in which an obligation under the written contract has been attached. If the effect of the alleged contemporaneous oral agreement is merely to suspend the performance of the obligation contained in the written contract, evidence of such oral agreement cannot be admitted. On the other hand, it is permissible to adduce evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement under which the parties to the written contract agree that until the happening of a certain event no obligation whatever under the written agreement should attach, or, in other words that until the condition precedent has been fulfilled, the written agreement should be and remain inoperative and of no effect. [ibid.]

Defendant gave a post-dated cheque to the plaintiff on the understanding that the cheque was not to be presented for payment until and unless a certain dispute between the parties had been decided in a certain manner. Plaintiff brought a suit to recover the amount of the cheque from the defendant without taking steps to have the dispute decided :

Held, (1) that the effect of the agreement between the parties was not to contradict or to vary the terms of the cheque but to create a condition precedent to the attachment of any obligation under the cheque which would remain inoperative until after the adjudication of the dispute had taken place ; [p. 63, col. 2.]

(2) that the agreement, therefore, fell within the purview of proviso (3) to s. 92 of the Evidence Act and could be proved ; [ibid.]

(3) that consequently the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed as premature. [ibid.]

Case-law referred to.

Messrs. Pugh and Ameer Ali, for the Plaintiff.

Messrs. Langford James and Surita, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—By consent the evidence which has been adduced before me is to be treated as evidence in both suits subject to the extent to which the evidence or any part thereof may be relevant to particular issues in either of the two suits.

The matters in controversy arise out of a dispute relating to an alleged order given by Tennent to Mitchell to back a horse called "Better Hope" at the Barrackpore Races on the 2nd April 1923. I take Colonel Tennent's suit first, action with betting or wagering. [p. 61.]

which is not expressed to be demand is a cheque within Negotiable Instruments Act after the due date. [p. 61, col. 2.]

admissible in evidence representing duty payable not the ad valorem duty Bill of Exchange. [p. 61, col. 2.]

The claim in this sum of Rs. 9,000 is to recover the balance of a sum which it is all the balance of a sum which it is all was received by Mitchell as the pro of a bet made by Mitchell on behalf of agent, the residue Rs. 11,000 having paid on the 4th April, 1923 by Mitchell to Tennent. There is an alternative claim to recover Rs. 20,000 under an alleged agreement set out in the plaint.

Now, in my opinion, the first claim in this suit is wholly misconceived. Neither in this country nor in England has the Legislature gone so far as to enact in express terms that betting transactions are illegal, but it is clear that both in India and in England the Legislature regards it as undesirable in the public interest that any assistance should be afforded by Courts of Law to enforce obligations which have been created in connection with betting or wagering transactions. In India it has expressly been enacted that "agreements by way of wager are void; and no suit shall be brought for recovering anything alleged to be won on any wager or entrusted to any person to abide the result of any game or other uncertain event on which any wager is made" (Contract Act, s. 30). Similar provisions obtain in England, but up till 1892 it was not deemed necessary on grounds of public policy in England to include within the ambit of the legislation relating to betting and wagering transactions in which a principal had instructed an agent to back a horse for him. Accordingly, it was held by a majority of the Court of Appeal in 1881, confirming the decision of Mr. Justice Hawkins, that where a principal had instructed an agent to make a bet for the principal, and the bet had been lost, although the agent who had in fact made the bet was not liable to a suit to recover the sum which he had staked, nevertheless, if the agent paid the bet which he had lost, he was entitled to recover from his principal the sum which he had paid on his behalf. Brett, M. R., however, in a dissenting judgment, observed that "the plaintiff's business, although it may not be illegal, is directly objected to by the law, and the contracts made by him in his business cannot be enforced: it is a business of which the law ought not to take notice, and, therefore, the inconvenience and the loss, which the plaintiff may suffer in his objectionable business, form no ground for an action for revoking an authority which the principal ought not to have given": Read v. Anderson (1). Similarly in Bridger v. Savage (2), the Court of Appeal decided that where a principal had instructed an agent to make a bet for him, and the agent had done so and had received the proceeds of the bet, the principal was entitled to recover from the agent the sum which he had received on the principal's behalf. Now, in 1892 an Act was passed by which the Legislature enacted that in the circumstances that I have set out the agent would not be entitled to recover from the principal the moneys which he had paid to the bookmaker in respect of the bet which was lost. The Legislature must, I think, have been moved to pass the Gaming Act of 1892 because it was regarded that public opinion had become more enlightened, and that the exigencies of public policy demanded that further restrictions should be placed upon the efficacy of wagering transactions. Now, although legislation has not been passed to overrule the converse proposition of law laid down in Bridgers v. Savage (2), the principle which underlies the legislation of 1892 must apply, in my opinion, as well to the one set of circumstances as to the other. If it is regarded as contrary to the public interest that the agent who has effected a bet, and has paid money to the bookmaker on behalf of his principal, should be entitled to re-imbursement from the principal. I fail to see why it is not equally against public policy to permit the principal where his agent has received the proceeds of a successful bet to recover from the agent the sum which he has received. If and when it becomes necessary to determine that question, it must not be taken that I should hold without further argument that in this country a principal is entitled to recover the proceeds of a bet which has been received on his behalf by his agent. It seems to me that to permit him to do so would be to act in opposition to the dictates of public policy relating to betting transactions. It is unnecessary however, finally to determine that question in this case, because no evidence has been adduced to prove that Mitchell backed "Better Hope" on behalf of Tennent, or otherwise, or at all, or that he received the proceeds of the bet see also Cohen v. Kittell (3), Cheshire and Co. v. Vaughan Bros. and Co. (4) and Maskell v. Hill (5).

(1) (1884) 13 Q. B. D. 779 at p. 782; 53 L. J. Q. B. 532; 51 L. T. 55; 32 W. R. 950; 49 J. P. 4.

(2) (1885) 15 Q. B. D. 363; 54 L. J. Q. B. 464; 53 L. T. 129; 33 W. R. 891; 49 J. P. 725.

With respect to the alternative claim, if the plaintiff proves the agreement which he has alleged, his cause of action (if any) has not yet arisen. For these reasons, in my opinion, the suit by Tennent against Mitchell is misconceived, and must be dismissed with costs.

As regards the suit brought by Mitchell against Tennent different matters arise for consideration. The suit is brought to recover the amount due under four cheques drawn by Tennent in favour of Mitchell amounting in the aggregate to Rs. 11,000. The first cheque bears date 1st October 1921. It is drawn in favour of Mitchell by Tennent for Rs. 2,500; there are two similar cheques, dated 1st November, and 1st December, and a fourth cheque dated 1st January, for Rs. 3,500. The execution of these cheques is admitted, and the payment of Rs. 11,000 as the consideration for executing the same is also admitted. In the alternative, Mitchell claims the like sum as being money lent and re-payable upon demand, such demand having been made before the suit was filed.

Now, the first defence which is raised is that the cheques in suit are not cheques at all because, although they purport to have been executed on the 1st October, 1st November, 1st December 1923, and 1st January 1924, respectively, in truth and in fact all of them were drawn by Tennent and delivered to Mitchell on the 4th April 1923. In my opinion, there is no substance in this contention. A cheque is defined in the Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881, s. 6) as "a Bill of Exchange drawn on a specified banker and not expressed to be payable otherwise than on demand." In India a post-dated cheque is admissible in evidence although it bears a stamp representing duty payable in respect of a cheque, and not the ad valorem duty payable in respect of a Bill of Exchange: Ramen Chetty v. Mahomed Ghose (6), Motilal Shival v. Jagmohandas Vundravandas (7),

The cheques in suit are "not expressed to be payable otherwise than on demand" and, in my opinion, such post-dated cheques are cheques, after the due dates of which cheques: Royal Bank of Scotland v. Tottenham (8).

Now, since these cheques are negotiable instruments, the execution of which and the consideration for which are admitted, it is not permissible, pursuant to the provisions of s. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act, to adduce oral evidence to contradict or vary or alter the terms thereof. But under s. 92, proviso (3), it is provided that "the existence of any separate oral agreement constituting a condition precedent to the attaching of any obligation under any such contract, grant or disposition of property, may be proved." Now, the true construction, in my opinion, to be placed upon that proviso is that the provisions thereof are inapplicable in a case in which any obligation under the written contract has attached and that if the effect of the alleged contemporaneous oral agreement is merely to suspend the performance of the obligations contained in the written contract, evidence of such oral agreement cannot be admitted. On the other hand, it is permissible to adduce evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement under which the parties to the written contract agreed that until the happening of a certain event no obligation whatever under the written agreement should attach, or, in other words, that until the condition precedent has been fulfilled, the written agreement should be and remain inoperative and of no effect: Jugtanund Misser v. Nerghan Singh (9), Cohen v. Bank of Bengal (10), Ramjibun Serougy v. Oghore Nath Chatterjee (11) and Vishun Ramchandra Joshi v. Ganesh Krishna Sathe (12).

Now, the question of fact which I have to determine in this suit is whether Tennent has proved to my satisfaction a separate agreement which amounts to a condition precedent within the meaning of proviso (3) of s. 92 of the Evidence Act. The material facts are as follows: A dispute arose on

(3) (1889) 22 Q.B.D. 680; 58 L. J. Q. B. 241; 60 L. T. 932; 37 W. R. 400; 53 J. P. 469.

(4) (1920) 3 K. B. 240; 89 L. J. K. B. 1168; 123 L. T. 487; 84 J. P. 233; 25 Com. Cas. 242.

(5) (1921) 3 K. B. 157; 90 L. J. K. B. 1332; 125 L. T. 827; 65 S. J. 714; 37 T. L. R. 841.

(6) 16 C. 432; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 285.

(7) 6 Bom. L. R. 699.

(8) (1894) 2 Q. B. 715; 64 L. J. Q. B. 99; 9 R. 569; 71 L. T. 168; 43 W. R. 22.

(9) 6 C. 433; 7 C. L. R. 347; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 282.

(10) 2 A. 598; 5 Ind. Jur. 151; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 957.

(11) 25 C. 401; 2 C. W. N. 188; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 266.

(12) 63 Ind. Cas. 673; 45 B. 1155; 23 Bom. L. R. 488.

the 2nd April 1923 during the course of the racing at Barrackpore to whether Tennent had instructed Mitchell to back a horse which ran in one of the races, viz., "Better Hope", Rs. 5,000 each way, that is, for a win and for a place. Tennent consistently has maintained that such an order was given to Mitchell. On the other hand, Mitchell has protested with equal vigour that no such order was given to him. "Better Hope" won the race. I do not propose to determine that issue in this suit for the following reasons: after the race was over Tennent and Mitchell discussed the disputed order, but could arrive at no satisfactory conclusion as to what should be done for the purpose of settling the matter. On the morning of the 4th April, however, Mitchell and Tennent went together to the Royal Calcutta Turf Club, and saw Captain Howard, the Secretary. Captain Howard refused officially to interfere in the matter, but stated that each of the parties had better put up a case which he would lay before the Stewards of the Turf Club. At that time both Mitchell and Tennent had expressed their willingness to have the question as to whether this order had been given, and the indebtedness (if any) of Mitchell thereunder, adjudicated upon by some impartial person or persons. After leaving the Turf Club the parties repaired to Spence's Hotel, and either at Spence's Hotel, as Tennent alleges, or at Tennent's place of business, as Mitchell asserts, an agreement was finally arrived at between the parties. Mitchell stated that the final arrangement which was reached at Tennent's place of business was to the following effect; there was a balance of Rs. 1,500 in respect of racing commissions executed by him for Tennent, which was due and owing by Tennent. On the other hand there was Tennent's claim for Rs. 25,000 in respect of the alleged order to Mitchell to back "Better Hope". Mitchell stated that at that time he thought that Tennent was a man of substance and in a good position, and that he could assist Mitchell by supporting Mitchell's application to obtain a license as a bookmaker from the Turf Club, and that some four or five weeks previously he had promised to grant a loan to Tennent to help him to tide over his immediate financial difficulties if Tennent failed to make money by backing horses at the Barrackpore Meeting. He further stated that finally it was arranged between the parties that if Tennent gave up his disputed claim to Rs. 25,000 Mitchell would forego the debt of Rs. 1,500 which admittedly Tennent owed to him. He further stated that as Tennent was agreeable that this course should be taken the parties agreed that Mitchell should lend Tennent Rs. 11,000 upon the security and in accordance with the terms of the four cheques in suit. I am unable to accept Mitchell's story as regards this alleged arrangement. It seems to me that such a story is entirely inconsistent with two admitted facts: (1) that on that very day Tennent wrote a letter addressed to the SS. "Naldera" at Bombay to Mitchell, who in fact travelled by that vessel to Australia, the terms of which are inconsistent with the arrangement which Mitchell alleges had been arrived at; (2) on the 11th May 1923 Mitchell in Sidney received from the Turf Club a letter enclosing Tennent's application for the adjudication of the dispute with reference to this alleged order, and calling upon Mitchell to state what he had to say in respect thereof. To that letter Mitchell sent no reply. If the matter had finally been settled in the sense which Mitchell stated in the witness-box, to my mind the natural and reasonable course for Mitchell to take would have been to have written to the Stewards of the Turf Club informing them that there was nothing to adjudicate upon inasmuch as the matter had been amicably and finally settled in the sense which he stated in the witness-box. Nowhere in any document at any time has Mitchell set out the terms of this alleged agreement, and, in my opinion, no such agreement was ever arrived at. On the other hand, Tennent gave his version of the agreement which was arrived at on the 4th April at Spence's Hotel, and in considering which of the two stories ought to be accepted, it must be borne in mind that until the written statement was filed in Mitchell's suit Tennent had not put into writing the terms of the agreement to which he deposed in the witness-box, and further that both in the letter to Mitchell to which I have referred, and in his application to the Turf Club, Tennent had referred to a loan from Mitchell. According to Tennent after the interview which admittedly the parties had with Captain Howard in the morning of the 4th April Tennent was fortified in the view he held that any reasonable Tribunal would find in his favour if an enquiry were to be held in respect of the disputed order. On the other hand, there is no doubt that Mitchell was extremely dissatisfied with the result of the interview with Captain Howard. Tennent stated that at Spence's Hotel both he and Mitchell maintained that his own story was the correct one. What was to happen? How was the dispute to be settled? Now, racing men are accustomed, and rightly accustomed, to have their debts of honour settled promptly; ex concessis Mitchell was leaving India that very day, and it was obviously in harmony with the environment in which they as racing men spend so much of their time that the matter should forthwith be settled. It was important for Tennent, because it was most undesirable, as he was so closely connected with racing circles, that a dispute of this nature should remain outstanding. He was also anxious that the matter should immediately be settled, because the whole of the liability in respect of this bet had not been undertaken by himself, and he had to meet his obligations to his friends. It was also extremely desirable in the interest of Mitchell that the matter should immediately be adjusted, for Mitchell had been a bookmaker, and was anxious to be reinstated, and to obtain a license to "stand up" at the races in Calcutta and Barrackpore. He was also extremely anxious to obtain the good offices of Tennent in order to enable him to obtain a license to carry on business as a bookmaker. Now, in these circumstances, it was only natural that some arrangement should have been arrived at. Tennent's version of the arrangement which was arrived at was to this effect. Mitchell stated that he must leave Calcutta that every afternoon, and that he was going to Australia, but that he would be back in Calcutta in September. Mitchell urged that under the circumstances the matter could not be adjudicated upon until he came back, and suggested that the best way to get over the immediate difficulty was that he should let Tennent have Rs. 11,000 (which was about half of the sum that Tennent claimed), and that when he came back in September the dispute could immediately be submitted to the arbitrament of some one or more impartial persons; and that if it was decided that no order had been given, and that Mitchell was not liable to pay Rs. 20,000 or any sum to Tennent, after the adjudication had taken place. Tennent should re-pay the Rs. 11,000 which Mitchell had handed to him. On the other hand, if the adjudication resulted in a manner favourable to Tennent, an order was that Mitchell was bound to pay Tennent, then it was suggested that Rs. 11,000 should be retained by Tennent, and that Mitchell should pay to Tennent any further sum which might have been awarded to him. Tennent agreed to this arrangement, and suggested that if the money was given to him he should give a receipt for it. Mitchell, on the other hand, stated that he would not be content with a receipt, but would like to have something tangible as security, such as cheques; Tennent after some demur agreed, and the first cheque was dated 1st October and the other cheques on subsequent dates because Mitchell had assured Tennent that he would return in September and the matter would be decided between them before the 1st October.

Now, in my opinion, that is the substance of the agreement which was concluded between the parties, and the effect of that agreement was not to contradict or to vary the terms of the four cheques, but to create a condition precedent to the attachment of any obligation under the four cheques which would remain inoperative until after the adjudication had taken place. In my opinion, such an agreement comes within the terms of proviso (3) of s. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act. Now, what is the effect of finding, as I do, that an agreement was effected between the parties in the sense that I have just indicated? It is this, that at the date when Mitchell filed his suit the condition precedent to any obligation under the agreement attaching had not been fulfilled. The same result would follow if the claim were to be founded upon the consideration for the bills, or, in other words, if the suit was for the re-payment of money lent. In either case, on the date when he filed the suit Mitchell had no present cause of action. It follows, therefore, that Mitchell's suit is premature and must be dismissed with costs. The parties having agreed that the Court should allocate the liability to pay costs as it deems fit, the costs must be allocated in this manner: Mitchell must pay two-thirds and Tennent one-third thereof, having regard to the fact that Mitchell has lost on what I think is the main issue in this case, viz., as to who ther there was an agreement within proviso (3) of s. 92 of the Indian Evidence Act.

Z. K.

Suit dismissed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 995 of 1918.

February 11, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.

FIRM OF CHOTUMAL-BULCHAND—

PLAINTIFFS

versus

FIRM OF LILARAM-LAKHMICHAND—

DEFENDANTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXVI, rr. 2, 7, 8—Evidence recorded on commission—Party other than one at whose instance evidence taken, whether can exhibit it.

Where the evidence of a witness is taken on commission at the instance of a party who refuses to exhibit it, it is competent for any other party to do so, if it so likes.

Kusum Kumari Roy v. Satya Ranjan Das, 30 C. 993; 7 C. W. N. 784 and Hemanta Kumari v. Banku Behari Sikdar, 9 C. W. N. 794, distinguished.

Mr. G. A. Kikla, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Kodumal Lekhraj, for the Defendants.

ORDER.—In this suit the defendants applied for examination on commission of the witness Radhakishen son of Seth Gerimal. He has been examined on commission, but the defendants are not prepared to have his evidence exhibited. The plaintiffs, on the other hand, have asked permission to do so. Mr. Kodumal on behalf of the defendants objects to this evidence going in on a two-fold ground. Firstly, he says that as the commission had issued at his instance, he alone has the right to have it exhibited, and secondly, that two other Suits Nos. 1285 of 1920 and 535 of 1922 which are connected with this suit to a certain extent, are suits to which this witness is a party. There is an order of this Court that the evidence in the present suit is to be treated as evidence in those suits. As he is a party to those suits, it would be virtually admitting his evidence in those suits without his appearing in Court and being examined in the presence of the Court so as to enable the Court to form an opinion as to how far he is speaking the truth. Mr. Kodumal also contends that this witness is a hostile witness, that he has avoided answering certain questions, has failed to produce his account-books and that he has purposely kept away from Karachi in order to avoid his being examined in Court.

With regard to the first objection, I do not think it can prevail. It is open to the plaintiffs to say that as the defendants had applied for examining this witness on commission, they refrained from doing so, and that if the defendants had not so applied, they would themselves in their turn have asked for a commission. Under O. XXVI, r. 2, C. P. C., a commission may be issued for the examination of a witness by the Court either suo moto or on being moved by any party. Under O. XXVI, r. 7, C. P. C., when the commission evidence is certified to the Court, it forms part of the record of the suit. Rule 8 contains no limitation requiring such evidence to be read as evidence only at the instance of the party who originally applied for the issue of commission. All that r. 8 contemplates is that it shall not be read without the consent of the party against whom it is offered. It may, therefore, be read at the instance of any party to the suit. Mr. Kodumal has drawn my attention to the cases of Kusum Kumari Roy v. Satya Ranjan Das (1) and Hemanta Kumari v. Banku Behari Sikdar (2) to show that according to the practice of the High Court of Calcutta on the Original Side, the party who has applied for commission to issue, can alone tender it in evidence. But whatever the practice of the Calcutta High Court on the Original Side may be, it is not warranted by the provisions of O. XXVI, r. 8, C. P. C., by which this Court is governed. There is also a note in Mulla's Commentaries on r. 8 to the effect that, a practice quite contrary to that of the High Court of Calcutta on its Original Side, prevails in the moffusil. On this ground I am not prepared to exclude the evidence of Radhakishendas from being exhibited in this case at the instance of the plaintiffs. It will, however, be open to the defendant to show that Radhakishen is a hostile witness that he is interested in the plaintiffs, and that in view of the vague nature of his evidence, or on account of his having withheld certain books no weight should be attached to it.

With regard to the other objection as to his evidence being treated as evidence in Suits Nos. 1285 of 1920 and 535 of 1922, I do not propose to pass any orders now. I think subject to what the other side may say in those suits, it would be open to Mr. Kodumal to urge that so far as those suits are concerned, Radhakishen being one of the parties, should go into the witness-box and that unless he does so, the evidence taken on commission and exhibited in this case should not be treated as evidence in those cases. I, therefore, allow the evidence of Radhakishen to be exhibited at present in this case only.

(1) 30 C. 999; 7 C. W. N. 784;

(2) 9 C. W. N. 794.

Z. K.

Order accordingly.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 94 OF 1922.

May 29, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and

Mr. Justice Adami.

KANHAIYA LAL SAHU—PLAINTIFF

—APPELLANT

versus

Musammatt SUGA KUER—DEFENDANT

—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Mithila School—Adoption, kritima form of—Karta putra, rights of—Natural born son, whether excludes karta putra from inheritance.

Under the karta putra form of adoption the adopted son does not lose his status in his natural family, although he acquires a status as a son of his adoptive father. No ceremonies or sacrifices are necessary to the validity of this particular form of adoption. All that is necessary is the consent of the adoptee which involves the adoptee being an adult. Although such an adoptee does not lose his rights of inheritance in his natural family and takes the inheritance of his adoptive father, he does not succeed to the property of his adoptive father's father or other collateral relations nor of the wife of his adoptive father or her relations. In the case of such an adoption there is no contract that the adopted son would in all events succeed to the property of his adoptive father. [p. 69, col. 1; p. 70, col. 2.]

Under the Mithila School of Hindu Law a natural born son is entitled to exclude every other kind of son, including a karta putra, from sharing with him in the estate of his father. [p. 71, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Darbhanga, dated the 3rd January 1922.

Messrs. K. P. Jayaswal, S. M. Gupta and Md. Hasan Jan, for the Appellant.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick and L. K. Jha, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—Although I differ from the learned District Judge in regard to both the questions decided by him, I think that the decree pronounced by him is right and that it ought to be affirmed.

The plaintiff claims to have been adopted by Khub Lal as his karta putra on the 26th January 1915. Khub Lal died on the 28th December 1915 and a posthumous son Hanuman Prashad was born to him who, however, died shortly afterwards. The plaintiff contends that notwithstanding the birth of a posthumous son, he is entitled to succeed to the estate of Khub Lal to the exclusion of the defendant, who is the widow of Khub Lal and who is in possession of the estate, not as the heiress of Khub Lal, but as the heiress of her deceased son Hanuman Prashad. Two questions were raised in the litigation; first, the question of fact, namely, whether the plaintiff was adopted by Khub Lal as his karta putra; and, secondly the question of law, namely, whether, assuming that he was so adopted, he is entitled to succeed to the properties in the events which have happened. The learned District Judge held that the adoption was not proved and decided the question of fact in favour of the defendant. In regard to the other question raised before him, he thought that the plaintiff would have been entitled to 1/4th share in the estate of Khub Lal had he succeeded in proving his adoption. In my opinion, the plaintiff has established the factum of his adoption, but he is not entitled to succeed to the estate of Khub Lal having regard to the fact that a son was born to Khub Lal subsequent to the plaintiff's adoption.

I will first deal with the question of fact. Khub Lal had three daughters, Tapeswar Kuer, Dhano Kuer and Muneswar Kuer of whom Dhano Kuer and Muneswar Kuer were alive at the date of the alleged adoption. The plaintiff is the son of Tapeswar Kuer who died many years ago. Khub Lal had also a son who died in his infancy. It is the common case that Kanhaiya Lal the plaintiff was brought up as a son by Khub Lal and was the object of his love and affection. He certainly looked upon him as his son and referred to him as his son to all his friends. The plaintiff lost both his father and mother in his infancy, and, as I have said, was brought up by Khub Lal and was married at his expense. The learned District Judge accepts the case of the plaintiff as inherently probable. He also thinks that "the story told has been told in a consistent way and there is not much contradiction in the same". He says that he "might have been disposed to accept their evidence" but for certain circumstances of the case to which he refers. I will presently refer to these circumstances myself; it is sufficient for me to point out at the present moment that in the view of the learned District Judge the story told by the plaintiff is inherently probable and is supported by evidence which is consistent.

Now what is the story? The story is that the plaintiff was married in Baisakh 1318 at the expense of Khub Lal and that his gowna was fixed to take place on Fagoon Badi 2nd, 1322. In connection with that ceremony many relatives came but the ceremony had to be postponed on account of a death in the family of his father-in-law. Khub Lal took that opportunity to adopt the plaintiff as his karta putra on the 25th Magh 1322 corresponding with the 26th January 1915. The evidence of the plaintiff on this point is as follows: "As Khub Lal did not get any male issue, who lived for any time, he made me karta putra on 25th Magh, 1322. Khub Lal was then about 70 years of age and he was suffering much from asthma. It was at Madhubani in the zanani portion of the house that Khub Lal made me karta putra. Khub Lal told me, I make you my karta putra from to-day. You will be malik of my estate from this time and you will have to perform the sradhs of myself and my wife. I said I agreed to all these. I was made karta putra with the consent of the defendant." This story is supported by the evidence of two very important members of the family—Dhano Kuer daughter of Khub Lal and Ugam Kuer a daughter of Khudu Lal who was a brother of Khub Lal. I do not propose to discuss in detail the evidence of these two ladies; it is sufficient to say that they entirely support the case of the plaintiff and there is no apparent reason why they should be disbelieved. The learned District Judge, however, disbelieves them on a ground which may be stated in his own words:—"It is said that plaintiff's gowna was settled to take place on the 2nd Fagoon (Fasli) of 1322 and in view of the same Dhano and Ugam (two aunts witnesses for the plaintiff) were brought to Madhubani. A reference to the almanac shows that 2nd Fagoon 1322 fell in the solar month of Magh and Tuesday. Neither the day nor the month is auspicious for gowna. The nachatra of the day is also not one for gowna. No brahmin or hajam appears to have been sent to fix the date. Again plaintiff's marriage took place in Baisakh 1318 and gowna cannot take place in even years of marriage. All these show that the story about gowna is not probably true. As a matter of fact, the gowna did not take place at that time. It is said that the date had to be postponed owing to the death of some agnate of the father-in-law. But none of the witnesses could say who that agnate was. Plaintiff's father-in-law did not give evidence though he was present in Court. I am not, therefore, prepared to hold that plaintiff's gowna was at first settled to take place at that time." Now there is no evidence in the record that 2nd Fagoon (Fasli) 1322 was an inauspicious day and this case was certainly not put either to the plaintiff or to any of his witnesses. In regard to the other matter to which the learned District Judge refers it did not seem to be very material in the case as to who was the particular person related to the plaintiff's father-in-law who died and owing to whose death the ceremony of gowna had to be postponed. The point is much too trivial to be referred to in the judgment. In my opinion the learned District Judge has not given good reasons for disbelieving the evidence of these two ladies. Then there is the evidence of various independent persons unconnected with the parties who live in the locality and who must be presumed to know as to what actually happened.

The plaintiff's case has received strong corroboration from the terms of a document which was approved of by Khub Lal but which was in fact not executed by him. This document is Ex. I printed at page 18, Part III. It is a draft of a Will by Khub Lal in which he refers to the plaintiff as his karta putra. The plaintiff's case in regard to this document is as follows:—Khub Lal was anxious before his death to make a Will in favour of the plaintiff and had a draft of a Will drawn up. He sent the draft to Babu Mohendra Narain a Senior Pleader of Madhubani. Babu Mohendra Narain and another Vakil Rai Sahib Susil Kumar Roy were then sent for by Khub Lal in connection with the Will which he proposed to execute. Mohendra Narain took a leading part in the conversation that ensued at the interview and read out the draft Ex. I to Khub Lal. Khub Lal thereupon asked Mohendra Narain "to draw a Will on the lines of the draft Ex. I". Mohendra Narain thereupon drafted a Will which contained all the terms of Ex. I with certain additions. He made over the draft to Khub Lal and came back. It appears, however, that after his death a Will alleged to have been the last Will of Khub Lal was registered which is not the same as Ex. I and which certainly does not refer to the plaintiff as his karta putra. This Will is Ex. A printed at page 20, Part III. The validity of the Will, however, has not yet been established for the respondent has not yet applied for Probate of that Will.

The plaintiff relies upon the reference to him as the karta putra of Khub Lal in Ex. I. He has called Babu Mohendra Narain as a witness on his behalf and Babu Mohendra Narain proves:

First, that the draft of Ex. I is in the handwriting of Biseswar Lal who was in the service of Khub Lal;

Secondly, that the draft was shown to him about 15 or 20 days before the death of Khub Lal and that he made one or two corrections in it;

Thirdly, Rai Sahib Susil Kumar Roy and he were called by Khub Lal in connection with the draft;

Fourthly, he read the draft to Khub Lal and that Khub Lal did not object to the reference to the plaintiff as his karta putra;

Fifthly, "that Khub Lal asked him to draw a Will on the lines of this draft Ex. I," and Sixthly, he drafted a Will on those lines and made it over to Khub Lal.

Babu Mohendra Narain admits in his evidence that he did not know that the plaintiff was the karta putra of Khub Lal and that Khub Lal did not tell him that the plaintiff was his karta putra. The learned District Judge thinks that it is a very strange thing that the Pleader had not the curiosity to ask Khub Lal whether the plaintiff was in fact the karta putra. He also thinks that the subsequent conduct of the Pleader is somewhat inexplicable. This view of the learned District Judge is based on the fact that after the death of Khub Lal there were several cases in which Hanuman Prasad the posthumous son of Khub Lal was substituted in the place of Khub Lal. The learned District Judge thinks that if the Pleader knew that the plaintiff was the karta putra of Khub Lal it was his clear duty to substitute him in the record of those pending proceedings in the place of Khub Lal. But it is just possible that the Pleader may have taken the view that the plaintiff had no right to assert since there was a natural-born son of Khub Lal in existence. In my opinion no good ground has been shown for disbelieving Babu Mohendra Narain who has given his evidence in a very straightforward manner. But before I finally dispose of this matter, it is necessary to consider the evidence of Rai Sahib Susil Kumar Roy who is examined on behalf of the defendant. His evidence on this point is as follows:—"I remember that Babu Mohendra Narain and I made a draft of a Will for him, that is for Khub Lal. "So far as I remember no previous draft was shown to me or to any one else in my presence. It is not a fact that any previous draft was read out in my presence before he made the draft. To the best of my memory Kanhaiya was not described as a karta putra in the draft we prepared." In cross-examination he admits that it was Mohendra Babu who dictated the draft and that Biseswar Lal wrote it. He also admits that before Mohendra Babu began to dictate he and Mohendra Babu had some talk with Khub Lal. He says that Mohendra Babu made no notes before dictating and that so far as he recollected Mohendra Babu dictated ex-tempore without the help of any paper. The following question was then put to him:

Q. "If Mohendra Babu said on oath that he was given a paper beforehand and he began to dictate with its help, are you prepared to say that this is not true?"

His answer was as follows:—

"It is very difficult to answer this question as I am giving evidence about 5 or 6 years after; as regards the contents of the draft I am positive as to 2 or 3 things. As to other things I say by guess. I am positive about 2 or 3 things as those struck me most at that time. One of these is about making the son expected the malik of whole of the property, the other is that Kanhaiya was given only a sum of money and no property, and the third is his anxiety about providing for his widow."

I will deal with these "2 or 3 things" at once. It is sufficient for me at this stage to point out that the purely negative evidence of Rai Sahib Susil Kumar Roy cannot be preferred to the positive evidence of Babu Mohendra Narain. It is clear on the evidence of Rai Sahib Susil Kumar Roy that Mohendra Narain took a leading part at the interview. Mohendra Narain gave his evidence by reference to Ex. I. He had Ex. I in his hand while he was giving his evidence and he pointed out the corrections which he made in that document. All that Rai Sahib Susil Kumar Roy says is that it is very difficult for him to answer the direct question put to him in cross-examination as he was giving his evidence five or six years after the incident. I must not be understood as casting the slightest reflection upon the honour and integrity of Rai Sahib Susil Kumar Roy; but, in my opinion, the evidence of Rai Sahib Susil Kumar Roy is without value as he is speaking only from memory and his evidence is of a purely negative character. In regard to the "2 or 3 things" of which he spoke and which apparently helped him to remember that Mohendra Narain did not dictate from any draft, it is sufficient to say that two of these "things" are true both of Ex. I and Ex. A. For instance, he says that one of the things he remembers is about "making the son expected the malik of whole of the property." At the date of the alleged Will Khub Lal knew that his wife was expecting to present him with a child and Ex. I provides that "if by the grace of God a son is born, then the said son shall be the malik of the estate along with the said karta putra." Exhibit A provides that the natural born son should be the proprietor of the entire estate. No doubt Ex. A gives the natural born son the whole of the estate, whereas Ex. I gives him that estate "along with the said karta putra; but it is obvious that the provision as to "the son expected" being the malik of the property could not help him to remember that there was no draft in the hand of Babu Mohendra Narain when he was dictating the Will to Bisseswar. The other matter to which the Rai Sahib speaks is "his anxiety about providing for his widow." but the same anxiety is also shown in Ex. I. The third "thing" to which the Rai Sahib speaks is that Kanhaiya Lal was given only a sum of money and no property. Now this is true neither of Ex. I nor of Ex. A. In Ex. A Kanhaiya Lal has a vested estate in remainder expectant on the death of the widow. In my opinion there is no reason to prefer the evidence of the Rai Sahib to that of Babu Mohendra Narain. I hold that it has been proved that Ex. I was brought to Mohendra Narayan by Bisseswar who was a servant of Khub Lal and that Mohendra Narain read this draft to Khub Lal without any protest from Khub Lal. It is obvious that Bisseswar could not have prepared the draft without instructions from Khub Lal and even if those instructions have not been proved in this case, it is sufficient for me to say that Khub Lal accepted the description of the plaintiff as his karta putra when the draft was subsequently read out to him. I may further point out that Bisseswar has not been examined to contradict the story told on behalf of the plaintiff.

There is one very important matter which I must not omit to consider in this connection. The defendant produced the account-books of Khub Lal with some of the pages torn. The criticism is that these are the critical pages in which the expenses in connection with the adoption must have been entered. The learned Judge concedes that "this is a circumstance against the defendant." But he declines to draw the only inference possible in the circumstances because, "according to the defendant there were no entries relating to the adoption," and "on the plaintiff's side no witness said that any expenses relating to the adoption were entered in the book". Now one thing is certain; the evidence of the defendant should not have been accepted in the absence of an explanation as to why these critical pages in the account-book were torn. In regard to the other point made by the learned Judge, it is sufficient to say that it was quite impossible for the witnesses examined on behalf of the plaintiff to say definitely whether the expenses were entered in the account-book. Expenses were undoubtedly incurred if there was an adoption in fact, and those expenses, if incurred, that is to say, if there was an adoption, would undoubtedly have been entered in the account-book. In fact, the account book would have constituted the most valuable evidence on the question of adoption, if these pages were not torn from the account-book; and I am of opinion that the learned Judge should have drawn the inference that the defendant deliberately destroyed the most valuable evidence on the question of adoption.

I hold that the plaintiff has established that he was adopted by Khub Lal as his karta putra.

The next question is whether in the events which have happened the plaintiff is entitled to succeed to the estate of Khub Lal. The plaintiff's case is, first, that he has the right to succeed to the estate of Khub Lal by virtue of the contract at the time of the adoption; and, secondly, that in any event he is entitled to succeed to a share of that estate. The defendant's case is that the only contract between the parties was as to sonship and that he took no estate by virtue of that sonship although he might have succeeded to one had a son not been born to Khub Lal. It is, in my opinion, a very strong thing to say that a karta putra who retains his status in his natural family and loses no right in that family is in a better position than a dattak putra who undoubtedly loses his status in his natural family and who is liable to be defeated in his adoptive family by the birth of a natural born son. The modern textbooks refer to the adoption of a karta putra as an adoption in the kritima form; but it seems to me that this is not quite correct. I do not however, propose to enter upon this question as it is not material to this litigation. It may be that the system as to karta putra is an extension of the kritima form of adoption; but there is no doubt whatever that the system as we now know it is in Mithila is the invention of that very ingenious person, the Mithila Brahmin who is so anxious to preserve unsullied the purity of his genealogical table. The difficulty with which the Mithila brahman was faced was this: Where an adoption took place the name of the adoptee had to be removed from the genealogical table of his natural family and a question might be raised whether the genealogical table with the correction was an honest document. He, therefore, devised the system—the system of karta putra—under which a person on adoption did not lose his status in his natural family, though he acquired a status as the son of his adoptive father. No ceremonies or sacrifices are necessary to the validity of this particular form of adoption. All that is necessary is the consent of the adoptee which involves the adoptee being an adult. As I have said, he does not lose the rights of inheritance in his natural family, and takes the inheritance of his adoptive father, but not of his father's father or other collateral relations nor of the wife of his adoptive father or her relations. The following passage in Colebrooke's Digest (Book V, Ch. IV), s. 10, cited in Sarkar's Adoption, 2nd Edition, page 417) is of interest as stating the position in this particular form of adoption:—"Sons are thus adopted in Mithila; the practice of adopting sons given by their parents was there abolished by Sridatta and Pratihasta, although the latter had been himself adopted in that manner. Their motive was, lest, a child already registered in one family, being again registered in another, a confusion of families and names should thence ensue. A son adopted, in the form so briefly noticed in the present section, does not lose his claim to his own family, nor assume the surname of his adoptive father; he merely performs observances, and takes the inheritance." The reason for this particular form of adoption in Mithila is also explained by Macnaghten as follows:—(Macnaghten's Hindu Law, Vol. I, 95-100): "But according to the doctrine of Vachaspati, whose authority is recognised in Mithila a woman cannot, even with the previously obtained sanction of her husband, adopt a son after his death, in the dattak form and to this prohibitory rule may be traced the origin of the practice of adopting in the kritima form, which is there prevalent. This form requires no ceremony to complete it, and is instantaneously perfected by the offer of the adopting, and the consent of the adopted party. It is natural for every man to expect an heir, so long as he has life and health and hence it is usual for persons, when attacked by illness, and not before, to give authority to their wives to adopt. But in Mithila where this authority would be unavailable, the adoption is performed by the husband himself; and recourse is naturally had to that form of adoption which is most easy of performance, and, therefore, less likely to be frustrated by the impending dissolution of the party desirous of adopting." The rights of the adopted son would seem to depend on the contract between him and his adoptive father, and the question is what is that contract?

Mr. Jayaswal strongly contends before us that it is part of the contract that the adoptee should succeed to the estate left by his adoptive father. I have investigated this matter with some care and I find it difficult to accept this proposition. As I have said, a dattak son who loses his status in his natural family has no absolute right to the estate of his adoptive father. He is liable to be defeated by a gift inter vivos or by a devise made by his father in favour of another person. He is also liable to be defeated, if not absolutely, certainly to the extent of important shares in the estate by the birth of a natural born son subsequent to the adoption. What reason is there for suggesting that a karta putra is in a better position than a dattak son? It is not suggested that the contract in regard to this particular form of sonship involves a contract by the father to devise the estate to the adoptee. If that were established, it might be urged that the adoptee might claim specific performance of the agreement against the person in actual possession of the estate agreed to be devised to him. If that were the position of Mr. Jayaswal, the answer would be that the plaintiff was admittedly a minor at the date of the adoption, and whatever the position may be in Hindu Law, a person in a British Court cannot sue for specific performance of an agreement entered into at a time when he was a minor. But if it is not the case of the plaintiff that there was a contract to devise the estate to him, what else can there be in the argument? It surely cannot be suggested that any one can alter the rule of succession laid down by Hindu Law. To succeed in his argument Mr. Jayaswal must establish that it is the rule of Hindu Law that a karta putra must succeed to the estate of his adoptive father and that it is not open to his adoptive father to defeat his interest either by a gift inter vivos or by a Will to take effect upon his death. For this proposition there is no authority and I am unable to accept it.

Mr. Jayaswal relies upon a decision in Kullean Singh v. Kirpa Singh (1). In answer to a question put by the Court in that case the Pundit thus described the ceremony of adoption in this particular form: "Let the person (intending to adopt) first consult a Brahmin, and, having discovered a propitious moment, let him, in the presence of the Brahmin, and of some friends or relatives, place something in the hand of the person to be adopted, and say to him, be thou my adopted son, my goods and effects shall become thy property, the person adopted will reply, I agree to become thy son."

Mr. Jayaswal relies upon the fact that it is part of the contract that the adoptive father says: "my goods and effects shall become thy property" and so they will, unless the adoptive father makes a gift of the goods and effects or gives them away by his Will to take effect on his death. In my opinion the passage upon which Mr. Jayaswal relies does not establish that succession to the estate of the adoptive father is inherent in the status of a karta putra.

But apart from any other view it seems to me that this is not a very correct way of describing the ceremony. We have two later cases: Sutputtee v. Indranund Jha (2) and Ooman Dut v. Kunhia Singh (3). In both these cases the ceremony is thus described:—"The prescribed form for adopting a kritima son is as follows: In an auspicious hour let him bathe, and also cause the person whom he wishes to adopt to be bathed; let him present something at his pleasure, and say, 'Be you my son,' and let the son answer 'I am become your son.' Then let him, according to custom, give a suit of clothes to the son. These are the legal conditions of adoption," and then it is said in the case of Sutputtee v. Indranund Jha (2) that "the adopted son will inherit the property of his adoptive father, even although the latter leave a widow." This is accepted by Mayne as the ceremony in the kritima form of adoption. He says as follows:—"At an auspicious time, the adopter of a son having bathed, addressing the person to be adopted, who has also bathed, and to whom he has given some acceptable chattel, says. 'Be my son.' He replies: 'I am become thy son.' The giving of some chattel to him arises merely from custom. It is not necessary to the adoption. The consent of both parties is the only requisite; and a set form of speech is not essential"—(see s. 206). It seems to me, therefore, that it cannot be urged that the plaintiff takes the estate of Khub Lal by virtue of his original contract with him.

The next question is whether he is entitled to any share in the estate of Khub Lal. This question admits that the natural born son was the proper person to succeed to the estate of Khub Lal; but the question still remains whether the adopted son is to be altogether excluded. Now on this question different Smriti writers have laid down different rules; but we are concerned with the rule in the mithila School. After quoting the various Smriti writers, Bachaspati Misra, who is of paramount authority in mithila says as follows: "Manu and other legislators have said that, notwithstanding other kinds of sons, the legitimate son alone receives the whole estate of his father, but they have also declared that the other sons are sharers of the estate. To remove this contradiction it must be understood that, if the legitimate son be virtuous, he shall receive the whole estate without giving a share to the others; but if he be void of good qualities, and others possess them they are entitled to have their respective shares, as has been stated above." In my opinion this is conclusive of the rights of the parties in this litigation. It was contended on behalf of the appellant by Mr. Jayaswal that in order to entitle a legitimate son, by which I understand a natural born son, to succeed, he must show that he is virtuous; but the question does not arise because the natural born son in this case died soon after his birth and it cannot be suggested that he was not virtuous. If this particular form of adoption be the same as kritima form of adoption, then this passage in Vivada Chintamani (Tagore's Edition, page 287) is conclusive of the rights of the parties. If, on the other hand, this particular form of adoption is not the same as kritima form of adoption, as I am inclined to think, the rule laid down by Bachaspati Misra must still apply since he has made it clear that where a natural born son is in existence, he is entitled to exclude every other kind of son from sharing with him in the estate of his father.

(2) 2 Sel. Rep. 222 at p. 224; 6 Ind. Dec. (o. s.) 527.

(3) 3 Sel. Rep. 192 at pp. 197, 198; 6 Ind. Dec. (o. s.) 820.

(1) 1 Sel. Rep. 11; 6 Ind. Dec. (o. s.) 8

In my opinion the suit was rightly dismissed by the learned District Judge and I must dismiss this appeal with costs.

Adami, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS.

676 AND 753 OF 1923.

March 18, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Chakravarti.
BEJOY CHAND MAHATAB—PLAINTIFF
—APPELLANT
versus

BENI MADHAB CHAUDHURY

AND OTHERS—DEPENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 153—Suit for assessment of rent and recovery of rent, whether suit for rent—Appeal, whether lies.

An appeal should not be held to be barred under the provisions of s. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act unless it comes within the express limitation provided in the section. [p. 72, col. 1.]

In a suit for assessment of rent the question of the right to vary the rent is involved. [p. 72, col. 2.]

A suit in which a prayer for assessment of a rent is added to a prayer for recovery of rent is not a suit for rent within the contemplation of s. 153 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and the section does not, therefore, bar an appeal in such a suit. [ibid.]

Appeals against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Bankura, dated the 2nd November 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, Bishnupur, dated the 31st May 1922.

Dr. Dwarkanath Mitter (with him Babu Saratkumar Mitra), for the Appellant.

Babu Rupendra Kumar Mitter, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

S. A. No. 676 OF 1923.

This is an appeal by the plaintiff and arises out of a suit brought by him for assessment of fair and equitable rent for the lands in suit on the ground stated in s. 30, cl. (b) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, and after assessment of fair and equitable rent for a decree for rent payable for the years 1324 to 1327 B. S. The defence of the defendants was that no relationship of landlord and tenant existed between the parties, and secondly, that the rent ought not to be varied or enhanced.

The Court of first instance raised three issues—first, whether there was any relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties; secondly, what was the jama, and whether the rent was liable to be enhanced and if so, what should be the enhanced rate. The third issue was a general issue as to the relief to which the plaintiff was entitled. The Trial Court, upon the evidence, decided the first issue against the plaintiff, and held that no relationship of landlord and tenant was established by the plaintiff. In that view the Court of first instance refrained from deciding the other issues in the case.

There was an appeal by the plaintiff to the Subordinate Judge, which was dismissed on the ground that the learned Munsif who decided the case was vested by the Government with special powers as contemplated by s. 153, cl. (b), and the claim in the suit being under Rs. 50 no appeal lay to him, as there was no question as indicated in s. 153 which would bring the case within the exceptions.

In this appeal, on behalf of the plaintiff, the learned Advocate for the plaintiff-appellant contended that an appeal to the Subordinate Judge was competent, because s. 153 contemplates only cases for rent. The section runs as follows: "An appeal shall not lie from any decree or order passed, whether in the first instance or on appeal, in any suit instituted by a landlord for the recovery of rent where" It is unnecessary to quote the other part of the section for the purpose of the point raised. It was contended that this was not a suit for rent simpliciter, but it was a suit where assessment of fair and equitable rent was prayed for and then recovery of rent so assessed was prayed; and that if it was not a suit for rent as contemplated by s. 153, but was a suit which in addition to being a suit for rent, was also a suit for assessment of rent, s. 153, cl. (b) would be no bar. I have had the plaint read out to me and I find that the plaint clearly states in para. 6 the ground on which the assessment of rent is prayed and then there is a prayer for recovery of rent. The question, therefore, is limited to this—Was it a suit for rent as contemplated in s. 153 or was it a suit for assessment of rent and also for rent? It was contended by the learned Vakil for the respondents that, although there was a prayer for assessment of rent, it was a suit for rent, because the plaintiff wanted to recover rent after assessment of fair and equitable rent.

I think an appeal should not be held to be barred unless it comes within the express limitation provided by the Statute. I do not see any reason why the section should be held to apply to the present case, because there may be suits for rent where no assessment of rent is claimed. If the section is limited to the latter class of cases, it seems to me the words of the section "unless in either case the decree or order has decided a question relating to title to land or to some interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto, or a question of right to enhance or vary the rent of a tenant or a question of the amount annually payable by a tenant" would be appropriately applicable to a suit for rent where the questions as contemplated, are in the words quoted. It may be observed that in a suit for assessment of rent, the question of right to vary the rent is involved in the suit itself. In the case of Dhanukdhari Lal v. Bibvram Ahir (1), Mr. Justice Stephen sitting with Mr. Justice Chatterjee held that a suit where a prayer for assessment of rent was added to the prayer for recovery of rent was not a suit for rent within the contemplation of s. 153. The learned Judges say in the course of their judgment that "the suit is, therefore, for assessment of rent independently of the prayer for recovery of rent from defendant No. 1." I think that reasoning is quite applicable to the present case. Here also there was a prayer for assessment of rent, although ultimately there was the prayer for recovery of rent after assessment of rent. In this view it seems to me that the appeal was competent and ought to have been tried by the learned Subordinate Judge on the merits. If the learned Subordinate Judge finds that the defendants are tenants under the plaintiff, it would then be his duty to discuss the other questions which arise in the case.

In this view I think the case ought to go back so that the learned Subordinate Judge may decide the appeal on the merits.

The plaintiff is entitled to the costs of this appeal.

S. A. No. 753 of 1923.

My judgment in Appeal No. 676 of 1923 governs this appeal also.

There are two applications connected with these two appeals. They are not pressed and no orders are necessary on them.

Z. K.

Cases remanded.

(1) 4 Ind. Cas. 745; 10 C. L. J. 629.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

EXECUTION FIRST APPEAL No. 83 OF 1923.

July 17, 1925.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

KEDAR NATH—AUCTION-PURCHASER—

APPELLANT

versus

Musammatt BISMILLAH BEGAM AND

ANOTHER—OBJECTORS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, rr. 3, 11—Appeal—Death of appellant—Respondent, whether can make application for substitution.

Rule 3 of O. XXII of the C. P. C. read with r. 11 of the Order does not confine the right to make an application to bring on the record the legal representatives of a deceased plaintiff or appellant to such legal representatives alone. Where a defendant or a respondent is interested in bringing on the record the legal representatives of a deceased plaintiff or deceased appellant it is open to him to do so by making an application for that purpose.

Execution first appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Agra, dated the 9th October 1922.

Mr. M. L. Sandal, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Mahmud-ullah and N. P. Asthana, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is very easily disposed of. In execution of decree No. 166 of 1921 passed by a Subordinate Judge of Agra certain properties were sold and were purchased by one Kedar Nath. At the instance of one of the judgment-debtors the sale was set aside and Kedar Nath filed the present appeal. During the pendency of the appeal, on the 14th of November 1923 Musammat Bibbo, who was one of the judgment-debtors made an application to this Court stating that she had purchased the property from Kedar Nath and praying that she might be made an appellant along with Kedar Nath. The application came before one of us and was opposed by Kedar Nath's Counsel. Kedar Nath, through his Counsel, denied the validity of the alleged title of the applicant and stated that he would have no objection if the applicant were made a respondent. It appears from the affidavit filed on behalf of Musammat Bibbo that Kedar Nath had declined to register the sale-deed which, it was alleged, was executed by him in favour of Musammat Bibbo, and the deed was compulsorily registered. Musammat Bibbo did not demand in this Court that the question of title should be decided by remanding an issue to the Court below. She was content to be made a respondent. Her fears were that Kedar Nath would not prosecute the appeal whole-heartedly, and the order allowing Musammat Bibbo to be impleaded as a respondent mentioned that if Kedar Nath did not properly prosecute it, it would be open to Musammat Bibbo to support the appeal. Kedar Nath, however, died pending the appeal and no legal representative of his was brought on the record and the appeal must be regarded as having abated.

On behalf of Musammat Bibbo, Mr. S. P. Sinha contended that she was entitled to prosecute the appeal. It was pointed out to him that his client's position as a transferee was neither admitted nor had been established on any trial of an issue between herself and Kedar Nath. Mr. Sinha argued that it was still open to the Court to send back an issue for the trial of the question of the validity of the transfer. The question could be tried only in the presence of the legal representatives of Kedar Nath. But no such legal representatives are on the record, and it is, therefore, impossible for any such issue to be tried as between the estate of Kedar Nath and Musammat Bibbo. Mr. Sinha then argued that if Kedar Nath's legal representatives did not choose to bring themselves on the record his client was not to blame. We are not quite sure that such was the case. Order XXII, r. 3 read with r. 11 of the C. P. C. does not confine the right to make an application to bring on the record the legal representatives of a deceased plaintiff or appellant to them alone. Where the defendant or a respondent is interested in bringing a deceased plaintiff or appellant's legal representatives on the record it would be open to him to do so.

As already stated, neither Kedar Nath nor his legal representatives are before the Court and the question of validity of the alleged transfer of the property in favour of Musammat Bibbo cannot now be determined. Without a determination of Musammat Bibbo's title she cannot be allowed to prosecute an appeal which has abated.

The result is that we declare the appeal as having abated. In the circumstances of the case we make no order for costs in favour of Musammat Bibbo. The respondent Musammat Bismillah Begam will get her costs of the appeal from the estate of the deceased Kedar Nath.

Z. K.

Appeal abated.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 488
OF 1922.

May 14, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Ross.

TULSHI PRASAD RAM—APPELLANT

versus

MR. J. A. W. WILSON, CHAIRMAN, DUMRAON MUNICIPALITY—

RESPONDENT.

Bengal Municipal Act (III of 1884), ss. 6 (3), 85-A—Adjacent plots held by same person as owner, whether constitute one holding—Separate assessments, legality of.

Where two adjacent plots of land bounded by one set of boundaries are held by the same person as owner, they must be deemed to be held by him under one title and constitute one holding within the meaning of s. 6 (3) of the Bengal Municipal Act; it makes no difference that one plot was acquired by survivorship and the other by purchase. In such a case the owner of the plots is liable only to one assessment in respect of the plots under s. 85A of the Act and not to separate assessments in respect of each plot.

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Arrah, dated the 13th February 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, First Court, Buxar, dated the 15th February 1921.

Messrs. K. P. Jayaswal, S. M. Gupta and Janak Kishore, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Ray Guru Saran Prasad and Anand Prasad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Mullick, J.—The appellant holds four plots of land in the Dumraon Municipality. Plot No. 7 is his ancestral property and plot No. 8 was purchased in the name of his son; again plot No. 49 is his ancestral property and plot No. 50 has been acquired by purchase. The Dumraon Municipality have assessed the appellant with personal tax on the footing that he is the occupier of four holdings. He contends that plots Nos. 7 and 8 form one holding and plots Nos. 49 and 50 one holding and that he is liable to assessment only in respect of two holdings. He has been assessed Rs. 84 on each of the plots Nos. 7 and 8 and Rs. 28 on each of the plots Nos. 49 and 50. He claims that he is liable to pay Rs. 84 on plots Nos. 7 and 8 and Rs. 28 on plots Nos. 49 and 50.

The question is whether plots Nos. 7 and 8 constitute one holding within the meaning of s. 6 (3) of the Bengal Municipal Act. It is clear that the plots being adjacent are bounded by one set of boundaries. The only question is whether they are held under one title. The appellant's interest is ownership. It makes no difference, that he has acquired it in respect of one plot by survivorship and the other by purchase. There is no reason why we should read the word "title" in s. 6 as "title deed". The provision that the land shall be held under one title or under one agreement means that where the assessee has no title but holds under an agreement without any interest in the land, then all plots covered within the same set of boundaries and by the same agreement will form one holding; the proviso in the Explanation to s. 6 (3) is not relevant to the discussion now before us.

In my opinion plots Nos. 7 and 8 form one holding and the appellant is liable only to one assessment in respect of it under s. 85-A of the Act. The same observation applies to plots Nos. 49 and 50.

The result is that the appeal succeeds and is decreed with costs in all Courts in proportion to a claim of Rs. 122.

Ross, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 464-B OF 1922.

July 18, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kotval, A. J. C.

Haji SHEIKH MUHAMMAD—DEFENDANT
No. 3—APPELLANT

versus

RAMCHANDRA—PLAINTIFF AND

DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 AND 2—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Alienation—Sale of minor's property by mother—Legal necessity—Plea, whether open to vendee—Transferee of reversioner, position of.

The mere fact that the sale-deed of a minor's property has been executed by the mother of the minor as guardian does not preclude the vendee from urging or getting the benefit of the plea of legal necessity. [p. 75, col. 2]

The transferee of a reversioner is in no worse position than the reversioner himself and can raise the plea of legal necessity. [p. 76, col. 1.]

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Amraoti, dated the 27th July 1922, in Civil Appeal No. 39 of 1922.

Messrs. Yusuf Sharif, V. Bose and P. N. Rudra, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. T. Mangalmoorti, for Plaintiff No. 1 and Defendants Nos. 1 and 2, Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts material to this appeal may be stated as follows. The plaintiff Ramchandra sued for foreclosure of a mortgage executed in his favour by defendant No. 1, Laxmi, widow of one Hambirji in the year 1906. He joined Janu alias Balaram as defendant No. 2 on the ground that he claimed to be Laxmi's adopted son and one Haji Sheikh Muhammad as defendant No. 3 on the ground that Laxmi and Janu had executed a sale-deed of the mortgaged property in his favour. He stated that the mortgage was executed for legal necessity and defendants Nos. 2 and 3 are entitled to redeem it. Laxmi admitted the plaintiff's claim. She denied that Janu was her adopted son and that she had sold the property to defendant No. 3 Haji Sheikh Muhammad. Janu stated that he was the adopted son of Hambirji. He admitted execution and consideration of the mortgage deed but pleaded that it had been satisfied by a lease of the mortgaged property. He admitted that Laxmi and he had sold the property to Haji Sheikh Muhammad. At a later stage he pleaded by permission of the Court that there was no legal necessity for the mortgage. Haji Sheikh Muhammad raised the same pleas as Janu. In reply the plaintiff denied that the mortgage was satisfied.

The Trial Court found that the mortgage was not satisfied. The issue regarding legal necessity was as follows:—

"7. Whether the debt in suit was incurred for legal necessity as alleged? Is the defence of legal necessity open to defendants Nos. 2 and 3?"

The Court found that the consideration of the mortgage was not taken for legal necessity. Upon this finding it dismissed the suit against Janu. As regards Haji Sheikh Muhammad it held that though the plea of legal necessity was open to him as he took the sale from Janu he could derive no benefit from the plea as he held the sale-deed also from Laxmi. It passed a decree for redemption against Laxmi and Haji Sheikh Muhammad. The District Judge in appeal by Haji Sheikh Muhammad agreed with the Trial Court's findings that the mortgage was not satisfied and that legal necessity was not proved. He also accepted the view that Haji Sheikh Muhammad could not derive any benefit from the plea of legal necessity on the ground stated by the Trial Court and dismissed the appeal. Both the lower Courts proceeded on the assumption that Janu is the adopted son of Hambirji.

No attempt has been made to support the reason of the lower Courts for holding that Haji Sheikh Muhammad cannot derive any benefit from the plea of legal necessity. The lower Courts seem to assume that the real vendor is Laxmi and Janu is only a nominal vendor. It is not unusual for purchasers to join in the sale their vendor's mothers also by way of precaution. When the vendor is a son by adoption prudence dictates the joinder of the adoptive mother. There is no reason why the sale-deed in the present case should be assumed to have been taken primarily from the mother and the adopted son's name should be deemed to have been entered therein as a mere formality. The fact that Haji Sheikh Muhammad took the sale from the mother also does not preclude him from urging or getting the benefit of the plea of legal necessity. He can rely alternatively on the titles derived from both. In order, however, to be able to raise the plea he must show that he derives his title from a person who is able to raise that plea. He has, therefore, to show that Janu was the adopted son of Hambirji. The necessity of proving this is dispensed with by the plaintiff conceding the adoption for the purposes of this suit as appears from paragraph 19 of the Trial Court's and paragraph 7 of the lower Appellate Court's judgments. It is to be noted that although the decision of the Trial Court in dismissing the claim against Janu proceeded on the assumption that he was the adopted son of Hambirji the plaintiff did not challenge the assumption or the dismissal.

The suit must, therefore, fail against defendant No. 3 for the same reasons as against defendant No. 2. But it is contended that though Janu whose rights are similar to those of a reversioner could plead absence of legal necessity that plea was not open to his transferee: Sitaram Kavoji Bhosle v. Khandu Mairala (1), Jhari Koeri v. Bijai Singh (2), and Kesho Prasad Singh v. Chandrika Prasad Singh (3) are cited in support of this contention. The question whether the transferee of a reversioner can or cannot raise the plea of necessity did not arise and is not decided in these cases. The dictum in Kesho Prasad Singh v. Chandrika Prasad Singh (3) that a sale or mortgage by a Hindu widow which purports to pass or hypothecate the absolute title against every one except the reversioners and that unless the reversioners elect to treat it as a nullity it subsists as against every one else does not mean that the transfer though invalid as against the reversioners is valid as against their transferees or that though the reversioners may treat it as a nullity their transferees cannot. There is no reason why the transferee of a reversioner should be placed in any worse position than the reversioner. If the reversioner's right to avoid the previous alienation by the widow is not exercisable by his transferee the transfer value of the inheritance will be diminished and the reversioner will to that extent suffer. The question, however, does not arise in this suit as the adopted son is a party and the mortgage has been at his instance declared not binding on him. Counsel on both sides have argued the case as if there was no plea on the part of Janu regarding the absence of legal necessity. There was some excuse for this in the fact that the petition for permission to make the plea is placed in file C (2) instead in file A with the pleadings in the case but a more careful inspection of the record would have disclosed that the plea was on the record. The appeal succeeds. The decree of the Trial Court which was confirmed in appeal is modified, the suit being dismissed with costs throughout against defendant No. 3 Haji Sheikh Muhammad also.

(1) 59 Ind. Cas. 480; 45 B. 105; 22 Bom. L. R. 1155.

(2) 74 Ind. Cas. 865; 45 A. 613; 21 A. L. J. 563; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 109.

(3) 68 Ind. Cas. 394; 2 Pat. 217; 3 P. L. T. 797; 1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 122.

G. R. D.

Appeal allowed.

K. S. D.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 384 OF 1923.

April 24, 1924.

Present :— Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

GOKUL AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

—APPELLANTS

versus

SHYAMLALSINGH—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), s. 37—Sir land—Person cultivating, status of—Lease of sir and khudkasht land—Landlord not taking part in cultivation—Lessee, ejectment of.

The status of a person cultivating the proprietor's sir land under s. 37 of the C. P. Tenancy Act is that of a sub-tenant and is not that of an ordinary or occupancy tenant. In spite of the fact that sir land was let out to a person along with other land under one set of conditions so as to constitute one holding the land is liable to be separated from the remainder of the holding and the landlord is entitled to a declaration that the person in possession of the sir land is liable to be ejected on partition by Revenue Officers. [p. 78, col. 1.]

If the malguzar has supplied no capital for or has not taken any part in the cultivation of the khudkasht land but has let it out on condition that he should be given half the produce, the contract is not that of a batai and the person cultivating becomes the occupancy tenant thereof. [ibid.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Hoshangabad, dated the 16th July 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 47 of 1923.

Mr. M. R. Dixit, for the Appellants.

Sir B. K. Bose, Messrs. V. Bose and P. N. Rudra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal by the defendants against whom a decree for possession of certain lands has been passed. It is held that they are not the tenants under plaintiff-respondent who is the 16-annas malguzar of Sohagpur. He owned khudkasht land bearing Nos. 537/1 and 537/2 area 6-20 and sir land bearing No. 538 area 2 30 acres in the said mouza and it is this land which is in dispute in this litigation.

The plaintiff admits that Umed the father of defendant No. 1 and husband of defendant No. 2 was his bataidar in respect of this entire land with effect from 18th October, 1920 for a period of one year, and held the said land on certain conditions as to its cultivation in partnership. It is alleged that as a part of this contract of partnership the plaintiff supplied seed grain to Umed and that after Umed's death the defendants worked in his place and divided the seed grain and gave to the plaintiff his share of grain and straw. Plaintiff sets up an express agreement that Umed was not to put forth any claim to the fields as a tenant thereof after the expiry of the one year's term. Under the contract defendants had bound themselves to vacate possession but they did not. Hence plaintiff served them with a notice dated 2nd September, 1921 to quit the land, but they have been holding possession of the land forcibly. Hence this suit for ejectment.

The defence set up is one of tenancy. The defendants denied that plaintiff supplied any seed grain or took any part in the cultivation of the land as a part of the alleged contract of partnership. The First Court's finding is that plaintiff failed to prove that he supplied the seed grain or took any part in the actual cultivation of the land; that on the contrary, it was proved that he took half the produce as rent in each of the years 1920-21 and 1921-22; that under the ruling reported as Khoshal Chowdhury v. Nanhu (1) the defendant No. 1 thus became a tenant of the fields in suit, and was not a mere bataidar liable to ejectment. In this view the plaintiff's claim was dismissed. The plaintiff, therefore, appealed to the District Judge, Hoshangabad, and obtained a decree for possession against the defendants on the ground that they could not become tenants of the land. The correctness and legality of the findings on which this decree is based is challenged before me in second appeal by the defendants.

It is urged in the first instance that the agreement dated 18th October 1920 has been misconstrued and the rulings misapplied to this case, while upsetting the decree of the First Court. The Appellate Court has, however, maintained the findings of the First Court to the effect that the plaintiff provided no capital for the cultivation.

The sole point for consideration is, whether the defendant No. 1's father Umed was created a tenant of the land or was a mere partner in cultivation with the landlord. In 1889 this Court held in Kisan Sukal v. Jaiwant Rao Misar (2) that cultivation of land in partnership with a landlord for several years does not constitute the partner an ipso facto tenant within the meaning of the C. P. Tenancy Act. There each party supplied seed and labour and both cultivated the land together. In 1892 the same question came up for decision before this Court under slightly different circumstances, and it was held that where the landlord himself takes part in the cultivation, the person associated with him therein and who get a share of the produce as his remuneration is not ipso facto a tenant. On the other hand, where a landlord does not take part in the cultivation, but merely lets certain land to a person on condition that the latter should deliver to the former a proportionate share of the produce, the person to whom the land is let is a tenant: see Khoshal v. Nanhu (1) Stevens, J. C., who decided this case [Khoshal v. Nanhu (1)], pointed out in 1895 in the case of Deopuri v. Arjun (3) that to constitute a contract of cultivating partnership as distinguished from a contract of tenancy it was not essential that the person who provided the land should actually take part in tilling it, but that it was sufficient if he furnished a portion of the working capital as part of the transaction by which he provides the land and not as a loan. The plaintiff malguzar's claim which was dismissed in the Courts below was accordingly decreed on the necessary facts being found in his favour.

Ismay, J. C., in 1900 held in Ganoo v. Mukund Krishna Brahman (4) a case coming from Chanda District under the old Tenancy Act of 1883, that the sharing of gross returns does not of itself create a partnership, and that consequently the defendant in that case who had held the malguzar's land under a kabuliyat which provided that he shall cultivate the land for the year 1306 F. i. e., one year only, and shall give half the produce to the plaintiff was held to be the tenant of the land. It was pointed out that there was no agreement for the sharing of losses which is an essential element in a contract of partnership. The learned Judicial Commissioner pointed out that the mere fact that the rent is variable and not fixed does not affect the nature of the contract. The plaintiff's claim which was decreed by the Courts below was accordingly dismissed.

Under the Tenancy Act of 1898 a provision was made in s. 62 (2) for doing away with this distinction between a contract of partnership by giving jurisdiction to the Revenue Officer to declare even the partner in cultivation of lands other than sir land belonging to a proprietor to be an ordinary tenant of the same not universally all over the province but in certain districts in which the Local Government may by notification declare that section to be in force. The position of a partner in cultivation was thus raised to that of a tenant by the Statute; but the operation was confined only to these tracts where the Local Government deemed it necessary to declare the said section to be in force. The conferral of jurisdiction in this matter on the Revenue Officer accounts for the absence of reported decisions of this Court under s. 62 (2) of the C. P. Tenancy Act, 1898. We have, however, a case, reported at page 13 of the Volume of Central Provinces Revenue Rulings, decided by Sir? Crump as Officiating

(1) 6 C. P. L. R. 117.

(2) 3 C. P. L. R. 180

(3) 10 C. P. L. R. 29

(4) 14 C. P. L. R. 12.

Financial Commissioner in 1912: Chandan v. Megha from Chhindwara District. It was held in it that the ordinary presumption is that a man who cultivates the land of the malguzar whether on batai or on payment of rent is a tenant, and it is for the malguzar to prove the terms of the agreement of the partnership on which he relies to disprove the tenancy. The landlord having failed to prove the same the cultivator's right to the land as a tenant thereof was upheld.

The new C. P. Tenancy Act of 1920 has also introduced a change. The status of a person cultivating the proprietor's sir land under s. 37 of the new Act is that of a sub-tenant. It is no longer that of an ordinary or occupancy tenant. The contract which has given rise to the tenant-right here was made after the new Tenancy Act of 1920 came into force. Consequently, in spite of the fact that the sir land and other land was given to Umed under one lease or one set of conditions so as to constitute one holding, the status of the defendant so far as the sir land is concerned, is that of a sub-tenant. In view of the provisions of s. 94 of the said Act the sir land is liable to be separated from the remainder of the holding and all that I can award to the plaintiff is a decree declaring that defendants are liable, on partition, to be ejected therefrom, by the landlord, even though it has to be conceded that they had acquired a position higher than that of a mere partner in cultivation, but not that of an occupancy tenant thereof.

The case is, however, different so far as the khudkasht lands are concerned. In view of the clear wording of the contract embodied in the document in question, the status of defendant No. 1 is that of an occupancy tenant, and as such he is not liable to be ejected therefrom by the landlord except under s. 25 of the said Act, and the plaintiff's claim must, therefore, stand dismissed in regard thereto.

It is argued on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent that if the defendants are to be allowed to retain possession of the land, the stipulation in the contract to the effect that if the tenant desires to set up a tenant right in the land he shall pay a fine of Rs. 1,000 should be given effect to, and that a decree directing them to pay that sum to plaintiff as a condition precedent to their retaining the land may be passed in the case. I do not think I should give effect to this contention in this suit. All that is necessary under law to create a tenancy, is an agreement to let land and an agreement which will ordinarily create a liability for rent. Both these elements are present here. How far the above stipulation for payment of a fine of Rs. 1,000 is legally enforceable, is not, therefore, necessary for me to consider. As the landlord could not under the new Tenancy Act legally grant an occupancy tenancy so far as the sir land was concerned, and the defendants could not but be mere sub-tenants thereof under the Statute, I do not think it would be equitable to compel them to pay the whole of Rs. 1,000 to the plaintiff as a condition precedent to their retaining only the khudkasht lands in lieu thereof. From the tenor of the document, I do not regard the stipulation either as a condition precedent, operating as an impediment to, or as consideration for the acquisition of the tenant right; I consider it as only imposing upon the tenant an obligation to pay to the landlord reasonable compensation not exceeding Rs. 1,000 for the land he might lose in the event of his tenant refusing to vacate possession at the end of the term, and claiming to hold the same as a tenant under him. Such conditions are conditions subsequent and not conditions precedent to the acquisition of the tenancy, and must form the subject of a separate suit where the equities if any existing in favour of both the parties might be adjusted with due regard to all the circumstances of the case.

The respondent cannot, therefore, ask that effect should be given to the stipulation side by side or as a condition precedent to the appellants being permitted to retain the khudkasht land in suit in tenant right. The appeal, therefore, succeeds so far as the khudkasht fields are concerned. The plaintiff's claim is dismissed in regard to the same.

As the sir land is liable under s. 94 of the C. P. Tenancy Act of 1920, to be separated from the rest of the holding through the Revenue Officer, and as no partition has yet been effected, I cannot pass a decree for actual possession of that land as against the defendants. I, therefore, simply declare that the sir is liable to be so partitioned, and leave it open to the plaintiff to work out his own right to immediate possession of the sir land by recourse to the appropriate remedy of a partition through the Revenue Officer as against the defendants.

The decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside and in lieu thereof a decree in the above terms will be passed. The sir land presumably forms a $\frac{1}{4}$ th share of the lands in suit. As the plaintiff's claim for possession of the khudkasht lands which forms a substantial portion, fails, and only a declaratory decree as regards the sir is given to him, I direct that plaintiff shall realize $\frac{1}{4}$ th of his own costs throughout from the defendants and pay to the latter a $\frac{3}{4}$ th share of their costs. The rest of the costs in all the Courts will be borne by the party incurring them.

G. R. D.

Decree set aside.

K. S. D.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 527 OF 1924.

March 23, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

Musammatt RAM KUMARI—PETITIONER

versus

DEONANDAN SINGH—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 115, 151, O. XLVII, r. 1—Decree for possession conditional on payment of money into Court within certain period—Payment beyond period prescribed—Extension of time—Power of Court—Review—Revision.

A suit to recover possession of certain lands was decreed on condition that the plaintiff should deposit in Court for payment to the defendant a certain sum of money within three months from the date of the judgment. The plaintiff deposited the amount mentioned in the decree into Court three days after the expiry of the period fixed and applied for extension of the period which was granted, the Court holding that as there was no order to the effect that the suit was to be dismissed in case the deposit was not made within three months from the date of the judgment, it was open to it to extend the time. On revision:

Held, (1) that the Court had for the reason given by it jurisdiction to extend the time; [p. 80, col. 1.]

(2) that in any event the Court had jurisdiction to extend the time upon an application for review of its judgment and that there was no reason why its order should be disturbed because it had been made upon an application for extension of time and not upon an application for review. [ibid.]

Rameshwar Mahton v. Dwarka Prasad, 84 Ind. Cas. 320; 3 Pat. 778; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 36; 6 P. L. T. 309, followed

Revision from an order of the District Judge, Darbhanga, dated the 22nd September 1924.

Messrs. B. N. Mitter and G. N. Mukherji, for the Petitioner.

Mr. S. N. Ray, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision on behalf of the defendant in the suit against an order passed by the District Judge of Darbhanga, dated the 22nd September 1924, whereby he extended the time for depositing a certain sum of money ordered to be deposited under the decree passed in appeal. The circumstances under which the order came to be passed are shortly as follows:—

The plaintiff brought a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge to recover possession of certain lands on a declaration of his title on the basis of a deed of sale executed by one Damodar Raut. The defendant was the widow of Damodar Raut and her defence was that the kabala set up by the plaintiff was not executed by her husband and that there was no passing of consideration under it.

The learned Subordinate Judge held that the kabala had been executed by Damodar Raut, but that the plaintiff had failed to prove the passing of consideration; and he accordingly dismissed the suit. On appeal the learned Judge decreed the suit on condition of the plaintiff depositing in Court for payment to the defendant a sum of Rs. 400 within three months from the date of the judgment. The judgment was passed by the District Judge on the 27th March 1924, but the decree was prepared and signed by him on the 2nd April 1924. The plaintiff deposited the amount required under the decree on the 30th June 1924, that is, three days beyond the three months directed by the decree. He filed an application subsequently saying that he was misled by the fact that the decree had been signed on the 2nd of April, and that he was under the impression that the money was to be deposited within three months from the 2nd of April. The learned District Judge has accepted the deposit and has directed the plaintiff to deposit interest for the three days from the 27th of June to the 30th of June. Against this order the defendant comes in revision to this Court, and it is contended on her behalf that the learned Judge had no jurisdiction to extend the time upon the application made by the plaintiff.

Now, the decree did not direct that the suit would stand dismissed on failure of the plaintiff to deposit the amount within three months. The decree runs thus:—

"It is ordered that the appeal be and the same is hereby allowed, the decree of the Court below is set aside and the plaintiff's suit is decreed in this way that the title of the plaintiff as purchaser on the strength of the kabala Ex. I is declared and that the plaintiff is declared to recover possession of the properties in suit subject to his paying the sum of Rs. 400 with interest running thereon from 29th June 1921 the date of the kabala at the rate of one rupee per cent. per month within 3 months from to-day and it is also declared that defendant as widow of Damodar holds a lien by way of charge on the properties sold until such time that she is paid off the above dues. The plaintiff-appellant will get half the costs throughout and the defendant will bear her own costs."

The learned District Judge who passed the decree is the Judge who has extended the time by his order of the 22nd September, 1924 and he is the best person to construe his own decree. He has construed that decree to mean that there was no order passed by him to the effect that the suit was to be dismissed in case the deposit was not made within three months from the date of the order. That he had jurisdiction to extend the time in any event on an application for review of his judgment is not denied. What is contended is that the time could not be extended upon the application of the plaintiff without an application for review. That may be so, but, if the learned Judge had jurisdiction to extend the time upon an application for review, there is no reason why his order should be disturbed because he made the order upon an application for extension and not upon an application for review. In Rameshwar Mahton v. Dwarka Prasad (1) it was held by a Division Bench of this Court that although a Court has no inherent jurisdiction under s. 151, C. P. C., to do that which is prohibited by the Code, but where a suit was dismissed on a preliminary ground and the plaintiff applied under s. 151 to the Court to set aside the decree under its inherent powers, and the Court granted the prayer, and an application in revision was made to the High Court to set aside the order, it was held that inasmuch as a prayer for review under

O. XLVII, r. 1, if made, could have been granted by the Court, the mere fact that the plaintiff, instead of applying, as he should have done, under O. XLVII, r. 1, had applied under s. 151, was no ground for interference in revision. The principle laid down is applicable to the present case.

The application must, therefore, be dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL No. 147 OF 1924.

July 15, 1925.

Present:—Sir Grimwood Mears, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

AHMAD HUSAIN AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

MUHAMMAD QASIM KHAN AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Mortgage—Redemption—Integrity of mortgage broken up, effect of—Co-mortgagor, whether can redeem more than his own share—Redemption suit—Parties, necessary.

Where the integrity of a mortgage has been broken up, a mortgagor is not entitled to claim redemption of more than his own share of the mortgaged property, the reason being that the integrity of a mortgage is necessary for the benefit of the mortgagee alone, and where that has been broken and a redemption has to be allowed, there is no equity in favour of one of the mortgagors to possess the remaining property where it is more than his own legitimate share. [p. 81, col. 2.]

In all redemption cases, which are properly framed, not only the redeeming co-sharers should be made parties but also the mortgagors who have not so far joined in the suit for redemption. The necessity of impleading co-mortgagors is this that the share and the right to redeem of the plaintiff cannot be determined behind the back of the non-redeeming mortgagors. [p. 82, col. 1.]

Letters Patent Appeal from a judgment of Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal, dated the 4th August 1924.

Mr. Mushtaq Ahmad, for the Appellants.
M. M. A. Aziz, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal is against the judgment of a learned Judge of this Court and raises two points.

It appears that the learned Judge decided a question of fact, viz., whether all the representatives of the original mortgagees, together, had acquired an interest in a part of the mortgaged property or whether some of the representatives of the original mortgagees had acquired that interest. It has been pointed out to us that this question never arose in this Court and the argument of the appellants seems to be right.

(1) 84 Ind. Cas. 320; 3 Pat. 778; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat.) 36; 6 P. L. T. 309.

In cl. (g), para. 2 of the plaint, the plaintiffs stated that the original share mortgaged was a 5 biswa one, that a portion of it, viz., 1 biswa had already been redeemed, that 2 biswas had been purchased by the mortgagees themselves, that 2 biswas remained under mortgage, that out of these 2 biswas an $11/12$ share had also been redeemed and that they wanted the redemption of the remaining $31/12$ share out of the 2 biswas. The defendants in their written statement did not contest this statement of facts. Indeed, in para. 1 of their additional statements they accepted this statement of facts and raised the plea in law that the integrity of the mortgage having been broken the plaintiffs were not entitled to ask for redemption of more than their legitimate share. It will be noticed, therefore, that on the pleadings no question of fact, as to whether all the representatives of the mortgagees had purchased or not a share of the mortgaged property arose. When an appeal was taken to the lower Appellate Court that Court remanded three issues of fact. One of these was:—

"Have the mortgagees or their representatives acquired the ownership of any part of the mortgaged property."

The answer to this was given by the learned Munsif in the following language:—

"I have to hold that the defendants have no doubt acquired ownership of a small part of the mortgaged property."

Not only did the plaintiffs not object to this finding which was really in accordance with their statement of facts in the plaint, but their Pleader relied on this finding and argued before the learned Judge that the integrity of the mortgage had been broken. In view of these circumstances it is difficult for us to understand how the new question of fact was for the first time raised in the second appeal.

Mr. Aziz, the learned Counsel for the respondents, has argued that what the plaintiffs really meant by their statement in the plaint was not that all the representatives of the mortgagees had together acquired a share in the mortgaged property but what was meant was this that, individually, the several representatives had purchased certain shares and the result was that the total amount of shares purchased amounted to 2 biswas. This is really a pleading which cannot be fairly deduced from the statement of facts made in cl. (g), para. 2 of the plaint. Evidently this argument was raised before the learned Judge of this Court for the first time and the learned Judge determined the question of fact because it had never been determined by the Court below. As we understand the pleadings and the proceedings, the pleading brought up before this Court was an entirely new pleading and in our opinion it should not have been allowed to be urged in second appeal.

The learned Judge of this Court has held that where the integrity of a mortgage is broken a mortgagor is not entitled to recover by way of redemption more than his share in the property. Mr. Aziz has contested this proposition of law and has cited, as an authority, the cause of Shiam Saran v. Banarsi Das (1). In this case the question was never raised very specifically and no authorities were cited. Indeed, the opinion delivered in this judgment is contrary to the opinion expressed in this Court in Kallan Khan v. Mardan Khan (2), Munshi v. Daulat (3) and Zaib-un-nissa v. Prabhu Narain Singh (4). We are clearly of opinion that the learned Judge from whose judgment this appeal is, was perfectly right in holding that where the integrity of a mortgage is broken a mortgagor is not entitled to claim redemption of more than his own share. Briefly, the reason is this, that the integrity of a mortgage is necessary for the benefit of a mortgagee alone and where that has been broken and a redemption has to be allowed, there is no equity in favour of one of the mortgagors to possess the remaining property, although the same is more than his own legitimate share. If a redemption of a large share be allowed, the redeeming mortgagor will be in possession of his own share as the owner and will hold the remaining share as mortgagee, having been subrogated to the position of the original mortgagee. The co-mortgagor, who has so far not redeemed

(1) 65 Ind. Cas. 863; 20 A. L. J. 258; 4 U. P. L. R. (A.) 102; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 192.

(2) 28 A. 155; A. W. N. (1905) 225.

(3) 29 A. 262; A. W. N. (1907) 49; 4 A. L. J. 74.

(4) 40 Ind. Cas. 315; 15 A. L. J. 625; 39 A. 618.

his share, will have to ask for redemption on payment and it is immaterial to him whether he goes to a co-mortgagor who has redeemed or to the original mortgagee. In the circumstances, there is no reason why a co-mortgagor should have more than his own share.

It has been next contended on behalf of the respondents that the fact that the remaining mortgagors are parties as defendants to the suit was a justification for decreeing the redemption of the entire property in favour of the plaintiffs. This proposition of law clearly goes counter to the case of Kallan Khan v. Mardan Khan (2) and Zaib-un-nissa v. Prabhu Narain Singh (4). In all redemption cases, which are properly framed not only the redeeming co-sharers should be made parties but also the mortgagors who have not so far joined in the suit for redemption. The necessity of impleading co-mortgagors is this that the share and the right to redeem of the plaintiff cannot be determined behind the back of the non-redeeming mortgagors. It follows, therefore, that if the argument for the respondents be sound, in every case of a properly framed redemption suit, the plaintiff would be entitled to redeem not only his own share but of the shares of his co-mortgagors whom he has made defendants. This cannot be right.

The result is that the appeal succeeds. We allow the appeal, set aside the decree of this Court and remand the suit through the lower Appellate Court to the Court of first instance for determination of the share of the plaintiffs in the 2 biswa share in question and the proportionate amount of the mortgage-money that they must pay. The plaintiffs will not be allowed to redeem more than their legitimate shares. The appellants will have their costs of the present appeal, but the remaining costs will abide the result.

Z. K.

*Appeal allowed.PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 547 OF 1924.

March 23, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Adami.

MR. RAJKISHORE LAL NAND-KEOLYAR AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS
versus

Musammam ALAM ARA BEGUM alias
MOGHUL SAHEBA AND ANOTHER—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 22—Defendant made co-plaintiff, effect of—Limitation, whether affected—Transfer of parties—Valuation of suit exceeding limits of jurisdiction of Court—Procedure—Order directing presentation of plaint to proper Court.

Sub-section (1) of s. 22 of the Limitation Act has no application to a case where a party who was originally impleaded by the plaintiff as a defendant to the suit is transferred in that suit as a co-plaintiff. [p. 83, col. 1.]

Where one of the defendants to a suit applies to be made a co-plaintiff, his application cannot be rejected on the ground that if it is granted the valuation of the suit will exceed the limits of the jurisdiction of the Court. If after adding the defendant as a co-plaintiff the valuation of the suit does exceed the limits of the jurisdiction of the Court, it is open to the Court to return the plaint to the plaintiffs to be presented in the proper Court. [ibid.]

Appeal from an order of the Munsif, First Court, Gaya, dated the 17th November 1924.

Mr. Anand Prasad, for the Petitioners.

JUDGMENT.—This application is directed against an order of the Munsif, First Court, Gaya, rejecting the application by the petitioners to be made co-plaintiffs in a suit brought by the opposite party No. 1. The opposite party No. 1 sued to recover a sum of money from the defendants Nos. 1 to 26 on account of certain expenses incurred by her in erecting and maintaining a bandh. It appears that the co-sharer maliks of village Lao and of several other villages have to erect bandhs for the purposes of irrigation in those villages. The malik of village Lao supervises the erection of these bandhs and the other maliks contribute towards the expenses incurred. The suit related to the expenses incurred by the opposite party No. 1 in the years 1329 and 1331. She joined as defendants to the suit defendants Nos. 27 to 35, who are co-sharer maliks of Mouza Lao. The present applicants petitioned the lower Court to be changed from co-defendants in the suit to co-plaintiffs.

The learned Munsif rejected the application on two grounds, firstly, that if these defendants were made co-plaintiffs, the rule of limitation would come in and the plaintiffs' suit would be barred with regard to the claim for 1329. The second ground was that the addition of these petitioners as co-plaintiffs would raise the value of the suit, beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. Now, with regard to the question of limitation, it is clear from the provisions of sub-s. (2) of s. 22 of the Limitation Act that the provisions of sub-s. (1) of the section will not apply where a defendant, who was made such by the plaintiff at the time of the institution of the suit, is transferred in that suit as a co-plaintiff. Sub-section (2) clearly says that "nothing in sub-s. (1) shall apply to a case...where a plaintiff is made a defendant or a defendant is made a plaintiff." All that the petitioners have asked in this case is that they being defendants should be made plaintiffs in the suit. Accordingly the Law of Limitation will not bar any portion of the claim.

With regard to the other objection raised by the Munsif if the suit after the addition of these petitioners as co-plaintiffs exceeds the valuation which is within the jurisdiction of the Munsif, it will be open to him to return the plaint, after the petitioners have been so added, to the plaintiffs to be presented in the proper Court.

The order of the Munsif must be set aside and it is directed that the status of the present petitioners be changed from the category of defendants to that of plaintiffs in the suit.

Z. K.

*Order set aside.ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL No. 1844 OF 1924.
July 15, 1925.Present:—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and
Mr. Justice Daniels.

DIP PRAKASH AND OTHERS—

OBJECTORS - APPELLANTS

versus

Bohra DWARKA PRASAD AND ANOTHER
—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.Execution of decree—Res judicata—Implied decision, whether binding on parties in subsequent stages—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11.

Section 11 of the O. P. C. does not in terms apply to execution proceedings but an order in execution may be as binding between the parties and those claiming under them as an interlocutory order in a suit is binding upon the parties in every proceeding in that suit, or as a final judgment in a suit is binding upon them in carrying the judgment into execution. Where, therefore, a point has once been expressly decided in the execution department, the decision binds the parties in all subsequent stages of the proceeding. Where a point has not been directly decided but is such as must be deemed to have been necessarily decided before the order for execution was passed, the decision has a similar binding force. [p. 85, cols. 1 & 2.]

Plaintiff obtained a decree for an injunction restraining the defendants from erecting any building on the land in dispute. Plaintiff subsequently put in an application for execution of the decree complaining that the defendants had constructed a pavement on the land in dispute and asking for its removal. The defendants objected that the parties had compromised their dispute after the decree had been passed and that the pavement had been constructed in pursuance of that compromise. There was no objection taken that the construction complained of was not in defiance of the injunction. The Execution Court after taking evidence held that no compromise had been proved and dismissed the objection and directed that the pavement should be removed. After this order was carried out the defendants filed a set of objections complaining that the pavement was not a structure of the nature the construction of which had been prohibited by the decree and that the plaintiff having wrongfully obtained the removal of the pavement should be directed either to restore the pavement or to pay damages to the defendants:

Held, that the defendants having failed to take the objection in answer to the application for execution that the pavement was not a structure the construction of which was prohibited by the decree, were estopped from raising the objection at a subsequent stage inasmuch as the order of the Execution Court directing execution must be taken to have necessarily decided that the construction of the pavement was in defiance of the decree. [p. 86, col. 1.]

Execution second appeal from a decree of the Third Additional Subordinate Judge, Aligarh, dated the 25th September 1924.

Sir Dr. Tej Bahadur Sapru and Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Appellants.

Dr. S. N. Sen and Mr. Panna Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Sulaiman, J.—This is an appeal by the judgment-debtors arising out of an execution matter. The plaintiffs decree-holders obtained a decree from the Appellate Court on the 15th of December 1920 ordering the defendants to remove the walls and sheds which they had constructed on the disputed land, and for an injunction 'not to erect any building on the land.' The claim of the plaintiffs for other reliefs like joint possession was dismissed. On the 30th of April 1923 the decree-holders put in an application for execution of the said decree complaining that the defendants in spite of the aforesaid injunction had constructed a pucca pavement and several walls and had put a tin shed on the latter,

In this application they expressly asked to execute the decree by demolition of the walls, the tin shed and the newly constructed pavement. Upon this, notice was issued to the judgment-debtors fixing the 30th of July 1923. On this last mentioned date the judgment-debtors appeared and put in a written objection that the decree was not executable on the ground that the parties had compromised their dispute and the constructions had been made in pursuance of that compromise. In the objection there was no suggestion that any of the constructions complained of were not in defiance of the injunction. On the 18th of August 1923 the Execution Court after hearing the evidence of the parties held that no compromise had been proved and accordingly dismissed the objection. No further objections were filed by the judgment-debtors, and on the 27th of August 1923 the Court ordered that inasmuch as the judgment-debtors' objections had been dismissed process should be issued to the Amin to carry out the order of execution and report. Before, however, the order could be fully carried out, an order staying further proceedings was passed on the 29th of August 1923 because a declaratory suit was instituted by the sons of the judgment-debtors. This last mentioned suit was dismissed on the 17th of December 1923. On the 18th of December 1923 on receipt of a report that the civil suit had been dismissed, the Court ordered that the previous order dated the 27th of August 1923 should be carried out and the papers be sent to the Amin for compliance. In obedience to this order the Amin got the walls, the tin shed and the pavement removed from the land.

After this the judgment-debtors filed a set of objections complaining that the decree-holders had fraudulently and without any right got the pavement removed causing a loss of Rs. 5,100 to them. They, therefore, prayed that the decree-holders might be ordered to get the pavement which they had got demolished re-built or to pay Rs. 5,100 on account of the cost of its construction to the objectors. The decree-holders replied that the construction of the pavement was contrary to the terms of the decree and further that the objectors had no right to raise this objection which was barred by the principle of res judicata and estoppel. They also disputed the amount of the alleged loss.

no bar of res judicata. It further held that the pavement was not a building within the meaning of the decree and that, therefore, the decree-holders had no right to get it removed. It accordingly ordered that the decree-holders should re-build the pavement within four months otherwise they would be liable to pay Rs. 3,490 5-4 to the objectors. On appeal the learned Additional Subordinate Judge agreed with the First Court that the objection was neither barred by res judicata nor by estoppel. He, however, held that the brick pavement of the floor was a building within the meaning of the term used in the decree. He accordingly allowed the appeal and dismissed the objection.

On appeal by the judgment-debtors to this Court it has been strongly urged before us that the pavement which is practically level with the ground, is not a building the construction of which was prohibited by the injunction. If the pavement stands by itself and is not covered by any other construction we would be inclined to accept the contention of the learned Advocate for the appellants that its construction was not intended to be prohibited. The object of the injunction was to keep the courtyard free from obstruction so that the utility of the shops abutting it should not be diminished. This object is in no way defeated by making the floor of the courtyard pucca. On the other hand if this pavement is a part of the entire construction and is surrounded by walls of which a tin roof has been put on, then it must be taken along with the entire construction of which it would obviously form a part. The decree-holders then would be entitled to get removed the entire construction as it stands. It is, however, unnecessary to go any more into the facts because I am of opinion that this appeal should fail on legal grounds.

When notice was issued to the judgment-debtors to show cause why execution should not proceed and the judgment-debtors appeared before the Court they had full notice of the decree-holders' prayer for the removal of the disputed pavement. They had ample opportunity to object and urge that the construction of the pavement was not in contravention of the injunction. This objection they failed to raise. The objection which they did raise was disallowed and on the 27th of August 1923 execution was ordered. Subsequently the proceedings were stayed because of another pending suit, but when that suit was dismissed execution was ordered afresh. Process was issued to the Amin with specific instructions to demolish the pavement along with the other constructions complained of. The Amin went to the spot and carried out the order. All this time the objectors were sleeping. It was their duty to raise the objection, before it was too late, that the pavement should not be removed. The order directing execution by removal of the pavement was based on the assumption that the pavement was a building within the meaning of that term as used in the decree. Had the Execution Court been invited to consider and had it concluded that the pavement was not a building it would never have ordered its removal. It must, therefore, be assumed that the question that this pavement was liable to be removed in execution of the decree was by necessary implication decided by the Court against the judgment-debtors. They are, therefore, not entitled to come to Court and ask for damages for the loss which they have suffered on account of such execution.

The Execution Court held that there was

It is true that s. 11 of the O. P. C., or any of its explanations, cannot in terms apply to an execution proceedings because the question arises in the same suit and not in a second suit. But 'as observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Ram Kirpal v. Rup Kuari (1) an order in execution may be "as binding between the parties and those claiming under them as an interlocutory judgment in a suit is binding upon the parties in every proceeding in that suit, or as a final judgment in a suit is binding upon them in carrying the judgment into execution. The binding force of such a judgment depends not upon s. 13, Act X of 1877, but upon general principles of law. If it were not binding, there would be no end to litigation." See also the Privy Council case of Mungel Pershad Dicht v. Grija Kant Lahiri (2).

Where, therefore, a point has once been expressly decided in the execution department there can be no doubt whatsoever that that decision binds the parties in all subsequent proceedings. In cases where a point has not been directly decided but is such as must be deemed to have been necessarily decided before an order of execution was passed, the decision has also been held to have a similar binding force. For instance, objections that the application is not in accordance with the law, or that it is barred by time or that the decree is not capable of execution or that the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the application or that the person applying for execution has not the right to do so, are objections, which if not raised before the execution is ordered, have been held in several cases to have been decided adversely to the objectors by the execution order. Reference may be made to the recent case of Raja of Ramnad v. Velusami Tevar (3) decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council. At page 48* Lord Moulton observed: "It was not only competent to the present respondents to bring the plea forward on that occasion, but it was incumbent on them to do so if they proposed to rely on it," though in that case such a plea was in fact brought forward and decided upon. See also the case of Dwarka Das v. Muhammad Ashfaqullah (4) and the cases cited therein.

On the other hand, in cases where the decretal amount is in dispute it has been held that a mere order directing execution does not imply a decision that the amount entered in the application for execution is necessarily correct, and it has been held that there is nothing to prevent the Court at a subsequent stage from correcting the amount which the decree-holder is entitled to recover. In the case of Kalian Singh v. Jagan Prasad (5) which was affirmed by a judgment in Letters Patent Appeal reported as Kalian Singh v. Jagan Prasad (6) it was held that if a judgment-debtor does not take exception to the amount erroneously set forth in an application for the execution of the decree as being the sum due, he is not prevented from doing so on a subsequent application for the execution of the same decree. Similarly in the case of Sheo Mangal v. Hulsa (7) the vendee

(3) 59 Ind. Cas. 880; 48 I. A. 45; 19 A. L. J. 168 40 M. L. J. 197; 13 L. W. 290; (1921) M. W. N. 51; 33; O. L. J. 218; 25 O. W. N. 581; 23 Bom. L. R. 701; 29 M. L. T. 345 (P. C.).

(1) 8 Ind. Cas. 722; 47 A. 83; 22 A. L. J. 928; L. R. 5 A. 744 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 117.

(5) 27 Ind. Cas. 950; 13 A. L. J. 162.

(6) 30 Ind. Cas. 523; 37 A. 589; 13; A. L. J. 828.

(7) 65 Ind. Cas. 377; 19 A. L. J. 954; 44 A. 159; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 413.

(1) 6 A. 269; 11 I. A. 37; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 189; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 718 (P. C.).

(2) 8 O. 51; 8 I. A. 123; 11 O. L. R. 113; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 249; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 32 (P. C.).

decree-holder who was at least entitled to execute his decree for costs, had included a sum of Rs. 380-15-0 in his application. An order issuing process was made but before the order could be executed the vendee gave up his claim for Rs. 380-15-0 and applied to be allowed to retain the property. It was held that the order issuing process passed in favour of the decree-holders did not preclude them from saying that they were not entitled to recover the sum of Rs. 380-15-0 by way of execution but that they were entitled to the property itself. It was pointed out that there was some amount recoverable by execution, namely, the amount of costs and, therefore, the Execution Court had jurisdiction to order execution. The mere fact that a larger amount was included in the application of the decree-holders did not necessarily imply that the Court had decided that the whole of that amount was due and recoverable only by execution.

The learned Advocate for the appellants has contended before us that the present case is analogous to cases where property is delivered to a decree-holder in excess of the decree in which contingency the Execution Court always allows restitution. Had the decree-holders in the present case merely asked for execution of their decree by demolition of constructions made in contravention of it, without specifying what constructions they particularly wanted to be demolished, it might have been open to the judgment-debtors to come to the Court if constructions which had not been forbidden were also removed. But where the decree-holders expressly applied to get the disputed pavement removed and the judgment-debtors had full notice that they had so applied and failed to raise any objections and the Court then ordered execution to issue and through its officer, the Amin, got its order carried into effect, it must be deemed by necessary implication that the question of the pavement having been constructed in defiance of the injunction was decided adversely to the objectors, for without deciding this matter execution could not possibly have been ordered.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the objectors are prevented from now asking the Court to re-consider the question and, holding that the buildings ought not to have been demolished, to award them damages. I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal.

Daniels, J.—I concur both in the order dismissing the appeal and in the reasons given by my learned brother for doing so. The rulings on the subject of res judicata as applied to execution proceedings are not altogether consistent, and it is, in my opinion, unnecessary to express any opinion as to the decisions in Kalyan Singh v. Jagan Prasad (6) or Sheo Mungal v. Hulsa (7). In the present case the judgment-debtors were clearly bound, if they alleged that the construction of the so-called pavement was not inconsistent with the decree, to take this objection when the judgment-debtors asked for its demolition. It would be contrary to all principles of justice to allow them deliberately to stand aside while the pavement was demolished by order of the Court, and then, after the work was completed, to come forward and claim, as they now do, that it should be restored and they should be awarded damages.

By the Court.—The appeal is dismissed with costs including fees on the higher scale.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 1452 OF 1920.

April 10, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Page.

HARI CHANDANA JOGA DEVA—PLAINTIFF

versus

HINDUSTAN CO-OPERATIVE INSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD.—
DEFENDANT.

Construction of document—Insurance policy—Insured taking shares in Company—Premia, balance of, to be recovered from dividends—Liability of Company—Company—Articles of Association, whether can be altered—Share-holder entering into special contract with Company, position of.

Under a policy of an insurance the defendant Company guaranteed to the insured that if the latter paid to the Company a certain sum each year for a certain number of years the Company would pay to the insured the sum of Rs. 20,000 and would also pay at the end of the period fixed (called the endowment period) such additional sums by way of profits as according to the Society's Regulations may accrue and become payable in respect of the policy, after paying up in full all calls due and payable in respect of certain bond shares which the insured had agreed to take. One of the conditions of the policy was that in case the insured should outlive the endowment period all dividends to become payable on the shares shall be subject during the period to a lien in favour of the Society for payment of the premium payable on the policy, the total premium in each case being equal to the face value of the policy. The plaintiff continued to pay the stipulated sum each year to the Company and at the end of the endowment period sued the Company to recover the amount of Rs. 20,000 as a debt due by the Company under the policy:

Held, (1) that the true construction of the policy was that the Company had agreed at the end of the endowment period to pay the principal sum insured and that it undertook also to pay at the same time an additional sum in respect of dividends accrued on the shares after retaining thereout all calls due and payable in respect thereof and that it had agreed to pay an additional sum in respect of dividends accrued after the period had expired during which it was at liberty to allocate the dividends towards the balance of the premium; [p. 89, col. 1.]

(2) that the risk of the dividends not being sufficient to cover the balance of the premia was taken by the Company; [ibid.]

(3) that the plaintiff having paid the whole sum which the Company required him to pay during the endowment period under the policy, he was entitled to recover from the Company the sum of Rs. 20,000 being the principal sum insured. [ibid.]

A share-holder in a Company must be taken to know that one of the incidents of membership of a Company is that the Company may, by adopting the proper method, bona fide alter its articles in a way which may prejudicially affect his interests, and, provided that the alteration in the articles is not inconsistent with the objects set out in the Memorandum of Association, and is bona fide made in the interests of the Company a share-holder in ordinary circumstances would be bound by such an alteration. The rights of a share-holder in respect of his shares, except so far as they may be protected by the Memorandum of Association, are by Statute made liable to be altered by special resolution. But the case of a contract between an outsider and the Company is entirely different and even a share-holder must be regarded as an outsider in so far as he contracts with the Company otherwise than in respect of his shares. In such a case the Company cannot by altering its articles justify a breach of contract. [p. 89, col. 2; p. 90, col. 2.]

Messrs. Langford James, S. M. Bose and A. K. Chaudhury, for the Plaintiff.

Messrs. H. D. Bose and S. K. Chakravarty, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—This is an action brought to recover a sum of Rs. 20,000 as being the principal sum due under a policy of insurance. The policy is for Rs. 20,000, and the annual premium is Rs. 1,550. It is an Endowment Policy for 10 years; the Rs. 1,550 has been regularly and duly paid, and the 10 years have elapsed.

The defendant Company in the first place urges that I ought to read together the proposal for the policy and the policy itself, because it is provided in the policy that the proposal together with the statements made in connection therewith to the Medical Officer is to be deemed to be the basis of the contract. The defendant Company further contends that if the proposal and the policy are read together the contract is not a contract merely for insurance, or indeed primarily for insurance, but is a contract in the first place to take shares in the Company, the annual sum of Rs. 1,000 being treated as in each year a call in respect of the shares, and, secondly, that it is a contract whereby if the policy-holder pays the annual sum agreed upon by the parties as and for excess premia (a term which I will explain later) at the end of 10 years, he shall receive Rs. 20,000 less any sum which may be due on calls which have been made and are unpaid and less any further sum which may be due on an actuarial basis as the balance of the premia in respect of the insurance over and above the excess premia which have been paid, which balance in the events that have happened the Company has been unable to recover out of dividends declared by the Company.

In order to solve this problem it is necessary to look at the terms of the policy itself. By s. 1 it is specifically provided as follows:—

1. "The Society, hereby guarantees to the insured that if the insured pays to the Society at their office in Calcutta on the 7th day of April 1910 and in each succeeding year up to and including the year 1919 the sum of Rs. 1,550 or in lieu of any such annual payment the full number of instalments thereof as may be agreed upon (of which agreement the receipt granted by the Society shall be full and sufficient evidence) then the Society will on the 7th April 1920 (the period intervening between the last mentioned date and the endowment period) pay to the insured the sum of Rs. 20,000 at the Head Office of the Society in Calcutta or at the insured's permanent residence whichever may be preferred and will also pay at the end of the endowment period such additional sums by way of profits as according to the Society's regulations may accrue and become payable in respect of this policy, after paying up in full all calls due and payable in respect of the Bond shares hereinafter mentioned.

Clause 3.—This policy is issued on the express condition and stipulation that in case the insured should outlive the endowment period all dividends to accrue become payable on the shares numbered(described in the certificate thereof as bond shares) shall be subject during the period ending to a lien in favour of the Society for payment of the premium payable on this policy to the total premium in each case being equal to the face value of the policy.

Condition 7 of the policy provides:—

Profits apportioned by the Society will in the first instance be applied to the payment of remaining calls on the Bond shares relating to this policy up to and including the 20th call or the last call made as the case may be and any surplus remaining thereafter at the end of the within mentioned period of lien may at the option of the insured be either (1) paid up in cash, or (2) applied in such other manner as he may direct.

Looking at the proposal I find that it is in this form:—

Dear sir,

I am desirous of taking so many Bond shares in the capital of the above-named Society and shall forward Rs..... being the first instalment of the first five per cent. call payable on application with a fee of Re. 1 for share certificate, etc., and I undertake to hold as many of these shares as may be allotted to me, subject to the provisions of the Memorandum and Articles of Association of the Society and the special conditions of such Bond shares combined with insurance benefits.

In case I fail to pay the first instalment aforesaid within a month from date of notice of acceptance of this proposal, I shall be liable to pay the incidental costs incurred by the Society in connection therewith.

Then there are set out certain details. Endorsed on the back of the proposal form are certain conditions:—

1. Amount of insurance is always equal to nominal value of the shares (hereinafter called Bond shares) against which it is granted.

2. Ordinary endowment period 25 years.

N. B.—The endowment period may be varied on terms and conditions ascertainable on application.

3. Dividends on Bond shares payable are subject to a lien for payment of the premiums on the insurance granted against these shares which shall not exceed the face value of the policy in case of survival of the endowment period; but in case of previous death the period of lien to be extended to not more than five additional years.

N. B.—A single payment of Rs 40 per share will be accepted in full discharge of 10 calls on Bond shares.

8. Bond shares may be redeemed (i.e., dividends thereon freed from above conditions) as under:—

(a) At any time before payment of claim thereunder if the insurance is lapsed or surrendered for cash or paid up value or, other security is offered and accepted for due payment of unpaid premiums at investment insurance rates provided that such cash or paid up value has become due by reason of the dividends previously accrued.

(b) After payment of claim under the policy of the remaining premium is secured as aforesaid of the present value thereof paid up in cash.

Pursuant to that proposal the plaintiff became share-holder in the Company, and a share certificate was produced showing that he was a registered holder of 200 Bond shares of Rs. 100 each numbered consecutively 56,616 to 56,815. The certificate was dated 28th April 1910. On paying each year Rs. 1,000 plus Rs 550 the plaintiff received certain receipts. This is the form of one of them:—

"Received the sum of Rs. 1,550 being the first yearly instalment of the first call of 200 Bond shares supplied by him..... 1910"

Later, it was slightly altered, and the form of receipt was:

"Policy No. C5056, face value Rs. 20,000, the name, Rs. 1,000, premium Rs. 550. Total Rs. 1,550, 6th May 1918."

The plaintiff knew that the Rs. 1,550 which he was paying was as to Rs. 1,000, a call on the shares, and as to Rs. 550 excess premium on the policy. Now, the term "excess premium" meant that while the Company in the case of policies for 25 years demanded no sum as payment for premium, in respect of policies payable in 10 years the Company demanded an annual premium of Rs. 550, and by clause 3 of the Policy it was provided that the difference between the excess premium of Rs. 550 and the actuarial value of the full premium, (that is the full premium for Rs. 20,000 ascertained on an actuarial basis) was to be received by the Company out of the dividends which the Company would pay up till the year 1935. Now, reading the policy as based upon the proposal, in my opinion, the true construction of the policy is that the Company agreed at the end of the endowment period to pay the principal sum insured. They undertook also to pay at the same time an additional sum in respect of dividends accrued (if any) on the shares after retaining thereout all calls due and payable in respect thereof. Under clause 3 they agreed to pay an additional sum in respect of dividends accrued after the period had expired during which the Company was at liberty to allocate the dividends towards the balance of the premium. In my opinion, under the Combined Investment Scheme the risk of the dividends not being sufficient to cover the balance of the premia was taken by the Company. It was contended by Counsel on behalf of the Company that under the policy the Company was entitled to deduct from the principal sum when it became due any sum which was still outstanding in respect of the balance of the premia which at that time had not been in fact recovered out of the profits of the Company. In my opinion, that is not in accordance with the terms of the contract. As it is admitted, therefore, that the plaintiff has paid the whole sum which the Company required him to pay during the endowment period under the policy, in my opinion, he is entitled to recover from the Company as a debt from the Company Rs. 20,000, being the principal sum insured. From that sum the Company, no doubt, might deduct any calls which in fact were due, but no calls are due, and, in my opinion, the Company is bound to pay the Rs. 20,000 without deduction notwithstanding that the balance of the premia has not been recovered out of the dividends of the Company. The Company has paid no dividend since 1912. On the assumption, however, that the Company is bound to pay as a debt to the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 20,000, Mr. Bose, on behalf of the defendant, has ingeniously argued that the Company is not bound to pay the Rs. 20,000 out of its General Fund, but that the debt of Rs. 20,000 is to be treated merely as a claim which is to be liquidated, in so far as funds are available, out of a certain fund created under Art. 97 of the Articles of Association of the 16th of August 1915. There is evidence before me that this particular fund called the "Combined Policy Holders Account" is insolvent, and, although the Company has other funds at its disposal out of this particular account the Company would not be able to provide sufficient monies to liquidate the debt due to the plaintiff from the Company. Now, as I am satisfied that the plaintiff has an undoubted right to recover Rs. 20,000 from the Company, the question as to whether the Company can pay or how it will pay, is a matter which will have to be considered when the time comes for the plaintiff to put his decree into execution. I think, however, that it is advisable in this case, as the matter has been urged by Counsel on behalf of the defendant Company, that I should express my view on the question as to how far the plaintiff is bound by the alteration in Art. 97 of the Articles of Association. Now, it is perfectly true that the plaintiff, being a share-holder in the Company, must be taken to know that one of the incidents of membership of a Company is that the Company may by adopting the proper method, bona fide alter its articles in a way which may prejudicially affect his interest, and, provided that the alteration in the article is not inconsistent with the objects set out in the Memorandum of Association, and is bona fide made in the interest of the Company, the plaintiff as a share holder in ordinary circumstances would be bound by such an alteration: Allen v. Gold Reefs of West Africa (1).

Sir Nathaniel Lindley, Master of the Rolls lays down the rule as follows:—

"The power thus conferred on Companies to alter the regulations contained in their articles is limited only by the provisions contained in the Statute and the conditions contained in the Company's Memorandum of Association. Wide, however, as the language of s. 50 is, the power conferred by it must, like all other powers, be exercised subject to those general principles of law and equity which are applicable to all powers conferred on majorities and enabling them to bind minorities. It must be exercised, not only in the manner required by law, but also bona fide for the benefit of the Company as a whole, and it must not be exceeded. These conditions are always implied, and are seldom, if ever, expressed. But if they are complied with I can discover no ground for judicially putting any other restrictions on the power conferred by the section than those contained in it.

(1) (1900) 1 Ch. 656; 69 L. J. Ch. 266; 82 L. T. 210 48 W. R. 452; 7 Mans. 417; 16 T. L. R. 213.

How shares shall be transferred, and whether the Company shall have any lien on them, are clearly matters of regulation properly prescribed by a Company's Articles of Association. This is shown by Table A in the Schedule to the Company's Act, 1852, cls 8, 9, 10. Speaking, therefore, generally, and without reference to any particular case, the section clearly authorises a Limited Company, formed with articles which confer no lien on fully paid up shares, and which allow them to be transferred without any fetter, to alter those articles by special resolution, and to impose a lien and restrictions on the registry of transfers of those shares by members indebted to the Company."

"But then comes the question whether this can be done so as to impose a lien or restriction in respect of a debt contracted before and existing at the time when the articles are altered. Again, speaking generally, I am of opinion that the articles can be so altered, and that if they are altered bona fide for the benefit of the Company, they will be valid and binding as altered on the existing holders of paid-up shares, whether such holders are indebted or not indebted to the Company when the alteration is made. But, as will be seen presently, it does not by any means follow that the altered article may not be inapplicable to some particular fully paid-up share holder. He may have special rights against a Company, which do not invalidate the resolution to alter the articles, but which may exempt him from the operations of the articles as altered."

Further on, the Master of the Rolls adds:—"But, although the regulations contained in a Company's Articles of Association are revocable by special resolution, a special contract may be made with the Company in the terms of or embodying one or more of the articles, and the question will then arise whether an alteration of the articles so embodied is consistent or inconsistent with the real bargain between the parties. A Company cannot break its contracts by altering its articles, but, when dealing with contracts referring to revocable articles, and especially with contracts between a member of the Company and the Company respecting his shares, care must be taken not to assume that the contract involves as one of its terms an article which is not to be altered."

The principle enunciated by the Master of the Rolls in Allen v. Gold Reefs of West Africa (1) was considered by the Court of Appeal in the case of Baily v. British Equitable Assurance Company (2). In that case the question arose as to whether a Company had power by altering its Articles of Association to distribute to the shareholders, not the whole of the profits, but the whole of the profits less a reserve fund which was deducted, and the Court of Appeal held that the effect of such an alteration of the articles was to cause the Company to commit a breach of its contract with the policy holder. That case went to the House of Lords where it was reversed, but on the ground that in that particular case the share-holder must be taken to have anticipated that it was possible that the articles would be altered so as to authorize a distribution of the profits less an amount set aside for reserve, and the House of Lords did not affect to disapprove the principles laid down by the Court of Appeal. Lord Justice Cozens Hardy in the Court of Appeal stated the principle as follows:—

"It is said, that, apart from the Statute, the deed of settlement itself contained a power to alter the by-law of which power the plaintiff had notice. We cannot assent to this argument. As between the members of a Company and the Company, no doubt, this proposition is to some extent true. The rights of a share-holder in respect of his shares, except so far as they may be protected by the Memorandum of Association, are by Statute made liable to be altered by special resolution: see Allen v. Gold Reefs of West Africa (1).

"But the case of a contract between an outsider and the Company is entirely different, and even a share-holder must be regarded as an outsider in so far as he contracts with the Company otherwise than in respect of his shares. It would be dangerous to hold that in a contract of loan or a contract of service or a contract of insurance validly entered into by a Company there is any greater power of variation of the rights and liabilities of the parties than would exist if, instead of the Company, the contracting party had been an individual. A Company cannot by altering its articles justify a breach of contract."

And Lord Lindley, in the House of Lords,

(2) (1904) 1 Ch. 374; 11 Mans. 169; 73 L. J. Ch. 240; 20 T. L. R. 242; 90 L. T. 335; 52 W. R. 549.

while coming to the conclusion that the particular alteration in the article did not involve a breach of the Company's contract with the plaintiff, concludes his speech by saying :—

"Of course, the powers of altering by-laws, like other powers, must be exercised bona fide, and having regard to the purposes for which they are created, and to the rights of persons affected by them. A by-law to the effect that no creditor or policy-holder should be paid what was due to him would, in my opinion, be clearly void as an illegal excess of power. But in this case it is conceded that the alteration contemplated, and sought to be restrained, is fair, honest and business-like, and will in the opinion of the Directors and share-holders of the Company, be beneficial as well to the policy-holders as to the share-holders. The sole question is whether such an alteration infringes the rights of the policy-holders. In my opinion it clearly does not."

Mr. Justice Sargant in the British Murac Syndicate, Ltd. v. Alperton Rubber Co., Ltd. (3) held that the alteration of the article in that case was not an alteration which was applicable to the contract between the Company and the plaintiff. In that case by one of the articles it was provided that a certain Syndicate should have the right to nominate two Directors, and the Company, in the belief that certain nominees of the Syndicate were undesirable as Directors, altered the articles so as to authorise the Company to refuse to accept the Syndicate's nominees. Mr. Justice Sargant at page 193,* passed these observations :—

"The principal authority on the subject is Allen v. Gold Reefs of West Africa (1), where the Court clearly recognized that a Company cannot alter its articles so as to commit a breach of contract, and further that even the articles themselves might show that there was such a contract as that it would be unfair on the part of the Company to alter them. Here I have not to consider the latter point because there are present here both the provision in the articles and the express obligation in the agreement under which the plaintiff Syndicate is to have this express right." Later on he adds that "if the Court sees that a contract involves as one of its terms that an article is not to be altered, then the Company is not at liberty to alter that article so as to break that contract. In my judgment on the facts of this case the contract between the plaintiff Syndicate and the defendant Company clearly involved as one of its terms that Art. 88 was not to be altered, i. e., that the plaintiff Syndicate so long as it held the stipulated number of shares was to have a perpetual right of nominating two Directors of the Company." [See also Sidebottom v. Kershaw, Leese & Co. (4) and Dafen Tinplate Co. v. Lanelly Steel Co. (5).]

Applying the principles thus laid down to the facts of this case I have to consider whether the alteration of the article in August 1915, (if it is applicable at all, having regard to the further alteration of the articles in May 1922), involves such a breach of the contract which the Company made with the plaintiff as that it would be inequitable that the article as altered should be held to apply to that contract. In my opinion, the effect of the contention of the defendant Company is that, notwithstanding that the plaintiff has a valid claim against them for a liquidated sum of Rs. 20,000 the Company is entitled to deduct from such sum the balance of premia not recovered out of the dividends paid, and in addition is entitled to make a call in respect of any balance of the monies due on the shares which is outstanding; while the effect of the alteration of the article is that the plaintiff's claim which the Company has ample means at their disposal to liquidate, is not to be paid by the Company out of their general assets, but is to be treated as a claim against a fund which is insolvent. It is not necessary for me to hold in these proceedings that the articles as altered are invalid; it may be that the right of the Company to alter its articles is unimpaired, but, in my opinion, the effect of the alteration of the articles is that it involves a fundamental breach of the contract which the Company had previously entered into with the plaintiff, and in respect of that contract the article is inapplicable. I come, therefore, to the conclusion that, in respect of that contract the article is inapplicable, and that, although the plaintiff

(3) (1915) 2 Ch. 186; 84 L. J. Ch. 665; 113 L. T. 373; 59 S. J. 494; 31 T. L. R. 391.

*Page of (1915) 2 Ch. -[Ed.]

(4) (1920) 1 Ch. 154; 89 L. J. Ch. 113; 122 L. T. 325; 64 S. J. 114; 36 T. L. R. 55.

(5) (1920) 2 Ch. 124; 89 L. J. Ch. 346; 128 L. T. 225; 64 S. J. 446; 36 T. L. R. 428.

iff is a share-holder in the Company in respect of this debt of Rs. 20,000 the Directors would not be acting ultra vires in paying the sum of Rs. 20,000 out of the general assets of the Company which the Directors are at liberty to allocate for the purpose of liquidating this and other business claims.

Mr. Bose, on behalf of the defendant further contended that it was ultra vires for the Directors to pay this sum, as in effect it would be paying back the capital of the Company, but, in my opinion, all that the Directors would be doing would be paying an ordinary business debt, and not in any sense re-paying capital monies of the Company.

Under these circumstances there will be judgment for the plaintiff for the sum claimed with costs on scale No. 2. Interest on sum decreed at 6 per cent.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 85 OF 1923.
November 13, 1924.

Present:—Justice Sir Charles Gordon Spencer, Kt., and Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

Dewan Bahadur GOVINDAS
CHATURBHUJAS—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

N. RAMADOSS—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909), ss. 23, 30 (2)—Insolvency—Composition agreed to by majority of creditors—Annulment of adjudication—Secured creditor not party to composition, whether bound—Right of suit, whether barred.

Under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, a composition in the course of the insolvency proceedings agreed to by the prescribed statutory majority of creditors is binding on all creditors of the insolvent whether they were parties to the composition or not, but such composition takes effect and operates to discharge the insolvent from his liability in respect of a debt only if the compensation agreed to is paid or else a scheme is outstanding under which the creditor is required to proceed and obtain relief. [p. 96, col. 1.]

Where a scheme of composition has been approved the insolvent debtor is bound to pay to all his creditors, including secured creditors, whose debts are provable in insolvency, the amount of the balance of their debts according to the composition and the right to enforce such payment can be enforced in the ordinary Courts. [p. 93, col. 2.]

Clause (2) of s. 30 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act is merely enabling in its nature and provides only for a summary remedy and does not exclude the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts. It is applicable only to cases where there is something in the provisions of the composition or scheme which is capable of being enforced in the Bankruptcy Court. [p. 97, col. 1.]

A composition was agreed to by the statutory majority of the creditors of an insolvent and the adjudication was annulled. One of the secured creditors got no notice of the adjudication and had not yet proved his debt when it was annulled. There was no provision in the scheme of composition capable of enforcement under cl. (2) of s. 30 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. In a suit by the secured creditor to recover the balance of what was due to him after deducting the value of his security since realised :

Held, (1) that s. 30, cl. (2) of the Act did not operate as a bar to the maintainability of the suit ; [ibid.]

Edwards v. Hancher, (1876) 1 C. P. D. 111; 33 L. T. 575; Edwards v. Coombe, (1872) 7 C. P. 519; 41 L. J. C. P. 202; 27 L. T. 315; 21 W. R. 107, In re Bestwick, Ex parte Hodgkinson, (1876) 2 Ch. 485; 45 L. J. Bk. 148; 31 L. T. 784; 24 W. R. 938 and In re Hardy, Hardy v. Farmer, (1896) 1 Ch. 904; 65 L. J. Ch. 461; 74 L. T. 403; 44 W. R. 503; 3 Manson 150, relied on.

Flint v. Barnard, (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 90; 58 L. J. Q. B. 53; 37 W. R. 185 and Seaton v. Deerpur, (1895) 1 Q. B. 853; 64 L. J. Q. B. 430; 14 R. 523; 72 L. T. 453; 43 W. R. 436; 59 J. P. 357; 2 Manson 355, distinguished.

(2) that the plaintiff was, however, bound by the terms of the composition and could only recover that proportion of the balance of his debt which had been paid to the other creditors. [p. 97, col. 2.]

Per Spencer, J.—In India the position of an insolvent whose adjudication has been annulled is not the same as that of a discharged insolvent. [p. 93, col. 1.]

Per Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—A composition in the course of the insolvency agreed to by the prescribed statutory majority of the creditors is binding on all creditors of the insolvent whether they were parties to the composition or not. [p. 95, col. 1.]

In the absence of express statutory provision excluding the jurisdiction of the ordinary Tribunals no right of action can be deemed to have been taken away. [p. 97, col. 1.]

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Coutts-Trotter, dated the 14th August 1923, passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court, in O. S. No. 720 of 1922.

Mr C. V. Anantakrishna Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr A. Ramachandra Iyer, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Spencer, J.—Appellant, Dewan Bahadur Govindas Chaturbhujdas, plaintiff in the Trial Court, was the secured creditor of respondent N. Ramdoss first defendant in the Trial Court, who pledged with him, through his agent the second defendant, certain jewels as security for a loan of Rs. 12,000. Respondent was adjudicated insolvent on 20th September 1921. The appellant got no notice from the Official Assignee and before he attempted to prove for the balance of what was due to him, the adjudication was annulled on the 20th February, 1922. Appellant brought this suit to recover the balance due to him after deducting the value of his security which he has since realised.

The learned Judge held that he was not entitled to anything and dismissed the suit against this defendant. He acted upon first impressions, as there is no decided case in this country as to the rights of a secured creditor to recover the balance of any debt which he has failed to prove in insolvency, when the adjudication has been annulled owing to the debtor having compounded with his other creditors. The learned Judge quoted the case of Flint v. Barnard (1) as being an authority for the principle that the effect of a composition between a debtor and his creditors is the same as the effect of a discharge, viz., that it releases a debtor from all debts provable in bankruptcy. If I rightly understand that decision, it only decided what are debts provable in bankruptcy and included among them liabilities which mature into debts due after acceptance of composition.

In this country the position of an insolvent whose adjudication has been annulled is not the same as that of a discharged insolvent. The Presidency Towns Insolvency Act gives the effect of an order of discharge in s. 45. An order of discharge releases an insolvent from all debts provable in insolvency except certain debts of a special nature, such as debts owing to the Crown. An adjudication may be annulled either under s. 21 when it is found by the Court that a debtor ought not to have been adjudged insolvent, or where it is proved that all his debts have been paid in full, or it may be annulled under s. 30 when a proposal of composition has been accepted by a majority of his creditors. The effect of annulment appears in s. 23; which states that the property of the debtor shall vest in such person as the Court may appoint, or, in default of such an appointment shall revert to the debtor, to the extent of his interest therein. In Bombay, there are rules for the vesting of the property in a person appointed by the Court. Here, as there are no such rules and no such appointment has been made, the property must necessarily revert to the debtor.

In the present case there was no regular scheme of composition laid before the Court but the insolvent filed an affidavit in the Court affirming that all the creditors had agreed to accept eight annas in the rupee and had been paid at that rate. As there is no provision for composition which can be enforced under s. 30, cl. (2), no property of the insolvent is in the hands of the Official Assignee, and no proceedings are now pending in the matter of the insolvency of N. Rama Doss, it would be futile for us to refer the creditor to the Court of Insolvency for his remedy. He has brought this suit for the whole of the balance that is due to him, but being one of the creditors whose names were entered in the Schedule (Ex. J), a majority of whom agreed to accept eight annas in the rupee, he is bound by the result of the composition approved by the Court, for s. 30, cl. (1) says that upon an order being made annulling the adjudication, the composition or scheme shall be binding on all the creditors so far as it relates to any debt due to them from the insolvent and provable in insolvency. The appellant's claim for the unsecured balance was provable in insolvency though not actually proved, as the adjudication was annulled before he got notice and came in to prove for the balance. In Edwards v. Coombe (2), the rights of general action of a creditor whose name does not appear in the statement of composition were held not to be taken away by s. 126 of the Bankruptcy Act of 1869 which provided as follows:—"The provisions of a composition accepted by an extraordinary resolution in pursuance of this section shall be binding on all the creditors whose names and addresses, and the amount of debts due to whom are shown in the statement of the debtor, produced to the meetings at which the resolution was passed, but shall not affect or prejudice the rights of any other creditors." Under the same Act in In re Bestwick, Ex parte Hodgkinson (3), creditors who failed to prove their debt in composition proceedings were allowed to come in after realizing their security and claim the balance at the rate at which composition was accepted. In the Bankruptcy Act of 1883 this provision was not repeated, but s. 18, cl. (8) of that Act provided: "A composition or scheme

(2) (1872) 7 C. P. 519; 41 L. J. C. P. 202; 27 L. T. 315; 21 W. R. 107.

(3) (1876) 2 Ch. 185; 45 L. J. Bk. 148; 34 L. T. 784; 24 W. R. 938.

(1) (1889) 22 Q. B. D. 90; 58 L. J. Q. B. 53; 37 W. R. 185.

accepted and proved in pursuance of this section shall be binding on all the creditors so far as it relates to any debts due to them from the debtor and provable in bankruptcy."

Assuming that a creditor might enforce the original agreement or resolution by a summary application to the Court of Bankruptcy, it is clear from these decisions that the jurisdiction of Courts of Common Law has not been ousted thereby. In the last quoted of these decisions, it is stated that a creditor may wait till he realises his security, but in any case the debt will not be discharged until the amount of composition is paid. It was held by the Court of Chancery in In re Hardy, Hardy v. Farmer (4), that secured creditors who had not assented to a scheme of composition could bring an action after the death of an adjudicated bankrupt against his estate for the balance of their debt that remained after valuing their security and that although the Court of Bankruptcy had jurisdiction over such a claim notwithstanding the bankrupt's death, the secured creditor's right of action was not barred. In India too it is provided that under s. 17 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act a secured creditor's right of suit is not barred by the making of an order of adjudication.

I think that the plaintiff was clearly entitled to a decree against first defendant for a moiety of the balance that may be found to be due, after deducting from the amount claimed in the plaint the amount realised by sale of the security, and interest thereon at the contract rate of Rs. 1-3-0 up to the date of the decree (14th August 1923) of the Court of first instance.

The appeal is accordingly allowed, but without costs as in this Court the case has been placed upon a new footing and a decree will be given to the plaintiff (appellant) as I have stated.

The memorandum of objections is dismissed.

Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—I agree that the appeal should be allowed. But it must be observed that the point on which the appeal has been argued before us was not only not argued before the learned Judge at the Original Trial but does not seem to have been even hinted at. The plaintiff-appellant instituted the suit against two defendants. The first defendant is the only respondent here in appeal before us. The other defendant was the widow and legal representative of one Oggu Guruswami Chetty. This Guruswami Chetty pledged with the plaintiff two diamond addigais as security for a loan of Rs. 12,000, carrying interest at Rs. 1-3-0 per cent. per mensem, and as further security gave his own promissory note therefor to the plaintiff. It is now admitted that the two jewels which were so pledged by Guruswami belonged to the first defendant and that the pledge was made and the loan obtained by Guruswami only for and on behalf of the first defendant.

The learned Judge granted a decree against the second defendant limited to the assets of the said Guruswami in her hands, but dismissed the action—so far as the first defendant was concerned.

The ground on which the learned Judge held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree against the first defendant is as follows:—The first defendant had subsequent to the pledge been adjudicated an insolvent, but in the course of the insolvency proceedings the statutory majority of his creditors agreed to a composition of 8-annas in the rupee and thereupon the insolvent first defendant applied to the Court for the annulment of his insolvency on the representation that he had paid all his creditors the composition agreed to. The Court sanctioned the compromise and annulled the insolvency. The plaintiff who had not realised his security, had not proved his debt in insolvency or taken any steps to have it proved in any of the ways indicated by the rules relating to secured creditors before the insolvency was annulled by the Court. And under some practice for which there seems to be no warrant, no notice of the application for annulment was given to the plaintiff or any other secured creditor. Even when the suit was instituted, the plaintiff had not realised his securities, and one of the prayers in the plaint relates to the sale of the securities by or under the directions of the Court.

The learned Judge referring to the case of Flint v. Barnard (1) and the case of Seaton v. Deerhurst (5) held that the annulment following on the composition had the same effect with regard to the insolvent as an order of discharge and that, therefore, the first defendant became released from liability to the plaintiff with regard to any balance that might be found due to the creditor after the realisation of the securities.

(4) (1895) 1 Ch. 904; 65 L. J. Ch. 461; 74 L. T. 403; 41 W. R. 503; 3 Manson 150.

(5) (1895) 1 Q. B. 853; 64 L. J. Q. B. 430; 14 R. 523; 72 L. T. 453; 43 W. R. 436; 59 J. P. 357; 2 Manson 355.

The first question, therefore, that arises in this appeal is whether the annulment of the insolvency in such circumstances has the operation in law of discharging the insolvent debtor entirely from liability and this will have to be determined apart altogether from any question whether by reason of the plaintiff not having proved the debt in insolvency he has become precluded or debarred from enforcing any remedies and whether the appropriate remedy open to such a creditor would be in the Bankruptcy Court or by separate action. The learned Vakil for the appellant did not seriously press the claim of the plaintiff for the payment of the whole amount of the deficiency in the debt after crediting the proceeds realised by the sale of the securities but contended only for the recovery of such deficiency at the rate agreed to under the composition, namely, at 8-annas in the rupee. As I understand Flint v. Barnard (1), it is only an authority for two propositions; firstly, that a composition in the course of the insolvency agreed to by the prescribed statutory majority of the creditors is binding on all creditors of the insolvent whether they were parties to the composition or not; and secondly, that a debt accrued subsequent to adjudication but before the composition is a debt provable in insolvency. The plaintiff in the action claimed not to be bound by the composition and not liable to proceed to recover his debt under the scheme framed and approved of by the Court for the payment of the creditors. Lord Esher, M. R., properly held that such a debt was a debt provable in insolvency and an agreement in composition bound all the creditors whose debts were debts provable in insolvency. No question, therefore, arose or was decided whether a creditor in those circumstances was or was not entitled to be paid even at the rate agreed to under the composition. It seems to me that it was assumed throughout in that case that the creditor had a right at least to be so paid.

In Seaton v. Deerhurst (5), the question that arose was whether a judgment-creditor whose debt was rejected on its being attempted to be proved before the trustees in Bankruptcy was entitled, merely because he had not received any dividend, to proceed to have execution of his decree. The Court held that being a debt provable in bankruptcy and there being a scheme for the payment of all the creditors whose debts were provable in bankruptcy and the debt due to the judgment creditor being a debt so provable, the trustee in bankruptcy was entitled to reject it as not binding and that the mere fact that his claim was rejected would not give him a right to proceed in execution. The ratio decidendi in that case obviously was that a judgment creditor was not in a better position with regard to the liability to prove his claim before the trustee under a composition arrangement than any other ordinary creditor whose debt was similarly provable in insolvency. In that case there was clearly a trustee appointed under the composition arrangement and the creditors who had not been paid were relegated to their remedies against him. In the present case, however, there has been no arrangement whatever made for the payment of any creditors who might be found not to have been paid the composition agreed to, no amount or property was set apart for that purpose either in the hands of the Official Assignee or any other trustee and not even an undertaking was given by the insolvent debtor to make any payments under the composition. This case, therefore, is not one in which a claim was made by the plaintiff to any trustee in bankruptcy or composition and properly rejected by him. It is clear that no such claim could have been made, for indeed there is no person before whom such a claim could have been preferred. The case of Seaton v. Deerhurst (5) is, therefore, an authority only for the position that if there is a scheme sanctioned by the Court for the payment of a composition to all creditors the creditors have only the remedy given to them for getting what they can get under the scheme and not otherwise.

In Edwards v. Hancher (6), there was a composition agreed to of three shillings in the pound for which the insolvent debtor along with a surety gave a promissory note to the creditor and a receipt was also granted by the creditor for purporting to be in discharge of the debt. On the note being dishonoured, it was held that the plaintiffs were remitted to their rights to sue on the original debt. Chief Justice Lord Coleridge held that the actual payment arrived at on the basis of the composition is the thing which the creditors resolved to accept and that, therefore, it is if and when and only if and when that amount is actually paid, there is satisfaction of the debt. The Court held that on failure of the payment, the plaintiffs were remitted to their original rights and were entitled to a decree in their action against the defendants. This case was referred to with approval and followed in In re Bestwick, Ex parte Bestwick (3) and it was there held that a secured creditor was in no way bound by a compounding debtor's estimate of the value of his security and that he was entitled to abstain from proving the claim or taking any part in composition proceedings and that when he has realised his security he may claim from the debtor payment of the composition on the balance of the debt, which may then remain unsatisfied.

(6) (1876) 1 C. P. D. 111; 33 L. T. 575.

On the authority of these two cases we arrive at the conclusion that though a composition sanctioned by the Court is binding on all the creditors of the insolvent including the creditors who were not parties to the composition the composition takes effect and operates to discharge the insolvent from his liability on the debt only if the compensation agreed to is paid or else a scheme is outstanding under which the creditors are required to proceed and obtain relief. In default of such payment and in the absence of such a scheme, it necessarily follows that the obligation is laid on the insolvent debtor to pay to all the creditors whose debts are provable in insolvency the amount of the balance of their debt according to the composition. It is inconceivable that in default of any such payment and in the absence of any such scheme of trust for payment the insolvent debtor should be entirely discharged from all liability merely on the Court approving of a composition and annulling the adjudication. But that was the contention put forward by Mr. A. Ramachandra Iyer the learned Vakil for the respondent if I understood his argument aright. It seems to me that it can scarcely be the law. There are, however, two cases which were relied on and which I may here refer to. In the case of Gilbey v. Jeffries (7), no doubt, Brett, M. R., held that as the composition was binding on the creditor the debtor became discharged. But that was a case in which under the arrangement of composition all the property of the debtor had been transferred to a trustee and the remedy of the creditor obviously was against such a trustee. The case of Couldery v. Bartrum (8) was also relied on, but that was a case merely relating to valuation of securities and to the liability under the rules relating thereto of the holder of the security to refund any amount realised by him by the sale of the securities over and above the amount at which he had valued the securities. Thus if the creditor in circumstances has a remedy, the only question that remains is, what is his remedy? Whether it is by way of application to the Bankruptcy Court or by a separate action. In the English Bankruptcy Rules, there is a specific r. 215 which provides that no action to enforce payment shall lie but the remedy shall only be by application to the Bankruptcy Courts if default is made in payment under a composition scheme either by the debtor or the trustee. No such rule has been framed in this Court. The only provision of law relating to this matter is contained in cl. (2) of s. 30 of Act III of 1909. It is as follows:—"The provisions of the composition or scheme may be enforced by the Court on application by any person interested, and any disobedience of an order of the Court made on the application shall be deemed a contempt of Court." This is an exact reproduction of cl. (10) of s. 18 of the English Bankruptcy Act of the year 1883.

In the case of In re Hardy, Hardy v. Farmer (4), after the death of the bankrupt a secured creditor valuing his security under the rules applied in an administration action for the recovery of the balance due to him. A trustee had been appointed under the composition and objection was taken that no application would lie except to the Bankruptcy Court. Justice Chitty having regard to the terms of r. 211 of the Bankruptcy Rules of 1886 which had been passed by that time, which rule was identical in terms with the present r. 215 already referred to, held that the proper remedy was by way of application in the Bankruptcy Court, and the learned Judge apparently adjourned the hearing of the application in the Chancery Court for the purpose of enabling the applicant to move the Bankruptcy Court. In this case two points are clear; firstly, that a trustee had been appointed for the purpose of carrying out the composition; and secondly, that but for r. 211 referred to by the learned Judge which had the force of law and which laid down that no separate action would lie and that the remedy would be by application to the Bankruptcy Court, the learned Judge would have held he had jurisdiction. In the absence of such a rule in this Court, there is, therefore, no reason whatever to hold that the right of separate action is precluded or barred.

(7) (1833) 11 Q. B. D. 559; 52 L. J. Q. B. 601; 48 L. T. 699.

(8) (1882) 19 Ch. D. 394; 51 L. J. Ch. 265; 45 L. T. 689; 30 W. R. 141.

Further cl. (2) of s. 30 is merely enabling. It is a summary remedy given by the Statute. There are no words there excluding the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts. In the absence of express statutory provision excluding the jurisdiction of the ordinary Tribunals no right of action could be deemed to have been taken away. Furthermore, cl. (2) of s. 30 refers obviously only to cases where there is something in the provisions of the composition or scheme which are capable of being enforced in the Bankruptcy Court. In the present case, however, no such provision would seem to exist capable of enforcement on application to the Bankruptcy Court. On that ground also, therefore, cl. (2) of s. 30 has no application.

The case of Edwards v. Coombe (2) is a decision which throws considerable light on the question now under discussion. That was in the year 1872. There was then no such rule as the present r. 215 or r. 211 of the Bankruptcy rules of the year 1886. Justice Willes in that case decided that it was competent to a non-assenting creditor notwithstanding a resolution for composition under s. 126 of the Bankruptcy Act on 1869 to sue for his original debt where the debtor has failed to pay or tender the composition within the time agreed or within a reasonable time, and that the creditor was not restricted to the summary remedy by application to the Courts of Bankruptcy provided by that section. I may here observe that the provision for summary remedy referred to in that section is in terms identical with cl. (2) of s. 30 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act of 1909. That learned Judge referring to the summary remedy states that a remedy given in Bankruptcy Courts may be very valuable, that a creditor may avail himself of the course of proceedings if he thinks fit, but his ordinary common law remedy still subsists until he elects to avail himself of the powers of the Court of Bankruptcy. At another place in the same judgment that learned Judge observes that it is the composition that has to be accepted and not a mere agreement of the other creditors and that the non-payment of composition was the failure of a condition going to the root of the arrangement and that the original debt remains and may be resorted to notwithstanding the resolution.

The following sentence, however, from the concluding portion of the judgment of Justice Willes may have some bearing and may also require to be considered:—"We dispose of this case without entering into a consideration as to whether it might be more or less desirable that the equitable summary remedy of the creditor should be enforced rather than the ordinary common law remedy."

In spite of the fact that in our judgment the plaintiff-appellant in this case has got a concurrent remedy by separate action, we should have been disposed to refer him to the summary remedy indicated in cl. 2 of s. 30 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act on the general principle that the parties should as far as possible be relegated to the remedies provided in special enactments, were it not for the circumstance that there appears to be no provision in the composition and arrangement in this case, which is capable of any summary enforcement. Any other remedy that may be open to the plaintiff under that Act could scarcely be called summary. It, therefore, follows that there is nothing in the Bankruptcy Law which renders the present suit unsustainable. The plaintiff is clearly entitled to be paid as composition, in respect of the balance due to him in the amount of the debt with interest thereon at Rs. 1-3-0 per cent. per mensem from the date of the loan till the date of the decree of the Original Side after giving credit for the sale-proceeds of the securities, and the learned Judge erred in dismissing the suit entirely against the first defendant.

The decree of the Original Court will, therefore, accordingly be modified and a decree will be passed against the first defendant for the amount of such a balance at 8 annas in the rupee or in other words for the moiety of such balance. As the point on which the appellant had now succeeded, was not argued before the learned Judge in the Original Court, there will be no order as to the costs of the appeal. The memorandum of objections is also dismissed.

v. N. v. Memorandum of objections dismissed.

Z. K.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE

No. 2684 of 1922.

April 30, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy and Mr. Justice Duval.

RAM CHANDRA AGARWALA

AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—

APPELLANTS

versus

SYAMESWARI DASYA—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT.

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), ss. 17 (1) (d), 49-- Construction of document—Lease, unregistered, whether admissible in evidence—Admission, erroneous, of Counsel on point of law, whether binding.

An erroneous admission by Counsel on a point of law is of no effect and does not preclude a party from claiming his legal rights in the Appellate Court. [p. 99, col. 1.]

A document began by describing itself to be an agreement for letting out a basa bari and a tin ghar and contained the following statement "you having come to me and Rs. 150 having been fixed as the annual jama of the said basa bari and the tin ghar I let out the same to you for carrying on your trade and commerce therein." Then followed a clause as to the way in which the expenses for repairs were to be met. It was then laid down that after the accounts had been made up and the amount of money expended on the repairs totalled, there would be a fresh deed and that on re-payment of the debt incurred by the owner in respect of the repairs the owner would be able to make a new settlement of the land according to his wish. Then followed certain conditions as to the maintenance of boundaries, payment of damages for injuries to the ghar not caused by accident, keeping the house in repair by the owner, etc.:

Held, that the document was a lease for a number of years and not being registered was not admissible in evidence. [p. 99, col. 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the Special Subordinate Judge, As-sam Valley Districts, dated the 21st July 1922, affirming that of the Munsif, Dhubri, dated the 3rd December 1921.

Dr. Bijan Kumar Mukerjee (for Babu Rupendra Kumar Mitter) and Babu Dharmadas Set, for the Appellants.

Mr. Abani Nath Bhattacharjya and Babu Nirod Bandhu Roy, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Duval, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit in ejectment. The mother of the present plaintiff had a house in Gouripur Bazar in the District of Goalpara and in 1901 the defendants became her tenant at the rental of Rs. 90 a year and had a shop in the premises. In 1910 the house having been found to be dilapidated the parties met and it was arranged that the lease should continue at Rs. 150 a year after repairs but as the lady had no money the defendants would advance the money for putting the house in order without interest and that the money would be recovered by a deduction of Rs. 75 a year from the present rent of Rs. 150 a year. There was a further term that until the money due on the repairs was re-paid the defendants would not be ejected. Shortly after this the mother of the plaintiff who was an old lady of 90 years of age died and has been succeeded by her daughter the present plaintiff. In 1920 the present suit was brought to eject the defendants from the house. The defendants set up a document (Ex. C.) under which they stated they were not liable to be ejected until the whole debt had been paid off by payment of Rs. 75 a year. The Munsif, however, found that this deed not having been registered, the defendants were not protected as they were only tenants at-will and that as notice had been served, the tenancy had been terminated by that notice and so he gave a decree to the plaintiff to eject the defendants in payment of the balance due to the extent of Rs. 875 and allowed them a certain time within which to remove the additional houses. Against this order the defendants appealed. On the appeal coming up before the Subordinate Judge the learned Pleader appearing for the appellant conceded that the position of his clients was that of the tenants-at-will and that they were liable to be ejected but in the circumstances of the case the amount of compensation granted by the Court below was inadequate. The learned Subordinate Judge, therefore, only dealt with the question of compensation and came to the conclusion that Rs. 875 allowed to the defendants was the proper amount.

In appeal before us it is first urged that this admission by the Pleader for the defendants did not bar the point as to the validity or otherwise of the lease or whether the defendants are liable to be ejected at all being taken in second appeal. There is no doubt that this is so. I only refer to the case of Secretary of State for India v. Sibaprosad Jana (1), where it was stated following the decision of the Judicial Committee in the cases of Jotendromohun Tagore v. Ganendromohun Tagore (2), and Beni Pershad Koeri v. Dudhnath Roy (3), that an erroneous admission by a Counsel on a point of law is of no effect and does not preclude a party from claiming his legal rights in the Appellate Court. The question of the amount of compensation is not argued before us in second appeal. The only question taken before us is that the document (Ex. C.) though not registered gave them a right under which they could not be ejected and anyhow it did not create a present demise and was only an agreement and not a lease: and that anyhow the principle laid down in the case of Walsh v. Lonsdale (4), as to part performance will apply to this case. The question, however, in this case is whether, as a matter of fact, it was in consequence of this document as a lease that the defendants came into possession of this property. An examination of the document in my mind leaves no doubt in this respect. The document, began by describing the deed to be an agreement for letting out basa bari and a tin 'ghar' and it says as follows at the beginning "you having come to me and Rs. 150 only having been fixed as the annual jama of the said basa bari and the tin ghar, I let out the same to you for carrying on your trade and commerce therein". Then follows a clause in the document as to the way in which the expenses for repairs would be met. It then lays down that after the accounts have been made and the amount of money expended therefor totalled, there would be a fresh deed. It also says that on re-payment of the debt the plaintiff will be able to make any new settlement of the land according to her wish. In the third paragraph there are certain other conditions such as, to the maintenance of boundaries, payment of damages for injuries to the ghar not caused by accident, keeping the house in repair (if the lessor does not make the repair the lessee will make it and deduce the expenses thereof from the rent reserved). This clearly shows that this document purports to be a lease: and if it was lease for a limited number of years and as the Pleader for the appellant argues for 20 years, it required to be properly stamped and registered. This has not been done. In my opinion, therefore, the Munsif's decision, which was affirmed by the Subordinate Judge, that the defendants were no more than tenants-at-will is correct, I would, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costt. In doing so, however, I will order that the defendants be given three months' time from the date of the decree of this Court within which to remove the additional house and give up the property on receipt of compensation. The rent due to the plaintiff up to the date of giving up of possession will be set off against the compensation.

Suhrawardy, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 73 of 1925.

July 21, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.

Musammam GULAB DEI—PLAINTIFF—
APPLICANT

versus

G. I. P. RAILWAY—DEFENDANT—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Carriage of goods—Goods consigned to Railway Company for carriage—Freight paid at fixed rate—Wagon used larger than that necessary—Consignor, whether liable for additional freight.

Where goods are consigned to a Railway Company for carriage and freight is paid according to the rates laid down in the Company's rules, the Company has the right of re-measurement and re-calculation of the goods on the arrival of the goods at their destination, but this does not entitle the Company, when it has made a contract with the consignor to convey his goods at a particular rate on the amount of goods consigned, subsequently and without his knowledge to alter the entire basis of calculation merely because for their own convenience they have used for the conveyance of the goods a much larger wagon than was actually necessary. In such a case the consignor is not liable to pay any additional freight by reason of a larger wagon having been used for the conveyance of the goods. [p. 100, col. 1.]

(1) 45 Ind. Cas. 983; 27 C. L. J. 447.

(2) 18 W. R. 359; 9 B. L. R. 377; 1 A. Sup. Vol. 47; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 692; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 82 (P. C.).

(3) 27 C. 156; 26 I. A. 216; 4 C. W. N. 274; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 58; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 103 (P. C.).

(4) (1882) 21 Ch. D. 9; 52 L. J. Ch. 2; 46 L. T. 858; 31 W. R. 109.

Civil revision from an order of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Agra, dated the 11th of October 1924.

Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Applicant.

Mr. Ladli Prasad Zutshi, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The question raised in this revision is as to the correctness of an additional charge of Rs. 170 levied by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway from the applicant Musammatt Gulab Dei on account of 315 maunds of waste paper consigned from Bombay to Agra and delivered to her at the latter place. The name of the person despatching the goods was Mangalji Ganesh. The Railway receipt was made out in his own name, but was subsequently endorsed to the firm of Lachhman Das-Mul Chand. It was stated in the plaint that the plaintiff, namely, the present applicant, is the proprietor of that firm. The goods were charged at Bombay at the maund-rate of 8-annas per maund applicable to waste paper under the "station-to-station rate list" given on page 111 of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Goods Tariff Part 1-B. The rate is given under No. 264 and the commodity is described as "Paper, waste, O. R. W/300-L. The initials 'O. R.' mean owner's risk; the words 'W/300' mean as explained on page 80 of the Goods Tariff, Part 1-A, that the rate applies to a minimum wagon-load of 300 maunds per 4-wheeled wagon, and a larger minimum, 450 or 600 maunds per 6-wheeled or bogie wagon. If the amount loaded in the wagon is larger than the minimum, freight is to be paid on the actual weight. 'L' indicates that the loading was to be done by the consignor. The Railway Company put a wagon at the consignor's disposal for loading the goods, and granted him a rail receipt showing that the waste paper was charged on the full amount of 315 maunds at the maund-rate of 8-annas. Rs. 157 at this rate was paid by the consignor in advance before the receipt was issued. On arrival at Agra the Railway claimed that owing to the goods having been loaded in an 8-wheeled bogie wagon they were entitled under r. 52-A to charge, not for 315 maunds actually consigned, but for a consignment of 40 tons or nearly 700 maunds at the same rate. They, therefore, demanded from the recipient the sum of Rs. 170 which is now in dispute and refused to deliver the goods until that sum was paid.

I am not prepared to accept the interpretation of this rule which the learned Subordinate Judge has adopted. It is quite true that the Railway Company reserve to themselves a right of re-measurement and re-calculation on the arrival of the goods at their destination, but this does not entitle them, when they have made a contract with the plaintiff to convey his goods at a particular rate on the amount of goods consigned, subsequently and without his knowledge to alter the entire basis of calculation merely because to suit their own convenience they have used for the conveyance of the goods a much larger wagon than was actually necessary. It is perfectly clear that the consignor would never have agreed to consign the goods in this form if he had been told beforehand that he was going to be charged on considerably more than double the amount of waste paper he wished to despatch. I, therefore, find that the Railway Company were not entitled to make the additional charge which they did make in this case, and that the plaintiff's claim was well-founded.

An objection has been taken on behalf of the respondents that in their written statement the Railway Company challenged the right of the plaintiff to sue, and that no finding has been arrived at on this point. The plea was certainly taken in the written statement, but when the case came to trial no issue was framed upon it. The sole issue which was framed was whether the plaintiff was entitled to a refund of the overcharge. Under these circumstances it must be taken that the point was not pressed at the trial.

For the reasons already given I allow this revision and decree the plaintiff's suit with costs.

Z. K.

Revision allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 865 OF 1923.

May 26, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Ewart Greaves, Kt., and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

MOHAMMED USMAN—

PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

ABDUL RAHAMAN AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Construction of document—Mortgage or sale—Intention of parties—Evidence of conduct, whether admissible—Inadequacy of consideration, effect of—Muhammadan parties—Practice.

[90 I. C. 1925]

It is well-known that documents are executed by Muhammadans in which they conceal, or at least try to conceal, the real nature of the transaction and attempt to make out that the transaction is an out-and-out sale although, as a matter of fact, the intention of the parties is to create a mortgage. In considering a document, therefore, of this nature where the question arises whether the document is a deed of sale or a deed of mortgage, regard must be had to this practice where the parties are Muhammadans. [p. 101, col. 2.]

In order to construe such a document intrinsic evidence afforded by the terms of the document must be taken into consideration and the Court must also take into consideration the facts which may legitimately be proved with a view to showing in what manner the language of the document is related to the existing facts and may also refer to the contrast between the value of the property and the consideration that passed in money. Evidence relating to the subsequent conduct of the parties themselves, however, is not admissible as showing their intention. [p. 102, col. 1.]

In the case of such a document the absence of any mention of a definite date by which the transferor can by re-paying the amount of the consideration claim a re-transfer of the property does not indicate that the deed is not one of mortgage, nor is the absence of any reservation to the transferee of the right to recover the money paid by him or of a stipulation authorising the transferor to sue for redemption a safe criterion for the determination of the question. [p. 102, col. 2.]

A deed of transfer ran as follows:—"I have been in the ownership and possession of land fit for erection of shops by right of my purchase within the boundaries mentioned below situated in the line to the north of the road facing westward in Bander Bazar Chak. Now for my own necessity on receipt from you of Rs. 400 in cash as the price of that shop land I sell to you the same and I and my descendants cease to have right therein. You from this day being in ownership and possession in these lands, continue to enjoy the same with the rights of transfer by gift and sale, etc. I and my successors cease to have any right thereto. I make over my kobala of purchase dated the 11th Sravan, 1287. Moreover when I or my heirs would return the purchase price to you and your heirs you shall give up the properties. And I shall get this kobala registered within the period of limitation." It was found that the consideration for the transfer was wholly inadequate:

Held, that the inadequacy of the price coupled with the mention in the deed of the need of money on the part of the vendor and the stipulation as to the return of the price to the vendee and the re-conveyance of the property indicated that the document was intended to be one of mortgage by way of conditional sale and not one of sale out-and-out. [p. 103, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, Sylhet, dated the 8th January 1923, reversing that of the Munsif, Second Court, at Sylhet, dated the 20th March 1922.

Babu Satyendra Kishore Ghose, for the Appellant.

Mr. Gopal Chandra Das and Babu Nirod Bandhu Roy, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Mukerji, J.—The question raised in this appeal is as to the true construction of a document dated the 26th Jaistha 1308 B. E. The Courts below differed in construing the document, the Court of first instance holding that it was a mortgage by way of conditional sale and the lower Appellate Court being of opinion that it was a deed of out-and-out sale. The document runs in these words "I have been in the ownership and possession of land fit for erection of shops by right of my purchase within the boundaries mentioned below situated in the line to the north of the road facing westward in Bander Bazar Chak. Now for my own necessity on receipt from you Rs. 400 in cash as the price of that shop land I sell to you the same and I and my descendants cease to have right therein. You from this day being in ownership and possession in these lands, continue to enjoy the same with the rights of transfer by gift and sale, etc. I and my successors cease to have any right thereto. I make over my kobala of purchase dated the 11th Sravan 1287. Moreover, when I or my heirs would return the purchase price to you and your heirs you shall give up the properties. And I shall get this kobala registered within the period of limitation." There is a further stipulation in the document which runs in these words "Moreover if I pay you back the said price of Rs. 400 then you will without any objection give up the lands sold and return the connected deeds, etc. I shall seek the protection of Court if you do not return the same." In construing the document in the present case it should be remembered that the transaction was between parties who were Muhammadans and it is well-known that documents are executed by Muhammadans in which they conceal or at least try to conceal the real nature of the transaction and attempt to make out that the transaction is an out-and-out sale, although, as a matter of fact, the intention of the parties was to create a mortgage. The learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the deed was one of out-and-out sale. He relied upon certain pieces of evidence which is evidence relating to the subsequent conduct of the parties themselves as showing their intention. This evidence has been laid down by the Judicial Committee in the case of Maung

Kyin v. Ma Shwe La (1) as not admissible in a case where no third parties are involved or no question of fraud arises. In order to construe the document intrinsic evidence afforded by the terms of the document has to be taken into consideration and the Court has also to take into consideration the facts which may legitimately be proved with a view to showing in what manner the language of the document was related to the existing facts and may also refer to the contrast between the value of the property and the consideration that passed in money. These principles have been laid down by this Court in the case of Abdul Gaffur v. Jamal (2) and also by the Judicial Committee in the very recent case of Narsingherji Gyanagerji v. Panuganti Parthasaradhi (3).

So far as the first of these elements is concerned, namely, the adequacy or otherwise of the consideration of the transaction there is no discussion of it in the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge, while in the judgment of the learned Munsif it appears that the consideration mentioned in the document was Rs. 400 whereas the executant of the document had purchased it for Rs. 600 long before the date of the document in question. This clearly shows that the consideration was wholly inadequate. It was certainly one of the matters to be taken into consideration in determining the real character of the document. The learned Subordinate Judge in dealing with this question has referred to the decision of this Court in the case of Kamini Kumar Chowdhury v. Latifanissa Chowdhurani (4). That decision affords us very little assistance inasmuch as we are not in a position to know exactly what the terms of the document in that case were.

The learned Subordinate Judge says that the document on the face of it purports to be a kobala, that the word 'sale' is clearly mentioned in the document and it is also

(1) 42 Ind. Cas. 642; 27 C. L. J. 175; 22 C. W. N. 257; 15 A. L. J. 825; 33 M. L. J. 648; 3 P. L. W. 185, 6 L. W. 777; 23 M. L. T. 36; 20 Bom. L. R. 278; (1918) M. W. N. 300; 45 C. 320; 9 L. B. R. 114; 11 Bur. L. T. 21; 44 I. A. 238 (P. C.).

(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 90; 18 C. L. J. 228; 17 C. W. N. 1053.

(3) 82 Ind. Cas. 993; 40 C. L. J. 481; (1924) A. I. R. (P. C.) 226; 47 M. 729; 20 L. W. 701; 10 O. & A. L. R. 1172; 47 M. L. J. 809; (1924) M. W. N. 915; 27 Bom. L. R. 4; 29 C. W. N. 216; 51 I. A. 305; 26 P. L. R. 18; 23 A. L. J. 161; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 41; 1 O. W. N. 684 (P. C.).

(4) 24 C. W. N. clxxv (175).

stated in the document that the purchaser, his sons and grandsons are to enjoy the lands and the executant gives up his right and authorises the purchaser to transfer the same by sale or gift, etc. These terms undoubtedly would go to show that the object of the executant was to make out that the document would purport to be one representing an out-and-out sale. But that is a matter of very little consequence if we take into consideration the fact that the document was executed between the Muhammadans and even if the real object of the parties was to create a mortgage they might conceal that intention by using terms and expressions of this description. The learned Subordinate Judge then goes on to say that there is absence in the document as to certain date within which the money was to be re-paid. This omission, however, would not indicate that the deed was not one of mortgage, as will be seen from the decision of this Court to which I have already referred—the case of Abdul Gaffur v. Jamal (2). The document in that case provided that if ever the vendor or his sons or son's sons or other heirs paid up the price the vendee or his sons or his son's son or other heirs would be bound to re-convey the homestead. As was observed by Mr. Justice D. Chatterjee in that case whose decision was upheld on appeal by the Chief Justice Sir Lawrence Jenkins and Mr. Justice Mookerjee that if the term is indefinitely long it should be taken as indicating that an absolute sale was not meant. So the mere absence of the mention of a certain date is no indication as to the real character of the document. Then the learned Subordinate Judge says that there was no mutual agreement in the document for bringing a suit for redemption. But the absence of any reservation to the purchaser of the right to recover his purchase-money or of a stipulation authorising the grantor to sue for redemption is not always a safe criterion for the determination of the question. The learned Subordinate Judge says that the executants parted with possession immediately after the execution of the document; but it is usual in such cases to put the mortgagee in possession and set off the rents against the interest.

These are all the circumstances upon which reliance has been placed by the Subordinate Judge in arriving at the conclusion that the document was one of out-and-out sale. The learned Subordinate Judge says that the condition as to making over of the property on receipt of the price paid is at best a solatium to the vendor. What probably he means by this finding is that although there is a condition of re-purchase attached to the sale which he thought was the real nature of the transaction that condition could not be given effect to in the absence of specific mention of the date by which the re-purchase was to be made.

[90 I. C. 1925]

RAM ASREY V. QUBUL AHMAD.

On the whole I am of opinion that the circumstances upon which the learned Subordinate Judge has relied for coming to this conclusion do not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the document was one of out-and-out sale. On the other hand the inadequacy of the price coupled with the mention in the deed about the need of money on the part of the vendor, and the stipulation as to return of the purchase price to the vendee and the re-conveyance of the property indicate that the document was intended to be one of mortgage by way of conditional sale. I am, therefore, of opinion that the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge with regard to the construction of this document is not right and that the Munsif arrived at a proper decision on this point.

In this view of the matter, in my opinion, the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge should be set aside and that of the learned Munsif restored with costs of this Court as also of the Court of Appeal below.

Greaves, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

ODUH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND RENT APPEAL No. 3 OF 1925.

August 24, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

RAM ASREY—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Khan Sahib Munshi QUBUL AHMAD—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Rent in excess of that allowed by law—Repeal of law, effect of—Rent, whether can be recovered.

Where the rent fixed is excessive and contrary to law as in force at the time when it is fixed, the subsequent repeal of the law has not the effect of enabling the landlord to recover the amount of such rent.

Second appeal against a decree of the Third Additional District Judge, Lucknow, at Hardoi, dated the 30th September 1924, upholding that of the Assistant Collector, First Class, Belgaum, District Hardoi, dated the 6th July 1924.

Mr. Raj Narayan Shukla, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ram Charan, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The decision of the learned Judge of the lower Court on the point of law is incorrect and on the point of fact it is summary as is usually the case with this learned Judge. The defence of a tenant who was sued for arrears of rent was that the rent claimed was contrary to the provisions of s. 47 of the Oudh Rent Act which was prevalent in 1919 when the holding was let to him. The lower Appellate Court held that s. 47 of the Oudh Rent Act was repealed by Oudh Rent (Amendment) Act (IV of 1921) s. 28 so the rent claimed by the plaintiff was legal. This is not a correct view of the law. The rent was excessive and contrary to law at the time it was fixed. The law applicable would be the law of the time when the defendant was admitted to the tenancy. At that time there could have been an enhancement of Rs. 180 only with respect to the half rent recoverable by the plaintiff. According to the defence the plaintiff could recover rent at the rate of Rs. 25-14-9 only. This defence was correct and ought to have been allowed by the lower Appellate Court.

On facts the lower Appellate Court has written something which it is difficult to understand. It says that there was nothing to show that in the rent paid by the previous tenant, any land of the Rani of Hathaura was included. This observation must be due to want of knowledge of the record. The khataunies showing the area of land held by the previous tenants Bardi, Murli and Kallu and the statement of the patwari prove that the defendant is holding at present the identical lands from both the defendant and the Rani of Hathaura. Even the plaintiff never contested this statement of fact advanced by the defendant.

In the result I reduce the amount decreed against the defendant to Rs. 27-13-6 with proportionate interest and costs. The rest of the plaintiff's claim is dismissed with costs of all the Courts.

N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE

No. 1647 OF 1923.

June 8, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Cuming and Mr. Justice Chakravarti.BIDHUMUKHI AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—APPELLANTS

versus

GOBINDA CHANDRA PAL—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.*Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 49—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Lease of homestead land—Agreement not to eject lessee—Lessor putting himself forward as owner of permanent heritable tenancy—Estoppel—"Raiyat," "kaimi mourashi," meaning of.*The words "kaimi mourashi" are quite appropriate when used with respect to a permanent jama of a piece of homestead land, and apply very aptly to a non-agricultural tenancy. [p. 105, col. 2.]The word "*raiya*t" does not necessarily mean an agricultural tenant. It is often used in the moffussil in its wider sense of meaning a tenant in general. [ibid.]The lessee of a piece of homestead land is ordinarily a tenant and not a *raiya*t. [ibid.]

Where a lessor agrees not to eject the lessee from the lands demised, he is bound by the contract made by him unless he can show that the contract is invalid in law. [p. 105, cols. 1 & 2.]

Where a lessor of a piece of homestead land puts himself forward as the owner of a permanent heritable tenancy describing his tenure as kaimi mourashi and agrees not to eject the lessee from the land, the agreement is not invalid in law and the lessor is estopped from subsequently contending that he is an occupancy tenant and that the lessee is an under-*raiya*t and that the agreement not to eject the lessee is invalid. [p. 106, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Noakhali, dated the 5th March 1923, affirming that of the Munsif, First Court, Lakhmipur, dated the 29th November 1920.

Babus Ramesh Chandra Sen and Jitendra Kumar Sen Gupta, for the Appellants.

Mr. Gunada Charan Sen and Babu Nagnendra Chandra Chaudhuri, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.Chakravarti, J.—This is an appeal by the defendants and it arises out of a suit for khas possession of certain lands by the plaintiff after service of notice under s. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The plaintiff stated that the defendants took an under-*raiya*t lease from them in 1293 of 1 kani of land for a term of 9 years and that the plaintiff on the expiration of the term of the lease served a notice upon the defendants under s. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and that the defendants having refused to vacate the lands this suit is brought for*khas* possession of the land covered by the under-*raiya*t lease of the defendants.The defence of the defendants was that they were the owners of kaimi mourashi tenancy of the homestead of one Jagamohun Bhuiya measuring about 2 kanis of lands and that in 1293 the defendants sold the same to the plaintiff and on that very day they took a sub-lease by a registered patta from the plaintiff of a portion of the land sold by them to the plaintiff which was their own homestead comprising an area of 1 kani at a rent of Rs. 16 a year which was fixed for 9 years and that it was agreed by the plaintiff in that lease that the defendants shall never be liable to ejectment by the landlord. The defendants further alleged that the tenancy sold by them to the plaintiff was a permanent lease-hold interest in homestead land containing building, tanks, garden, etc., and the plaintiff described his own right in the sub-lease as that of a *kaimi mourashi raiya*t and in that capacity he granted the sub-lease to the defendants and, therefore, the plaintiff was estopped from showing that he was merely an occupancy *raiya*t and further that the Bengal Tenancy Act did not govern this case.The learned Munsif held that the plaintiff was a *raiya*t with right of occupancy and that the defendants were under-*raiya*ts and, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to eject the defendants after service of notice under s. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, which he found was duly served on the defendants. The Trial Court decreed the plaintiff's suit.

On appeal by the defendants the learned District Judge has affirmed the decree of the Court of first instance and against this decree the defendants have preferred this appeal.

The learned District Judge finds that in the entry in the Record of Rights the defendants were recorded as "settled *raiya*ts under a *raiya*t" which is clearly impossible.The learned Judge held the entry in the Record of Rights that the defendants were under-*raiya*ts with a right of occupancy is of no avail to them because, they have failed to adduce any evidence that there was a local custom to the effect that under-*raiya*ts could acquire a right of occupancy.The learned District Judge further held that the plaintiff was not estopped from showing that he was a *raiya*t with right of occupancy. In this view he held that the decision of the Full Bench in the case of Chandra Kanta Nath v. Amjad Ali Hazi (1) was applicable to this case and that the decree made by the Trial Court was correct and dismissed the appeal.

In this second appeal the learned Vakil for the appellants raised the following points :—

Firstly.—That the learned District Judge was in error in holding that the entry of the Record of Rights was as stated by him and this mistake has vitiated his judgment.

Secondly.—That the description of the landlord in the lease of 1293 that they were "kaimi mourashi raiyat" did not mean that they were *raiya*s with right of occupancy but it meant that the plaintiff had a permanent and heritable tenancy in the land ; the word 'raiya' meant a tenant and not an agricultural raiya as the lease was evidently of bastu land, namely, the homestead of Jogu Mohan Bhuiya.

Thirdly.—That the plaintiff was estopped from alleging that he was merely an occupancy raiya and not the holder of a permanent heritable tenancy of bastu lands.

Fourthly.—That the entry in the Record of Rights was that the under-raiya of the defendants was with right of occupancy and that the onus of proof showing the contrary lay on the plaintiff and not upon the defendants as was erroneously held by the learned District Judge.

Fifthly.—That the Bengal Tenancy Act did not apply to this case and that a notice under s. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act did not terminate the tenancy and, therefore, the plaintiff had no right to eject the defendants.

Sixthly.—That in the circumstances of the case the defendants were entitled to claim for the lands which was their homestead, the benefit of s. 182 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

As to the first point, Mr. Sen who appeared for the respondent very frankly admitted that the learned Judge misread the entry in the Record of Rights. I shall deal with the question as to the effect of the entry in the Record of Rights when correctly read.

It is undisputed that the lessor is bound by the contract which he made and by which he agreed not to eject the tenants unless he can show that the contract is invalid in law. He seeks to do so by alleging that the lease on the face of it shows that the right of the lessor was that of an occupancy raiya and, therefore, a sub-lease for more than 9 years is void.

The first question, therefore, which requires consideration is as to what was the status of the landlord and does the lease on the face of it show that the lessor was an occupancy raiya.

The lease does not contain any indication that the lease was for agricultural land and the lease was for agricultural purposes. The entire area of the land was described as the homestead of Jaga Mohan Bhuiya consisting of and comprising "garden, road gopat, khil, chatan with tank and pond" and the 1 kani let out to the defendants was described as the remaining 1 kani of land comprising the "bhita garden, pathway, gopat, khil chatan, ditches and tank appertaining to your residential homestead."

The lessor described his right to quote the words of the lease (kaimi mourashi raiya) in the homestead of Jaga Mohan Bhuiya and a sub-lease of the homestead of the vendor was granted by the sub-lease of 1293. The words kaimi mourashi are quite appropriate when used with respect to a permanent jama of a piece of homestead land. The only justification for calling this as an agricultural lease is the use of the word raiya. The word 'raiya' does not necessarily mean an agricultural tenant. It is often used in the mofussil in its wider sense of meaning a tenant in general. If the word is read with the context I think the word should be read to mean a tenant of homestead land. The lessee of a piece of homestead land is ordinarily a tenant and not a raiya. The lease-hold interest described is of lands forming homestead and there is no indication in the lease that any cultural land was demised.

The description of "kaimi mourashi" applies very aptly to a non-agricultural tenancy. If the lands were agricultural or agricultural lease was intended the word occupancy raiya so well known would have been used. I am, therefore, clearly of opinion that the lessor intended to put forward himself as the owner of a permanent heritable tenancy of a homestead land and in the face of the lease that is the only meaning which can be ascribed to the words. The plaintiff, in my opinion, has failed to show that the agreement not to eject the sub-tenant is invalid in law.

(1) 61 Ind. Cas. 466; 32 C.L. J. 296; 25 C. W. N. 4; 48 C. 783.

On the construction of the lease which I have put upon it, the plaintiff's case would fail because, the Bengal Tenancy Act will have no application to the sub-lease held by the defendant.

In the circumstances of this case it is not necessary to deal with all the points raised on behalf of the appellants.

Even assuming that the plaintiff was an occupancy raiyat I think that the principle laid down by the Full Bench if applied to this case, the plaintiff would be estopped from showing that he was an occupancy raiyat, or that the defendants were under-*raiya*ts and that the agreement not to eject the defendants was invalid.

The plaintiff in order to show that the estoppel does not arise must show that the sub-lease "on the face of it" was by an occupancy raiyat. As I have already pointed out the lease described the right of the plaintiff as "kaimi mourashi" as distinguished from an occupancy raiyat. It is true that an occupancy right is also permanent and heritable. The lease shows that the lands were bastu lands, and, therefore, it cannot be said that the sub-lease on the face of it was one granted by an occupancy raiyat to an under-raiyat. The plaintiff is, therefore, estopped from showing that the defendants were under-*raiya*ts.

The learned District Judge, as I have already said, took an erroneous view of the entry in Record of Rights. He is, also in error in saying that the onus of proving that the defendants acquired an occupancy right under a local custom, lay on them. The Record of Rights is in their favour and it was for the plaintiff to rebut it.

We think, therefore, that the plaintiff is not entitled to eject the defendants and his suit must fail and is dismissed with costs in all Courts.

Cuming, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS PETITION No. 2153
OF 1922.

September 16, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Ramesam and Mr. Justice Reilly.

NADUVIL MADAM PARAMESWARA
BHARATIGAL alias AZHAKAPRA SWAMIYAR AVARGAL—PETITIONER

versus

T. P. S. ISSOOP ROWTHAN AND OTHERS
—RESPONDENTS.

Religious endowment—Custom—Succession—Mutt—Head of mutt in Native State, ex-officio trustee of public temple in British India—Dismissal from headship of mutt by Government of Native State, whether effects forfeiture of trusteeship of temple.

Where the head of a mutt situate in a Native State was, as such, the trustee of a public temple in British India which latter was, however, an independent institution governed by its own usages, and the Government of the Native State in exercise of its sovereign powers dismissed the head of the mutt and appointed another person to the office, and it was found that all the proved successions to the two offices were to simultaneous vacancies both in the mutt and the temple caused by the death of the prior incumbents:

Held, that the dismissal of the head of the mutt did not operate to effect a forfeiture of and create a vacancy in the trusteeship of the temple, and that the person appointed as the head of the mutt did not automatically succeed to the trusteeship of the temple which had not been vacated. [p. 111, cols. 1 & 2.]

Petition praying that in the circumstances stated in the affidavit filed therewith, the High Court will be pleased to direct that Naduvil Madam Parameswara Bharatigal alias Azhakapra Swamiyar Avargal, Trustee of Naduvil Mutt, and as such the Udama of Pudukode Devaswom, be brought on record as appellant in Second Appeal No. 1080 of 1922, preferred to the High Court against a decree of the District Court of South Malabar, in Appeal Suits Nos. 1041 and 1059 of 1920, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Alatur, in Original Suit No. 194 of 1917 and allowed to proceed with the said second appeal.

This petition coming on for hearing on 7th August 1923 after service of notice on the former Madathipathi, upon perusing the petition and the affidavit filed in support thereof, the counter-affidavit filed on behalf of the 9th respondent, former Madathipathi, the two reply affidavits on behalf of the appellant and the further counter-affidavit, dated 14th April 1923, and filed by the former Madathipathi and upon hearing the arguments of Mr. S. Srinivasa Ayyangar and Mr. T. S. Anantaraman, for the Petitioner, and of Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Ayyar and Mr. N. R. Krishna Ayyar, for the 9th Respondent, former Madathipathi, the 4th and 8th Respondents having died and no legal representatives having been brought on record within the time allowed by law and the other respondents not appearing in person or by Pleader the Court (Odgers and Hughes, J.J.) made the following ORDER.—The preliminary question in Second Appeal No. 1080 of 1922 is whether the applicant Parameswara Bharatigal alias Azhakapra Swamiyar is entitled to carry on the appeal under the provisions of O. XXII, r. 10 (1). It is alleged that this Swami has displaced the former head, one Narayana Bharatigal alias Kappiyur Swamiyar, as head of the Naduvil Madam in Trichur, Cochin State. It is objected that even if this is so, it does not affect the latter's rights over the Pudukode Devaswom which is situated in British India. The question which is preliminary and must be tried is whether the Pudukode Devaswom in British India is appurtenant to and forms part of the institution of Naduvil Madam, Trichur, Cochin State, and whether the trusteeship of this Madam and the Pudukode Devaswom has devolved on Azhakapra Swamiyar. Evidence on this point will have to be taken.

It should be added that it was at one time alleged before us that Kappiyur Swamiyar was of unsound mind. This allegation has now been withdrawn and no question will arise as to this.

The District Judge of South Malabar is requested to hear and determine this point and submit his findings in two months.

Ten days will be allowed for objections to the finding after the return of the same is posted up in the notice board of the High Court.

In compliance with the above order the District Judge of South Malabar submitted the following

FINDING.—1. This petition has been sent down by the High Court under its order, dated 7th August 1923, for a finding whether the Pudukode Devaswom in British India is appurtenant to and forms part of the institution of Naduvil Madam in Cochin State and whether the trusteeship of this

Madam and the Pudukode Devaswom has devolved on Azhakapra Swamiyar. In his affidavit before the High Court in these proceedings, Azhakapra Swamiyar claims to be the head of the Naduvil Madam by virtue of his appointment by the Cochin Government after the dismissal of his predecessor Kappiyur Swamiyar under the Cochin Regulation I of 1081 or 1906. He also claims that the Pudukode Devaswom is appurtenant to Naduvil Mutt. In his counter-affidavit, Kappiyur Swamiyar claims that he owns this Naduvil Mutt, that the Pudukode Devaswom is not subordinate to the Naduvil Mutt, but is an independent institution, that he is in possession of the Pudukode Devaswom, that the Cochin Government has not deprived him of the headship of the mutt and that he reserves his status as British subject. No issues were framed beyond those indicated by the High Court. The first question for consideration is whether the Pudukode Devaswom is appurtenant to the Naduvil Mutt or, as the counter-petitioner contends, an independent institution. A quantity of documents has been filed to show that the Devaswom has always been under the management of the head of the Naduvil Mutt. The plaint in this suit filed by Kappiyur Swamiyar is itself relevant. Therein he styles himself head of Naduvil Mutt and Udama of Pudukode Devaswom. Udama usually implies ownership and certainly does not admit the idea of independence. Rama Variar, petitioner's witness no 1, holds lands under the Pudukode Devaswom and was ordered to take renewal not by the Devaswom, but by the manager of the mutt, Ex. A. Receipts granted by the same person (Exs. B, C) bear the name of the mutt head but they are in connection with the Devaswom property. Exhibit D evidences receipt for money paid to the agent at the mutt office. Exhibit E series shows that the accounts of the Devaswom were kept at the mutt office. Exhibits G, H, J are demises of Devaswom lands by Kappiyur Swamiyar. Exhibit N is a power-of-attorney granted by Kappiyur Swamiyar to the present petitioner in which the Devaswom property is described as being in charge of the mutt. Exhibit Q is another plaint filed by Kappiyur in which he admits that the Devaswom property is under the mutt. There are similar admissions by his predecessor-in-title referred to in the judgment, Ex. T. Subordinate Devaswoms are admitted in the Malabar Gazette notice, Exs. AA. Exhibits KK-1 to 19 are also kanom demises granted by the head of the mutt. Exhibit 11 series are accounts kept for the Devaswom at the mutt head office in which two serial numbers are given, one for the Devaswom and one for the mutt. The temple accounts were kept separate from the mutt accounts as evidenced by Exs. 14, 16, 18, 19 series. Counter-petitioner's witness No. 1 stated that the Madathipathi of the Naduvil Mutt is the Urallan ipso facto of all the Devaswoms and likewise his successor. All the amounts received from the Devaswom are entered in the headquarter accounts. In the light of this evidence, it is impossible for the counter-petitioner to contend that the Devaswom is independent of the mutt. No doubt it is treated as a separate endowment, and no one has ever suggested that its property or income is mixed indiscriminately with that of the mutt. Nevertheless it is quite clear that the immemorial managers of the Devaswom have been the heads of the mutt for the time being. I find that the Pudukode Devaswom in British India is appurtenant to Naduvil Mutt in Trichur in this sense that the head of the Naduvil Mutt has always acted as manager or trustee of the Devaswom.

2. It remains to decide on whom the headship of the mutt has devolved. Kappiyur Swamiyar was found to have succeeded to the headship of the mutt in High Court's order in C. M. P. Nos. 3842, 3862 and 3,863 of 1915, Ex. 24. In 1906 the Cochin Government passed Regulation I of 1081 (Ex. U) empowering the Diwan to call upon the trustees of any institution—and under s. 4 (2) Madathipathis are included in the term trustee—to furnish accounts (s. 5) empowering him to fine any trustee who disobeys such order and ultimately to dismiss him (s. 7). Acting in pursuance of this Regulation, the Diwan fined Kappiyur Swamiyar on 26th November 1920, Ex. W, and finally dismissed him on 18th March 1922, Ex. Y. In his review petition of 27th October 1922, Ex. 57, Kappiyur Swamiyar admits his removal from the headship of the mutt and the appointment of the petitioner in his stead and requests that the order may be revised. "In the interests of the mutt the cancellation of the order of dismissal is urgently needed and the petitioner, therefore, humbly prays for its cancellation." In his further petition, dated 8th March 1923, Ex. 58, he again admits that he is removed from the headship of the mutt and that the petitioner has been appointed to its management with disastrous results to the working of the mutt. The petition sets forth that the order of dismissal was passed under the misapprehension of the true facts, but I do not find that the right of the Cochin Government to dismiss the Swamiyar for good cause is disputed. It has been argued before me that the order under this Regulation is an act of a foreign Government which need not be regarded by British Courts, and also that even if Kappiyur Swamiyar was legitimately dismissed from the headship of the Naduvil Mutt, nonetheless, he would still continue to be the trustee for such property under the control of the mutt as happens to lie in British territory. The general principle is clearly enunciated in Dicey's Conflict of Laws, head III, page 23: "Any right which has been duly acquired under the law of any civilized country is recognized and, in general, enforced by English Courts, and no right which has not been duly acquired is enforced or, in general, recognized by English Courts." No one disputes that the sovereign power exercised by the Government of Cochin includes the right to control religious bodies and when once this right is embodied in the form of a regulation, that regulation becomes part and parcel of the constitution of the institutions which it controls. Kappiyur Swamiyar was only head of the Naduvil Mutt because he succeeded to the headship in accordance with the constitution of that body. This point was very fully discussed in the previous proceedings, first in this and subsequently in the High Court, Ex. 24. Now that the order of the Cochin Government has been passed dismissing him he has lost the headship equally in accordance with the constitution of the body.

3. It was argued that even if the position of the parties had been thus determined in the Native State of Cochin, still that could not affect a claim to succeed to immoveable property in British India. I see no force in this argument, and the analogy of adoption which was pressed by the petitioner appears to me to be sound.

In Keesara Venkatappoyya v. Nayani Venkataranga Rao (1), the principal plaintiff issued for the recovery of real property in British India claiming to be the duly adopted son of the daughter of the last owner. The adoption was by virtue of an unregistered authority to adopt executed in a Native State which would have been invalid in British India, but none the less was held to render the adopted son capable of inheriting real property in British India.

4. The counter-petitioner relies strongly upon the ruling in Goswami Shri Girdharji v. Madhowdas Premji (2). The question which determined that suit was whether the trustee of a certain shrine who had been deported from the State of Odeypore had been removed from his office of trustee by a competent Tribunal (page 614). It was held that the deportation in that case did not deprive the plaintiff of his trusteeship. But in the present suit where the counter-petitioner has been dismissed under a Regulation expressly devised for the control of trustees, it cannot be held that there has been no competent Tribunal. There is no necessity that the Tribunal should be judicial, so that the petitioner would have to sue for a judicial declaration that the order passed under the Regulation was valid, before he could cite the authority of that order in British India. So far as the British Courts are concerned the action of the Native State is tantamount to the action of a private party acting in accordance with the law of the locality. A private person legally adopts or a Diwan legally dismisses and appoints, and the British Courts admit the validity of such legal action. The right which has been duly acquired (to repeat Dicey) is recognized.

5. Accordingly I find that the trusteeship of the Madam and of Pudukode Devaswom has devolved on Azhakapra Swamiyar, the petitioner.

The Civil Miscellaneous Petition coming on for hearing after the return of the finding from the lower Court upon the issue referred by this Court for trial on the 27th, 28th and 29th August 1924 and the 1st September 1924, upon hearing the arguments of Mr. T. S. Anantanarayana Ayyar and Mr. S. Srinivasa Ayyangar, for the Petitioner, and Mr. T. R. Ramachandra Ayyar and Mr. N. A. Krishna Ayyar for the 9th Respondent, the former Madathipathi, the 4th and 8th Respondents having died and no legal representatives having been brought on record within the time allowed by law and the other respondents not appearing in person or by Pleader and the petition having stood over for consideration till this day, the Court made the following ORDER.

Ramesam, J.—In 1917, one Narayana Bharati alias Kappiyur Swamiyar filed a suit as Udama of the Pudukode Devaswom against certain Muhammadans for declaration and injunction in respect of a site. The matter went up on appeal before the District Court of South Malabar and was decided against the Devaswom. A second appeal had to be filed. On the ground that Narayana Bharati had ceased to be the head of the Devaswom and that he himself became its head, one Parameswara Bharati alias Azhakapra Swamiyar filed the second appeal. He was asked to state how his right accrued. He then filed Civil Miscellaneous Petition No. 2153 of 1922, dated 25th August 1922, supported by an affidavit. In this affidavit it was alleged that the suit properties belonged to Pudukode Devaswom.

"The said Devaswom and all properties belonging thereto are appurtenant to and form part of the endowment of the Naduvil Madam situated at Trichur, Cochin State, and, as such, the head and trustee of the Naduvil Madam for the time being, is the Udama and Manager of the Pudukode Devaswom." The Cochin Government, acting under Regulation I of 1081 (M. E.) dismissed Narayana Bharati by its proceedings, dated 9th March 1922, from the office of the said Naduvil Madam and appointed by the same proceedings, the petitioner as head and trustee of the said Madam. The affidavit also alleged that the said Narayana Bharati had been of unsound mind for nearly one year; but this ground has since been abandoned and need not be referred to again. A counter-affidavit and reply affidavits were filed and our brothers (Odgers and Hughes, JJ.) called for a finding on the questions raised by these affidavits which are stated thus: "Whether the Pudukode Devaswom in British India is appurtenant and forms part of the institution of Naduvil Madam of Trichur, Cochin State, and whether the trusteeship of Madam and the Pudukode Devaswom has devolved on Azhakapra Swamiyar?" The District Judge, South Malabar, has sent up his findings, and objections have been filed by the respondent (Narayana Bharati).

The learned Judge in the course of the finding has said "Ex-11 series are accounts kept for the Devaswom at the mutt head office in which two serial numbers are given, one for the Devaswom and one for the mutt. The temple accounts were kept separate from the mutt accounts as evidenced by Exs. 14, 16, 18, 19 series . . . No doubt, it is treated as a separate endowment, and no one has ever suggested that its property or income is mixed indiscriminately with that of the mutt." But he also said "In the light of this evidence, it is impossible for the counter-petitioner to contend that the Devaswom is independent of the mutt." Finally he stated his finding thus: "I find that Pudukode Devaswom in British India is appurtenant to Naduvil Mutt in Trichur in this sense that the head of the Naduvil Mutt has always acted as manager or trustee of the Devaswom."

Mr. S. Srinivasa Ayyangar who appeared for Parameswara Bharati has admitted before us that the two are entirely independent institutions and the endowments are separate and the Pudukode Devaswom is appurtenant to the Naduvil Madam only in the sense that the succession to Pudukode Devaswom is dependant on that to the Madam and in no other. His language is "for purpose of succession only, Pudukode is dependant." This very fair admission of Mr. Srinivasa Ayyangar reduces the points for determination to only one, viz., what are the rules regulating the headship of Pudukode Devaswom? How is it vacated and how is a vacancy filled up? Apart from such rules of succession, the Pudukode Devaswom is not appurtenant to the Naduvil Madam.

Pudukode Devaswom is a public temple in British territory. It is not a private institution. It does not belong to any private individual or to any other institution—not even the Naduvil Madam. This is clear after the admission mentioned above. The Naduvil Madam is a mutt at Trichur, Cochin. Both institutions are governed by their respective usages and apart from usage, the law governing such institutions in the respective territories. In the present case, we are not concerned directly with Naduvil Madam. But we have to determine the usage regulating the Pudu-kode Devaswom [Gossami Shri Gridharji v. Romanlalji Gossami (3)] and if, for the purpose of determining this question, we have to look to the rules or law regulating Naduvil Mutt, such rules or law will have to be adverted to only to that extent.

Now, let us turn to the history of the Pudukode Devaswom. We do not know when, by whom and subject to what regulations it was founded. So far as we know, its history begins in 1843. Exhibits I to V show that Arur Thirumumbil was the head of Naduvil Mutt and also manager of the Pudukode Devaswom. Exhibits VI to IX show that Vishnu Bharati alias Naduvath Swamiyar was the head of the mutt and Devaswom in 1846. Exhibit KK shows that he was succeeded by Manjanpatta Swamiyar and Ex. JJ shows that Hariswara was the Swami in 1880. Pakaravur Subramanya Swamiyar managed both the institutions from 1883 to 1892. He was succeeded by Thaikat Swami, whose regime covers the period of 1892—1895. Pakaravur Vishnu Bharati was head from 1895 to 1915. In his time there was an important litigation. His junior Swami sought to have him removed from the headship (Ex. T). He was succeeded by the respondent (Kappiyur Narayana Bharati) in 1915. In 1916 there was litigation between Pallipat Rama Bharati and him (Ex. 24). All these Swamiyars were heads both of the Naduvil Mutt and of the Pudukode Devaswom. As each Swami died, the senior of the Swamiyars initiated by him succeeded to the two offices. These are the facts from which any rule or rules (by way of usage) regarding the Devaswom have to be inferred.

One rule of succession that can be easily inferred is that, if the head of the Pudukode Devaswom dies and there is a vacancy the head of the Naduvil Mutt will succeed to the headship of the Devaswom also. By the very nature of the rule, the vacancy will be simultaneous in both the institutions and the same person succeeds to both. He first succeeds to the Naduvil Mutt and by reason of his position as head of the mutt and the simultaneous vacancy in the headship of the Pudukode Devaswom, he succeeds to the latter also. So much is admitted by both parties. But this is not enough to solve the problem before us. In the case before us there is no vacancy by death. There is a vacancy in the case of the mutt by dismissal by a foreign Government. Does this vacancy involve a simultaneous vacancy in the headship of the Devaswom? Unless there is a vacancy, there is no need to look for a successor. The petitioner's contention is that the usage regulating the Devaswom not only involves that the successor in the headship of the mutt (on the death of the prior incumbent causing a vacancy in respect of the headship of both the institutions) also succeeds to the headship of the Devaswom, but also that the loss of the headship of the mutt by a cause other than death involves the divesting of the headship of the Devaswom. Once the divesting is found, the further succession can be easily ascertained. But what is the evidence for such usage as will involve the divesting of the headship of the Devaswom as a consequence of the dismissal from the headship of the mutt. There is no such evidence nor can there be such. As I have already pointed out, the only history available to us is from 1843, i. e., a period of eighty years. During this period, no such case has occurred. It is impossible to hold that the usage proved, viz., one relating to succession on vacancy covers the case, where there is no vacancy (strictly) and includes the proposition required by the petitioner that, the loss of the headship of the mutt involves a forfeiture of the headship of the Devaswom. The proposition or rule is penal in its nature and must be strictly proved. There is no such proof. On this ground we hold that the respondent (Narayana Bharati) has not lost the headship of the Devaswom as a result of the loss of the headship of this mutt, and he is the proper person to continue the second appeal. In this view, the further questions debated by the learned Vakils need not be considered.

(3) 17 C. 3; 16 I. A. 137; 13 Ind. Jur. 211; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 350; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 541 (P. C.).

One such question raised by Mr. Ramachandra Ayyar is that the removal from the secular headship does not necessarily involve the removal from the spiritual headship. The Cochin Government has removed his client only from the management. No human power can remove him from the spiritual headship. This may be so. But the further difficulty in the application of the argument is what is the kind of headship (spiritual or secular) that qualified the head of the mutt for the headship of the Devaswom? This itself depends on usage and we have no materials to answer the question properly. Again, while conceding that a distinction may exist between the management and spiritual headship [see Arunachellam Chetty v. Venkatachalapathi Guruswamikal (4) and Nataraja Tambiran v. Kailasam Pillai (5)] in certain cases, it is doubtful whether, when the office is only one, we can split it up into two.

A second point raised by Mr. Ramachandra Ayyar is that we can go into the validity of the order of the Cochin Government, in so far as it affects an institution in British territory and if we find it not justified, refuse to recognize it in so far as it is sought to be applied to the Pudukode Devaswom. This contention raises interesting questions of Private International Law and has been ably argued on both sides. But, in the view taken by us, it need not be pursued.

I agree with the order proposed by my learned brother regarding substitution.

Reilly, J.—I agree that whatever may be the exact effect of the order of the Cochin Government on the position and rights of Narayana Bharati in the Naduvil Mutt, it has not been proved that according to the usage of the Pudukode Devaswom he has been divested of the office of trustee of that Devaswom. He must, therefore, be recognized as trustee of the Devaswom entitled to conduct litigation on its behalf. This petition must be dismissed with costs.

Respondent, Narayana Bharati, will be substituted for petitioner as appellant in Second Appeal No. 1080 of 1922.

Memorandum of costs will follow.

V. N. V.

Z. K.

Petition dismissed.

(4) 53 Ind. Cas. 288; 43 M. 253; 37 M. L. J. 460; (1919) M. W. N. 850; 17 A. L. J. 1097; 10 L. W. 642; 26 M. L. T. 479; 24 C. W. N. 249; 46 I. A. 204; 22 Bom. L. R. 457 (P. C.).

(5) 57 Ind. Cas. 564; 44 M. 283; (1920) M. W. N. 371; 39 M. L. J. 98; 18 A. L. J. 1041; 25 C. W. N. 145; 13 L. W. 301; 48 I. A. 1 (P. C.).

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 23 OF 1921.

April 28, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Raymond, A. J. C.

MULIBAI—PLAINTIFF

versus

SHEWARAM MENGHRAJ—DEFENDANT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 45—Partnership—Suit by one partner to recover debt due to partnership, maintainability of—Other partners, whether necessary parties—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 130—Assignment of interest, mode of.

Ordinarily all the individuals constituting a partnership are necessary parties to a suit to recover a debt due to the partnership. Where there are several partners in a firm and only one of them files a suit to recover a partnership debt, the suit is not maintainable unless and until the other partners are brought on the record. Where, however, one of the partners is able to substantiate that the reason for the appearance of the other partners on the record has ceased to exist by reason of their ceasing to have any interest in the partnership, the suit is maintainable without bringing the other partners on the record. [p. 113, col. 2.]

Section 130 of the Transfer of Property Act provides only one mode of the devolution of the interest of one person to another and cannot be said to exhaust all other ways and means by which the interest of one person may be transferred to another. [p. 113, col. 1.]

Mr. Dipchand Chandumal, for the Plaintiff.

Mr. Fatehchand Assudamal, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff in this suit is one Mulibai, wife of Hargundas. She states in her plaint that her mother Gangabai widow of Hiranand Lunidaram, carried on business in partnership with two other persons, Khushiram and Teckchand, both at Karachi and in Sukkur under the name of Hiranand Lunidaram. At Karachi the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram did some commission agency business for the defendant, and it is alleged that on this commission agency business, there is a sum of Rs. 3,398 odd due and payable by the defendant after the death of Gangabai. The plaintiff who describes herself as the only heir of Gangabai filed a suit against the two other partners for a dissolution of the partnership and settlement of the partnership account. The Suit No. 66 of 1917 was decreed by Sub-Civil Court of Sukkur and under this decree the plaintiff alleges that she alone became entitled to all the assets and liabilities of the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram, and she, therefore claims the right to maintain the present suit exclusively in her own name and on her own behalf.

With the consent of the Pleaders of the respective parties I confine my decision to only one point in the case, and that is whether Mulibai individually can maintain this suit. It has been strenuously contended by the defendant that she cannot and that the two other partners in the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram must be on the record either as plaintiffs or defendants. Suit No. 67 of 1917 in the Sukkur Sub-Civil Court was filed by the plaintiff Mulibai against two persons Khushiram, a brother of Gangabai and a partner in the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram and Teckchand who was a managing partner of the business carried on in Karachi under the name and style of Hiranand Lunidaram. The suit resulted in a compromise decree, in terms of which it was held that the partnership existing between Gangabai, Khushiram and Teckchand was dissolved on the death of Gangabai, and all the assets and liabilities of the partnership firm of Hiranand Lunidaram were vested in the plaintiff and she alone was declared to have a proprietary interest in the said firm of Hiranand Lunidaram and entitled exclusively to recover all the outstandings due to it. A consideration of the terms of this decree is important for, in my opinion, it throws considerable light on the question raised, whether, Khushiram and Teckchand are necessary parties to the present suit.

It is also very significant to observe that both Khushiram and Teckchand were examined on commission in this case at the request of the defendant's Pleader. Both were asked "Are you interested in the assets and liabilities of the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram?" And the answers of both these witnesses were in the negative. It is abundantly clear from the evidence of Khushiram and Teckchand that since the decree of the Sub-Civil Court of Sukkur, they disclaim all interest in the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram. The question, therefore, arises whether despite this disclaimer and the terms of the aforesaid decree, Khushiram and Teckchand are yet necessary parties to the present suit, and the suit by Mulibai in her individual capacity is unmaintainable. Mr. Fatehchand for the defendant in contending that the suit by Mulibai alone is unsustainable relies mainly on the provisions of s. 45 Indian Contract Act. He argues that under the provisions of this section, it was obligatory on the plaintiff to place on record the other partners in the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram, as they are necessary parties. According to him, the decree of the Sub-Civil Court, Sukkur was purely one in personam and not in rem and hence not binding on the defendants who were not parties to it and, therefore, whatever be the effect of that decree on the partners inter se, it is perfectly ineffectual against the present defendants. Further, Mr. Fatehchand contends that if the plaintiff bases her cause of action on the assignment to her by the other two partners of their interest in the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram such an assignment ought to fulfil the requirements of ss. 130 and 131 of the Transfer of Property Act and as this is wanting in the present suit, the interest of the two other partners in the firm cannot be said to have devolved upon the plaintiff.

Section, 45, Indian Contract Act is as follows:—

"Where a person has made a promise to two or more persons jointly, then, unless a contrary intention appears from the contract, the right to claim performance rests as between him and them, with them during their joint lives, and after the death of any of them, with the representative of such deceased person jointly with the survivor or survivors, and, after the death of the last survivor, with the representatives of all jointly."

This section is perfectly clear and unambiguous in its terms, and there can be no doubt whatever that in the case of a partnership all the individuals constituting it are necessary parties to a suit in which a debt due to the partnership is claimed. In the present suit, it is not denied that the amount claimed from the defendant was due to the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram, and, therefore, the right to claim this amount rests with all the partners in this firm. The question that now arises is whether by reason of the decree of the Sub-Civil Court, Sukkur, which unmistakably declares that the proprietary rights in the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram after its dissolution are vested in Mulibai exclusively, and she alone is entitled to the assets and liabilities of the firm, it was still obligatory on her to make Khushiram and Teckchand parties to the suit either as plaintiffs or as defendants. The industry and ingenuity of the respective Pleaders in this suit has not been successful in placing before me any case law on the subject for my guidance, and the point, therefore, seems to be, res integra. Though no doubt s. 130 of the Transfer of Property Act prescribes certain conditions for the assignment by one person to another of his interest in any particular subject-matter, to my mind this section provides one mode of the devolution of interest from one person to another, but could not be said to exhaust all other ways and means by which the interest of one person may be transferred to another. In the present case, it has been established on the strength of the decree of the Sub-Civil Court that all the rights and interests of Khushiram and Teckchand in the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram have been assigned to the plaintiff, and I, therefore, take it that there has been a devolution by operation of law. To come to any other conclusion would be tantamount to render the decree of the Sub-Civil Court, Sukkur, nugatory. Both Khushiram and Teckchand of their free will and consent have relinquished all rights to any outstandings due to the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram. They have consented to all the proprietary rights in their firm being vested in the plaintiff, and they have further ratified their consent by their unequivocal admission that they have ceased to have any interest in the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram. Therefore, though there may be no doubt as to the normal necessity under s. 45, Indian Contract Act of having all the partners on the record in a suit brought to enforce a partnership claim, I do not think that it is absolutely obligatory to do so if one of the partners is able to substantiate that the reason for their appearance on the record has ceased to exist by reason of their ceasing to have any interest in the partnership. No doubt when there are several partners in a firm, and only one of them files a suit to recover a partnership debt, the suit would be unentertainable unless and until the other partners are on the record. This is what is really involved in the provisions of s. 45, Indian Contract Act, and a contravention of the provisions of the section would be to expose a debtor to harassment by a multiplicity of suits. But cases may well arise when only one of the partners may institute a suit. There may be collusion between the debtor and the other partners, or there may be an assignment of interest by the other partners to the partner suing. All the interests of the other partners may be devolved by operation of law on the partner suing. In these and the like cases provided they are satisfactorily established the applicability of s. 45, Indian Contract Act, to them, in my opinion, would cease to exist.

Mr. Fatehchand for the defendant urged that the defendant in the present suit was not a party to the suit in the Sukkur Court, and the decree therein could have no binding effect upon him. The Sukkur suit was as I have observed for the dissolution of the partnership and the settlement of the partnership accounts, and the defendant would have no locus standi in that suit by the virtue of the decree passed therein the defendant can have no reasonable apprehension that he is still exposed to the risk of having a suit filed against him by the other partners in the firm of Hiranand and Lunidaram. Hence this objection to the maintainability of the suit by Mulibai alone cannot be allowed to prevail. It appears to me that it has been clearly established that Mulibai alone is competent to sue and the suit by her is, therefore, maintainable.

Suits Nos. 156 and 194 of 1921 have also been filed by the same plaintiff Mulibai in her individual capacity against other debtors of the firm of Hiranand Lunidaram and the same question as to her competency to sue alone has been raised by the Pleaders in either suit. I have heard the arguments of the Pleaders representing the defendants in these two suits, and it would suffice to embody my finding in the same judgment. There is only one point of difference between Suit No. 230 of 1921 and the two latter suits, and that is the absence of the evidence of the two other partners Khushiram and Teckchand, but this does not alter my opinion as to the maintainability of the suit by Mulibai alone, for the decree in the Sukkur Court, in my opinion, stands equally effective in all three suits.

Z. K.

Order accordingly.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE NO. 1332
OF 1923.

April 2, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Pearson and Mr. Justice Chakravarti.

RAJ KRISTO GHOSE—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

BATA KRISTO GHOSE—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Bagat land—Lease for term of years—Ejectment—Tenant, liability of.

Where a lease is granted of a piece of bagat land for a term of years containing no indication that the tenant is to be treated as a raiyat or that the purpose of the tenancy is agricultural or horticultural, the lessee is bound by the contract which he has made and must give up possession of the land after the expiry of the term of the lease. [p. 115, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Hooghly, dated the 7th of April 1923, reversing that of the Munsif, First Court at Sarampur, dated the 18th of June 1919.

Babu Peary Mohan Chatterji, for the Appellant.

Babu Shib Chandra Palit, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff for recovery of possession of certain lands on the allegations that he let out these lands to the defendant for a period of nine years and the defendant executed a kabuliyat on the 25th June 1906. This suit was brought after the expiry of the term of the lease after notice to quit was served upon the defendant. The defence of the defendant was that he never executed the kabuliyat and that the plaintiff was a niskardar, therefore he was a tenant under him and that, therefore, the defendant was a raiyat and as such was not liable to ejectment after the expiry of the term of the lease.

The Court of first instance found that the defendant did execute the kabuliyat and that the lands were garden lands and let out to the defendant not as a raiyat, and as the term of the lease had expired he gave a decree for possession to the plaintiff.

On appeal by the defendant there was a remand by the lower Appellate Court and on a second appeal to this Court that order of remand was modified and ultimately the case went again before the Trial Court and the Trial Court again came to the same conclusion as it did before and gave a decree to the plaintiff for possession. Against that decree the defendant appealed to the learned District Judge who has reversed the decree of the Munsif and has dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

The learned District Judge begins by saying that because the plaintiff is a niskardar, therefore, the defendant must be a raiyat, a conclusion which does not necessarily follow. The main question was what was the status of the defendant upon a proper and true construction of the lease under which he entered into possession. The learned District Judge does not at all direct his attention to that question as the primary question, because he has already assumed that the defendant must be a raiyat. The learned District Judge, however, finds that as the kabuliyat shows that there are some fruit trees on the land the purpose of the tenancy must necessarily be horticultural and on that finding he dismisses the plaintiff's suit.

The present appeal, as I have already stated is by the plaintiff. The learned Vakil for the appellant contended that on a proper construction of the kabuliyat the learned District Judge ought to have held that the defendant was not a raiya but was a tenant of a piece of as the kabuliyat described, bagat land. The kabuliyat it was submitted does not show that the lease was intended for agricultural or horticultural purpose, and, therefore, the defendant could not invoke the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act for resisting the plaintiff's claim.

We are of opinion that the contention of the appellant is well-founded. The kabuliyat shows that the lease was for a piece of bagat land and it contains no indication that the defendant was to be treated as a raiya or that the purpose of the tenancy was agricultural or horticultural. The limitation as to the rights of the defendant indicated in the kabuliyat would clearly show that the lease was neither intended to be an agricultural lease nor a horticultural lease. We think, therefore, the defendant is bound by the contract he made, that is to give up possession of the land after the expiry of nine years.

In this view we think the decree made by the learned Munsif is correct and we restore that decree with costs both of this Court and of the lower Appellate Court.

Z. K.

Appeal decreed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 143 OF 1924.

July 15, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.
SRIPAT AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS

versus

HUBDAR AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 11
—Appeal purporting to be within time—Summary rejection as time-barred—Appellate Court, duty of—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Appeal filed beyond limitation—Extension of time—Diligence of appellant.

Under O. XLI, r. 11, C. P. C., the Court is bound to fix a date for hearing an appellant. Where the memorandum of appeal is in order and at least purports to be within time, it is not open to the Court to reject the appeal summarily as time-barred. [p. 116,

col. 1.]

In a case, judgment was given by the First Court on 30th May 1923. The period of limitation for appeal was 30 days. 31st May was the last working day of the Court. Application for copy was made on 2nd July 1923, the day on which the Court re-opened.
The copy was ready for delivery on 14th August but it was despatched by post and received by the applicant on 17th August. The Court was again closed on that date, and the appeal was filed before the District Judge on 27th August, the day on which the Court re-opened :

Held, that the appellant acted with due diligence and was entitled to have the time extended under the provisions of s. 5 of the Limitation Act. [p. 116, col.
2.]

Miscellaneous appeal against an order of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 30th August 1923, confirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Sultanpur, dated the 30th May 1923.

Mr. Haidar Husain, for the Appellants.

Nr. G. N. Misra, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal.
For the purposes of my present decision it is not material what the suit was. As a matter of fact it was a suit for partition, and I believe the substance of the first appeal was an objection to the actual partition by metes and bounds, which had been suggested by a Commissioner appointed by the Court. The appeal came before the learned District Judge of Fyzabad, and he passed judgment in these words, "I have examined the record and find that the appeal is clearly beyond time and I, therefore, reject this appeal summarily as being time-barred."

This order was passed without fixing any date for hearing the appellant, and without hearing the appellant. The date of this judgment is 30th August 1923. The appellant applied in review on the 1st of December 1923. That application was dismissed on 19th January 1924 on two grounds. The first ground was that no such application lay, because the conditions laid down in
O. XLVII, r. 1 had not been complied with. The second reason was that the District Judge came to the conclusion, after hearing applicant's Pleader, that the applicant had been beyond time. The present appeal was filed on the 19th
January 1924.

The first objection taken against the present appeal is that it is beyond time.
On this point I hold that it is within time. The application for review was, in my opinion, a proper application. The learned Judge has not specified in what respect the provisions of O. XLVII, r. 1 were not complied with. The applicant considered himself aggrieved by a decree from which no appeal had been preferred. The decree he complained of was made, in my opinion, in contravention of the law, seeing that under O. XLI, r. 11, a Court is bound to fix a date for hearing the appellant, and to hear him if he appears on that date. I do not think the judgment could be supported as having been made under O. XLI, r. 3, because the memorandum of appeal was in order, and at least purported to be within time. I, therefore, proceed to hear this appeal.

It might be open to me to proceed merely on the ground that the learned District Judge was wrong in his procedure, and ought to be directed now to fix a date for hearing the appellant or his Pleader; and then to pass orders according to law. But the learned Judge, in hearing the application for review, pronounced a decision with regard to limitation, and the question of limitation has been argued before me. I prefer, therefore, to decide the question of limitation now.

The date of the judgment of the First Court was 30th May 1923. The period of limitation is 30 days, which period would end on the 29th of June 1923. The appeal was in fact presented on the 27th of August 1923, the date of the 26th in the affidavit is a slip). The period spent in obtaining a copy is to be computed from the 2nd July 1923, when the application for copy was made to the 14th of August 1923, when the copies were posted to the appellant. The appeal is, therefore, beyond time according to the rules of computation laid down in s. 12 of the Limitation Act. But these rules operate very harshly against the appellant in the present case. The case is one for extension of time under s. 5 of the Limitation Act. Judgment was delivered on the 30th of May. The 31st was the last working day before the vacation. If the law is applied strictly, the appellant had to read and consider the judgment, to come to a decision whether he would or would not appeal, and file an application for copy of the judgment and decree, all in one day. It is unreasonable to expect him to get so much done in the time. Ordinarily the Legislature allows a month for this purpose. This period may be cut down to any reasonable limit, but it is not reasonable to cut it down to twenty-four hours. Accordingly, I accept the application for copy on the 2nd of July, which was the very day on which the Courts opened after the vacation, as equivalent to an application made a month earlier. The applicant could have got his copies on the 14th of August by presenting himself at the Judge's Court, but I do not consider that he forfeits his claim to indulgence because he arranged to have the copies sent to him by post. They were despatched on the 14th of August and they reached him on the 17th of August. These three days cannot be excluded from the computation under s. 12 but they may be reckoned in considering the question of indulgence under s. 5. On the 17th of August the Courts were closed, and they did not re-open again until the 27th of August. The appeal was filed on the 27th of August.

I find, therefore, that the appellant acted with due diligence, and ought to have had the time extended under the provisions of s. 5 of the Limitation Act. Orders under s. 5 are discretionary orders and if the discretion had been exercised by the District Judge one way or the other, I should have hesitated before upsetting his order, but I do not find, either in the judgment on the appeal, or in the order rejecting the application for review, that this discretion has been exercised by the District Judge. It may, therefore, be exercised by me now, and I do so exercise it, and extend the period of limitation, and direct the learned District Judge to proceed to hear the appeal as if it had been presented within time. No order as to costs.

N. H.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 234 OF 1922.

July 15, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal
and Mr. Justice Lindsay.

Lala NARAIN DAS alias RAM DAYAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

RAM CHANDRA AND ANOTHER—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2 (14), 66—

Sale by Receiver with approval of Court, whether sale under decree or order—Sale certificate, whether necessary—Section 66, applicability of.

Section 66 of the C. P. C. refers only to a case where there has been a sale in execution of a decree. [p. 118, col. 1.]

A sale by a Receiver with the approval of the Court is not a sale in pursuance of any decree or order of the Court and in the case of such a sale the Court does not grant a sale certificate nor does it confirm the sale. Section 66 of the C. P. C. has no application to the case of such a sale. [p. 118, col. 2.]

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Muzaffarnagar, at Meerut, dated the 27th February 1922.

Mr. P. L. Banerji, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. K. Mukerji and Dr. S. N. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—After hearing the arguments in this case we are of opinion that the decree of the Court below must be reversed and the suit must be sent back for disposal on the merits.

The case is a somewhat peculiar one. The plaintiff Lala Narain Das alias Ram Dayal brought this suit originally against Ram Chander son of Kanhaiya Lal praying for his ejectment from a certain shop situated in Mandavi Ghalla in the city of Meerut.

The title which the plaintiff asserted to this shop was that it had been bought by his own brother from a Receiver who had been appointed by the Court in a partnership suit. The plaintiff asserted that his brother, who is also called Ram Chander, had purchased this property really on his behalf being at that time the guardian of the plaintiff who was then a minor.

Ram Chander son of Kanhaiya Lal joined issue regarding this question of title and stated that the title to the shop was not in the plaintiff but was in him. He stated that the purchase which had been made by Ram Chander son of Khem Chand (that is to say the brother of the plaintiff) was a purchase made on his, defendant No. 1's behalf, and he, therefore, insisted that Ram Chander son of Khem Chand should be made a party to the suit. This was done and the case then proceeded.

It appears that Ram Chander, the defendant No. 2, the brother of the plaintiff, purchased this shop on the 13th of September 1914 in the course of a sale made by a Receiver under the directions of the Court. The suit in which this Receiver was appointed was Suit No. 485 of 1911. We have at page 11 of our record the report of the Receiver which was dated the 15th of September 1914 and which shows that he held an auction of certain shops on the 13th September 1914 and that shop No. 1 was sold to Ram Chander son of Khem Chand. The Receiver asked the Court to confirm the sale. Then we find that by a proceeding dated the 17th December 1914 the Court confirmed the sale in favour of the purchaser Ram Chander son of Khem Chand. A copy of this order is at page 12 of our record and it purports to be an order under O. XXI r. 92 (1) of the C. P. C. Later on the certificate as provided by O. XXI, r. 94 was granted to Ram Chander son of Khem Chand.

These facts being established the defence which was put forward in the present suit was that a sale certificate having issued to Ram Chander son of Khem Chand the suit was barred by the provisions of s. 66 of the C. P. C. Section 66 (1) provides that no suit shall be maintained against any person claiming title under a purchase certified by the Court in such manner as may be prescribed on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of the plaintiff or on behalf of some one through whom the plaintiff claim.

Clearly if this provision is applicable to the facts of the case now before us the plaintiff is out of Court. It has, however, been argued that in the circumstances of this case this section has no application at all and having sent for the record of Suit No. 485 of 1911 we are satisfied that s. 66 has nothing to do with this case and that although a sale certificate under the provisions of O. XXI, r. 94 was issued that is no bar to the plaintiff's claim here. The facts may be briefly stated as follows:—Suit No. 485 of 1911 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Meerut was a suit brought for dissolution of partnership and for the taking of accounts. In that suit the plaintiffs were Ram Chander son of Kanhaiya Lal (defendant No. 1 in the present suit) and his minor son Ragho Mal. The defendants were Chhajju Mal, Piare Lal and others.

It appears from a reference to the record that after the institution of the suit a Receiver was appointed to take charge of the partnership property.

Eventually a preliminary decree was drawn up in the manner indicated in O. XX, r. 15 declaring the rights of the parties and giving directions as to how the property was to be realized and administered.

After this preliminary decree had been passed we find from the record that the Receiver reported to the Subordinate Judge that there were a number of decrees outstanding against the firm consisting of the parties to the case. The Receiver informed the Subordinate Judge that the creditors were pressing their claims and were obtaining orders of attachment from the Court of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Meerut. He represented to the Court that the money owing to these judgment-creditors was a very substantial sum about Rs. 40,000 (forty thousand rupees) and he pointed out that interest was accumulating on these decretal amounts very rapidly. He, therefore, suggested to the Court that a certain portion of the partnership property might be sold in order to satisfy these decretal debts which were binding upon the partners, and we find from the order-sheet that the Subordinate Judge gave the Receiver authority to do his best for the parties and to sell whatever property he thought fit in order to satisfy as far as possible the demands of the decree-holders and in order to prevent further accumulation of interest.

It was in pursuance of this order that the Receiver sold the shop with which we are now concerned on the 13th September 1914. It is to be noticed that this sale was made long before the final decree in the partnership suit was passed. We may further mention that it appears from the record that the parties agreed to have this sale made by the Receiver in order to prevent the accumulation of these judgment debts; and lastly we have to mention that this matter came up before this Court in the course of appeal and the order of the Subordinate Judge empowering the Receiver to sell the property was affirmed.

We have it, therefore, that the sale to Ram Chander son of Khem Chand defendant No. 2 in this suit was a sale by a Receiver which took place in the circumstances to which we have referred and we do not see how it is possible to apply the provisions of O. XXI to a sale of this kind. There certainly was no sale in execution of decree and it seems to us that s. 66 of the Code refers to a case where there has been a sale in execution of decree. Part 2 of the C. P. C. in which s. 66 is to be found relates to execution and O. XXI also relates to the execution of decrees and orders.

It has been argued before us that we ought to treat this sale as having been made in the execution of a decree because it was made under directions which were contained in the preliminary decree. We do not, however, think that that argument is sustainable. A preliminary decree is not capable of execution. Further we do not see how it is possible to describe this sale as being a sale in execution either of a decree or order. It is not, as we have said, a sale in execution of decree nor is it a sale in pursuance of an "order" as defined in s. 2 (14) of the C. P. C. "Order" means the formal expression of any decision of a Civil Court which is not a decree, but when the Subordinate Judge in the course of the proceedings in Suit No. 485 of 1911 gave authority to the Receiver to sell the property he was not issuing any order in this sense. He was not deciding anything between the parties to the case. He was simply giving a direction to the Receiver to dispose of the property for the benefit of all the parties to the suit. We are satisfied, therefore, that this sale was not carried out in pursuance of any decree or order as defined above. The learned Counsel for the appellant has referred us to a case which seems to be in point, reported in Gulam Hossein Cassim Arif v. Fatima Begum (1). The learned Judge in that case pointed out that a sale by a Receiver was not a sale by the Court but a sale under the Court and that in such cases the Court does not grant a sale certificate nor does it confirm the sale. The learned Judge differed from the previous decision of a Single Judge of the same Court to be found in Minatoonnessa Bibee v. Khatonnessa Bibee (2). We may also refer to another case to be found in Parvathammal v. Chokalinga Chetty (3) which supports the argument of the learned Counsel for the appellant. There it was held that an order under s. 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act directing a guardian to pay a sum of money out of his ward's estate for the marriage expenses of a person dependent on his ward is neither a decree nor an order executable as a decree under the C. P. C. The learned Judge

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 300; 16 C. W. N. 394.

(2) 21 C. 479; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 949.

(3) 41 Ind. Cas. 341; 41 M. 241; (1917) M. W. N. 602; 6 L. W. 526.

referred to the definition of the term "order" in s. 2 (14) of the C. P. C.

We hold, therefore, that in the present suit the defence cannot be put forward that the sale certificate issued to Ram Chander defendant No. 2 is a bar to the maintenance of the present suit. The fact is that had the proper procedure been observed there would neither have been an order confirming the sale nor any certificate issued under the provision of O. XXI, r. 94. The procedure which was adopted was out of order. We, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the Court below and send the case back to the Subordinate Judge of Muzaffarnagar for disposal on the merits. Costs here and hitherto will abide the result and in this Court will include fees on the higher scale.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

ODUH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 373 OF 1924.

August 19, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

GHUTUR SINGH—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

PHULANG SINGH AND OTHERS—

DEPENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLVII, r. 1—Appeal pending—Review, whether should be granted—Review granted during pendency of appeal, effect of.

There is no necessity to grant a review of a decree while an appeal against the decree by the applicant for review is pending, inasmuch as the applicant can get the decree modified in the Appellate Court. [p. 120, col. 1.]

Where, however, a review is granted against a decree which is under appeal, the appeal becomes incompetent and cannot be proceeded with. [ibid.]

Appeal against the judgment and decree of the Additional Sub-Judge, Gonda, dated the 17th May 1924, reversing those of the Munsif, Utraula, dated the 19th December 1922.

Mr. Bishambhar Nath Srivastava for Mr. Bisheshwar Nath Srivastava, for the Appellant.

Mr. Ram Chandra, for the Respondents.

ORDER.—There has been a lot of confusion in the proceedings here. A Munsif of Utraula passed a decree for pre-emption directing deposit of Rs. 1,160. The vendee Phulang Singh appealed to the District Judge who transferred the appeal for decision to the Additional Subordinate Judge. The appeal was filed on 19th January 1923 and on 8th January 1923 the plaintiff had applied to the Munsif's Court for review. This application for review had an unfortunate history. The District Judge thought that the Munsif who took the place of the Munsif who had passed the decree had not jurisdiction to entertain the application for review, so he transferred the application to one Court and then finally to the Court of the Subordinate Judge. On 6th October 1923 the Subordinate Judge Pandit Shiam Manohar Shargha accepted the application for review and altered the price from Rs. 1,160 to Rs. 460. Obviously the decree then became one passed by the Subordinate Judge.

The appeal filed on 19th January 1923 proceeded on its course and the Additional Subordinate Judge decided it.

This is a second appeal from the appeal heard by the Additional Subordinate Judge. Before I had noticed that the application for review was granted by a Subordinate Judge and not by a Munsif, I was prepared to have the appeal to the lower Court amended so that it may read as an appeal made from the decree of the 6th of October 1923. The plaintiff-appellant's learned Counsel here rightly pointed out that the appeal should have been made from the decree of the 6th October 1923; but as that view would have caused grave injustice to the defendant-respondent Phulang Singh I proposed to adopt the remedy of having the appeal to the District Judge filed on 19th January 1923 altered in the manner stated above.

This cannot be done now because Subordinate Judge cannot hear an appeal from a decree passed by another Subordinate Judge. The lower Appellate Court of the Additional Subordinate Judge ought to have discovered this difficulty.

The only course open now is to set aside all the proceedings and to direct the defendant-vendee Phulang Singh to appeal to the District Judge from the decree of the 6th of October 1923. Such an appeal would really be time barred. However, on account of the circumstances of the present case I give a direction to the District Judge to admit the appeal under s. 5 of the Limitation Act. The mistake really was committed by the Subordinate Judge who granted a review while an appeal from the original decree was pending. There was no necessity for the review while an appeal from the original decree was pending, because the plaintiff-respondent in the Appellate Court could have got the decree modified in the Appellate Court [See provisions of O. XLVII, r. 1 (2), C. P. C.]

I quash all the proceedings in appeal and declare that the appeal to the Subordinate Judge became incompetent on the granting of the review. The decree of the lower Appellate Court is set aside.

At the same time I direct that if an appeal is filed by Phulang Singh from the decree of 6th October 1923 it shall be admitted by the District Judge of Gonda under s. 5, Limitation Act. I am afraid that nothing more can be done to help Phulang Singh. The attention of the District Judge shall be drawn particularly to this judgment of mine. Phulang Singh is directed to file an appeal, if he so desires, within one month of to-day's date.

Costs of the lower Appellate Court and here shall be borne by the parties.

Z. K.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 68 OF 1925.

July 9, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal.

MUTSADDI LAL—DEFENDANT—

APPLICANT

versus

BHAGWAN DAS—PLAINTIFF—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 7, 102—
Weighman's wages, suit for—Limitation.

A weighman employed to work at a shop is not a house-hold servant, nor is he an artisan, nor a mere labourer. He may be regarded in fact as a shop-keeper's assistant. A suit by a weighman for his wages is, therefore, governed by Art. 102 and not by Art. 7 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act.

Civil revision from an order of the Judge of the Court of Small Causes, Allahabad, dated the 16th January 1925.

Mr. Bhagwati Shankar, for the Applicant.

Mr. S. B. Johari, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The plaintiff was employed as a weighman in the shop of the defendant on a fixed monthly remuneration of Rs. 13 per mensem. He claimed his wages from the 12th February 1921 to the 2nd February 1922 which the Court below has allowed for a period of three years prior to the suit.

The question for determination is whether Art. 7 or 102 is applicable to the suit. Article 7 applies to suits for the wages of a house-hold servant, artisan or labourer and provides a limitation of one year from the date when the wages accrue due. Article 102 applies to a suit for wages not otherwise provided for and allows a period of three years from the date when the wages accrue due. As stated by Stroud (Judicial Dictionary, 2nd Edition, page 2205) wages include payment for any services; yet in general the word salary is used for payment of servants of a higher class and wages is confined to the earnings of labourers and artisans [Gordon v. Jennings(1)]. A labourer is defined as a man who digs and does other work of that kind with his hands. But a carpenter is not called a labourer because though he works with his hand his work requires skill and training [Morgan v. London General Omnibus Co. (2)]. A labourer, according to Wharton, is a servant in husbandry or manufacture not living intra mœnia who labours in a toilsome occupation and does work that requires little skill as distinguished from an artisan (Bouviers Law Dictionary, Volume II page 1819). A weighman employed to work at a shop is not a house-hold servant nor is he an artisan. He cannot be treated as a mere labourer employed to do task work, that is to hold the scales and weigh goods in a shop for a monthly salary. He can be asked to do other work of the shop when free. He has to count and add up, and may have also perhaps to calculate the price on the total quantity weighed and his work, therefore, cannot be treated as purely manual labour so as to make Art. 7 of the Act applicable. He may be regarded in fact a shop keeper's assistant, and Art. 102 has been rightly applied to the case. The arrears have been long due and interest thereon has been properly allowed. The application, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs including fees in this Court on the higher scale.

N. H. Application dismissed.

(1) (1882) 51 L. J. Q. B. 417; 9 Q. B. D. 45; 46 L. T. 534; 30 W. R. 704; 46 J. P. 519.

(2) (1884) 53 L. J. Q. B. 352; 13 Q. B. D. 832; 51 L. T. 213; 32 W. R. 759; 48 J. P. 503.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 179 OF 1923.

March 30, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy and
Mr. Justice Duval.NIRANKA SASHI ROY AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

SWARGANATH BANERJEE—
DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

*Partition Act (IV of 1893), s. 4, application of—
When and by what Court order can be passed under s. 4—
Reconveyance to vendor after order under s. 4—
Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 99—Appellant's case weak on merits—Interference with irregular order.*

Section 4 of the Partition Act requires the presence of 3 conditions before the Court can take action under it: (i) the dwelling house should belong to an undivided family; (ii) a share thereof should have been transferred to a person who is not a member of such family, and (iii) the transferee should sue for partition. [p. 122, col. 1.]

The operation of s. 4 of the Partition Act comes into play after the Court has found that the stranger transferee is entitled to partition. In fact no order can be passed under the Partition Act before the Court has found that such a transferee has succeeded in establishing his claim for a partition of the undivided homestead. [ibid.]

A Court of Appeal is as much entitled to pass an order under s. 4 of the Partition Act as the Trial Court. The word "Court" in the section is not confined to the Trial Court, and the power conferred by the section may be exercised even by an Appellate Court. [p. 122, cols. 1 & 2.]

The right conferred by s. 4 may be exercised at any time before the final allotments take place. The section does not indicate as to when the willingness of a member of a family should be signified to the Judge to enable him to pass an order under s. 4. [p. 122, col. 2.]

In a partition suit by a purchaser from a co-sharer, the Appellate Court finding the purchaser's title as proved, sent back the record of the case to the Trial Court for effecting partition. After the latter Court had taken steps towards the appointment of a Commissioner for partition, the Appellate Court, on an application being made to it, passed an order under s. 4 of the Partition Act:

Held, that the Appellate Court had not lost its jurisdiction to pass the order it did merely because it had sent back the record to the Trial Court and that Court had taken some action in the matter. [ibid.]

Where an appellant's case is extremely weak on the merits, the High Court will not interfere under s. 99, O. P. C., with an irregular order of the Court below. [p. 123, col. 1.]

Where a purchaser reconveyed the property to the vendor after an order had been passed by the lower Appellate Court under s. 4 of the Partition Act the High Court declined to countenance the action, but permitted the vendor, under r. 10, O. XXII, C. P. C., to continue the appeal. [ibid.]

Appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge, Burdwan, dated the 19th March 1923.

Babus Tarakeswar Pal Choudhury and Prakash Chandra Pakrashi, for the Appellants.

Babus Braja Lal Chakravarti and Susil Kumar Bose, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff Niranka Sashi Roy against an order of the lower Appellate Court passed under s. 4 of the Partition Act.

The facts of the case are that the plaintiff as a purchaser from a co-sharer of the defendant brought a suit for partition of several plots of land one of which was the homestead of the defendant. The Trial Court dismissed the suit on the finding that the plaintiff and his vendor had failed to prove their title to the lands in suit. On appeal the learned Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff had succeeded in establishing his title and ordered that the partition should be made. Thereupon a preliminary decree for partition was passed by the Court of Appeal below on the 28th January 1922. On the 18th April 1922 the respondent presented an application before the Court of Appeal below purporting to be one for a review of its judgment praying that an order may be passed under s. 4 of the Partition Act of 1893 enabling the defendant-respondent to purchase the share in the homestead from the plaintiff. In the lands in suit the share of the plaintiff was 8-annas and that of the defendant Swarga Nath Banerjee the remaining 8-annas. The learned Subordinate Judge considered the matter and allowed the defendant's prayer and ordered that the "respondent be permitted to purchase the share of the appellant in the homestead land on payment of the valuation of the share to be found by the lower Court". It appears that before this application was made the record had gone down to the Trial Court and certain steps were taken towards the appointment of a Commissioner for partition. Against the order passed by the lower Appellate Court this appeal has been preferred by the plaintiff, and the order of the lower Appellate Court has been assailed on two grounds, first that there was no sufficient ground in law for the review of the judgment and the lower Appellate Court has acted illegally in granting the review and passing the order above referred to; and secondly the case as having gone back to the Trial Court the Court of first appeal had lost its seisin of the case and, therefore, had no jurisdiction to pass the order under the Partition Act.

With regard to the first ground we do not feel called upon to express an opinion as to the regularity or otherwise of the proceedings in review taken before the lower Appellate Court. Admitting that these proceedings were irregular we do not think that there is any substance in the objection of the appellant to induce us to interfere with the order passed by the Court below. Section 4 of the Partition Act as have been held in Khirode Chandra Ghosal v. Saroda Prasad (1) requires the presence of 3 conditions before the Court can take action under it: first, that the dwelling house should belong to an undivided family: secondly, that a share thereof should have been transferred to a person who is not a member of such family, and thirdly, that the transferee should sue for partition. All these three requisites exist in the present case. The section directs that if any member of the family being a share-holder undertakes to buy the share of a transferee who is a person not being a member of such undivided family the Court shall direct the sale of such share to such share-holder. It seems to us that the operation of s. 4 of the Partition Act comes into play after the Court has found that the stranger transferee is entitled to partition. In fact no order can be passed under the Partition Act before the Court has found that such a transferee has succeeded in establishing his claim for a partition of the undivided homestead. The provisions of s. 4, therefore, seem to us to be separate and distinct from the decree in the suit. It may be said that it really follows the decree establishing the plaintiff's claim to partition. In our judgment, therefore, though the lower Appellate Court may not be correct in treating the defendant's application as an application for a review of its judgment which it undoubtedly purported to be, that Court had jurisdiction to pass the order under s. 4 even after the passing of the decree.

The next objection taken should not also prevail. It is said that the lower Appellate Court had lost jurisdiction over the case after it had pronounced its judgment and passed the decree in the plaintiff's appeal. As has been held in the case of Pran Krishna Bhaduri v. Keshab Chandra Roy (2) a Court of Appeal is as much entitled to pass an order under s. 4 of the Partition Act as the Trial Court. In that case the prayer was made in the written statement before the Trial Court. But that Court made no order on the prayer. The Appellate Court confirmed the decree of the First Court and passed an order under s. 4 of the Partition Act. An objection was taken that the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction after the final decree in the suit had been made to make an order under s. 4. The learned Judges thought that the word "Court" is not confined to the Trial Court, but the power conferred by the section may be exercised even by an Appellate Court. This being conceded it now remains to be seen if the lower Appellate Court in this case has lost its jurisdiction to pass the order merely because the record was sent back to the Trial Court and that Court had taken some action in the matter. It is said that the proper Court to which an application under s. 4 of the Partition Act should be made now is the Trial Court. We do not say that that is not the Court to which such an application might be made. In our judgment the right conferred by s. 4 may be exercised at any time before the final allotments take place. But we think in the present case the learned Subordinate Judge did not lose his jurisdiction under s. 4. In the circumstances that have arisen in this case we can not say that the defendant was wrong in inviting the Court of Appeal to pass an order under s. 4 of the Partition Act. The Trial Court, if the application were made to it, might have said that it was bound to carry out the decree of the Appellate Court which was to effect partition of all the properties in suit. If, as has been held, the Appellate Court had jurisdiction to pass the order, we think the defendant has taken the easier course in the matter. The section does not indicate as to when the willingness of a member of a family should be signified to the Judge to enable him to pass an order under s. 4. In the present case we do not think that there was any unusual delay. The defendant considered his position with regard to exercising his right of appeal against the lower Appellate Court's decree and having decided that he should not prefer such an appeal he made the application to that Court under the Partition Act.

Conceding for argument's sake that the proceedings before the Appellate Court have been irregular, as we have found that

(1) 7 Ind. Cas. 436; 12 C. L. J. 525.

(2) 45 Ind. Cas. 604; 22 C. W. N. 515; 45 C. 873.

that Court had jurisdiction under s. 4 of the Partition Act to make the order it did, we think that under s. 99 of the C. P. C. we should not interfere with the order of the Court below as on the merits the plaintiff's case is extremely weak. The homestead is a small plot of land with the requirements for the use of the family. The plaintiff is an Ugra-Kshatriya and the defendant is a Brahmin. It will not be conducive to the happiness of either party to allow them to live side by side with partition walls erected between their rooms.

It further appears that after the order was passed by the lower Appellate Court under the Partition Act the plaintiff has reconveyed this property to his vendor presumably, as has been suggested, with a view to avoid the provisions of the Partition Act. We do not think that we should lend countenance to this course.

In the above view of the matter we dismiss the appeal with costs. Hearing-fee three gold mohurs.

There is an application by respondent No. 2 Radharani Debi who had originally sold her share in the homestead in suit to the plaintiff and who has re-purchased it from him praying that she may be substituted in the circumstances of this case. We have directed under O. XXII, r. 10 that she be added as an appellant and permitted to continue the appeal.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1925 OF 1924.

March 18, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau.

KAHAN SINGH AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

NATHA SINGH AND ANOTHER—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 112—Child born during continuance of marriage between mother and alleged father—Legitimacy—Presumption.

The fact that a person was born during the continuance of a valid marriage between his mother and a certain man is, under s. 112 of the Evidence Act, conclusive proof that he is the legitimate son of that man, unless it is proved that the latter had no access to his wife at any time when the child could have been begotten. It is immaterial how soon after the marriage the child was born. The only question in such a case is whether his mother had no access to the man whom she married at any time when the child could have been begotten.

Umra v. Muhammad Hayat, 79 P. R. 1907; 194 P. L. R. 1908; 133 P. W. R. 1907, followed.

Second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 20th May 1924.

Mr. Kanshi Ram, for the Appellants.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—On the death of one Buta Singh his land was mutated in favour of the defendant as his son. A brother and a step-brother of Buta Singh have brought the present suit for a declaration that the defendant is not the legitimate son of Buta Singh. The suit was dismissed by the Subordinate Judge, but on appeal the District Judge gave the plaintiffs a decree, from which the defendant has filed a second appeal.

The learned District Judge has found that Buta Singh was married to the defendant's mother Bholi on the 2nd August 1889, and that the defendant was born on 23rd January 1890, and he thinks that because the defendant must have been begotten before his mother's marriage he is illegitimate. This is an entirely erroneous view of the law. The fact that the defendant was born during the continuance of the marriage between his mother and Buta Singh is under s. 112 of the Evidence Act conclusive proof that he is Buta Singh's legitimate son unless it is shown that Buta Singh and Bholi had no access to each other at any time when he could have been begotten. It is immaterial how soon after the marriage the defendant was born [see Umra v. Muhammad Hayat (1)]. The learned District Judge has discussed at some length the question whether the defendant was treated as Buta Singh's son, but this matter is entirely irrelevant. When it was found that the defendant was born after his mother had been married to Buta Singh the only question that remained was whether the plaintiffs had proved that Bholi and Buta Singh had no access to each other at any time when the defendant could have been begotten. There is not a particle of evidence on the record to prove this, and it follows that under s. 112 of the Evidence Act the defendant is conclusively proved to be the legitimate son of Buta Singh.

I accept the appeal, reverse the lower

(1) 79 P. R. 1907; 194 P. L. R. 1908; 133 P. W. R. 1907.

Appellate Court's decree and restore the decree of the Trial Court dismissing the suit. The respondent will pay appellants' costs in all the Courts.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 207 OF 1924.
February 16, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Kumaraswami, Sastri, Kt.

SHYAMA BHAI—PLAINTIFF
versus

PURUSHOTAMADOSS—DEFENDANT.

Res judicata—Co-plaintiffs—Grant to members of joint family—Nature of property granted—Estoppel—Setting up inconsistent cases.

In order to constitute res judicata between co-plaintiffs, there should be active controversy between them and an adjudication upon the point in dispute must have been essential for the purpose of giving a decree against the defendant. [p. 129, col. 2.]

Under the Hindu Law, as interpreted in Madras, where there is a grant to two persons, members of a joint Hindu family, the ordinary presumption is that the grant is to them as co-parceners. [p. 131, col. 2.]

Case-law considered.

A person is not precluded from setting in a litigation a case inconsistent with the one set up by him in a prior litigation. [p. 133, col. 1.]

Umrao Singh v. Lachhman Singh, 10 Ind. Cas. 285; 33 A. 344; 15 C. W. N. 497; 8 A. L. J. 465; 13 C. L. J. 519; 9 M. L. T. 507; 13 Bom. L. R. 404; 21 M. L. J. 637; 14 O. C. 133; 38 I. A. 104; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 242 (P. C.), relied upon.

In the absence of proof that a party acted on the faith of any representation by the other party, no question of estoppel can arise. [ibid.]

A contention put forward in a prior suit in support of a legal argument cannot by itself afford a foundation for an estoppel. [p. 133, cols. 1 & 2.]

Self-acquired property may be impressed with the character of joint property if it is dealt with as joint family property. [p. 134, col. 2.]

Rajanikanta Pal v. Jagmohan Pal, 73 Ind. Cas. 252; 50 C. 439; (1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 57; 44 M. L. J. 561; 32 M. L. T. 149; 25 Bom. L. R. 683; 37 C. L. J. 515; (1923) M. W. N. 438; 18 L. W. 387; 27 C. W. N. 997; 9 O. & A. L. R. 805; 50 I. A. 173 (P. C.), relied upon.

Messrs. S. Srinivas Iyengar, G. Krishnaswami Iyer and R. Swaminathan, for the Plaintiff.

Messrs. K. Rajah Iyer and V. Ramaswami Iyer, for the Defendant.

JUDGMENT.—This is a suit by the plaintiff who is the widow and legal representative of one Goverdhanadoss against the defendant, her deceased husband's brother, for a declaration that the plaintiff's husband and the defendant were members of a divided family, that the plaintiff's husband was entitled to a half share in all the properties devised under the Will of his father and that the plaintiff is entitled to a half share in the properties, which were decreed to the plaintiff's husband and the defendant, in C. S. No. 163 of 1917, for partition and delivery to the plaintiff of her share and in the alternative for maintenance at Rs. 500 a month and arrears.

One Raghunathadoss, who was the father of the plaintiff's husband and the defendant, was carrying on a large business, as a jewel merchant: He died about the 20th of October 1903, leaving behind him, the plaintiff's husband and the defendant, his sons. He left a Will, dated the 19th of October 1903, which is probated and which I shall refer to later on. The Will directs the executors, after payment of certain legacies, to hand over the residue of the estate to the plaintiff's husband, when he attains the age of 23 and the defendant, when he attains 21. The executors obtained possession and were in management of the estate. The plaintiff's husband and the defendant filed C. S. No. 163 of 1917, against the executors for an account and for possession of the properties, bequeathed to them and a decree was passed in that suit, in their favour, in execution of which they got possession of the properties, moveable and immoveable. A few months after getting the decree in that suit, the plaintiff's husband died.

The plaintiff's case is that both by virtue of the Will of Raghunathadoss and the decree in C. S. No. 163 of 1917, her husband and the defendant obtained the properties, as tenants-in-common and not as joint tenants and that she is entitled to one half share in the properties, which were recovered in execution and which formed part of the properties of the testator Raghunathadoss. She contends that by reason of the contentions, raised by her husband and the defendant that they took the properties as tenants-in-common, the defendant is estopped from setting up any title to the properties, by right of survivorship, even assuming that they were not tenants-in-common, under the terms of the Will. The plaintiff states that on the date of her husband's death, which took place on the 28th June 1920, she was a minor 16 years old, that she continued to live in her husband's house, for a short time and thereafter she went to live with her parents, that the defendant who was the de facto guardian and who was in possession of the properties of her husband, is bound to account to her for such properties and that the defendant in 1924, asserted his rights to all the properties by survivorship and declined to hand over her share to her. She states that the defendant in reply to a notice set up an arrangement, whereby she was only entitled to the interest on Government paper, of the face value of Rs. 10,000 of the $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. loan, which was set apart for her maintenance and had no further rights. She denies any such arrangement and states that even if the arrangement is valid, it is not binding on her.

The defendant filed a written statement, wherein he denies that the plaintiff's husband and he were divided in interest and states that he, the plaintiff's husband and their father Raghunathadoss were members of a joint family, that under the terms of the Will, the property was given to him and his brother, as members of a joint family and not as tenants-in-common, that the parties are not governed by the Mayukha but by the Mitakshara, as they migrated to Madras, several years ago and have not adopted the law, as prevailing in Madras, that in C. S. No. 163 of 1917, the plaintiff's husband did not sue as a tenant-in-common, or claim a devise as such, that the question as to whether he and his brother took as "tenants-in-common, or as joint tenants was not one of the main issues in the suit and was not necessary for the determination of that suit, that there can be no estoppel, that he never retained possession of the properties, on the ground that they were the separate properties of the plaintiff's husband, that till the death of the plaintiff's husband, they were members of a joint family, enjoying the properties as members of such a family, that he never took possession of any of the properties, as the guardian of the plaintiff, but that he took the properties, as the surviving member of a joint family, that soon after the death of the plaintiff's husband, a settlement was arrived at, in respect of the maintenance of the plaintiff, in the presence of her father and other relations, interested in her welfare, whereby Government promissory notes of the face value of Rs. 10,000 were to be endorsed over, in her favour and the same set apart, to secure her maintenance and she was to be paid, as and when necessary, the interest accruing on the promissory notes and she was also allowed to have her sridhana jewels of the value of Rs. 6,000 that the agreement was acted upon by all the parties and by the plaintiff, after she attained majority, that she cannot now repudiate it, that the total income of the properties never exceeded Rs. 300 or Rs. 400 a month and that the claim of Rs. 500 a month for maintenance is excessive. He denied the correctness of the schedule to the plaint.

The defendant also filed a counter claim, stating that the plaintiff is in possession of family jewels, of the value of Rs. 4,435, which she was allowed to keep for her temporary use and that she has not returned them, in spite of demands.

The plaintiff filed an answer to the counter-claim, denying that the defendant is entitled to any of the jewels claimed, on the ground that they were lent to her and stating that her husband gave her some jewels absolutely out of natural love and affection, and that she is not in possession of any family jewels. She states that the claim, if any, is barred by limitation.

The following preliminary issue was settled:—

Is the nature of the estate taken by the plaintiff's husband and the defendant, under the Will of Raghunathadoss res judicata, by reason of the decision in C. S. No. 163 of 1917?

After hearing the arguments on this issue, I was of opinion that the matter is not res judicata and I intimated to the parties that I would give my reasons, after hearing the suit on its merits:

The following further issues were raised:—

1. Did the defendant and the plaintiff's husband take the properties, under the Will, as tenants-in-common, or as joint tenants?

2. Is the defendant estopped from pleading that he took the properties as a joint tenant?

Particulars as to the reason for estoppel will be given in 14 days.

3. Did the plaintiff's husband and the defendant become divided, by reason of the case set up by the 2nd defendant in C. S. No. 163 of 1917, that the parties took as members of a divided family?

4. Did the plaintiff's husband and the defendant treat the properties, which they got, under the will, as joint family properties, so as to bring into operation the law of survivorship?

Defendant will give particulars of the treatment, which he states constituted joint family property, but which is otherwise separate in 14 days.

5. Was there an agreement between the plaintiff's father and the defendant as alleged in para. 17 of the written statement and had the plaintiff's father any authority to act for the plaintiff in respect thereof?

6. Assuming that he had authority and that there was an agreement, is it binding on the plaintiff?

7. Did the plaintiff ratify the arrangement and is she estopped from disputing its validity?

Defendant will give particulars as to ratification in 14 days.

8. Did the defendant lend the plaintiff any jewels, as alleged in the counter-claim, or were the jewels, which the plaintiff admits, she has got, given by her husband, as alleged in her reply to the counter-claim and what is their value?

9. If it is held that the plaintiff is entitled to any maintenance, apart from the agreement, to what maintenance, arrears of maintenance and residence, is she entitled?

Preliminary Issue.—Raghunathadoss, the father of the plaintiff's husband and the defendant, left a Will of which Probate was obtained, wherein he gives certain annuities to his daughters and directs his executors to hand over the residue to his sons, namely, the plaintiff's husband and the defendant. The material portion of the Will, as translated in the Probate, runs thus as follows. After referring to his illness, the testator says.

"Therefore, as long as I live, I am the owner (of my property). After me, my two sons (are owners), 1. Elder (son) Babu age 10; 2. Second (son) Chendulal age 8. These (sons) are minors. Therefore, I appoint four executors.....I appoint these four persons (executors). These four persons are to recover, after my death, whatever I own (in the shape of estate, jewellery and outstandings) and out of the jewels they may keep (intact) such as are fit to be preserved and keep a list in writing of the same. (They) are to sell off the rest and invest the sale-proceeds in Government bonds and to utilise the interest, for defraying the household expenses and to go on devoting (or spending) the rest of (the interest) for (the use of or benefit of) my children, according to the custom of our caste and in such manner, as my sister Jamu Boi approves (or chooses or wishes or directs).

(They are) to celebrate the marriage of my sons, in a respectable or decent (literally good) way. (Such money as remains on hand, after defraying those expenses) is to be laid by and to be handed over to both my sons, to the elder one when he attains the age of 23 and to the younger one, at 21 and take receipts from them (in respect of the same). The boys are to be given a respectable education and are to be looked after generally (literally are to be protected.)"

The executors obtained Probate of the Will and were in possession and management of the estate. The plaintiff's husband and the defendants, being dissatisfied with the management of the executors and alleging misappropriation, waste and breaches of trust, filed C. S. No. 163 of 1917, on the 24th of April 1917, against three of the executors, who were then alive. The plaint in that suit, after setting out the Will and alleging that the first plaintiff was born on the 16th of November 1893 and the second plaintiff on the 29th of May 1896 and both were of full age and entitled to recover the estate, under the terms of the bequest, gives various acts of breaches of trust, misconduct, and misappropriation. The plaintiffs prayed for an enquiry, as to the assets left by the deceased testator, and the amounts recovered by the defendants, or might have been recovered by them, but for their wilful default and neglect, for an account of the monies, which the defendants used for their own trade, for profits or compound interest at half yearly rests, on such sums, for handing over to the plaintiffs the properties belonging to the estate, of which the defendants were in possession, for an injunction and for other reliefs.

The defendants in that suit filed written statements denying all acts of misconduct and stating that they acted, in conformity with the provisions of the Will.

The plaint was amended and in answer to the amended plaint, a plea of limitation was raised and that formed the subject-matter of the fourth issue in that suit. I held that the suit was not barred by limitation.

The plea of limitation was raised on two grounds. As regards the properties, which were admitted to be in the possession of the executors, it was contended that on the true construction of the Will, the legacies became payable immediately on the death of the father and that the suit was barred by limitation, as it was brought more than 12 years after the said date. As regards the properties which did come into the hands of the executors, it was contended that as the plaintiffs were members of a joint family and as the legacies were impressed with the character of joint family property and as the first plaintiff attained majority more than three years before the date of the suit, and was competent to give a valid discharge, any claim for damages for neglect of duty or breaches of trust was barred by limitation. As regards the properties, which remained in the hands of the executors and actually held by them, I held that the suit cannot be barred by limitation, that if they were trustees s. 10 of the Limitation Act would apply and that if the suit was one for legacy, it became payable only when the first plaintiff attained the age of 23 and the second plaintiff the age of 21 and that they had 12 years from that date to sue. It is not material for the purpose of this case, to refer to this aspect of the case any further. As regards the claim, in respect of the properties, which did not come into the hands of the executors, and in respect of which the claim was based on breaches of trust and neglect of duty to get in assets or devastavit, alleged to have been committed by them, the question was incidentally, raised, as to whether the suit was barred, on the ground that the plaintiffs were members of an undivided family and the Will gave the properties to them jointly, the suit would be barred, as it was brought within three years, after the second plaintiff attained majority. I may state, in this connection, that there was nothing in the pleadings, which raised this question specifically. In the course of the arguments before me, this point was raised and I had to decide it. The following is my judgment on that question:

"Mr. Rajah Iyer (who appeared for the plaintiffs in that suit) argued that even as regards those claims, (i. e.) claims in respect of breaches of trust, damages for neglect of duty (etc.) they are covered by s. 10 of the Limitation Act and referred to the passage in Cursetjee Pestonjee Bottliwalla v. Dadabhai Eduljee (1) referred to by me above and several English decisions, prior to the passing of the Trustee Act. I do not think there is much use in discussing the question at any length, as I am (sitting as a Single Judge) concluded by the decision of Wallis, C.J., and Oldfield, J., in Kotta Tholasingham Chetty v. Veda-challa Aiyah (2) where it was held that s. 10 of the Limitation Act does not apply to suits against trustees for failure to reduce the trust properties into possession.

So far as the second plaintiff is concerned, the suit is brought within three years of his attaining majority and is prima facie not barred. It is argued, however, that the plaintiffs are members of a joint family, that the legacies to them stand impressed with the character of a joint family property and that as the first plaintiff attained majority, more than three years before the date of the suit, and was competent to give a valid discharge, the suit is barred against the second plaintiff also. So far as Madras is concerned, it must now be taken as settled, that a father can bequeath property to his sons in towns, which would carry with it all the incidents of a joint family property. I need only refer to Nagalingam Pillai v. Ramachandra Tevar (3) and Yethirajulu Naidu v. Mukuntha Naidu (4) and to the recent decision of Abdur Rahim and Oldfield, JJ., in Indoji Jithaji v. Kothapalli Rama Charlu (5). It is, no doubt, true that a Company was taken in Jugmohandas Mangaldas v. Sir Mangaldas Nathubhoy (6) and Kishori Dubian v. Mundra Dubian (7) but I am bound by the current authority in this Court. As observed in Nagalingam Pillai v. Ramachandra Tevar (3), the question "whether, in any given case, property was intended to pass to the son as ancestral, or self-acquired property is a question of intention, turning on the construction of the instrument of gift." Turning to the present Will, I do not think that the intention of the testator was to pass the property, as an ancestral property. He distinctly states that the executors were to give it to each of

(1) 19 M. 425; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1001.

(2) 42 Ind. Cas. 514; 41 M. 319; (1917) M. W. N. 651; 6 L. W. 523; 22 M. L. T. 388.

(3) 24 M. 429; 11 M. L. J. 210.

(4) 28 M. 363; 15 M. L. J. 299.

(5) 51 Ind. Cas. 146; 10 L. W. 498.

(6) 10 B. 528; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 742.

(7) 10 Ind. Cas. 565; 33 A. 665; 8 A. L. J. 757.

the plaintiffs, when they attain a particular age and to get receipts from each of them, so that he clearly did not intend one son to bind the other by any acquittance. If he wanted the property to pass as joint family property, he would have directed the executors to hand over the estate, as soon as his eldest son attained majority or an age, when the testator thought it safe to hand over the property to him. Though no doubt, it is, under the law as administered in this Presidency open to a father to bequeath property as joint family property, I think Courts ought not easily to impress a legacy with that character. It is again difficult, to see how the first plaintiff could, in the face of the express terms of the Will, have required the executors to deliver to him the share of the second plaintiff during his minority and give a valid discharge to the executors, as regards the second plaintiff's share. Section 7 of the Limitation Act requires that there should be a person who can give a valid discharge, without the concurrence of the minor, as pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Nobin Chandra Barua v. Chandra Madhab Barua (8) and by Bhashyam Iyengar, J., in Ahinsa Bibi v. Abdul Kader Saheb (9). The section will have no application otherwise. The executors could not, under the terms of the Will, have handed over the share of the second plaintiff to the first plaintiff. It has been held in Neelam Tirupathirayudu Naidu v. Vinyamuri Lakshminarasamma (10), where there is a minor beneficiary that the executors had no power to deliver the property to the minor's guardian; a fortiori, where the Will specifically directs that the legacy should be delivered to a minor when he attains a certain age and an acquittance should be obtained from him. As regards suits for account, the effect of s. 7 has been discussed by Sir Bhashyam Iyengar in Ahinsa Bibi v. Abdul Kader Saheb (9) while it has held that, even though there were adult partners, a suit for an account of a dissolved partnership was not barred, as one of the persons entitled to an account was a minor. I do not think that the suit as regards the second plaintiff is barred".

(8) 36 Ind. Cas. 1; 44 C. 1; 20 M. L. T. 430; 21 C. W. N. 97; 11 A. L. J. 1199; 18 Bom. L. R. 1022; 31 M. L. J. 836; 24 C. L. J. 509; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 565; 5 L. W. 452 (P. C.).

(9) 25 M. 26.

(10) 17 Ind. Cas. 597; 38 M. 71; (1912) M. W. N. 1237; 12 M. L. T. 530; 23 M. L. J. 599.

It will be seen from my judgment in that case that the question as to the nature of the estate, taken by the plaintiffs in that suit whether they took it as tenants-in-common or as joint tenants, was not raised in the pleadings; nor was there a specific issue, on the construction of the Will, but it was taken in the course of the argument, to support one aspect of the general plea of limitation. It is, no doubt, true that in the course of the argument, the position taken up by the executors was that the plaintiffs in that suit took the estate as joint tenants, while the present defendant raised the opposite contention that he and the plaintiff's husband took the estate as tenants-in-common, the legacy to each being distinct and separate, payable at different times, though his present contention is that they took the estate as joint tenants. Moreover, I held that, even if the plaintiffs in that suit were members of an undivided family, and took as joint tenants the suit was not barred, for other reasons.

A point was taken that as the present defendant and the plaintiff's husband were co-plaintiffs, in C. S. No. 163 of 1917, there can be no res judicata, as between them; but I think the same principles of res judicata, as between co-defendants would apply to co-plaintiffs. I need only refer to Rakhmini v. Dhondu (11) and Mookkan v. Naga Pillai (12), and think that if a finding as between co-plaintiffs is necessary, before the Court can give any relief against the defendants there is no reason why that finding should not be res judicata, as between co-plaintiffs. I find it, however, difficult to see how the question as to the nature of the estate, which the plaintiffs took in that case, which was not raised in the pleadings, but was only used an argument, on one of the branches of the case, as to limitation, and which was not essential to give plaintiffs any relief would be res judicata. I think the main tests to be applied are whether there was active controversy between the plaintiffs and whether that adjudication was necessary, to enable the Court, to grant any relief against the defendants. Having regard to the pleadings in that suit, it is clear that the plaintiffs did not care, if they got the property as joint tenants or tenants-in-common, because no question of survivorship would arise, until one of them died. Both of them attained the age when, under the terms of the Will, possession had to be given to them. There was, therefore, no active controversy between the plaintiffs. All that appears is that, during the course of the argument, the second plaintiff in that suit, by his Vakil, met the plea of limitation, by arguing that the plaintiffs took the estate as tenants in-common and not as joint tenants. The other plaintiff adopted that argument and I hold that, for the purpose of deciding the question of limitation, the Will, on its face, suggested that the property was given to them, as tenants-in-common. Active co-operation there was between the plaintiffs; but that does not make it an active contest on any issues between them because the interests of the present parties are now adverse and the plaintiff claims through one of the parties to the previous litigation.

(11) 14 Ind. Cas. 466; 36 B. 207; 14 Bom. L. R. 128,

(12) 38 Ind. Cas. 213; (1917) M. W. N. 14.

It is argued by Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, for the plaintiff, that active controversy can only mean controversy, which the nature of the case admits and need not appear expressly on the pleadings and that where the plaintiff raises a contention which but for the admission or consent of the co-plaintiff would be a matter in controversy, Expl. III to s. 11 would apply. It is contended that as there was a controversy between one of the plaintiffs in that suit and the defendant and as the other plaintiff accepted the contention of the co-plaintiff, he cannot subsequently be heard to contend that in another suit he can raise the question anew, because, if he had raised the contention in the previous suit, there would have been an adjudication. Reliance is placed on Krishnan Nambiar v. Kannan (13). In that case, the plaintiff purchased some land from the second defendant, as the karnavan of a tarwad, to which the second defendant and the other defendants belonged. The land was in the possession of third parties. The vendor and the purchaser jointly sued for possession, but they failed to prove that the vendor had any title to the land. The plaintiff instituted the suit against the vendor, to recover the purchase-money with interest and the defendants wanted to show that they had title. It was held that the matter was res judicata. The learned Judges Benson and Boddam, JJ., observed:

"In that litigation the present plaintiff and the second defendant (as representing the tarwad) were joint plaintiffs, and it was then found as between each of them and the persons in possession of the property, that the second defendant and his tarwad had no title to the property. The title to the property is, therefore, res judicata, as between the persons in possession and the second defendant and his tarwad. It is idle to contend that, in these circumstances, any useful purpose was, or could be, served, by admitting evidence as to the tarwad's alleged title".

No authorities were referred to and the case was not followed in Mookkan v. Naga Pillai (12) and was dissented from in Hub Ali v. Hammun (14).

I think the authorities are clear that in order to constitute res judicata between co-plaintiffs, there should be active controversy between them and the point in dispute must have been essential, for the purpose of giving a decree against the defendant. In Rakhmini v. Dhondo (11), the widow and the son of a deceased person sued a stranger to recover some jewels and a decree was passed in favour of the mother, on the ground that she was the absolute owner of the jewels. Later on, the son filed a suit against the mother, to establish his title to recover the jewels. The plea of res judicata was raised and it was held that there was no res judicata, as there was no final adjudication between the plaintiffs in that suit and it was of no consequence to them in that suit, as to who succeeded, Chandavarkar, J., after referring to Ramchandra Narayan v. Narayan Mahadev (15), observed as follows:—

"As was held in that case, a finding in a suit as between co-defendants becomes res judicata in a subsequent suit only when it was essential for the purpose of giving relief to the plaintiff in the previous suit. So also as between co-plaintiffs a finding to become res judicata must have been essential for the purpose of giving relief against the defendants. Now here, in the previous suit, it was a matter of no consequence whatever to the defendant therein for the purposes of the relief to be given against him whether Rakhmini succeeded or whether Dhondo succeeded. Therefore, the (14) 11 Ind. Cas. 936; 8 A. L. J. 807.

(15) 11 B. 216; 11 Ind. Jur. 301; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 142.

(13) 21 M. 8; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 362.

plea of res judicata raised in this second appeal must be disallowed".

In Pratab Udainath Sahi Deo v. Ganesh Narain Sahi (16), Sir Dawson Miller, C. J., and Jwala Prasad, J., in dealing with the question of res judicata, as between co-plaintiffs, observed as follows:—

"There was no dispute between the plaintiffs in that suit as to the Maharaja's right to resume or the fact that the tenure had to come to an end, on the death of Lachaminath. The principle laid down in Cottingham v. Earl of Shrewsbury (17), can, therefore, have no application. There was no conflict of interest between the co-plaintiffs and the decision cannot, in my opinion, be held binding as res judicata, on their successors; [see Ramchandra Narayan v. Narayan Mahadev (15).]"

A similar view was taken in Hub Ali v. Hammun (14), where it was held, that to constitute res judicata, there should be a difference between the co-plaintiff and some controversy between them.

So far as co-defendants are concerned, the requisites, necessary to support the plea of res judicata, have been considered in numerous cases and the principles are quite clear. In Sankaramahalingam Chetty v. Muthulakshmi (18). Seshagiri Iyer, J., refers to all the cases on the point and observes as follows:—

"The principle underlying the bar of res judicata, as between the co-defendants has been the subject of discussion in three recent cases, Achanta Venkatasurya narayana v. Yellapragadu Shiva Sankara Narayana (19), Fakirchand Lallubhai v. Naginchand Kalidas (20) and Jadav Chandra Sarkar v. Kailash Chandra Singh (21). The first requisite is that there should be active controversy as against each other between the parties arrayed on the same side; per Muthusami Iyer, J., in Venkayya v. Narasamma (22) and Tanjore Ramachandra Ram v. Vellayanadan Ponnusami (23). Secondly, the adjudication inter se between the co-defendants should be necessary to give the appropriate relief to the plaintiff. (See per West, J., in Ramchandra Narayan v. Narayan Mahadev (15) and Wigram, V. C. in Cottingham v. Earl of Shrewsbury (17), and Jessel, M.R. in Keran v. Crawford (24)."

In the earlier case, the Vice-Chancellor says:—

"But, if the relief given to the plaintiff does not require or involve a decision of any case between co-defendants, the co-defendants will not be bound as between each other by any proceeding which may be necessary only to the decree the plaintiff obtains".

There are numerous other decisions, laying down the same requisites; but I think it is unnecessary to refer to them.

Applying these tests to the present case, I do not think that any of the requisites, which are necessary to constitute res judicata, as between co-defendants, exists so as to make the question, as to the nature of the estate taken under the Will, res judicata and I find the preliminary issue against the plaintiff.

The next issue is whether the plaintiff's husband and the defendant took the properties, under the Will of their father, as tenants-in-common, or as joint tenants. In the previous litigation, the parties accepted the translation attached to the Probate of the Will, as correct. Nobody impugned its correctness. There was no evidence, let in on this point. The main reason, which influenced me, in holding that they took the estate as tenants-in-common, was that under the Will, there were two separate deliveries of properties contemplated and that two separate receipts were to be taken from the two sons of the testator. If there had to be two separate deliveries of properties and two separate receipts taken, it seemed to me, in the absence of any evidence, to be clear that a tenancy-in-common was contemplated by the testator, because when the property was given to the elder son and a receipt taken from him, it prima facie would be of his share in the residue, and similarly, when the property was handed over to the second son, at a different period and a receipt taken from him, it would also involve the same consequence. In the present suit, however, the translation, annexed to the Probate, is challenged by the (16) 70 Ind. Cas. 232; (1921) Pat. 369.

(17) (1843) 67 E. R. 530; 3 Hare 627; 15 L. J. Ch. 441.

(18) 43 Ind. Cas. 860; 33 M. L. J. 740.

(19) 27 Ind. Cas. 861; 17 M. L. T. 85; 2 L. W. 101.

(20) 33 Ind. Cas. 23; 40 B. 210; 17 Bom. L. R. 1106.

(21) 34 Ind. Cas. 429; 21 C. W. N. 693; 25 C. L. J. 322.

(22) 11 M. 204; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 142.

(23) 14 M. 258 at p. 264; 16 I. A. 37; 6 Sar. P. O. J. 30; 15 Ind. Jur. 224; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. s.) 181 (P. C.).

(24) (1877) 6 Ch. D. 29; 46 L. J. Ch. 729; 37 L. T. 322; 25 W. R. 49.

defendant as incorrect and evidence on the point has been adduced.

The case for the defendant is that, according to a proper translation of the Will, it was not necessary that there should be two deliveries at different times or that two receipts should be taken, but that what was contemplated was a single handing over, when the legatees attained the age of 23 and 21 and the taking of a single receipt. It is pointed out that as there was a difference of about two years in the ages of the plaintiff's husband and the defendant, the testator, in the Will, said that the first son should get "the property" at 23 and the second son should get the property at 21, so that there may be a simultaneous delivery of property; otherwise, there was no reason, why the elder son should get it, when he is 23 and the younger son when he is 21. It is also contended that the Gujarati word in the Will is "receipt" and not "receipts" and that, therefore, only one receipt was contemplated, the word "receipts" in the translation annexed to the Probate being incorrect. On this point, evidence was adduced and the defendant examined Mr. Nanabhai Devai, a Vakil of this Court, who was appointed Commissioner to translate a number of Gujarati documents and Mr. Batheena the Gujarati Interpreter of this Court. Mr. Nanabhai Devai, who is a Gujarati gentleman, and whose mother-tongue is Gujarati, has made a translation of the Will and it has been filed. The evidence of Mr. Nanabhai Devai supports his translation of the Will and he states that from a reading of the Will, only a single handing over was meant. He says that as there was a difference of two years between the ages of the elder and the younger sons, which continued throughout, only one delivery was contemplated, when the testator used the words "to the elder one, when he attains the age of 23 and to the younger one at 21". Mr. Batheena, the Gujarati Interpreter, has given his translation of the Will and it has also been filed. He seems to be of opinion that the Will can be translated, both as is done in the Probate and as is translated by Mr. Nanabhai Devai.

If the original Will is capable of the two interpretations put on it, namely, (1) that there should be two separate deliveries and two separate receipts taken, and (2) that there should be a single delivery to both of them, on one and the same occasion and only one receipt taken, one has to see the surrounding circumstances and the other terms of the Will, to come to a conclusion as to the nature of the estate taken, as the Will does not say anything as to what the nature of the estate is to be. It is not disputed that Raghunathadoss the father and his two sons were living as members of one family, Raghunathadoss being the father and managing member, and the sons being minors under his protection. The Will begins by saying that the testator was the owner of the property, as long as he lived and after him his two sons, (the word "owners" being supplemented by the Interpreter). He gives the names of his two sons and says that as they are minors, he appoints four executors. He mentions the duties, which the executors are to perform and so far as the clause of disposition is concerned, all he says is that the executors are to hand over to his sons the property, when the elder attains the age of 23 and the younger when he attains the age of 21 and to take receipts from them. There does not seem to be any reason to suppose, from the terms of the Will, that the testator intended his sons to be separate, as from the date of his death and they were to have separate interests in the property and there are no express words in the Will, from which such an intention necessarily follows. I think the result of the authorities, in Madras, is that where there is a grant to two persons, who form members of a joint family, the ordinary presumption is that the grant is to them as co-parceners. I need only refer to Nagalingam Pillai v. Ramachandra Tevar (3), Yethirajulu Naidu v. Mukuntha Naidu (4), Venkatarameiah Pantulu v. Subramaniam Pillai (25), Indoji Jithaji v. Kothapalli Rama Charlu (5) and Rajarajeswara Dorai v. Sundarapandujaswami (26). It is, no doubt, true that the view taken in Bombay and Allahabad is that, where property is given to two persons, without stating what interest they are to take, they should take it as tenants-in-common. The question was recently raised before the Privy Council in Lal Ram Singh v. Deputy Commissioner of Partabgarh (27), but their

(25) 26 Ind. Cas. 393; 16 M. L. T. 489.

(26) 27 Ind. Cas. 283; 27 M. L. J. 694 at p. 716.

(27) 76 Ind. Cas. 922; 45 A. 596; (1923) M. W. N. 591; (1923) A. I. R. (P. O.) 160; 9 O. & A. L. R. 746; 21 A. L. J. 777; 26 O. C. 257; 33 M. L. T. 355; 10 O. L. J. 513; 50 I. A. 265; 47 M. L. J. 280; 29 O. W. N. 86 (P. O.).

Lordships while pointing out the conflict of authority did not decide the question. They observe as follows:—

"It appears that there has been great diversity of opinion in the High Courts in India, as to the effect in a Mitakshara family of a bequest made by a father of property which in the father's hands was self-acquired, to his son. In Calcutta, in 1863, the point first arose in the case of Muddun Gopal v. Ram Buksh (28), when it was held that such property would be ancestral, and this has been followed in the later case of Hazarimal Babu v. Abani Nath Adhurjaya (29), decided in 1912. In Madras, upon the whole, the view seems to be that the father can determine, whether the property which he has so bequeathed, shall be ancestral, or self acquired on the principle of cujus est dare ejus est disponere; but that unless he expresses his wish that it should be deemed self-acquired, it is ancestral. See Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram (30), and compare it with Nagalingam Pillai v. Ramachandra Tevar (3) and other cases. In Bombay, on the other hand, the principle of intention seems to have been accepted, if it makes the property ancestral, but if there be no expression of intention it is deemed self-acquired. See Jugmohandas Mangaldas v. Sir Mangaldas Nathubhoy (6) and Nanabhai Ganpatrav v. Acharatbai (31). At Allahabad the decision was that such property is self-acquired. See Parsotam Rao v. Janki Bai (32) decided in 1907. Finally, in Oudh, in the case of Rameshar v. Rukmin (33), decided in 1909, after a review of all the cases, it was held that: Where self-acquired property is bequeathed to sons, in the absence of language clearly indicating the testator's intention that the property should be held by the sons subject to the incident of survivorship, it should be presumed that each son takes an interest which passes to his heirs at his death..... But their Lordships deem it unnecessary to pronounce upon these points. It may be that some day this Board will have to decide between the conflicting decisions of the Indian High Courts, and it may be that when this time comes, this Board will prefer to go back to the original text of the Mitakshara and put its own construction upon that text. It is not necessary to do so in this case."

In this view of the authorities, I think that, sitting as a Single Judge, I should follow the Madras decisions, which, as pointed out by their Lordships of the Privy Council, uphold the view that unless the father, in disposing of the properties expresses that they should be deemed self-acquired in the hands of the sons, the properties should be treated ancestral.

As regards the contention of Mr. Rajah Iyer, for the defendant, that the Will of Raghunadadoss is merely a document, appointing a guardian of his minor sons, and is not a bequest to them, I think the terms of the Will, which gives annuities to the daughters and the residue to his sons, is clearly testamentary, in its character. Reference has been made to Poorendra Nath Sen v. Hemangini Dasi (34), In the matter of the last Will & Testament of Bukthawar Mull Sowcar (35), Somasundara Mudaly v. Duraisami Mudaliar (36) and Jagannatha Gajapathi Anaga Bheema Deo v. Kunja Behari Deo (37). I do not think these cases have any application, having regard to the terms of the Will in question. The words "after me my two sons are owners" amounts to a bequest. In Jugmohandas Mangaldas v. Sir Mangaldas Nathubhoy (6), Lalit Mohun Singh Roy v. Chukkun Lal Roy (38), and Chuni Lal v. Bai Muli (39), the words "shall be the owner, etc." were construed as constituting a bequest.

I hold, on the first issue, that the plaintiff's husband and the defendant took the properties as joint tenants.

2nd Issue:—It is difficult to see how there can be any estoppel in this case. It is argued by Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar for the plaintiff, that estoppel arises, because of the conduct of the present defendant, in C. S. No. 163 of 1917. It is alleged that he put forward the contention that, under the Will of his father, he and his deceased brother took the estate of their

(34) 1 Ind. Cas. 523; 36 C. 75; 12 C. W. N. 1002.

(35) 23 M. 133; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 490.

(36) 27 M. 30; 13 M. L. J. 283.

(37) 64 Ind. Cas. 458; 44 M. 733; 14 L. W. 398; (1921) M. W. N. 713; 41 M. L. J. 648; 30 M. L. T. 124; 26 C. W. N. 374; 24 Bom. L. R. 600; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 32; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 162; 48 I. A. 482 (P. C.).

(38) 24 C. 834; 24 I. A. 76; 1 C. W. N. 387; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 155; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1224 (P. C.).

(39) 24 B. 420; 2 Bom. L. R. 46; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 812.

(28) 6 W. R. 71.

(29) 18 Ind. Cas. 625; 17 C. W. N. 280; 17 C. L. J. 38.

(30) 3 M. H. C. R. 50.

(31) 12 B. 122; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 567.

(32) 29 A. 354; 4 A. L. J. 257; A. W. N. (1907) 77.

(33) 12 Ind. Cas. 770; 14 O. C. 244.

father as tenants-in-common and obtained judgment on that footing, that the plaintiff's husband believed in and acted upon the truth of the statement made by the defendant and obtained a decree, along with the defendant in the previous suit, that but for such conduct and misrepresentation, on the part of the defendant, the plaintiff's husband would have obtained an express declaration from the Court, as to his rights, under his father's Will and obtained a separate decree in his favour, or the plaintiff's husband would, before his death, have brought about an express deed of partition between himself and the defendant, that the defendant having obtained possession of the properties of his deceased father, as a legatee under his father's Will, he is now estopped from saying that he acquired it under any other title, that the defendant having elected to take the properties of his father's Will he is estopped from disputing the validity of the Will, or any of its provisions, as against the plaintiff's husband, and that he is also estopped from saying that he pleaded tenancy-in-common, with a view to evade the provisions of the Limitation Act and to commit a fraud upon the Court.

There is no evidence, which would support the question of estoppel, on any question of fact. As I shall show later on, after the decree in C. S. No. 163 of 1917 and even though the case of tenancy-in-common was set up, the defendant and the plaintiff's husband acted and continued to act, as if they were members of a joint family. They carried on business jointly, treated the funds in common, borrowed in common and made no difference, as regards the properties, which they took under the Will. It is difficult to see how, in the absence of any evidence to prove that the plaintiff's husband acted on the faith of any representation made by the defendant, any question of estoppel would arise. In Umrao Singh v. Lachhman Singh (40), it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that a person is not precluded from setting up an inconsistent case in a subsequent litigation; (see the observations at page 355*). I do not think it can be said that the contention put forward in the previous suit, in support of a legal argument, can by itself become a foundation for any estoppel.

I find the second issue against the plaintiff.

3rd Issue:—It is difficult to see how the plea set up, as to the nature of the estate taken by the parties, under the Will of Raghunathadoss, in the previous suit, can of itself effect a partition. There was no unambiguous intention expressed anywhere, in the previous proceedings by the plaintiff's husband or by the defendant, that they intended to sever any antecedent status and to become thenceforward members of a divided family. Their conduct, which I shall refer to later on, negatives any such intention.

4th Issue:—This issue relates to the way in which the plaintiff's husband and the defendant treated the properties, which they got under the Will. On this part of the case, the evidence, I think, is clear that, after getting the decree in C. S. No. 163 of 1917, the plaintiff's husband and the defendant treated the properties as joint properties. It appears from the proceedings in C. S. No. 206 of 1918, which was filed by the sister of the defendant against the defendant and the plaintiff's husband, that all the parties proceeded on the footing that they were members of an undivided family. In the plaint, Ex. 25 the defendants are described as members of a joint undivided Hindu family and in the written statement, Ex. 26, the defendants admit this fact. A consent decree was passed and it has been filed as Ex. 27. The accounts produced by the National Bank of India and the Bank of Madras show that a joint account was opened in the names of the plaintiff's husband and the defendant. Exhibit 13 shows that the plaintiff's husband got a sum of Rs. 500 from Mr. Singarachariar, as remuneration for collecting a debt and he opened an account in the National Bank, Ex. 15. Defendant says that cheques were drawn and the moneys used for family expenses and out of that, a carriage was purchased from Lucas and Company, which both the brothers were using. A sum of Rs. 5,000 was jointly borrowed by them, from Mangammal Jessa Singh (see account books Exs. 9, 10 and 11). Out of this, a sum of Rs. 3,325 was remitted to the account of Goverdhanadoss and the balance was carried to a joint account, newly opened by the two brothers and the account goes on. The amount borrowed from Mangammal Jessa Singh is re-paid, out of the monies got from the National Bank, by the pledge of Government promissory notes Ex. 15, an extract from the National Bank accounts shows that a balance of Rs. 40-14-0 which was to the credit of the plaintiff's husband in his account was carried forward to the new account, Ex. 19, opened on the 25th of May 1917, in the names of both the brothers. Ex. 9, the cash-book, shows that the debt borrowed from Mangammal Jessa Singh was renewed on the 10th and 14th May 1917. Exhibit 15, the extract, shows that a sum of Rs. 3,325 was paid into the National Bank, out of the monies borrowed from Mangammal Jessa Singh; Ex. 9, also shows this. Monies were borrowed by both the brothers from the National Bank and Mangammal Jessa Singh was re paid. It appears from Ex. 20 that both the brothers got credit from the National Bank to a joint limit of Rs. 20,000 for over-drafts. Exhibit 19, the Pass Book, shows that the drawings and the payments were in their joint names. The cash-books and the ledger filed show clearly that there was only one joint account kept by the brothers, in respect of the family expenses and income. There is nothing to show that the brothers were even contemplating a separation of interest. The evidence of the defendant is that monies were borrowed jointly by pledge of their personal jewels, from Lakhur Krishnayya Vasa Baliah and Suklal; and the cash-book Ex. 9 contains details of such pledges; and the raising of monies. These debts were discharged by cheques on the National Bank, which were met out of the over-draft, obtained on Government promissory notes, which both the brothers got under the decree in C. S. No. 163 of 1917. Exhibit 20 is the letter from the Bank, showing that a joint account was opened and Ex. 21 series are letters from the Bank, in respect of the account. The ledger, Ex. 11, and the cash-book, Ex. 9, support the evidence of the defendant. Two accounts were opened in the Imperial Bank. There was a loan account, as appears from Ex. 22 series, under which the two brothers raised Rs. 15,000, on the 15th of March 1918, on the security of Government promissory Notes. Exhibit 19 is the Pass Book. There was also an account opened in 1917 and the letter to the Bank shows that the money was payable to either or survivor.

(10) 10 Ind. Cas. 285; 33 A. 344; 15 C. W. N. 497; 8 A. L. J. 465; 13 C. L. J. 519; 9 M. L. T. 507; 13 Bom. L. R. 404; 21 M. L. J. 637; 14 O. C. 133; 38 I. A. 104; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 242 (P. C.).

*Page of 33 A.—[Ed.]

The letters from the Bank are marked as Ex. 22 series. It also appears that the expenses of the brothers were treated as common expenses, there being nothing to show for whose benefit they were incurred. For example, medical expenses, expenses for plaintiff's seemanthan, expenses for the plaintiff's child, household expenses, are all entered in one account, without any indication, that they were to be attributable to each of the brothers, according as the expenses were incurred, for the one or the other. So far as the income from the properties is concerned, there is no distinction made. All the rents are brought into a common account and the expenses are met as I said before in common. Taxes are paid jointly and so far as the dealings with the Banks and the account-books go, there is no indication that the brothers ever intended to live, as members of a divided family and separate in status. On the contrary, all the indications point to their living as members of a joint family. We find joint loans from strangers, joint dealings with the Banks and joint pledges of Government promissory notes, which they got under the decree. We also find that the brothers carried on a joint jewel business and utilised the jewels, which they got under the decree for such business. There was joint lending and borrowing of money, by the brothers. Under these circumstances, I think that even if the brothers took the legacies, which they got under the Will, as tenants in common, they by their conduct threw them into a common stock and treated the properties as joint properties. In Rajani-kanta Pal v. Jagmohan Pal (41) their Lordships of the Privy Council deal with the case of mingling of properties and hold that self-acquired property may be impressed with the character of joint property, by its being dealt with as joint family property.

[Note:—The rest of the judgment is devoted to a discussion of facts and is, therefore, omitted.—Ed.]

V. N. V.

Order accordingly.

S. D.

(41) 73 Ind. Cas. 252; 50 C. 439; (1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 57; 44 M. L. J. 561; 32 M. L. T. 149; 25 Bom. L. R. 683; 37 C. L. J. 515; (1923) M. W. N. 438; 18 L. W. 387; 27 C. W. N. 997; 9 O. & A. L. R. 805; 50 I. A. 173 (P. C.).

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 43 of 1923.

April 25, 1924.

Present:—Mr Baker, J. C., and

Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

AGENT, G. I. P. RY. CO.—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS

versus

JASRUP SHRINATH—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 19, Sch. I, Art. 31—Suit against carrier to recover damages for non-delivery—Limitation—Suggestion to settle matter, whether extends limitation—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XLI, r. 1—Appeal—Copy of judgment not filed—Notice issued—Copy, whether dispensed with.

A suit against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of goods irrespective of whether failure to deliver is due to a tort or to a breach of contract is governed by Art. 31, Sch. I to the Limitation Act. [p. 136, col. 2.]

Mutsaddi Lal v. B. B. & C. I. Ry. Company, 58 Ind. Cas. 547; 42 A. 390; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 84; 18 A. L. J. 377, Jaldu Venkatasubba Rao v. The Asiatic Steam Navigation Co. of Calcutta, 30 Ind. Cas. 810; 39 M. 1; 29 M. L. J. 342; 2 L. W. 805; 18 M. L. T. 236; (1915) M. W. N. 644 (F. B.), G. I. P. Ry. Company v. Raisett Chandmull, 19 B. 165; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 112, Haji Ajam Goolam Hossein v. Bombay and Persia Steam Navigation Company, 26 B. 532; 4 Bom. L. R. 447, Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Ganpat Rai, 10 Ind. Cas. 122; 33 A. 514; 8 A. L. J. 513, Lal Mohan Hazra v. East Indian Railway Company, 70 Ind. Cas. 857; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 330, Indian General Navigation and Railway Co. v. Nanda Lal, 3 Ind. Cas. 469; 13 C. W. N. 851, Moti Ram v. East Indian Railway Co., 103 P. R. 1906; 2 P. L. R. 1907; 31 P. W. R. 1907 and Ali Mohamed v. The Great Indian Peninsular Railway Co., 31 Ind. Cas. 474; 11 N. L. R. 174, relied on.

Radha Sham Basak v. Secretary of State for India, 34 Ind. Cas. 130; 44 C. 16; 23 C. L. J. 517; 20 C. W. N. 790, distinguished.

A suggestion made by a defendant that the matter might be settled, headed "without prejudice," does not operate to extend limitation, as it cannot be treated as an admission of liability. [p. 137, col. 2.]

A memorandum of appeal stated that a copy of the judgment appealed against would be filed afterwards. The appeal was admitted on presentation and notice was ordered to be issued to respondent:

Held, that it must be taken that the Court had dispensed with a copy of the judgment. [ibid.]

Appeal against the judgment of the District Judge, Nimar, dated the 28th February 1923, in Civil Suit No. 3 of 1921.

Messrs. K. J. B. Kanga and A. V. Khare, for the Appellants.

Messrs. G. M. Gupta, S. B. Khale and N. V. Deo, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts in these two appeals are similar, and the points arising in both of them are the same and may be disposed of in one judgment, although the lower Court has written two separate judgments.

There is no dispute as to the facts which are set out in the judgments of the learned District Judge. Put briefly, they are that one Shamji Bhawanji had dealings in cotton with the plaintiffs' firms on which he was indebted to them. The plaintiffs in both suits were in possession of bales of cotton belonging to Shamji Bhawanji, 100 bales in the case of Jasrup Shrinath and 200 bales in the case of Radhakisan Jaikisan on account of the money due to them by Shamji Bhawanji, and the plaintiffs handed over these bales of cotton to the defendants G. I. P. Ry. for carriage to Bombay consigned to plaintiffs themselves and got the Railway receipts for them. But by a fraud, to which the Goods Clerk at Harda and Shamji Bhawanji were parties, bogus Railway receipts were issued by the Clerk in favour of Shamji Bhawanji although no goods were actually delivered. The marks on the bales were altered so as to make them correspond with the false Railway receipts and the bales were consigned to the firm of Arjun Khemji in Bombay, who took delivery of them, instead of to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs were thus deprived of the cotton, they had consigned, through the fraud of the Goods Clerk at Harda, who is a servant of the Railway Company. The fraud was promptly discovered and the matter was put in the hands of the Police. Criminal proceedings then ensued, with which we are not concerned. Out of the 300 bales 79 bales were sold by Arjun Khemji and ultimately under the orders of the Court all the bales were sold and the money was deposited in the Bank in the name of Arjun Khemji under an agreement between him and the Railway Company. The plaintiffs have brought these suits to recover the value of the cotton from the Railway Company.

The Railway Company have brought a suit in the High Court at Bombay against Arjun Khemji, which is still pending. It is admitted on behalf of the Railway Company that the plaintiffs have a lien on the goods, and it is also admitted, in view of the ruling in Sherjan Khan v. Alimuddi (1) following the decision of the House of Lords in Lloyd v. Grace Smith &

(1) 34 Ind. Cas. 598; 43 O. 511; 20 C. W. N. 268; 23 C. L. J. 225.

Co. (2) the Railway Company are liable for the fraud of their servant, the Goods Clerk.

The principal question in this case is that of limitation. It is contended on behalf of the Railway Company that the suits are governed by Art. 31 of the Limitation Act, and that limitation began to run in 1919 when the goods ought to have been delivered, and, therefore, the suits which were brought in 1921 are barred by limitation. The District Judge of Khandwa held that the suits were not barred by limitation, being governed by Arts. 115 and 48 of the Limitation Act, and awarded the plaintiffs Jasrup Shrinath Rs. 18,740-5-4 with interest from 11th April 1921 till the date of the decree, and the plaintiffs Radhakisan Jaikisan Rs. 37,480-10-8 with interest from 31st March 1921 till the date of the decree.

It is admitted that there has been conversion. The learned District Judge was of opinion that bogus receipts were issued and that the marks on the bales were altered, which took place at Harda. The conversion was complete before the goods left Harda and the defendant Company carried the goods not for the plaintiffs who had consigned them but for the person in whose favour the conversion had been effected, that is for Shamji Bhawanji; hence the defendants were not carriers for the plaintiffs and so Art. 31 of the Limitation Act has no application and the case falls under Art. 48, or viewed as a matter of contract there is a breach of contract by the defendants due to their failure to convey the goods on behalf of the plaintiffs to Bombay and hence the suit would fall under Art. 115 of the Limitation Act. In either case the suits are in time. It is contended by the learned Advocate-General, Bombay, who represents the appellants that all the High Courts are agreed that a suit against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of goods is governed by Art. 31 whether the non-delivery is due to conversion or to any other reason.

He relies on the following cases, Mutsaddi Lal v. B. B. and C. I. Ry. Company (3) in which it was held that the article applies to suits by a consignor or consignee. Jaldu Venkatasubba Rao v. The Asiatic Steam Navigation Co. of Calcutta (4) in which it was held by the Full Bench that by the amendment in 1899 of the Indian Limitation Act the Legislature clearly indicated its intention that Art. 31 should apply to a claim against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of goods irrespective of whether the suit was laid in contract or in tort. Article 49 is inapplicable to such a case and even if it were, its operation would be excluded by the provisions of the special Art. 13 as amended on the principle Generalia specialibus non-detrogant.

In G. I. P. Ry. Company v. Raisett Chandmull (5) Farran, J., expressed the opinion that the Legislature must have intended when in general terms limiting the responsibility of carriers to make compensation for loss of goods to two years after the loss, to make that time the outside period within which they could be sued, whether the claim was laid in tort or as arising out of contract, and that liberally interpreted almost all claims against a carrier, unless he were actually in possession of the goods uninjured are for loss of or injury to goods.

In Haji Ajam Goolam Hossein v. Bombay and Persia Steam Navigation Company (6) which was a claim for non-delivery, Art. 31 was applied: cf. also Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Ganpat Rai (7). The same view has been taken by the Calcutta High Court in Lal Mohan Hazra v. East Indian Railway Company (8) where it was held that a suit against a carrier for compensation for non-delivery of goods consigned to him is governed by Art. 31. Article 115 of the Act applies only to suits for compensation for breach of any contract specially provided for in the Act. This case follows the Indian General Navigation and Railway Co. v. Nanda Lal (9). The Punjab case is Moti Ram v. East Indian Railway Co. (10) where it was held that Art. 31 covers a suit for compensation for non-delivery, whether the failure to deliver was tortious or due to breach of contract. The same view was taken by this Court in Ali Mohamed v. The Great Indian Penin-

(2) (1912) A. C. 716; 81 L. J. K. B. 1140; 107 L. T. 531; 56 S. J. 723; 23 P. L. R. 547.

(3) 58 Ind. Cas. 547; 42 A. 390; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 84; 18 A. L. J. 377

(4) 30 Ind. Cas. 840; 39 M. 1; 29 M. L. J. 342; 2 L. W. 805; 18 M. L. T. 236; (1915) M. W. N. 644 (F. B.).

(5) 19 B. 165; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 112.

(6) 26 B. 562; 4 Bom. L. R. 447.

(7) 10 Ind. Cas. 122; 33 A. 544; 8 A. L. J. 543.

(8) 70 Ind. Cas. 857; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 330.

(9) 3 Ind. Cas. 469; 13 C. W. N. 851.

(10) 108 P. R. 1906; 2 P. L. R. 1907; 30 P. W. R. 1907.

sular Railway Co. (11). There is thus a consensus of opinion among all the High Courts as to the applicability of Art. 31 to all cases of non-delivery whether founded on tort or contract. The only case to the contrary is that in Radhe Sham Basak v. Secretary of State for India (12) where defendants denied the delivery of goods.

It has been contended on behalf of the respondents that their case is not one of non-delivery but of conversion and breach of contract, and that all cases quoted are cases of non-delivery. This, however, makes no real difference. The cause of action in this case is the defendant's failure to deliver the goods.

Non-delivery may be due to many causes of which conversion is one, but the cause of action is the non-delivery of the goods, whether due to loss, theft, destruction, conversion or misdelivery to somebody else. If the defendants had delivered the goods to the plaintiffs they would have no cause of action, even if the bales had been wrongly marked with the name of somebody else. Mr. Rustomji in his Commentary on the Limitation Act at page 292 differs from the opinion of Starling that all suits against carriers in respect of goods delivered to them for carriage fall under Arts. 30 and 31, but there seems to be no grounds for making such a distinction. As pointed out by one of the referring Judges in Jaldu Venkatasubba Rao v. The Asiatic Steam Navigation Co. of Calcutta (4) appears that the Legislature intended to provide exceptionally for the case of carriers on account of the difficulty of investigating and settling claims preferred against them after a long lapse of time in respect of a few articles out of the quantity of goods that are constantly passing through their hands.

We are, therefore, of opinion that Art. 31 applies to these cases whether based on tort or contract. The plaintiffs show that the suits are based on breach of contract.

It is contended on behalf of the respondents that assuming that Art. 31 applies, the suits are in time, as the date from which limitation is to be counted under that Article is when the goods ought to be delivered, which is an uncertain time, and if there is an agreement that the goods should remain longer with the carrier, limitation will be proportionately extended. The Railway Company were trying to get back the bales and were leading the plaintiffs to believe that delivery would be given. Reference is made to Jugal Kishore v. The Great Indian Peninsular Railway (13). In that case no time was fixed for the delivery of the goods and there was no refusal to deliver up to well within a year of the suit. In both the present suits the plaintiffs give certain dates in April 1919 as the dates when the goods ought to have been delivered, and damages were claimed on the basis of the price of cotton at Bombay at that date. Afterwards the market fell. The learned District Judge has referred to the Railway Company's letter of May 1919, but that is two years before the institution of the suits.

A subsequent suggestion made by defendants' Solicitors that the matter might be settled, headed "without prejudice," cannot operate to extend limitation. The Railway Company do not appear ever to have admitted their liability. The suits are, therefore, in our opinion, barred by limitation and must be dismissed.

It has been contended that the appeals should be rejected as they are not accompanied by copies of the judgment appealed against, as required by O. XLI, r. 1, C. P. C.

The memorandum of appeal in each case stated that the copy of judgment would be given afterwards, and as the appeals were admitted on presentation, notice being ordered to issue to the respondents, it must be taken that the Court dispensed with the copy of judgment. In any case this is a matter between the Court and the appellant.

The result is that the decrees of the lower Court in both cases must be set aside and the suits dismissed with costs. The plaintiffs may have their remedy against Arjun Khemji who actually received the goods and in whose possession the sale proceeds are, or against the defendants in another suit after recovery of the sale proceeds from Arjun Khemji.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

(13) 68 Ind. Cas. 981; 45 A. 43; 20 A. L. J. 792; 4 U. P. L. R. (A.) 219; (1923) A. I. R. (A.) 22.

(11) 31 Ind. Cas. 474; 11 N. L. R. 174.

(12) 34 Ind. Cas. 130; 44 O. 16; 23 O. L. J. 547; 20 O. W. N. 790.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1216 OF 1921.

September 26, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Devadoss.DRONAMRAJU LAKSHMI AND ANOTHER
—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS*versusIMMANI SESHAYYA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Mortgage, usufructuary—Term fixed for redemption—Mortgagee, failure of, to carry out terms of mortgage—Redemption before expiry of term, whether can be allowed—Accounts, basis of—Procedure—Appellate Court, whether can take notice of matters after institution of suit.

Where under the terms of a mortgage the mortgagee is asked to pay himself the principal and interest out of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property, he is entitled to remain in possession till the mortgage-debt is wiped off from the rents and profits of the property. [p. 139, col. 1.]

When a term is fixed in a usufructuary mortgage-deed and possession is given to the mortgagee, unless there be a clause in the mortgage-deed itself enabling the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage at any time he chooses, the mortgagee is entitled to remain in possession till the close of the term. In such a case it cannot be said that the term fixed in the mortgage-deed is only for the benefit of the mortgagor, it is equally for the benefit of the mortgagee as well as the mortgagor. [ibid.]

The presumption is that the right to redeem and the right to foreclose arise at the same time and where a date is fixed for the payment of the mortgage-debt and the mortgagee cannot foreclose earlier, the mortgagor also cannot redeem before the appointed time. [p. 139, col. 2.]

Where a mortgagee undertakes to pay out of the rents and profits of the land mortgaged to him a certain amount for the expenses of the mortgagor he is bound to carry out the term of the contract and when he undertakes to pay beriz on the land, his failure to pay it would amount to a breach of the contract as it would thereby expose the land to be attached and sold for arrears of beriz. In such a case if the mortgage-deed fixes a term for redemption, a Court of Equity will grant relief to the mortgagor and allow him to redeem the property before the expiry of the term. [p. 140, cols. 1 & 2.]

A mortgagee is not bound to accept the mortgage amount from the mortgagor if the latter tenders it before the expiry of the term fixed for redemption. But where the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged property, and unless there is a stipulation that all the rents and profits should be applied towards interest, whatever remains over and above the interest due on the mortgage amount is bound to be applied towards the reduction of the principal [p. 141, col. 1.]

In a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage the plaintiff is entitled to have an account taken of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property. No question of limitation arises in such a case. So long as the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee subsists, the mortgagee who is in possession of the mortgaged property is bound to account for the rents and profits of the land. But in taking the account, sums which the mortgagee should have paid to the mortgagor but has not paid, must be applied towards the reduction of the mortgage amount. [p. 142, cols. 1 & 2.]

Semble.—An Appellate Court can take cognizance of matters which have happened after the institution of a suit for the purpose, at any rate, of moulding the relief which the plaintiff is entitled to. This will, however, be done only in exceptional cases where it is necessary to prevent injustice or to avoid multiplicity of proceedings. [p. 141, col. 2.]

Case-law referred to.

Second appeal against the decree of the Court of the Additional Subordinate Judge, at Ellore, in A. S. No. 255 of 1920 (A. S. No. 271 of 1920, Sub-Court, Ellore), preferred against the decree of the Court of the Additional District Munsif, Tanuku, in O. S. No. 294 of 1918.

Mr. P. Somasundaram, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. Laxmanna, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—One Venkatarayudu Pantulu mortgaged the plaint properties to one Venkanna by two deeds, Exs. A and B, on the 2nd May 1865. The equity of redemption was sold by the Court in execution of a money-decree against the mortgagor and was purchased by the plaintiff. He has brought the suit for the redemption of the mortgage against the defendants who are the representatives of Venkanna alleging that the mortgage-debt has been discharged and that he is entitled to have an account taken of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property. The District Munsif held that the plaintiff was not entitled to redeem the mortgage as the term of 55 years fixed in the mortgage-deed had not expired and he gave a decree for a certain amount which under the mortgage the mortgagee undertook to pay to the mortgagor. The plaintiff appealed and the Subordinate Judge of Ellore dismissed the appeal. The plaintiff has preferred this second appeal.

The first contention is that he is entitled to redeem the mortgage before the expiry of the term, as the term is only for his benefit. Mr. Somasundaram, who appears for the appellant, contends that the presumption is that the term fixed in the mortgage-deed is always for the benefit of the mortgagor and that he is entitled to redeem the mortgage at any time he likes. When possession is given to the mortgagee and the mortgagee is asked to pay himself the interest on the mortgage amount from the rents and profits of the mortgaged property and when the rents and profits are liable to fluctuation, it cannot be said that the term fixed in the mortgage is only for the benefit of the mortgagor. In such a case the term is equally for the benefit of the mortgagee as well as the mortgagor. It is well settled that when a term is fixed in a usufructuary mortgage-deed and possession is given to the mortgagee, unless there be a clause in the mortgage-deed itself enabling the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage at any time he chooses, the mortgagee is entitled to remain in possession till the close of the term. Where the mortgagee is asked to pay himself the principal and interest out of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property, he is entitled to remain in possession till the mortgage-debt is wiped off from the rents and profits of the property. The appellant relied upon the case reported as Mashook Ameen Suzada v. Marem Reddy (1) as supporting his contention. The facts in that case, no doubt, are similar to the present. But what the learned Judge held in that case was that it was a mortgage and that the mortgagor was entitled to redeem the property. The case does not support the appellant's contention. In Sri Raja Setrucherla Ramabhadra Raju Bahadur v. Sri Raja Vairicherla Surianarayana Raju Bahadur (2), it was held that "where the parties agree that possession of the property shall be transferred to a mortgagee for a certain term, it may be inferred that they intended that redemption should be postponed till the end of the term, but the creation of the term is by no means conclusive on this point." Pamurlapati Ankivedu v. Samurlapati Subbiah (3) does not help the appellant. All that was held in that case was that a provision in the mortgage-deed whereby the mortgagee is to remain in possession after the payment of the mortgage-debt is unenforceable as it acts as a fetter upon the right to redeem. In Mohammad Sher Khan v. Raja Seth Swami Dayal (4) it was held that the provisions of s. 60 of the Transfer of Property Act were imperative and that the right of redemption cannot be taken away by any contract between the mortgagor and the mortgagee. Even an anomalous mortgage is subject to the provisions of s. 60.

The right of the mortgagor to redeem the mortgage is not disputed but the question is, when does the right to redeem accrue? In Bakhtawar Begam v. Husaini Khanam (5) their Lordships of the Privy Council held: "Ordinarily, and in the absence of a special condition entitling the mortgagor to redeem during the term for which the mortgage is created, the right of redemption can only arise on the expiration of the specified period. But there is nothing in law to prevent the parties from making a provision that the mortgagor may discharge the debt within the specified period and take back the property." In Tirugnana Sambandha Pandara Sannadhi v. Nallatambi (6) Muthusami Iyer, J., and Wilkinson, J., held "Having regard to ss. 60 and 62 of the Transfer of Property Act, the Legislature appears to have adopted the principle that in the absence of a stipulation to the contrary, the presumption is that the right to redeem and the right to foreclose arise at the same time, and that when a date is fixed for the payment of the mortgage-debt and the mortgagee cannot foreclose earlier, the mortgagor also cannot redeem before the appointed time." See also Gunnam Dorayya v. Vadapalli Ayyamacharyulu (7) and Aga Mahammadally Beg v. Chandragiri Venkatapayya (8).

In Ex. A the term fixed is 50 years and Ex. B extends the term by 5 years. So the period during which the mortgagee was entitled to remain in possession is 55 years from 1865. There is no provision in either of the deeds for the mortgagor redeeming the property before the expiry of 50 years and the appellant, therefore, is not entitled to ask for redemption of the mortgage merely on the ground that he has the equity of redemption.

The next point urged by Mr. Somasundaram is that the mortgagee has been guilty of a breach of contract and, therefore, he is entitled to sue for redemption before the expiry of the term fixed in the mortgage-deed. Under the contract evidenced by Ex. A it was agreed that the mortgagee should pay Rs. 60 to the mortgagor for his expenses, Rs. 95 towards beriz payable to

(1) 8 M. H. C. R. 31.

(2) 2 M. 314; 4 Ind. Jur. 500; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 489.

(3) 12 Ind. Cas. 382; 35 M. 744; 10 M. L. T. 256; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 231; 21 M. L. J. 1010.

(4) 66 Ind. Cas. 853; 44 A. 185; 30 M. L. T. 220; 9 O. L. J. 81; 42 M. L. J. 584; 25 O. C. 8; 20 A. L. J. 476; 35 C. L. J. 468; 24 Bom. L. R. 695; (1922) M. W. N. 378; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 17; 4 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 50; 28 C. W. N. 79; 49 I. A. 60 (P. O.).

(5) 23 Ind. Cas. 355; 36 A. 195 at p. 199; 18 O. W. N. 586; 26 M. L. J. 474; 12 A. L. J. 473; 19 C. L. J. 477; (1914) M. W. N. 411; 15 M. L. T. 389; 16 Bom. L. R. 314; 1 L. W. 813; 41 I. A. 84 (P. C.).

(6) 16 M. 486; 2 M. L. J. 272; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1015.

(7) 25 Ind. Cas. 797; 27 M. L. J. 295 at p. 293; 16 M. L. T. 226; (1914) M. W. N. 618.

(8) 48 Ind. Cas. 379; 35 M. L. J. 287.

the Sircar, and Rs. 4 for village expenses and should apply the balance of the income of the property, namely, Rs. 80 towards the liquidation of his debt, and the debt should be liquidated in the course of 55 years. It is contended by Mr. Somasundaram that the mortgagee failed to pay Rs. 60 to the mortgagor as agreed to by him and failed also for several years to pay the beriz of Rs. 95 and also the amount payable for village expenses and, therefore, there having been a breach of contract on the part of the mortgagee, the plaintiff is entitled to redeem the mortgage. When the parties to a mortgage agree to certain terms it is the duty of both parties to adhere to the terms of the mortgage. In this case the mortgagee undertook to pay annually Rs. 60 to the mortgagor for his expenses and it is admitted that he did not pay this amount to him. The contention of Mr. Lakshmananna for the respondent is that the mortgagor was entitled to sue for Rs. 60 in case of default and he is not entitled to treat the non-payment of Rs. 60 or failure to pay Rs. 60 per annum as a breach of the contract between the parties and he relies upon the clause in the document: "If the amount of Rs. 60 payable to me every year is not paid in any year, you should relinquish a portion in proportion to the kist payable to me." He urges that it was open to the mortgagor to have asked the mortgagee to relinquish a portion of the land capable of yielding Rs. 60 and if the latter declined to do so the former should have brought a suit for the amount and he is not entitled to treat the default to pay Rs. 60 as a breach of the condition in the mortgage-deed. I am unable to accept this contention. Where the mortgagee undertakes to pay out of the rents and profits of the land mortgaged to him a certain amount for the expenses of the mortgagor he is bound to carry out the term of the contract and when he undertakes to pay beriz on the land, his failure to pay it would amount to a breach of the contract as it would thereby expose the land to be attached and sold for arrears of beriz. In this case, the mortgagee undertook to pay 3 different sums for 3 different purposes and he not having paid those sums as agreed to by him, I think it is equitable that he should not be allowed to insist upon one of the terms of the mortgage-deed being given effect to when he himself gives a go-by to the other terms of the deed. The mortgagee remaining in possession for a number of years is in consideration of his not only applying a portion of the rents and profits towards his debt but also in consideration of his meeting certain demands which ought to be met out of the income of the property. In a case like this, I think, a Court of Equity ought to give relief to the mortgagor and allow him to redeem the property before the expiry of the term.

I am supported in this view by the observations of Richards, C. J. and Bannerji, J. in Chhatku Rai v. Buldeo Shukul (9): "We think that on equitable grounds the defendants not having performed what we deem to be a most essential part of the contract so far as they are concerned, the plaintiffs ought to be allowed to redeem the property before the expiration of the period of 10 years." No doubt the facts in that case are not very similar to those of the present. There the mortgagees failed to discharge prior encumbrances which they had undertaken to discharge and they having been in possession of the mortgaged property, and in receipt of rents and profits thereof allowed interest to accumulate in respect of the encumbrance. The learned Judges held that "if the mortgagees were allowed to remain in possession of the property over the full period of 10 years taking the profits, the plaintiff will be without any proper or effectual remedy." The principle of the decision is applicable to the present case. Mr. Lakshmananna contends that the mortgagor should have enforced payment of the amount payable to him by a suit. I do not think that the mortgagor should have been driven to file a suit year after year for the recovery of the amount payable to him by the mortgagee, nor was he bound to pay beriz on the land year after year and bring a suit every year against the defendant for the amount paid by him. In order to show that both mortgagors and mortgagees should carry out the terms of the contract embodied in the mortgage-deed I may refer to the case in Seaton v. Twyford (10). Sir James Bacon, V. C., observed as follows: "The mortgagor who stipulates that he shall have 5 years to pay the mortgage-money must of necessity, whether it is expressed or not, undertake at the same time that, if he fails to do that which is incumbent upon him during the period of 5 years to do, the restriction upon the mortgagee shall thereupon cease." In India the non-payment of interest by the mortgagor to the mortgagee is not a sufficient ground for the mortgagee to bring a suit for sale before the expiry of the period fixed for payment of the principal but the decision shows that both parties should carry out the terms of the contract entered into by them.

(9) 17 Ind. Cas. 340; 34 A. 659 at p. 662; 10 A. L. J. 330.

(10) (1871) 11 Eq. Cas. 591; 40 L. J. Ch. 122; 23 L. T. 648; 19 W. R. 200.

If the mortgage amount has been paid off, the right to redeem accrues, and if a suit for redemption is not brought within the statutory period it will be barred. The Privy Council held in Bakhtawar Begum v. Husaini Khanum (5) that a suit for redemption was barred inasmuch as it was alleged by the plaintiff that the mortgage-debt became satisfied in 1838. The mortgagee not having paid the amount payable to the mortgagor, was bound to apply that amount in reduction of the mortgage-debt. When the mortgagee is in possession of funds arising from the rents and profits of the mortgaged premises, he is entitled to pay himself first the interest on the mortgage amount and whatever remains over and above he is bound to apply towards the reduction of the capital. The mortgagee is not bound to accept the mortgage amount from the mortgagor if he tenders it before the expiry of the term. But where he is in possession of the mortgaged property, and unless there is a stipulation that all the rents and profits should be applied towards interest, whatever remains over and above the interest due on the mortgage amount is bound to be applied towards the reduction of the principal. This is clear from Thompson v. Hudson (11). In that case Lord Romilly, M. R., held that when the mortgagees received a considerable sum of money by sale of a portion of the mortgaged property they were not entitled to charge interest on the whole of the principal amount mortgaged and keep the amount realized by sale in their hands. He held that that sum should have been applied in part payment of the mortgage amount. I may refer in this connection to an observation of Mr. Justice Mahmood in Jaijit Rai v. Gobind Tiwari (12). "By a long course of decisions it has been settled in India that even a special agreement to the effect that the mortgagee shall remain in possession until payment of the debt is made in one sum does not prevent the mortgage from being at an end whenever the mortgagee has realized both the principal and interest from the usufruct. This rule, though it probably originated in the express provisions of the old Regulations, is so consonant with equity that it deserves recognition by the Courts, even irrespective of statutory provisions".

It was next urged by Mr. Somasundram that the term of 55 years expired in 1920 after the decree in the District Munsif's Court and before the appeal was filed in the District Court and he is, therefore, entitled to ask for an account. In the view I have taken of the right of the mortgagor to ask for redemption, I do not think it is necessary to discuss this point in detail. In Sethrucherla Rama Chandra v. Maharajah of Jeypore (13) the learned Judges observe: "It has been held in several cases that the Appellate Court can take cognizance of matters which happened after the institution of the suit for the purpose, at any rate, of moulding the relief which the plaintiff was entitled to.... This will be done only in exceptional cases, where it is necessary to prevent injustice or avoid multiplicity of proceedings." Mr. Lakshmanan relies upon Ramanadan Chetti v. Pulikutti Servai (14) and Govinda v. Perumdevi (15) and contends that what happened subsequent to the institution of the suit should not be taken as a ground for giving relief to the plaintiff. In Govinda v. Perumdevi (15) the plaintiff sued for a declaration that a certain alienation made by a widow was invalid. Pending the appeal the widow died. He applied to amend the plaint by adding a prayer for possession. The Court held that it could not give permission to amend the plaint. In Ramanadan Chetti v. Pulikutti Servai (14) the person who acquired the lessor's title brought a suit to eject certain trespassers from the leasehold property. Pending the appeal, the term of the lease expired. He asked leave to amend the plaint pending the appeal by (11) (1870) 10 Eq. Cas. 497; 40 L. J. Ch. 28; 23 L. T. 278; 18 W. R. 1081.

(12) 6 A. 303 at p. 308; A. W. N. (1884) 92; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 944.

(13) 34 Ind. Cas. 411; (1916) 1 M. W. N. 354; 19 M. L. T. 360.

(14) 24 M. 288; 8 M. L. J. 121; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 559.

(15) 12 M. 136; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 444.

adding a prayer for possession. The Court held that such an amendment could not be granted. In the two cases there were two causes of action. The cause of action on which the suit was based was one and a different cause of action arose when the appeal was pending. But here the cause of action is the same, namely, the right of the plaintiff to redeem the mortgage. The plaintiff asks for redemption on the ground that the mortgage has been discharged and now the term having expired pending the appeal he relies upon that and says he is entitled to redeem. Possession of the mortgaged properties has been given to the plaintiff. So the question of redemption of the mortgaged properties is only of an academic interest. The real question is whether he is entitled to an account. It would not be right to drive the plaintiff to another suit for the purpose of taking an account on the ground that on the date of the suit the term of the mortgage had not expired. But as I have already held that the mortgagor was entitled to bring a suit on the date of the discharge of the mortgage amount, the contention of the respondent that the plaintiff is not entitled to rely upon what happened subsequent to the institution of the suit need not be considered.

The plaintiff is entitled to have an account taken of the rents and profits of the mortgaged premises. There is no question of limitation arising in the case. So long as the relationship of the mortgagor and mortgagee subsists, the mortgagee who is in possession of the mortgaged premises is bound to account for the rents and profits of the land. Vide, Parasurama Pattar v. Venkatachalam Pattar (16). It was observed in that case: "So long as the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee continues, the obligation of the mortgagee to make all payments provided in the mortgage-deed also subsists. At the time of redemption, when the mortgagor is required to pay the amount due by him under the mortgage, the mortgagee is also bound to give him credit for all payments which he is bound to make under it". See also Jaijit Rai v. Gobind Tiwari (12). The plaintiff is entitled to be given credit for all the sums received by the mortgagee. His contention is that the mortgage was discharged so far back as 1887. The amounts which the mortgagee undertook to pay the mortgagor and to the zamindar and for village expenses should be applied in taking an account towards the reduction of the principal amount of the mortgage. See in this connection Ram Avatar v. Tulsi Prosad Singh (17).

It was feebly urged by Mr. Lakshman that the amount of Rs. 60 was a personal allowance and the plaintiff as an auction-purchaser of the equity of redemption was not entitled to get that amount. There is nothing in the document, Ex. A, to show that Rs. 60 payable to the mortgagor was a personal allowance. That amount was agreed to be paid by the mortgagee as only a portion of the rents and profits was sufficient for liquidating the debt, and the plaintiff who has purchased the equity of redemption is entitled to rely upon the terms of the document. I do not think there is any thing in this contention. The plaintiff is entitled to the amount of Rs. 60 payable to the mortgagor in whose shoes he stands.

The plaintiff is entitled to have an account taken of the sums received by the mortgagee. I set aside the decree of the lower Courts and direct the District Munsif to take an account of the rents and profits of the mortgaged property. In taking the account, sums payable by the mortgagee should be applied towards the liquidation of the mortgage amount and after the date of the discharge of the mortgage amount, the mortgagee is liable for the rents and profits to the mortgagor. The plaintiff is entitled to the costs of this appeal, and to the costs in the lower Courts.

The memorandum of objections having been posted to be spoken to this day, the Court delivered the following

JUDGMENT.—The memorandum of objections is dismissed.

Appellant is entitled to refund of Court-fee paid in this Court.

V. N. V.

Decree set aside;

Z. K.

Memo. of objections dismissed.

(17) 11 Ind. Cas. 713; 14 C. L. J. 507; 16 C. W. N. 137.

(16) 21 Ind. Cas. 701; 25 M. L. J. 561; (1918) M. W. N. 198.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL CASE No. 1560 OF 1921.

March 3, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Jai Lal.SALIGRAM AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—APPELLANTS

versus

MOHAN LAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Alienation of family property—Repairs to family dwelling house—Necessity.

Money required for the purpose of effecting repairs to the family dwelling house is required for a necessary purpose which would justify an alienation of family property. In such a case the alienee is not required to have an estimate prepared of the sum required for the proposed repairs. If the evidence shows that on making enquiries the alienee was satisfied that repairs were about to be made, any sum reasonably necessary for such repairs would be regarded as having been advanced for necessity. [p. 144, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decree of the Senior Sub-Judge, Lahore, dated the 10th March 1921.

Lala Fakir Chand and Mr. M. N. Mukerji,
for the Appellants.

Messrs. Anant Ram and Jagan Nath
Agarwal, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On the 6th of August 1914 one Seth Shib Das, a clerk in the Railway Audit Department, borrowed a sum of Rs. 5,000 on a mortgage of two houses, from Pandit Jia Lal and Mohan Lal, father and son. It was represented to them that the money was needed to pay a prior mortgage held by the Lahore Bank Limited, and to execute certain repairs to the property mortgaged. On the same date Shib Das executed a rent deed agreeing to be the mortgagee's tenant of the property mortgaged and to pay a sum of Rs. 45 per mensem as rent, that amount being the equivalent of the interest payable under the mortgage-deed which was at the rate of 9 per cent. The mortgage-deed also contained a clause that if three months' interest had not been paid, from the date of default, the interest payable would be at the rate of Rs. 1-2-0 per cent. per mensem.

On the 13th of November 1919 the mortgagees instituted a suit against the mortgagor for recovery of Rs. 6,000 principal and Rs. 3,342-8-0 interest due under the mortgage-deed. Credit had been given for Rs. 640, which had been paid by Seth Shib Das. The defence set up by Shib Das was that the loan was not a loan at all, but that he had been duped into signing these documents by the mortgagees who had entered into an agreement to join him (Shib Das) in certain satta (gambling). Later Shib Das' two sons, one a major and the other a minor, also desired to be impleaded and were impleaded. The plea they set up was that their father was a grossly immoral, debauchee, a whoremonger and a gambler and that the mortgaged property, being ancestral, was not chargeable with the payment of the amount claimed by the mortgagee.

The following issues were settled on the pleadings:—

(1) Was the mortgage in suit executed without consideration?

(2) Was the debt raised by defendant No. 1 Shib Das for family purposes or legal necessity?

(3) Is the debt tainted with immorality?

(4) What relief, if any, is the plaintiff entitled to?

(5) Is the rate of interest penal?

Later a sixth issue was added:—

(6) Whether the houses in suit are ancestral?

The parties led evidence and the learned Subordinate Judge found that full consideration had passed, that the houses were ancestral, that the enhanced interest was not penal, that the debt due to the prior mortgagee and a sum of Rs. 250 were chargeable to the property and granted the plaintiff a decree accordingly.

The decree as drawn up showed the principal amount due to be Rs. 4,579-8-3; interest Rs. 3,067-9-4 and costs Rs. 690 or a total of Rs. 8,337-1-7. This amount was declared to be due under the mortgage and it was directed that it should be paid by the 10th day of September 1921. On payment the plaintiffs were ordered to deliver up to the defendants or some other person properly appointed by him and entitled thereto all the documents and title-deeds in their possession relating to the mortgage property. Further it was ordered that if the payment was not made by the date fixed, the mortgaged property or so much of it as might prove sufficient, was to be sold and the proceeds of the sale paid into Court and applied in payment of the amount declared to be due. Finally it was ordered that if the net proceeds of the sale were insufficient to pay the amount due and any subsequent interest and costs in full, the plaintiffs would be at liberty to apply for a personal decree for the amount of the balance against Shib Das alone who was declared personally liable under the decree to pay Rs. 3,422-6-8.

Against this decree the mortgagor and his two sons have filed a joint appeal while the mortgagees have filed cross objections in respect of the sum of Rs. 1,250 and interest thereon disallowed by the Court. On behalf of the appellants we have heard Mr. Fakir Chand while Mr. Jagan Nath has represented the mortgagees.

Admittedly the amount due and paid to the Lahore Bank cannot now be examined and Mr. Fakir Chand confined his attack to the sum of Rs. 250. This sum of Rs. 250 was a portion of Rs. 1,500 which had been paid by the mortgagees to the mortgagor in the presence of the Registrar at the time of registration. As stated above the necessity for this payment was stated in the mortgage-deed to be for business purposes and for building a house and purchasing land adjoining the house. When the two mortgagees were examined in Court as witnesses the son, Mohan Lal, frankly admitted that he had no personal knowledge of the matter but stated that he had been told by his father that the defendant Shib Das needed the money for repairs, alterations, etc. Pandit Jia Lal himself has sworn that this sum of Rs. 1,500 was given for repairs and for no other purposes. Ramji Das (P. W. No. 3), a broker, has stated that this transaction was negotiated by him and that the defendant Shib Das had already applied to the Municipality for sanction to construct a barsati. The learned Subordinate Judge has allowed Rs. 250 only on the ground that although barsati or sabat had been erected, one witness alone had stated that it had cost Rs. 250. Mr. Fakir Chand cited Girdhari Lal v. Kishen Chand (1). In our judgment that authority supports the contention of the respondents. There can be no doubt that repairs to a house would be regarded as "necessity" for the purposes of a suit of this nature. It is in evidence that the mortgagor, the father and head of the joint family, had represented that repairs to the building and the erection of a barsati were necessary. It would be exceedingly difficult for any person advancing money for repairs to a building to be called upon to have an estimate prepared of the sum required for the proposed repairs. It is in evidence and we believe this evidence that enquiries were made and that it had been discovered that repairs were actually going to be made and that an application had been made to the Municipality for sanction. In these circumstances we are unable to agree with the Court below in its finding that only Rs. 250 can be allowed as a charge on the property. In our judgment the whole of this amount must be allowed.

So far as the interest is concerned, although we are unable to see that the enhanced rate amount to a penalty, as Mr. Jagan Nath expresses himself, content with the original rate of 9 per cent. we fix the interest at that rate.

The appeal is, therefore, dismissed, and the cross-objections are accepted. The plaintiff will be granted a decree for Rs. 6,000 principal, and interest from the date of the mortgage-deed to the 3rd of September 1925 at the rate of 9 per cent. together with costs thereon.

It has been brought to our notice by Mr. Fakir Chand that the costs allowed in the decree are less than the proper amount claimable. Out of the total sum, Rs. 640 admittedly paid will be deducted and the balance will be payable on or before the 3rd day of September 1925. On payment the plaintiffs will deliver up to the defendants, or such persons as they appoint, all documents in their possession or power relating to the mortgaged property. In the event of the payment not being made on or before the said date, the mortgaged property, or such portion of it as may suffice, shall be sold. The proceeds of the sale, after defraying the expenses of the sale shall be paid into Court and applied in payment of the amount declared due to the plaintiff as stated above, together with any subsequent interest and costs that may have accrued or have been incurred. Finally, if the net proceeds of the sale are insufficient to pay such amount and such subsequent interest and costs in full, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to apply for a personal decree for the amount or the balance against Shib Das alone. Future interest will be payable, in the event of the decretal amount not having been paid by the date fixed at the rate of 9 per cent. until realization.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 85 Ind. Cas. 463; 5 L. 511; (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 240.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 317-B of 1923.

February 26, 1924.

Present :—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

BHAGWANTRAO—ACCUSED—APPLICANT
versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 176—Persons legally bound to give information to Police—Omission by some of such persons, whether offence.

The fact that some persons bound to give information have given that information while other persons who might be bound to give that information have omitted to do so, is no ground for their prosecution and conviction under s. 176 of the Penal Code.

Empress v. Sashi Bhusan Chuckrabutty, 4 C. 623; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 395, Queen-Empress v. Gopal Singh, 20 C. 316; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 214 and In re Pandya Nayak, 7 M. 436; 1 Weir 102; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 888, referred to.

Application for revision of an order of the Sessions Judge, Amraoti, dated the 25th September 1923, in Criminal Appeal No. 220 of 1923.

Mr. K. K. Gandhe, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—The learned Pleader who appeared for the applicant has very ably argued the question of fact as well as of law. On the question of fact I do not think the Trial Court was wrong in drawing the conclusion that the accused knew of the movements of Shankaria. The lower Appellate Court has, however, held that the accused knew of Shankaria's hiding place. I do not think the evidence on record supports this conclusion. There is no evidence to bring knowledge of the particular hiding place, namely, the kadbi stack, home to the accused.

The complaint was laid as imputing to the accused knowledge of the particular hiding place but the evidence falls short of it. The accused was charged for having intentionally omitted to give information which he was legally bound to give to the Police. The accused was not called upon to answer the charge with reference to the particular hiding place where Shankaria was found and re-arrested. Although I am not prepared to uphold the Sessions Judge's finding that the accused had knowledge of the particular hiding place, namely, the kadbi stack, still I agree with the Trial Court in holding that the accused was aware of the movements and visits of Shankaria to the village, and in fact he had interviews with Shankaria. I, therefore, think that there was technical omission on his part to give the information which he was legally bound to give to the Police. But this is not sufficient to convict him.

The next question is whether he intentionally omitted to do so. The prosecution evidence shows that this information was known to several people. The Police also had this information as we find from P. W. No. 1's deposition. The particular hiding place may not have been known to Police until 31st July 1922, but that does not mean that the Police had no information, on the contrary it appears that they had. Under such circumstances the principle underlying the cases reported as Empress v. Sashi Bhusan Chuckrabutty (1), Queen-Empress v. Gopal Singh (2) and In re Pandya Nayak (3), that the fact that some persons bound to give information have given that information while other persons who might be bound to give that information have omitted to do so, was no ground for their prosecution and conviction under s. 176, Indian Penal Code, ought to be applied to this case. I, therefore, give the benefit of this principle to the accused in the particular circumstances of this case.

The accused has been the Patel for the last several years and this is the first omission so far as I could gather from the record for which he is charged. I, therefore, see no valid reasons for upholding the conviction and the sentence which are hereby set aside. The fine, if recovered, may be refunded to the accused.

G. R. D.

Conviction set aside.

K. S. D.

(1) 4 C. 623; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 395.

(2) 20 C. 316; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 214.

(3) 7 M. 437; 1 Weir 102; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 888.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No 108 of 1925.

April 20, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Abdul Raoof and Mr Justice Fforde.SAJJAN SINGH—CONVICT—APPELLANT
versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 33—Deposition of witness made before Committing Magistrate, whether admissible at trial—Death of witness, proof of—First Information Report based on hearsay, value of—Admission of guilt by several persons, proof of—General statement, value of.

Where the deposition of a witness made before the Committing Magistrate is sought to be admitted in evidence at the trial in the Sessions Court, under s. 33 of the Evidence Act, the death of the witness must be first proved. In the absence of such proof the statement is not admissible in evidence under s. 33. [p. 146, col. 2.]

A First Information Report based entirely on hearsay cannot be tendered in evidence by the prosecution. [ibid.]

A First Information Report can only be used by the prosecution for the purpose of corroborating in the witness-box the person who supplied the information contained in the report. Where, however, the person who gave the First Information Report can himself only speak from hearsay, the report cannot be used to corroborate such inadmissible evidence. [p. 146, col. 2; p. 147, col. 1.]

A general statement by a witness that a number of persons admitted having committed a crime is valueless without some indication as to which of the persons made the admission in question with some particulars of what was actually said. [p. 147, col. 1.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge, Ferozepore, dated the 20th November 1924.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Abdul Rashid, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant, Sajjan Singh, has been convicted of murder under the provisions of s. 302 of the Indian Penal Code, and has been sentenced to death.

The story for the prosecution is shortly as follows:—On the 12th of July 1923, Sohan Singh and Pakhar Singh were ploughing their fields. Waryam Singh was engaged nearby in erecting a fence round his sugar-cane field. Sohan Singh and Pakhar Singh engaged in an altercation with Waryam Singh in the course of which Pakhar Singh threw a clod of earth at Waryam Singh. Mangal Singh, son of Wazir Singh, who was ploughing his field in the vicinity, came up to the altercants and separated them. Having done so he returned to his field which is at a distance of 200 karams from the place of altercation. Shortly afterwards Thakar Singh arrived with food for Pakhar Singh and Sohan Singh, and Amar Singh also arrived bringing food for his father Waryam Singh. Amar Singh was then told by Waryam Singh to go to the village and bring assistance, whereupon the former left on that errand. Within an hour of the departure of Amar Singh, Sajjan Singh appellant, Bhan Singh, Mehnga Singh, Pahara Singh and Pal Singh came on to the scene. Five of them were armed with gandas and one of them, Pahara Singh was armed with a saila. These six men fell upon Thakar Singh, Pakhar Singh and Sohan Singh, inflicting such injuries that Sohan Singh and Pakhar Singh died on the spot, and Thakar Singh subsequently expired in the house of Mangal Singh having walked there with the aid of Mangal Singh.

This is the Crown case as presented by Mangal Singh, witness No. 4 for the prosecution. In addition to this witness the Court below has accepted the statement by another Mangal Singh, son of Sangat Singh, which was made before the Committing Magistrate. The learned Sessions Judge stated in his judgment that this witness had died before the case came to the Sessions Court and he purports to have admitted the statement under the provisions of s. 32 of the Indian Evidence Act. It is obvious that the statement in question could not have been admitted under any of the provisions of this section of the Evidence Act, and the learned Sessions Judge must have intended to rely upon s. 33 for its admission. Section 33 would have been applicable if the death of the witness whose deposition was sought to be admitted had been first proved. In the present case there was no such proof, and accordingly the statement is not admissible and must be excluded from consideration.

The Trial Judge has also relied upon the statements contained in a document described as the First Information Report. This document records an account of the crime given by a certain Khetu to the Police and taken down by Sub-Inspector Magha Ram. The information contained in this document is entirely based on hearsay and has been so described by the Trial Judge in his judgment. It is obvious that such a document cannot be tendered in evidence for the prosecution. Khetu, who was called as a witness, does not purport to know anything of the circumstances of the crime at first hand. He alleges that he obtained his information from Sundar Singh, a lambardar and he adds that Sundar Singh told him that he had not seen the murders with his own eyes but had heard of the same. It appears, therefore, that not only is this First Information Report based upon information which was hearsay, but the person from whom the informant obtained his knowledge had himself gained it from others. This is a glaring example of the improper use made in this province of a First Information Report. As such a document could only be used by the prosecution for the purpose of corroborating in the witness box the person who supplied the information contained in the document, it ought to be fairly obvious that if the informant himself can only speak from hearsay, the report cannot be used to corroborate such inadmissible evidence. I may mention that Sundar Singh, who is stated to have supplied the information upon which the First Information Report was based, was not called as a witness.

A number of other witnesses were produced by the prosecution who testify to statements made by the alleged murderers after the crime had been completed. These witnesses say that the six alleged assailants whose names have been mentioned returned to the village after the crime, and shouted out threats to certain persons saying at the same time that they had already killed Thakar Singh, Pakhar Singh and Sohan Singh. The witnesses do not say which of these six persons made the incriminating statement, but speak as if the six men shouted in chorus. Nobody says that the appellant Sajjan Singh made any statement amounting to an admission of the crime; and even if it were clearly established that one or more of the other five had admitted the murders, such admission could not be used as evidence against the appellant unless and until it had been shown that all six persons had conspired to commit the crime. There is no evidence of any such conspiracy. Moreover, a general statement by a witness that a number of persons admitted having committed a crime, is valueless without some indication as to which of the persons made the admission in question with some particulars of what was actually said.

Apart from the evidence of the medical witness, who has given details of the injuries sustained by the victims of the crime, the only evidence which we can legally consider is that of Mangal Singh, son of Wazir Singh. According to him he not only saw the crime committed but saw the appellant and one Bhan Singh assault Sohan Singh. If this evidence is to be believed the appellant, undoubtedly, took part in the crime and whether he did or did not cause the death of one of the victims, he would be liable under s. 34 of the Indian Penal Code as an abettor, for it is obvious that the common intention of the assailants was to kill the three men in view of the nature of the weapons with which they armed themselves and the circumstances of the affair. There are, however, certain discrepancies in the evidence of Mangal Singh which throw considerable doubt upon the truth of his narrative of the crime. He purports in his evidence in-chief to have heard Waryam Singh tell his son to go to the village and send men to his assistance, but in cross-examination he admits that after stopping the altercation he went back to his field and, as his field is at a distance of 200 karams from the scene, it is obvious that he could not have heard Waryam Singh's orders to his son. It is perfectly clear from the whole of his evidence that after the first altercation was over he went back to his own work and did not come again to the scene of the fight until the assailants arrived. This witness also admits in cross-examination that he did not make any statement to the thanadar about the murderers when Thakar Singh's dead body was removed to his house. Nor did he speak to any one about the occurrence which he is alleged to have witnessed. He says that his son saw the fight in the fields, but his son was not produced as a witness.

I do not think it will be safe to convict the appellant on the sole testimony of this witness, and, I would accordingly accept the appeal and set aside the conviction and sentence.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 375 OF 1925.

August 20, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.
EMPEROR—PROSECUTOR

versus

BALDEO—PRISONER—APPELLANT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 300, 302—Death caused by injury sufficient in course of nature to cause death—Murder.

Where death is caused by an injury which is in fact sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, the person responsible for having caused the injury is guilty of murder. [p. 148, col. 1.]

Appeal against an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Kheri, dated the 5th May 1925.

The Government Pleader, for the Crown.
JUDGMENT.—Three persons, Raghu-nandan, Hardwari and Baldeo were tried under s. 302, Indian Penal Code, for murder and also under s. 392/397, or in the alternative s. 394, Indian Penal Code. Raghunandan was acquitted. Hardwari and Baldeo were convicted under s. 392/397, Indian Penal Code, and were sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for seven years each. All three were acquitted on the charge of murder.

The facts are that on the 10th September 1924, in the evening Tirbeni and his son Ram Bilas were returning to Nighasan from Bamhanpur, where they had gone to sell cloth. They carried the cloth in two bales on a pony which was being ridden by Tirbeni. Ram Bilas was walking on foot. When they reached a grove near Durgapur, the three accused, two of whom were armed with spears and one with a lathi, came out of the jungle and beat Tirbeni and got away with the cloth. Ram Bilas ran to Nighasan, and from there some one went to the thana and reported the matter, while others went back with Ram Bilas to the spot. They found that Tirbeni had one of his arms broken and had injuries on his head. When the Sub-Inspector reached the spot, he sent Tirbeni to the thana where he died shortly after his arrival. The post-mortem shows a fracture of the skull which was the cause of death. The two appellants Hardwari and Baldeo are identified by Ram Bilas. There is some other evidence, but I should be quite prepared to uphold the conviction on this identification. There is no reason to doubt the story of Ram Bilas.

The point which has occupied my mind is whether acquittal on the charge of murder ought to be allowed to stand. The learned Judge has said "Tirbeni died in consequence of the fracture of the skull caused by a lathi blow. The robbers could have no intention of causing death or of causing such injury which they knew would cause death. Therefore I think the charge under s. 302, Indian Penal Code, cannot be laid against the them."

This is a misapprehension of law. If the robbers intended to cause an injury, which was in fact sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, they committed murder. If s. 300, meant that the person inflicting the injury must contemplate the death of his victim it would be superfluous and redundant. What is meant is shown by Illustration (c) which is as follows:—

"A intentionally gives Z a sword-cut or club-wound sufficient to cause the death of a man in the ordinary course of nature. Z died in consequence. Here A is guilty of murder although he may not have intended to cause Z's death."

This is the present case. One of these robbers intentionally gave Tirbeni a club-wound sufficient to cause the death of a man in the ordinary course of nature, and that person was guilty of murder. The reason why I do not propose to refer the matter to a Bench is that there appears to be no evidence which of the robbers it was who committed the murder, and the case is not, in my opinion, one in which all the robbers would be responsible.

The appeals are dismissed.

Z. K.

Appeals dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 1021 of 1923.

December 15, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith
and Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

NUR MUHAMMAD AND ANOTHER—
APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 25—Confessional statement recorded as First Information Report, admissibility of.

If after committing a murder the murderer proceeds straight to the Police Station and there makes a confessional statement, which is recorded as the First Information Report, the statement is inadmissible in evidence as being a confession made to the Police. [p. 149, col. 1.]

Criminal appeal from an order of the Sessions Judge, Dera Ghazi Khan.

Messrs. Sagar Chand and B. A. Cooper, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—Nur Muhammad and Ali Muhammad have been convicted by the Sessions Judge of Dera Ghazi Khan of the murder of Usman and have been sentenced to death. They have appealed to this Court through Counsel. There has been no appearance on behalf of the Crown. The facts are very clear. Usman was stabbed to death near the thana of Dajal at noon on the 3rd June 1923. There is one eye witness Chetan (P. W. No. 2) but having regard to the fact that he has made different statements at different times it would not be safe to rely upon his evidence. The same, however, does not apply to the evidence of Siya Ram, Kewal Ram and Jamnu Ram (P. W. Nos. 3, 4 and 5) who saw Usman falling after having been stabbed and the two appellants running away with blood-stained clothes on their persons. Kewal Ram did not know the appellants before and there is no evidence to the effect that he picked them out at an identification parade and it would, therefore, be perhaps not safe to put much reliance upon his evidence. Immediately after the murder the appellants went and gave themselves up at the Dajal thana which is at quite a short distance from the scene of the murder. When they appeared at the thana they had fresh blood on their clothes, shoes and hands see evidence of Ghulam Hassan Khan, Sub-Inspector, P. W. No. 7, and Jiwan Khan Constable, P. W. No. 6. Nur Muhammad made a statement to the Police which has been recorded in the First Information Report. It has been placed on the record as an exhibit, but is obviously inadmissible in evidence as being a confession made to the Police.

In consequence of the statements made by the appellants to the Police they were taken back to Dajal and produced before Diwan Dharam Chand, Tahsildar of Jampur (P. W. No. 15) who recorded their confessions after satisfying himself that they were confessing voluntarily. The Magistrate also noticed that the clothes and shoes of the appellants were bloodstained and that Nur Muhammad had some slight injuries on his person. These confessions are very clear and are to the effect that Ali Muhammad held Usman while Nur Muhammad stabbed him several times. The main motive for the murder was that Usman had married Musammât Sairan, the mother of Nur Muhammad without the latter's consent. Ali Muhammad is a near relation of Nur Muhammad. In their confessions the appellants stated that shortly before the murder Usman taunted them in the bazar and that subsequently Ali Muhammad lambardar had also told them that they were panders and cowards and had called upon them to vindicate their honour. After these taunts they went to Nur Muhammad's house, sharpened a knife, went back to the bazar, met Usman and murdered him. The appellants before the Committing Magistrate and before the Sessions Judge denied having made any confessions to the Tahsildar and also denied having gone to the Police Station immediately after the murder. They did not, however, allege any ill-treatment on the part of the Police and, in our opinion, there is absolutely no ground for supposing that there was any such ill-treatment. Counsel for the appellants has urged that they were probably ill-treated but having regard to the circumstances of the case we are quite satisfied that their confessions were spontaneous. It was also urged by Counsel that Ali Muhammad who merely held the murdered man while Nur Muhammad killed him could not be convicted of murder because it was not proved that he along with Nur Muhammad had the common intention of causing death. In our opinion there is no force in this argument. Ali Muhammad though he did not actually inflict any wound upon the deceased took his own part in the murder by holding Usman while his companion stabbed him. If Ali Muhammad had not helped in the way he did the probability is that Usman would not have been murdered at all.

We dismiss the appeal and confirm the sentence of death.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 42-B OF 1924.

July 28, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

DADU—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—NON-APPLICANT.

Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 28—Right of way, extent of—Method of user—Dominant and servient owners, mutual rights of.

A person entitled to a right of way cannot make an excessive user of the right, much less can he act arbitrarily and in a high handed manner so as to render the beneficial enjoyment by a servient owner of his own premises impossible or fraught with many difficulties. The latter is not on the other hand entitled to use the premises in a manner interfering with the enjoyment by the former of his right of way within reasonable limits. [p. 150, col. 2.]

Criminal revision of an order of the Magistrate, First Class, Amraoti, dated the 22nd January 1924.

Mr. R. R. Jaiwant, for the Applicant.

Mr. D. T. Mangalmurti, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The complainant Hari is the next door neighbour of the 3 accused. He has got a decree from the Civil Court declaring his right of way over the compound of the accused through a door E. The story is that the accused kept some stones or slabs in or near the door and used them as a washing stand. Hari thought that the putting of the stone-slabs at the place and using them as a washing stand was an obstruction to the free exercise of his right of way. He, therefore, entreated the accused to remove the cause of the obstruction, and caused certain Pancha to intercede on his behalf but the accused are said to have taken no heed of it. The result was that Hari thought himself justified to remove the stones from the place where they were put by the accused. This removal naturally resulted in an altercation and a struggle. The three accused have, therefore, been found guilty of assault under s. 325, Indian Penal Code and each of them has been fined.

Against these sentences each of the three accused has preferred an application for revision. This order will govern all these Applications Nos. 42-B to 44-B of 1924.

The main complaint of the applicants is that the complainant exceeded his right in trying to disturb or remove the stones from the place where they were kept by the accused. Even though the Civil Court granted him a decree declaring his right of way, it did not authorize the complainant to act in a high handed manner towards the owner of the servient tenement. The mere reading of the deposition of Hari shows that he has acted towards the accused in a somewhat high handed way. He has removed the chain and the staple of the door, because he thinks he is justified in going into the compound of the accused 'at any time' he 'likes'. His idea is that Dadu cannot close his door. The silence of Dadu at the time of his removing the chain, etc, had, it appears to me, encouraged Hari to take the bolder step of removing the so-called cause of obstruction which led to the assault. The evidence clearly shows that the accused were provoked into assaulting the complainant by the latter's action of trying to remove the stones. The accused must, therefore, be considered to have acted under provocation on the spur of the movement as soon as they found that the complainant was bent upon taking the law into his own hands and attempting to commit mischief in regard to what was admittedly their property. I am asked to hold that if the accused assaulted they had every justification for so doing for the protection of their property from the mischief the complainant was attempting to commit. Reliance is placed in the ruling of Kishen Lal v. Emperor (1) and on Hallifax, A.J.C.'s decision in the case of Jaipal Kunbi v. Emperor (2) in support of the view that a Court can suo motu take cognizance of the question of right of private defence though not pleaded. I think the accused's act of assault was by way of resentment against the complainant's unlawful act of removing the stones, and that the matter was so trivial that the accused should not have been convicted. The case devoid of all [the exaggerations in which it was designedly clothed by the complainant disclosed no such grave offence as called for punishment or imposition of such heavy fines. The accused as owner of their own premises were entitled to make any use they chose of the same, provided they did not in any way interfere with the enjoyment by the complainant of his right of way within reasonable limits. The person entitled to the right of way cannot make an excessive user of the right much less can he act arbitrarily and in a high handed manner so as to render the beneficial enjoyment by a servient owner of his own premises impossible or fraught with many difficulties.

On the whole I think the case was not a fit one for conviction. The convictions and sentences passed against the three accused are set aside and the fines are ordered to be refunded if they have in the meantime been realized.

G. R. D.

K. S. D.

Convictions set aside.

(1) 85 Ind. Cas. 245; 22 A. L. J. 501; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 645; L. R. 5 A. 177 Cr.; 26 Cr. L. J. 501.

(2) 66 Ind. Cas. 665; (1922) A. I. R. (N.) 141; 23 Cr. L. J. 313.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 228 OF 1925.

June 9, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Banerji.

MULA—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 423—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 411, 457—Charge, alteration of—Appellate Court, power of.

A charge cannot be so altered by an Appellate Court as to make it necessary for the accused to meet an absolutely different case from that with which he was charged in the Trial Court.

Where an accused person is tried for an offence of house-breaking in order to commit theft, under s. 457, Penal Code, together with other accused persons charged with the offence of being in possession of stolen property on different dates, under s. 411, Penal Code, he cannot in the Appellate Court be charged with and convicted for an offence under s. 411, Penal Code.

Criminal revision from an order of the Additional Sessions Judge, Moradabad, dated the 21st March 1925.

Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji, for the Applicant.

The Assistant Government Advocate, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner before me, Mula, was put up along with five other persons for trial before a Magistrate of the First Class at Bijnor. The order of the Magistrate at the beginning says: "The accused.....have been sent up for trial for offences under ss. 457/411 of the Indian Penal Code by the Nagina Police." It seems to me that the learned Magistrate while writing the judgment clearly forgot what was the charge he had himself framed against each of the accused, and what was the case he was trying. Different accused were charged with different offences on different dates. Mula the petitioner and his brother Harbansa were charged, according to the charge-sheet which is before me, with having on the 11th of August 1924 "broken open the house of Indra by night in order to commit theft," an offence punishable under s. 457 of the Indian Penal Code. Kanhaiya was charged with the offence of being in possession of stolen property on the 7th of September 1924. Jhuna was charged with being in possession of stolen property on the 8th of September 1924. Two others, Chunwa and Fullu, appear to have been charged under s. 457, but I am unable to find out the actual charge-sheets. Losing sight of what charge had been framed against each of the accused, the Magistrate treated the case as if the accused had been charged under s. 457, or in the alternative s. 411 of the Indian Penal Code. The Magistrate convicted Mula under s. 457. I have not the case of the other before me. Mula appealed to the learned Sessions Judge, and the learned Sessions Judge, holding that the conviction of Mula could not be recorded under s. 457, found him guilty under s. 411 of the Indian Penal Code. He says: "I alter the charge but maintain his conviction."

Now the only charge that Mula was called upon to meet, according to the charge framed against him at the trial, was that he had broken open the house of Indra by night in order to commit theft on the night of the 11th of August 1924. He had to meet the evidence—actual evidence, if any, of his being seen on or about the 11th of August 1924, and although the evidence of being in possession of a portion of the property on the 8th of November 1924 might be used against him along with other evidence, I am clearly of opinion that the charge cannot be so altered by an Appellate Court as to make it necessary for the accused to meet in absolutely different case from that with which he is charged in the Court of the Committing (?) Magistrate. I find, however, that Mula was asked about the parat, and his answer was that he had been in possession of the parat for 15 years, and that it was a present to him from his father-in-law. Had the charge really been that he was found in possession of a stolen parat on the 8th November, he might have made an attempt to meet it. In view of the fact that the other accused were charged with being in possession of stolen property on different dates, I hold that it was not right and proper for the Sessions Judge to frame a new charge and convict him thereof on appeal.

I, therefore, set aside the conviction and sentence of Mula under s. 411 of the Indian Penal Code and I direct that he be forthwith released. The fine if paid will be refunded.

N. H.

Conviction set aside.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 132 of 1924,
July 21, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Hallifax, A. J.C.
BHURA alias TURAH—ACCUSED
—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 239, 545—Articles belonging to two different persons, theft of—Offences, whether distinct—Payment of money as indemnity—Order directing payment, whether legal.

The fact that the articles stolen, happen to belong to two different persons does not make the theft two offences when it is committed in the course of one transaction.

There is no provision in Ch. XLIII or s. 545 of the Cr. P. C. for ordering the payment of a sum of money to the owner of the article stolen by way of indemnity.

Appeal against the finding and sentence of the District Magistrate, Seoni, dated the 5th June 1924, in Criminal Cases Nos. 7 and 8 of 1924.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant has been convicted of two offences of theft, for stealing two bullocks belonging to different owners. Each bullock failed to return to its home from the grazing ground on a Sunday evening. The two herds were certainly not far from one another and were probably grazing together; there is anyhow nothing in the evidence to indicate the contrary. In the afternoon of the following Friday the appellant was seen skinning the two bullocks that were missing, and each of them had its throat cut. There is much in this to show that the appellant stole the two bullocks at the same time, in one enterprise, and there is certainly no proof or even suggestion that he stole them separately.

That is one theft, and the fact that the bullocks happened to belong to different owners cannot make it two. One of the two sentences of rigorous imprisonment for consecutive periods of five years cannot, therefore, stand. The conviction of the appellant for one of the two offences and the sentence of rigorous imprisonment for five years for that offence are set aside. The conviction for one offence of theft and the sentence of rigorous imprisonment for five years (including solitary confinement for three months) and the order passed under s. 565 of the Cr. P. C. are maintained.

The bullock of which the skin was marked Article A in Court belonged to Pancham Lohar. The skin marked Article B was of a bullock belonging to Roshanlal Kurmi which was under attachment for arrears of takavi and in the custody of the Nazir. The axe and the two knives found with the accused were marked C, D and E. The concluding paragraph of the judgment of the lower Court is as follows: "The skin Ex. A be returned to Pancham Lohar. The skin Ex. B and articles C, D and E be forfeited to Government, to be sold after the period of appeal. I further direct that Roshanlal Kurmi the owner of the second bullock, be indemnified, to the extent of Rs. 25 for the loss of the animal as it occurred while under attachment: the amount to be credited against the takavi due by him to Government and the balance, if any, refunded."

Whether the learned Magistrate has, as Deputy Commissioner, some fund from which this sum of Rs. 25 is to be paid I cannot say, though I have never heard of one. There is certainly not one on which the District Magistrate can draw, and there is no provision in Ch. XLIII or s. 545 of the Cr. P. C. for the ordering of any such payment. Then again to indemnify Roshanlal, which comes to indemnifying the Government, and not to indemnify Pancham is to make a very invidious distinction. Further the compensation ordered to be paid to Roshanlal is Rs. 25 minus the value of the skin of his bullock.

The whole of this order is set aside and the following order is passed in its place. The skin of Pancham Lohar's bullock (Article A) will be returned to him. That of Roshanlal Kurmi's bullock (Article B) will be sold and the proceeds will be credited in satisfaction of the debt due by him to Government for takavi, and any balance that there may be will be handed over to him. The axe (Article C) and the two knives (Articles D and E) will be confiscated and sold.

G. R. D.

K. S. D.

Order set aside.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 184 OF 1924.

(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 161 OF 1924).

October 2, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Jackson.

CHAIRMAN, MUNICIPAL COUNCIL, CHICACOLE—COMPLAINANT—PETITIONER
versus

GAJIREDDI SEETHARAMAYYA

NAIDU—ACCUSED—RESPONDENT.

Madras District Municipalities Act (V of 1920), ss. 219 (1), 313 (c)—Chairman's notice for removal of dangerous tree disobeyed—Offender prosecuted—Duty of Criminal Court.

If the Chairman of a Municipality prosecutes a person for non-compliance with a notice for the removal of a dangerous tree, the Criminal Court has only to see whether the notice was properly served and was disobeyed. It has no business to go into the question whether the Chairman was right in thinking the tree to be dangerous.

Petition, under ss. 435 and 439 of the Cr. P. C., 1898, praying the High Court to revise the judgment of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Chicacole, in Criminal Appeal No. 67 of 1923, preferred against the judgment of the Court of the Stationary Sub-Magistrate, Chicacole, in C. C. No. 147 of 1923.

Mr. P. V. Rangaram, for the Petitioner.

Mr. B. Jagannadhadas, for the Respondent.

Mr. A. S. Sivagaminathan, for the Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—This is a petition by the Chairman of Chicacole Municipality, seeking to set aside the judgment of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate in Criminal Appeal No. 67 of 1923, reversing the judgment of the Sub-Magistrate of Chicacole, in C. C. No. 147 of 1923.

The Chairman issued a notice to the respondent under s. 219 (1) of the Madras Act V of 1920, calling upon him to remove a dangerous tree. The respondent failed to comply with this notice and was prosecuted under s. 313 (c) of the same Act. The only points for determination in such a case are whether the order under s. 219 (1) is lawful, and whether that order has not been complied with. The Sub-Divisional Magistrate has gone into the question, whether the Chairman was right in thinking the tree to be dangerous. He can at most consider whether the tree never appeared to the Chairman to be dangerous; without considering whether the Chairman was justified in forming such an impression, for instance, if a tree were one foot high, a Court might hold absolutely that it never appeared to be dangerous. But in this case it is proved that the tree is a sloping coconut palm which overhangs a house, and was reported by the Sanitary Inspector to be dangerous. On this evidence, a Court cannot hold that there were no grounds on which the Chairman could form an opinion. Whether he was justified in forming his opinion is not a matter to be decided. The notice on the facts stated by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate was quite lawful and it was clearly disobeyed. The petition is allowed and the order of the Appellate Court is reversed. The appeal should be re-heard in the light of the above remarks. Possibly there is room for compromise.

Most coconut trees can be rendered safe with stay ropes and a platform under the head of the palm; but the matter is entirely within the discretion of the local authorities.

V. N. V.

S. D.

Case remanded.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 1842 OF 1923.

January 3, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Martineau.

HAZARA SINGH AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

*Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 231—
Charge amended—Accused's right to re-call and cross-examine witnesses.*

If a charge is amended the accused is entitled to re-call and cross-examine any of the prosecution witnesses and not only those witnesses on the basis of whose evidence the charge was amended.

Case referred by the Sessions Judge, Hoshiarpur.

FACTS.—The applicants were charged in the Court of the Additional District Magistrate under s. 216, Cr. P. C., for harbouring one Karm Singh. In the original charge, it was not stated that Karam Singh was wanted by the Police for an offence under s. 302, Indian Penal Code. The charge was, therefore, amended subsequently so as to bring the case under the first part of s. 216, Indian Penal Code. The Counsel for the applicants wanted to cross-examine the witnesses, but the lower Court refused to grant them opportunity to re-call any witnesses except those on the basis of whose evidence the amendment of the charge was made.

The accused were charged under s. 216, Indian Penal Code and the charge was subsequently amended and further cross-examination of prosecution witnesses was disallowed by Sheikh Mahbub Bakhsh, exercising the powers of an Additional District Magistrate of the First Class in the Hoshiarpur District, by order, dated 20th August and 25th September, 1923.

The accused are on bail.

GROUND.—An application for revision of the above proceedings has been now filed. It is contended that the applicants should not have been charged under s. 216,

Indian Penal Code and that the amendment of the charge at late stage was prejudicial to them. It is also urged that the lower Court has, in any case, erred in not allowing the applicants to re-call such witnesses as they liked for further examination. The first ground has I think, no force. The lower Court had wide powers of amendment under s. 227, Cr. P. C., and there is no justification for interference at this stage. The second contention, however, seems correct. Under s. 231, Cr. P. C., the applicants had the right to "re-call or re-summon and examine with reference to such alteration or addition (in the charge) any witness who may have been examined." The right is thus not restricted to the re-calling of those witnesses only who have deposed to the subject-matter of the alteration or amendment in the charge. The other witnesses also may conceivably be in a position to depose to facts in connection with such alteration or amendment. All that the Court can do is to restrict the examination of the witness to the alteration or amendment in the charge.

I, therefore, submit the records to the Hon'ble High Court with the recommendation that the orders of the Additional Magistrate, dated 15th September 1923 with reference to the re-summoning of the witnesses be set aside.

JUDGMENT.—I agree with the learned Sessions Judge. The Magistrate was wrong in refusing to allow the accused to re-call for cross-examination witnesses other than those on the basis of whose evidence the charge has been amended, and I direct that the accused be allowed in accordance with s. 231 of the Cr. P. C., to re-call and examine with reference to amendment any witness who has been examined.

S. D.

Reference accepted.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 116 OF 1924.

September 9, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

HARIHAR SINGH AND OTHERS—

APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 34—Criminal act done in furtherance of common intention.

In order to convict a person for an offence with the aid of the provisions of s. 34 of the Penal Code, it is not necessary that that person should actually with his own hand commit the criminal act. If several persons have the common intention of doing a particular criminal act and if in furtherance of that common intention all of them join together and aid or abet each other in the commission of the act, then although one of these persons may not actually with his own hand do the act, if he helps by his presence or by other acts in the commission of the act, he would be held to have done that act within the meaning of s. 34. [p. 156, col. 1.]

Emperor v. Barendra Kumar Ghose, 81 Ind. Cas. 353; 28 C. W. N. 170; 38 C. L. J. 411; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 257; 25 Cr. L. J. 817, referred to.

Appeal against an order of the Sessions Judge, Shahabad.

Mr. Hyder Imam, for the Appellants.

The Government Pleader, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant Harihar Singh has been convicted by the Sessions Judge of Shahabad under s. 324, Indian Penal Code and sentenced to 18 months' rigorous imprisonment and the appellant Jugal Singh has been convicted under s. 324/34, Indian Penal Code and sentenced to 6 months' rigorous imprisonment. They have been found guilty of voluntarily causing hurt to one Brahamdeo Singh who is distantly related to the appellants. The prosecution story shortly stated is as follows:—

Harihar Singh is the uncle of Jugal Singh. One Charittar Singh who was also charged along with the appellants for an offence under s. 324 read with s. 34, Indian Penal Code but has been acquitted by the learned Sessions Judge is a cousin of Harihar Singh two or three degrees removed. The complainant Brahamdeo Singh is also a distant cousin of Harihar Singh. Harihar Singh had another cousin Kartik Deo Singh who died about ten years ago leaving a young widow Musammatt Piaro Kuer. This Kartik Deo Singh was the first cousin of Harihar Singh. The complainant Brahamdeo Singh had some intrigue with the widow Musammatt Piaro Kuer and about 2 or 2½ years ago he eloped with the widow and went to Calcutta with her. The widow, however, left Brahamdeo Singh at Calcutta and there is no trace of her. The appellant Harihar Singh and the members of his family were highly enraged with Brahamdeo Singh for taking away the widow and for fear of the appellants and his family, Brahamdeo Singh stayed at Calcutta for about 2 or 2½ years and accepted service there as the gateman in the Howrah Railway Station. It is alleged that Brahamdeo Singh had left three nephews at his house at Brarhi when he went to Calcutta and in his absence the appellants vexed the nephews so much that they had to leave the house and they went to reside with a relative of theirs in a different village. Brahamdeo Singh returned to his village about four months before the occurrence. He first went to the place where his nephews were living and then he came to his house at Brarhi. He found that the doors and shutters of his house had been taken out and everything else had been removed and the two appellants and Charittar Singh were sitting in the courtyard of the house. He enquired from them as to what had become of the doors and shutters upon which the appellants and Charittar Singh chased him with the object of beating him with lathis. Brahamdeo Singh fled from the place and went direct to Buxar where he filed a complaint before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate. Upon a report of the Police the Sub-Divisional Magistrate summoned the appellants and Charittar Singh and a case under ss. 447 and 352, Indian Penal Code was started against them. Brahamdeo Singh was living at the place of his relatives or friends at different places and on the 10th February, 1924, a Court peon Abdul Mian went to Brarhi to serve summons upon the witnesses in the case under s. 447 against the appellants. Brahamdeo Singh went to Brarhi to have the summons served and was sitting at the darwaja of Bahadur Singh prosecution witness No. 10. The summonses, however, could not be served upon the witnesses inasmuch as none of the witnesses was found at their homes and the Court peon left the place at about 1 P. M. The complainant, however, stayed in the dhaba of Bahadur Singh and Nirbhai. Bahadur Singh and Rampalak Singh and others were also sitting in the same dhaba. It is alleged that while Brahamdeo Singh was lying down in the dhaba with his head supported on the palm of his hand and was talking with Rampalak Singh, witness No. 5 the appellants and Charittar Singh came at the dhaba the appellant Harihar Singh being armed with a sword and the appellants Jugal Singh and Charittar Singh being armed with lathis and while Charittar Singh and Jugal Singh stood at the entrance of dhaba Harihar Singh struck Brahamdeo Singh with a sword twice. The first blow hit him on the left knee cap upon which Brahamdeo Singh stood up and while he was getting up Harihar Singh aimed a second blow with the sword which Brahamdeo Singh warded off, but in doing so had his two fingers of the left hand injured. The witness Rampalak Singh attempted to seize the sword and he was also slightly injured. The complainant Brahamdeo Singh fled from the place through one of the doors of the dhaba and went straight to the Police Station where he lodged his first information at 7 P. M. the occurrence having taken place in the afternoon of the 10th February 1924.

[After discussing the evidence for prosecution and defence his Lordship concluded as follows:—]

I see no reason to differ from the learned Sessions Judge that it was Harihar Singh who inflicted the injuries on the person of Brahamdeo with a sword. The conviction of Brahamdeo Singh under s. 324, Indian Penal Code is, therefore, correct and the sentence appears to be appropriate.

As regards Jugal Singh he has been convicted under s. 324 read with s. 34, Indian Penal Code. The evidence so far as he is concerned is clear that he went to the place of occurrence with Harihar Singh and had a lathi in his hand that he stood at the door with the lathi while Harihar Singh struck Brahamdeo with the sword. There is evidence that when Brahamdeo Singh wanted to run away Jugal obstructed his passage and prevented him from getting out of the dhaba. That he came with Harihar Singh and was standing at the entrance of the dhaba with the lathi in his hand is deposed to by almost all the prosecution witnesses and there is no reason to differ from the learned Sessions Judge about his presence with the lathi at the place of occurrence. The question is, whether he can be convicted under s. 324 read with s. 34, Indian Penal Code. In order to make him liable under s. 324 it is necessary to prove that the criminal act of assaulting Brahamdeo was done by Jugal Singh also. It has been argued by the learned Counsel for the appellants that upon the evidence it is clear that Jugal Singh did not take part in the assault and, therefore, he is not a person by whom the criminal act was done in the present case as provided by s. 34 of the Indian Penal Code. Section 34 provides that when a criminal act is done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of all each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone. The question is whether in the present case the criminal act, namely, the assault upon Brahamdeo Singh was done by Jugal Singh within the meaning of s. 34, Indian Penal Code. The question as regards the proper meaning and effect of s. 34 has been the subject of consideration in a large number of cases. The latest case in which the question was very exhaustively considered by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court is the case of Emperor v. Barendra Kumar Ghose (1). In that case all the previous cases dealing on the point were very exhaustively considered and it was held that the question whether a particular criminal act may be properly held to have been "done by several persons" within the meaning of the section cannot be answered regardless of the facts of the case. In order to convict a person for an offence with the aid of the provisions of s. 34 of the Penal Code it is not necessary that that person should actually with his own hand commit the criminal act. If several persons have the common intention of doing a particular criminal act and if in furtherance of that common intention all of them join together and aid or abet each other in the commission of the act, then although one of these persons may not actually with his own hand do the act, if he helps by his presence or by other acts in the commission of the act, he would be held to have done that act within the meaning of s. 34.

Reliance has been placed by the learned Counsel for the appellants upon the case of Strughan Patar v. Emperor (2). The facts of that case, however, have no application to the present case. It was distinctly found in that case that the appellant Satrugan had no intention to kill Upendra Mahto and that he did not assist the actual murderers in any way to accomplish their object. In the absence of any evidence of common intention there could be no conviction under s. 302 of the appellant Strughan for murder read with s. 34 of the Indian Penal Code. In the present case upon the evidence there can be no doubt that both Jugal and Harihar Singh had the common intention of assaulting Brahamdeo Singh and that Jugal was actually present and actively took part in the commission of the act by Harihar Singh.

Upon the evidence in this case the conviction of Jugal Singh under s. 324 read with s. 34 is a proper conviction and there is no ground to interfere with his conviction or sentence either.

The result is that the conviction and sentence of both the appellants are confirmed and the appeal is dismissed.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 96 OF 1925.

February 27, 1925.

*Present:—*Mr. Justice Zafar Ali.

KARTAR SINGH AND ANOTHER—

APPELLANTS

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 366—Abduction—Girl accompanying accused without compulsion—Offence.

A married girl, 16 years of age, accompanied the accused from place to place under circumstances which did not show that she was acting under compulsion:

Held, that the accused could not be convicted of an offence under s. 366 of the Penal Code, inasmuch as the conduct of the girl showed that there was no abduction.

Criminal appeal from an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Kasur.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—Kartar Singh and Jiwan Singh Jats and Manghat Ram Brahman have been convicted of abducting Musammatt Fatima and raping her, and sentenced under ss. 366 and 376, Indian Penal Code, to rigorous imprisonment for three years for each offence.

Musammatt Fatima is a Mussalman married girl of about 16 years of age. She was living with her brother Siraj Din in the village Luliani, and a complaint under s. 498, Indian Penal Code, lodged by her husband against Kartar Singh (appellant) and her brother Siraj Din and others was pending, and she had to appear before the Magistrate on the 25th of February 1924. The prosecution story is that on the night of the 20th February 1924, at about 11 P.M. the three appellants (as well as Sardara who is absconding) gained access into the house of Siraj Din and took away Musammatt Fatima by force. But though the Police Station is only 50 karams from the house of Siraj Din, he did not invoke the assistance of the Police immediately nor did he organise a party of his neighbours and villagers to run after the culprits and to rescue the girl from their hands. He laid information at the Police Station on the 22nd February at 3-30 P. M., and the story of abduction related in this belated report is not corroborated by a single neighbour or independent witness. It is strange that no neighbour came to the rescue of the girl nor could be produced to show that an outcry arose from the house of Siraj Din when the girl was abducted.

(1) 81 Ind. Cas. 353; 28 C. W. N. 170; 28 C. L. J. 411 (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 257; 25 Cr. L. J. 817.

(2) 50 Ind. Cas. 337; 20 Cr. L. J. 289.

Even after the alleged abduction the girl nowhere did or said anything which should indicate that she was accompanying the men from place to place under compulsion. She remained with them for about six months out of which four or five were passed at the village Amonke. She was taken to Lahore also and there kept in a serai in the Anarkali Bazar. From Lahore she was brought to Kasur in a taxi-car, but neither to the man in charge of the serai nor to the taxi-car driver nor to any inhabitant of the village Amonke did she complain that she had been abducted. If she had been unwilling to remain with these men it is strange that she found no opportunity for seeking assistance and making a disclosure of what had happened to her. In the light of all these circumstances it appears that the case is one of elopement and not of abduction.

I, therefore, accept the appeal, set aside the convictions and sentences and order that the appellants be released from jail forthwith.

Z. K.

*Appeal accepted.MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION CASE No. 576 OF 1924.
(CRIMINAL REVISION PETITION No. 479 OF 1924).

January 8, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

THADIAPPAN alias RAMIAH—

COMPLAINANT—PETITIONER

versus

VEERAPERUMAL THEVAN AND ANOTHER

—ACCUSED Nos. 4 AND 5—RESPONDENTS.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 250.

Recording of reasons essential for awarding compensation—Policy underlying s. 250.

Section 250, Cr. P. C., requires, before an order for compensation could be made by a Magistrate, not only that he should be satisfied that the accusation was either frivolous or vexatious but that the Magistrate, directing compensation to be paid, should record his reasons for making such a direction. The recording of the reasons, for ordering compensation to be paid, is almost a condition precedent to the proper exercise of the power and is in addition to the finding of the Magistrate that the accusation was either frivolous or vexatious. [p. 158, col. 1.]

The reasons must go to show, why it is that the Magistrate considers the accusation against the accused, to be frivolous or vexatious and why in his opinion it is a fit case, in which an order for compensation should be made. The policy of the Legislature in requiring that in such a case the reasons should be recorded in writing is to afford an opportunity to an Appellate or Revising Tribunal to consider the sufficiency of the reasons so recorded. [ibid.]

"That no case is made out against any of the accused, that some of the accused were added vexatiously, that the complainant has shown no cause why he should not be ordered to pay compensation, and that, therefore, he is directed to pay compensation," is not a proper compliance with the provisions of s. 250, Cr. P. C. [p. 158, cols. 1 & 2.]

Petition, under ss. 435 and 439 of the Cr. P. C., praying that the High Court will be pleased to revise the judgment of the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Devakottai, in Criminal Appeal No. 37 of 1923, preferred against the judgment of the Court of the Taluk Second Class Magistrate, Sivaganga, in C. C. No. 61 of 1923.

Mr. V. Ramaswami Iyer, for the Petitioner.

The Public Prosecutor, for the Crown.

ORDER.—The petitioner, in this case, was the complainant and the respondents were accused Nos. 4 and 5. The Sub-Magistrate found that no case had been made out against Nos. 4 and 5 and discharged them. But at the same time, he made an order asking that the complainant should pay accused Nos. 4 and 5 compensation of Rs. 30 each. The portion of the Sub-Magistrate's judgment, that deals with this order, for payment of compensation is in the following terms:—

"As no case is made out against any of the accused, I discharge them under s. 253 (1) of the Cr. P. C. I further find that accused Nos. 4 and 5 have been vexatiously added as accused. The complainant was directed to show cause why he should not be ordered, under s. 250, Cr. P. C., to pay compensation to accused Nos. 4 and 5. The complainant had no sufficient cause to show. I, therefore, further direct that the complainant do pay to each of the accused, accused No. 4 and accused No. 5, a compensation of Rs. 30."

Section 250, Cr. P. C., requires, before an order for compensation could be made by a Magistrate, not only that he should be satisfied that the accusation was either frivolous or vexatious but that the Magistrate, directing compensation to be paid, should record his reasons for making such a direction. On a proper reading of the section, it seems to me that the recording of the reasons, for ordering compensation to be paid, is almost a condition precedent to the proper exercise of the power. The recording of the reasons is in addition to the finding of the Magistrate that the accusation was either frivolous or vexatious. No doubt there are no words in the section calculated to indicate what the reasons recorded should be. But obviously the reasons must go to show, why it is that the Magistrate considers the accusation against the accused, to be frivolous or vexatious and why in his opinion it was a fit case, in which an order for compensation should be made. The learned Public Prosecutor has contended before me that having regard to the terms of the section, it is not necessary for the Magistrate more than merely to state, that he finds the accusation to be frivolous or vexatious and that such a statement, when recorded in writing would be a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the section. I cannot agree. I am satisfied that, at any rate, the reasons for the Magistrate finding the accusation to be frivolous or vexatious must be set out. Even this is absent in the order under reference. All that the Magistrate says is that no case has been made out, and no reasons are given why the Magistrate considered the accusation against the accused Nos. 4 and 5 to be vexatious. The policy of the Legislature in requiring that in such a case the reasons should be recorded in writing is obviously to afford an opportunity to an Appellate or Revising Tribunal to consider the sufficiency of the reasons so recorded. In the absence, therefore, of any reasons recorded by the Magistrate, as regards the sufficiency of which any Appellate or Revising Tribunal might have an opportunity to judge, I cannot think that there has been a proper compliance with the provisions of the section. The learned Public Prosecutor has adverted to the word "added" in the expression "vexatiously added" as indicating the reasoning in the mind of the Magistrate that in his opinion accused Nos. 4 and 5 were merely added vexatiously by the complainant. But the expression "added" had obviously reference only to the fact that there were other accused in the case; and I cannot in any case consider that a single word can be regarded as containing a record of the reasons, required by the section, to be given by the Magistrate, in making an order for compensation.

I may also point out that the Appellate Magistrate in this case in para. 3 states the following:—"As none of the prosecution witnesses has said anything implicating accused Nos. 4 and 5 in the lower Court, they have been rightly awarded a compensation, at the cost of the complainant." If this statement of fact were correct, I have no doubt that it might amount to a proper reason for awarding compensation; but unfortunately this is a statement made not by Magistrate, who made the order for compensation, but by the Appellate Magistrate and what is more the statement is obviously incorrect. There was at least one witness, on the prosecution side who directly spoke to the accused Nos. 4 and 5 being present. In these circumstances, I consider that the very wholesome provision of law in s. 250 of the Cr. P. C., requiring the Magistrate to record his reasons, for ordering a compensation to be paid has not been complied with and that, therefore, the order for compensation is wrong and should be set aside. If the compensation ordered has already been paid to the accused Nos. 4 and 5, they will be directed each to re-pay the amount to the complainant.

S. D.

Petition allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 397 OF 1924.

September 9, 1924.

Present :—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

Sri HARNANDAN DAS—APPLICANT

versus

ATUL KUMAR PRASAD AND OTHERS—

OPPOSITE PARTIES.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 203—Complaint dismissed under s. 203—Reasons, whether to be recorded.

It is incumbent upon a Magistrate to record briefly his reasons for dismissing a complaint under s. 203, Cr. P. C. [p. 159, col. 2.]

Criminal revision from an order of the District Magistrate, Bhagalpur.

Mr. Aniruddhaji Burman, for the Applicant.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application against an order passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Madhipura dismissing the complaint of the petitioner under s. 203 of the Cr. P. C. The order has been upheld by the District Magistrate of Bhagalpur when a petition of revision was filed before him. It appears that on the 27th November 1923 the petitioner lodged a complaint before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate charging the accused persons who are the opposite party in the present application with having uprooted a bamboo dhwaja or flag and demolished a platform near the temple of Mahabirji of which the petitioner alleges to be the shebait. He further complained that the accused persons had way-laid the petitioner while he was going to the Police station to lodge information about the occurrence and to have assaulted him and snatched away his wrapper and a sum of Rs. 21 which he had about him. The learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate by his order, dated the 27th November, ordered an enquiry to be made by Babu Kali Prasanna Banerji, Tahsildar of the Burdwan Estate, under s. 202, Cr. P. C. There was, however, some delay, in the papers being sent to Babu Kali Prasanna Banerji and before the order could be communicated to him he had left the place for Burdwan. It appears that the peshkar was responsible for this delay. Thereupon one Babu Tej Narain Sinha, Honorary Magistrate, was requested to make the enquiry and submit a report. He submitted his report on the 9th February, 1924, in which he stated that the allegation of the complainant about the dhwaja being uprooted by the creatures of the zemindar was true but that his other allegations about the theft of money and of the wrapper were exaggerations. It further appears from his report that the dispute is going on between the petitioner and Atul Kumar Prasad alias Tulo Kumar, the opposite party in the proceeding who is a zemindar of the village and that in a suit brought by the petitioner for declaration of his title and possession of certain land against Tulo Kumar he has obtained a decree for possession and that it was on account of the dispute between the parties, Tulo Babu ordered the dhwaja to be uprooted and the platform to be demolished.

Now, on receipt of this report the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate by his order, dated the 12th February, 1924, dismissed the complaint under s. 203, without giving any reason whatsoever. His order of the 12th February 1924, runs thus:—

“Dismissed s. 203, Cr. P. C., vide enquiry report.” Now, under s. 203, Cr. P. C., it was incumbent upon the Sub-Divisional Magistrate to record briefly his reason for dismissing the complaint. No reasons whatsoever are given in his order of the 12th February, 1924. He merely refers to the report of the Honorary Magistrate but on referring to the report of the Honorary Magistrate it appears that the allegations of the petitioner about the uprooting of the dhwaja and the demolition of the chabutra are correct. If that is so, the matter ought to have been enquired into. The learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate has sent a long explanation in reply to the notice issued by this Court, but he deals with matters which are wholly irrelevant to the present application and no one has appeared on behalf of the accused persons to show cause against the present application. I think the order of the learned Sub-Divisional Magistrate dismissing the complaint under s. 203 is bad in law and ought to be set aside and the case must be sent back to him for disposal according to law.

S. D.

Revision allowed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL APPEAL No. 403 OF 1925.

August 18, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

SHEO DARSHAN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

EMPEROR—RESPONDENT.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 300 (c)—Loss of temper—Lathi blow causing fracture of skull—Offence.

A person who loses his temper and strikes another person on the head with a lathi causing extensive fracture of the skull resulting in the death of the deceased within a few hours, is prima facie guilty of murder under s. 300, cl. (c), Penal Code.

Appeal against an order of the Sessions Judge, Hardoi, dated the 4th June 1924.

Mr. R. F. Bahadurji, for the Appellant.

The Government Pleader, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Sheo Darshan appeals from a conviction under s. 304, Indian Penal Code of culpable homicide and a sentence of four years' rigorous imprisonment. Sheo Darshan is eighteen to twenty years old. The deceased, Lala Ram, is the maternal grandfather of Sheo Darshan and the Doctor, in his post mortem report judged his age to be between sixty and sixty-five. Lala Ram has provided his daughter, the mother of the accused, with a house in his own compound, so that the two houses are close together. A quarrel arose over some miserable matter of whether Sheo Darshan was to pay three rupees or two rupees for the hire of a sugar mill. The accused lost his temper and struck his grandfather on the head with a lathi, causing extensive fracture of the skull of which the old man died within a few hours. The facts are quite clear. There is no substance in the plea of self-defence. The suggestion is that the old man was also angry and waved a stick at his grandson. This would furnish no excuse at all. The allegation that the deceased actually struck his grandson is supported by the evidence of one witness only, and he has been disbelieved by the Court of Trial. The appellant has got off lightly. His action is not distinguishable from Illustration (c) of s. 300 and is prima facie murder. He ought to have been committed on a charge of murder. If that had been done he might possibly have escaped under sub-s. (4). It is, doubtful, but I do not think it necessary to take up that point in this appeal. The appeal is dismissed.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 341 of 1924.

July 22, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Adami and
Mr. Justice Macpherson.

SOBHIT MALLAH—PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 250 (3)
—Right of appeal depends on total amount of compensation.

Under s. 250 (3), a complainant's right to appeal depends on the aggregate amount of compensation which he is directed to pay to all the accused. Therefore, an appeal lies where the compensation ordered to be paid to each of the several accused is less than Rs. 50, but the total amount payable to all of them exceeds Rs. 50.

Criminal revision from an order of the Sessions Judge, Muzaffarpur.

Mr. K. N. Moitra, for the Petitioner.

Mr. B. C. De for Mr. T. N. Sahay, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—The only question which arises in this case is whether an appeal lies against an order passed by a Magistrate of the First Class under s. 250, Indian Penal Code directing the complainant to pay to each of the several accused as compensation a sum less than Rs. 50 the aggregate sum to be paid to all the accused amounting to more than Rs. 50. In the present case the Deputy Magistrate ordered compensation of Rs. 25 to be paid to each of the eleven accused persons, the aggregate thus amounting to Rs. 275.

The learned Sessions Judge, when the appeal was brought before him against the order of compensation, held that no appeal lies under cl. (3) of s. 250 unless the compensation to be paid to any one accused is over Rs. 50. In support of his finding the learned Sessions Judge states that he holds that sub-s. (3) of s. 250 is controlled by the wording of sub-s. (2) of that section. It is difficult to understand what grounds he has for his finding, for even if sub-s. (2) does control sub-s. (3) there is nothing to show that an appeal will only lie when the compensation directed to be paid to each individual accused is more than Rs. 50. Sub-section (3) states that a complainant who has been ordered by a Magistrate to pay compensation exceeding Rs. 50 has the right of appeal. It is quite evident that it is the total amount of compensation directed to be paid by the complainant which must form the basis of the decision whether an appeal lies or not. The compensation is a fine which the complainant has to pay for instituting a false and frivolous or vexatious case and his right to appeal clearly depends on the total amount of that compensation. It is obvious that the criterion is the amount of compensation directed to be paid in the case. Section 250 begins with the words "If in any case" and in sub-s. (4) we read the words "when an order for payment of compensation to an accused person is made in a case....."

The present case must go back to the learned Sessions Judge in order that he may hear and decide the appeal according to law.

S. D.

Petition accepted;
Case remanded.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2063 OF 1924.

January 20, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

KARAM DIN AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS

versus

MEHR DIN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Custom — Succession — Julahas of Ichhra near Lahore.

Julahas of Ichhra near Lahore who have held land in the village with a share in the shamilat since a generation before the 1856 Settlement and have lived partly by agricultural and partly by other means, do not follow agricultural custom in matters of succession. [p. 162, col. 2.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Lahore, dated the 24th April 1924.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

Mr. Raghunath Rai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The pedigree-table of the parties is given in the judgment of the lower Appellate Court. The land with which this suit is concerned was originally the property of Umar Din and perhaps a part of it was once the property of his brother Ghulam Nabi who predeceased him. Umar Din died in 1908 leaving two widows, Musammat Murad Bibi and Musammat Nur Bhari, the latter of whom had been previously married to Ghulam Nabi. When Umar Din died all his estate was mutated in the names of his two widows, although he had a grandson surviving him named Pir Bakhsh, the son of his son Ramzan by Musammat Murad Bibi. In 1909 the two widows mortgaged some of the land to one Muhammad Bakhsh and later on the present plaintiff Mehr Din and Hasan Muhammad, collaterals of Umar Din, purchased the mortgagee rights from Muhammad Bakhsh. Then, in 1914 Musammat Murad Bibi died and her half of the estate was mutated to her grandson Pir Bakhsh. Pir Bakhsh died on the 24th March, 1921, and the land was mutated back to Musammat Nur Bhari. On the 11th June 1921 Musammat Nur Bhari sold the actual land in suit to Karam Din and Fazal Din, and the present suit is by Mehr Din and Hasan Muhammad, for a declaration that the sale is null and void.

The parties are Julahas of Ichhra near Lahore. The case of the plaintiffs is that they are governed by Customary Law, that the true heir of Umar Din was Pir Bakhsh, that the mutation to Musammat Murad Bibi and Musammat Nur Bhari was wrong, that these two females never had any right to Umar Din's land which belonged to Pir Bakhsh and that they, the plaintiffs, are Pir Bakhsh's heirs.

The first issue was "whether the parties are governed by custom?" and both the Courts below concurred in finding this in the affirmative. The lower Appellate Court further held as a result that Musammat Nur Bhari must be taken to have had no right whatsoever to the land, that the sale by her was quite ineffectual, and that it was not necessary to go into the question of necessity for the sale, since it had been established that the plaintiffs were the reversionary heirs of Pir Bakhsh. The plaintiffs were given a decree as prayed for. Karam Din and Fazal Din, vendees from Musammat Nur Bhari, have come to this Court on second appeal supported by the certificate, under s. 41 (3) of the Punjab Courts Act, of the learned District Judge, that there is a question regarding the validity of a custom involved, namely, (1) whether the plaintiffs, who are weavers, are governed by Muhammadan Law or custom in respect of succession, and (2) whether in the community to which the parties belong a widow can lose her husband's estate on re-marriage with her husband's brother. I may remark that in regard to No. 2 the learned District Judge observed that there was nothing to show that the rule propounded applied to the community with which he was concerned. If this were so he had no ground for granting a certificate that this particular custom was of sufficient importance and the evidence regarding it so conflicting and uncertain, etc.

I take the first part of the certificate. The reasons for which the learned District Judge has held that the parties are governed by custom is that the Revenue Records show their ancestors to have been owners of land in the village together with a share of the shamilat for a very long time. According to the pedigree-table of 1868 Dhanna, father of Yaru, the common ancestor of Umar Din and plaintiffs, came to Ichhra from the ilaka Faridabad and brought land under cultivation. Yaru was alive and held land in the year 1856-57. The plaintiffs still hold land and have produced oral evidence that they derive income from it as well as from other sources. Mehr Din, the plaintiff, is said to be in Government service and not to cultivate land himself but to lease it to tenants and it is said by two of his own witnesses that his sons are tailors and that he himself works as a tailor. The learned District Judge observes that the fact that the plaintiffs supplement their income from sources other than agriculture does not show that they have abandoned Customary Law. The above facts which are the basis for the finding that the plaintiffs are governed by custom, are, in my judgment, wholly insufficient. No instance has been proved of any actual observance of any of the customary rules regarding inheritance, alienation, etc., either by the plaintiffs' family or by other Julahas of Ichhra etc. The mutation of Umar Din's land in favour of his two widows in the presence of his grandson was not in accordance with the ordinary customary rule. It may not have been in accordance with Muhammadan Law, but that fact would not take the plaintiff's case any further. The recognition, by the plaintiffs, of the mortgage transacted by the two widows may not be conclusive either way, but, so far as it goes, it indicates an acquiescence in the claim of the two widows to be full owners, which is also inconsistent with agricultural custom. In Habib v. Fattu (1) the Julahas of Pajawa in the Ferozepore District were held to have failed to prove that they had adopted agricultural custom, although their position appears to have been stronger than that of the present plaintiffs. They had actually founded the village some 74 years before suit, together with a Rajput and a Chuhra, and since then had subsisted by tilling the soil. It was held nevertheless that there was no presumption in favour of their contention, and that such a presumption arises only in the case of agricultural tribes, such as Rajputs, Gujars and Arains. Another case is Khuda Baksh v. Imam Din (2) which related to Kashmiris settled in a village in the Gujrat District whose situation was very much that of the present plaintiffs. They lived largely by agriculture but were else weavers and they were recorded in the 1869 shajra nasab as having been among certain persons who, in 1844, had re-settled the village, since which time they and their ancestors had held and cultivated the land in the village. No instance, however, was put forward of any alienation by Kashmiris having been restrained by collaterals and there was a proof of a number of uncontested alienations by members of the community. It was held that the burden lay upon the plaintiff to establish that the Customary Law of the neighbouring tribes obtained among the Kashmiris of that village and that he had failed to discharge that onus.

In the present case, therefore, I am unable to agree with the learned District Judge that mere ownership of land with a share in the shamilat since a generation before the 1856 Settlement and the living partly by agriculture and partly by other means established a presumption in favour of these Julahas that they followed agricultural custom. The reversal of the learned District Judge's finding on this point involves the setting aside of the decree and the return of the appeal for determination of the other points which arise from the remaining issues, notably Issue No. 2.

I accept the appeal accordingly, set aside the lower Appellate Court's decree and remand the case. The costs of this appeal and of the proceedings in the two Courts below will follow the event.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 14 OF 1924.

April 24, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C., and
Mr. Prideaux, A. J. C.

GOPALA—JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—
APPELLANT
versus

LAXMANSINGH AND OTHERS—DECREE-HOLDERS—RESPONDENTS.

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), s. 49, applicability of—Mortgage of sir land—Foreclosure before C. P. Tenancy Act of 1898—Compromise after Act—Occupancy rights in sir land, whether revived.

The respondent took a mortgage from the appellant under which some part of the property in dispute was mortgaged by way of conditional sale. He obtained a foreclosure decree on the mortgage which was made absolute before the coming into force of the C. P. Tenancy Act of 1898. Subsequently appellant brought a suit to have the foreclosure decree set aside. This suit ended in a compromise under which one portion of the property was left with the mortgagee as his absolute property and the other portion passed to the mortgagor free from the incumbrance. In the meantime the C. P. Tenancy Act of 1920 had come into force and the mortgagor contended that the mortgagee could not obtain actual possession of the sir lands which had been left to him under the compromise as occupancy rights in the land vested in the mortgagor under s. 49 of the C. P. Tenancy Act :

(1) 69 P. R. 1908; 125 P. W. R. 1908.

(2) 1 Ind. Cas. 403; 17 P. R. 1909; 16 P. W. R. 1909;
216 P. L. R. 1908.

Held, (1) that under the foreclosure decree the mortgagor had lost all interest in the mortgaged property and the mortgagee had become the absolute proprietor thereof and that the effect of the compromise decree was merely to vary the original decree and that it did not operate to revive the rights of the mortgagor regarding the sir land which he had already lost; [p. 163, col. 2; p. 164, col. 1.]

(2) that, therefore, s. 49 of the C. P. Tenancy Act had no application to the case. [p. 163, col. 2.]

Narain Ganesh Ghatate v. Baliram, 48 Ind. Cas. 141; 14 N. L. R. 165; 24 M. L. T. 345; 28 C. L. J. 447; (1918) M. W. N. 885; 23 C. W. N. 297; 21 Bom. L. R. 53; 46 C. 76 (P. C.), distinguished.

Appeal against an order in Execution Case No. 17 of 1923 of the Additional District Judge, Nagpur, dated the 22nd January 1924.

Sir B. K. Bose and Mr. D. T. Mangalmoorti, for the Appellant.

Messrs. M. Gupta, D. P. Tiwari and M. R. Indurker, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are that the predecessor of the respondents took a mortgage from the appellant's father under which some part of the property in dispute was mortgaged by conditional sale, and he obtained a foreclosure decree on the mortgage, which was made absolute in 1897. It is admitted that this decree being prior to the Tenancy Act of 1898, the whole proprietary interest of the mortgagor passed to the mortgagee and his occupancy right would not be saved. Subsequently, the present appellant brought a suit to have the former decree set aside on the ground that the mortgage was entered into by his father when he was a minor and that it was not to his benefit and his interests were not bound, and other pleas such as are usually taken in a case of this character. This suit ended in a compromise, under which the property was divided between the parties, some portion being left to the mortgagee as his absolute property and some passing to the mortgagor free from incumbrance on the mortgage. In the course of the execution proceedings for obtaining possession the mortgagor objected that the mortgagee could not obtain actual possession of the sir lands, as the occupancy tenancy rights vested in him under s. 49 of the present Tenancy Act. The date of the compromise is 6th July 1923. This objection was disallowed by the lower Court and the mortgagor has made this appeal.

It is contended by the learned Advocate on behalf of the appellant that the question is whether the rights of the parties are to be regulated by the compromise decree or is the decree to be construed with reference to the terms of the old decree? He contends that the rights of the parties are to be decided as if the old decree did not exist. He relies on Narain Ganesh Ghatate v. Baliram (1), which he contends is on all fours with the present case and argues that it must be considered that the original decree on the mortgage no longer exists and has been altogether superceded by the compromise decree. The compromise decree being subsequent to the passing of the present Tenancy Act is governed by s. 49 of that Act, and the mortgagor cannot be deprived of his occupancy rights in the sir lands by any arrangement between himself and the mortgagee. The mortgagee, therefore, is only entitled to the proprietary rights in those sir lands but not to actual possession of them which must go to the mortgagor as occupancy tenant.

Under the decree of 1897 the mortgagor lost all his interest in the mortgaged property, and the mortgagee became the proprietor thereof. Whether he got actual possession or not is immaterial. The present appellant then brought a suit to have that decree set aside; that suit was compromised and by the compromise the mortgagor was given one anna malguzari share of Mouza Malegaon and certain sir fields named in the decree free from the mortgage.

As regards the rest of his claim the suit was dismissed and, therefore, this compromise decree does not affect the title of the mortgagee to those sir lands which are not given by it to the mortgagor. The mortgagor, therefore, lost his proprietary rights as regards these fields in 1897, and he has never since acquired any title to them and, therefore, he cannot be regarded as the proprietor of them, so as to take the advantage of s. 49 of the Tenancy Act. It is the defendant who is the proprietor of them and has been so ever since 1897, as admittedly no such provision as s. 49 of the present Tenancy

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 141; 14 N. L. R. 165; 24 M. L. T. 345; 28 C. L. J. 447; (1918) M. W. N. 885; 23 C. W. N. 297; 21 Bom. L. R. 53; 46 C. 76 (P. C.).

Act or s. 45 of the old Act was then in existence. Under the decree of 1897 the defendant got absolute title to the sir lands, and the mortgagor cannot claim any occupancy rights in them. The effect of the compromise decree was, in our opinion, merely to vary the original decree, but even if it be taken to have superseded and extinguished the original decree, it does not purport to revive the rights of the mortgagor regarding the sir fields now in dispute, and, therefore, he cannot be regarded as proprietor of them.

We are of opinion, therefore, that the view of the lower Court is correct and the appeal is dismissed with costs. The respondents are entitled to their costs in the lower Court also which by an oversight have not been awarded.

S. D.

*Appeal dismissed.LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 828 OF 1924.

February 3, 1925.

Present:—Sir Shadi Lal, Kt., Chief Justice.

SANSARI AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS

—PETITIONERS

versus

Musammat RAHMI—PLAINTIFF—

RESPONDENT.

Vendor and purchaser—Portion of purchase-money left with vendee to redeem mortgages on property other than that sold—Vendee, duty of—Failure to redeem mortgages—Damages, whether can be recovered.

Plaintiff sold certain land to the defendant and a portion of the purchase-money was left in deposit with the defendant for payment to certain mortgagees of land other than that sold to the defendant. Defendant failed to redeem those mortgages and the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendant to recover damages from him on the allegation that his failure to redeem the mortgages had caused loss to the plaintiff:

Held, that inasmuch as the defendant was not himself entitled to sue for redemption of the mortgages, it was the duty of the plaintiff to take steps to redeem the mortgages or to ask the defendant to refund the portion of the purchase-money which had been left with him, and that, not having done so, plaintiff was not entitled to recover any damages from the defendant.

Mr. Mukand Lal Puri, for the Petitioners.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On the 2nd March 1922, the plaintiff Musammat Rahmi sold two fields, Nos. 140 and 161, to Hako, the father of the defendants, for Rs. 7,765.

The sale-deed shows that Rs. 6,950 (not Rs. 7,850 as wrongly stated by the District Judge), out of the purchase-money, were kept in deposit with the vendee for payment to three prior mortgagees specified in the sale-deed. Now, it is clear that only one of these mortgages comprised the land which was sold to Hako, and that the remaining two mortgages had nothing to do with that land.

The present action was brought by the vendor on the ground that the vendee had failed to carry out his contract to redeem the prior mortgages in Jeth 1922 and that his failure had caused loss to the plaintiff. Now, the sale-deed does not contain any stipulation for redemption in Jeth 1922, but the learned District Judge holds that it was the duty of the vendee to redeem the property within a reasonable time, and as he failed to do so he was liable for damages to the plaintiff.

It is to be observed that the sale-deed in favour of the defendants' father did not impose upon him any duty to redeem the two mortgages which did not deal with the land sold to him. Indeed, even if he desired to redeem them he was bound to be non-suited on the ground that he was not entitled to sue for redemption. It seems to me that it was the duty of the vendor to take steps to redeem the property or to ask the vendee to refund the money to her. She did not adopt either of these two courses, and it is not clear what she expected the vendee to do. Indeed, the vendee has not gained anything by the transaction; he has already parted with a sum of Rs. 815 and has not got anything in return.

For the aforesaid reasons I hold that the defendants have not committed a breach of any express or implied contract. I accordingly accept the application for revision and dismiss the suit with costs throughout.

Z. K.

Application accepted.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 422 OF 1924.

April 1, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Venkatasubba Rao and Mr. Justice Madhavan Nair.PALANIVEL RAMASUBRAMANIA PILLAI, MINOR, AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS
—APPELLANTS

versus

SIVAKAMI AMMAL—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.Hindu Law—Mesne profits, decree for, against father—Sons' liability to pay such decree—Joint family property, whether liable to pay decree for mesne profits against father—Liability of sons in general for father's debts.

Under the Hindu Law the sons are bound to discharge a decree for mesne profits passed against their father and the joint family property in their hands is liable to be attached in execution of such decree. [p. 165, col. 2; p. 172, col. 2.]

Per Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The expression "Avyavaharika," means "grossly immoral or flagrantly unjust." [p. 167, col. 1.]

The sons are not liable, where the moneys were originally obtained by the father by the commission of an offence; the son's liability is, on the other hand, recognised where, in its origin, the debt was not immoral, but there was supervening dishonest act of the father. [p. 168, col. 1.]

If the debt is in its inception not immoral, subsequent dishonesty of the father does not exempt the son. [p. 169, col. 1.]

It is not every impropriety or every lapse from the right conduct that stamps the debt as immoral. The son can claim immunity only when the father's conduct is utterly repugnant to good morals, or is grossly unjust or flagrantly dishonest. [ibid.]

The liability for mesne profits is not in the nature of "danda" or fine. [p. 171, col. 1.]

The word "rina" as used in the texts has a much wider application than a mere debt or loan, and the obligation to pay mesne profits is in the nature of a "rina." [ibid.]

The conduct of the father in remaining in unlawful possession of another's property cannot be said to be honest but at the same time it cannot be characterised to be so grossly unjust or immoral, or so flagrantly dishonest as to make the debt "Avyavaharika" within the meaning of the Hindu Law. [p. 171, col. 2.]

Case-law and texts discussed.

Per Madhavan Nair, J.—Under the Hindu Law the liability of a son to pay the father's debt rests upon the well-known pious obligation on the part of the son to relieve his father from punishment in a future state, for the non-discharge of debts. The general rule is that the son should discharge his father's debts unless the debts fall within the well-recognised exceptions. [p. 172, col. 2.]

An examination of the nature of the debt, at its inception, is a necessary condition, for finding out whether a particular debt is an immoral debt. [p. 174, col. 2.]

A debt, which is not immoral at its inception, is binding on the son, though subsequently it may be tainted by dishonesty and immorality. [p. 175, col. 2; p. 176, col. 1.]

Improper, imprudent, unreasonable, or dishonest debts are not necessarily immoral. [p. 176, col. 1.]

The son's liability arising by the commission of offences by the father has been always held to be immoral; and the test of benefit to the estate is not a material question for consideration as "the liability of the son depends upon the nature of the act." [ibid.]

The term "rina", strictly understood, means "what is taken under a promise to re-pay," namely, a debt or a loan. But in view of the judicial decisions, it is impossible to give the term this restricted significance [p. 177, cols. 1 & 2.]

A decree for mesne profits is in the nature of a "debt" as understood in Hindu Law. [p. 177, col. 2.]

Decree for mesne profits is not in the nature of "danda" or fine. [ibid.]

Case-law and texts discussed.

Appeal against the decree and judgment of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Tuticorin, in E. P. No. 5 of 1923, in O. S. No. 39 of 1904.

Messrs. K. V. Venkatasubramania Iyer, and P. N. Appuswami Iyer, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. Ramaswami Iyer, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Venkatasubba Rao, J.—The question that is raised by this appeal is, whether in execution of a decree for mesne profits, the shares of the sons of the judgment-debtor in the joint family property are liable to be attached and sold. It is contended for the sons, that the obligation, recognised by the decree, is in respect of a debt, which it is not the pious duty of the sons under the Hindu Law, to discharge.

In regard to the application of the rule enunciated in the ancient Hindu Law Texts, the Courts were confronted from time to time, with great difficulty. The bare statement of the rule is simple enough. But it was found inadequate, when it had to be applied to different and various sets of facts. The result has been want of uniformity in the interpretations, as well as the application of the rule. The large body of case-law on the subject will show that the Judges while theoretically seeming to accept the rule itself, have had to decide each case, on grounds, as far as possible, of equity, justice and good conscience.

A very full, able and careful argument was addressed to us by Mr. Venkatasubramania Iyer, the learned Counsel for the appellants and he strongly contended that the son is not bound to satisfy a decree for mesne profits, passed against the father.

I shall first cite the texts, which have a bearing on this question. (See Ghose's Hindu Law, Third Edition, Vol. I, p. 531, et. seq.)

(1) That son alone, on whom he throws his debt and through whom he obtains immortality, is begotten for the fulfilment of the law.

(2) But money due by a surety or idly promised, or lost by play, or due for spirituous liquor, or what remains unpaid of a fine and a tax or duty, the son, (of the party owing it) shall not be obliged to pay.

Manu.

Money due by a surety, a commercial debt, a fee due to the parents of the bride, debts contracted for spirituous liquor, or in gambling, and a fine shall not involve the sons of the debtor.

Gautama.

(1) If a father have gone abroad, or been subdued by calamity, his debt shall be paid by his sons and grandsons; on their denial, the debt must be proved by witnesses.

(2) A son has not to pay, in this world, his father's debts, incurred for spirituous liquor, for gratification of lust, or in gambling, nor a fine or what remains unpaid of a toll; nor (shall be made good) idle gifts.

Yaganavalkya.

A son must pay a debt, contracted by his father, excepting those debts which have been contracted from love, anger, for spirituous liquor, games or bailments.

The words in the text translated as "contracted from love, anger" are "kama krodha kritam."

Narada.

Sons shall not be made to pay (a debt incurred by their father) for spirituous liquor, for idle gifts, for promises made, under the influences of love or wrath or for suretyship; nor balance of a fine or toll (liquidated in part by their father).

(Promises made "under the influence of love or wrath" is the translation of kama krodha pratisrutham.

Brihaspati.

The son has not to pay a fine, or the balance of a fine or a tax (or toll) or its balance (due by the father) nor Avyavaharika or not Vyavaharika) that which is not proper.

(Vyasa according to the Ratnakara but Usanas according to the Mitakshara).

Subject to the following exceptions, the texts mention certain specific debts as those, which the son is not bound to pay.

In this connection, these debts specifically enumerated present no difficulty. The exceptions are the following: Narada and Brihaspati use a general expression, "debts of love or anger". Usanas uses the word "Avyavaharika". It is the exact import of these general expressions that requires careful examination. I shall, at once, deal with the expression Avyavaharika and postpone the discussion of the words "debts of love or anger" to a later part of my judgment. There has been a conflict of opinion, as regards what this word means.

In Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1), Knight and Chandavarkar, JJ., say that it means more than illegal and immoral and that under the texts the son is not liable for debts, which the father ought not, as a decent and respectable man, to have incurred, that the son is answerable for the debts legitimately incurred by his father and not for those attributed to his failings, follies or caprices. This decision cannot now be regarded as good law; for, judged by this test, the son must be exempt from many debts for which, he is at the present day, without question, held liable. This interpretation does not seem to have met with the approval of Scott, C. J., and Shaw, J., in two later Bombay cases: Ramkrishna Trimbak v. Narayan Shivrao Aras (2) and Hanmant Kashinath v. Ganesh Annaji (3). In Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (4), Mookerjee, J., observes that he is not satisfied that the interpretation adopted in Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1) is quite accurate (page 868*) and that the decision places too restricted a construction upon the term Vyavaharika and excludes debts, for which the son may be held legitimately liable (page 874*). Sadasiva Iyer, J., in Venugopal Naidu v. Ramanadhan Chetty (5) also disapproves of the interpretation of Knight and Chandavarkar, JJ., and seems disposed to adopt Colebrooke's translation, namely, "debt incurred for a cause repugnant to good morals."

If Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1) has, according to Mookerjee, J., placed too restricted a construction on the expression Avyavaharika; what is the true im-

(1) 32 B. 348; 10 Bom. L. R. 297.

(2) 31 Ind. Cas. 301; 40 B. 126; 17 Bom. L. R. 955.

(3) 51 Ind. Cas. 612; 43 A. 612; 21 Bom. L. R. 435.

(4) 12 Ind. Cas. 609; 39 C. 862; 16 C. W. N. 519; 15 C. L. J. 228.

(5) 14 Ind. Cas. 703; 37 M. 458; 23 M. L. J. 61; 11 M. L. T. 427.

*Pages of 39 C.—[Ed.]

port of that word? As deduced from the cases, which have refused to recognise the narrow interpretation, the right meaning may be said to be "grossly immoral or flagrantly unjust." No case has said in so many words that this is the true meaning; but this interpretation alone furnishes the key to the proper understanding of the decision. I am prepared to hold that this is the correct construction.

I shall first deal with the group of cases where the question of the pious obligation arose, in connection with the liability of the father, to account for moneys, received by him as agent, trustee, or in any other capacity.

Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6). In this case, the defendant's father collected sums of money, on account of plaintiff's family, but neither paid them nor accounted for them. The sons were held liable, although the learned Judges expressed the view, that the transaction was a dishonest one, on the defendant's father's part.

In Venugopal Naidu v. Ramanadhan Chetty (5), the father was accountable as trustee, for certain sums and the sons were held liable, on the footing of general principles of morality referred to in Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6). The ground of the decision is that it is a sacred obligation to restore to those lawfully entitled, the money unlawfully retained. The learned Judges observe:—

"Upon any intelligible principles of morality, a debt due by the father, by reason of his having retained for himself money which he was bound to pay to another would be a debt of the most sacred obligation, and for the non-discharge of which punishment, in a future state, might be expected to be inflicted, if in any."

With all respect, this statement does not correctly interpret the Hindu Law. Every debt that is justly due is not necessarily a debt, not tainted with illegality or immorality. On this principle, if a father steals money is it not equally incumbent upon the sons to pay it back? It is not, however, disputed that the son is under no such obligation. The question is, did the father contract the debt for an immoral purpose? And the question is not; does not morality demand that the debt should be paid back? The mistake, if I may say so with respect, arises from a confusion of stand-points. There is hardly any debt, of which it can be said that it is not just that it should be re-paid. But the Hindu Law in dealing with the pious obligation of the son does not look at the question from this point of view.

In Tirumalaiyappa Mudaliar v. Veerabudra (7), Garuda Sanyasayya v. Nerella Muthemma (8) and Venkatacharyulu v. Mohana Panda (9), the sons were held liable for sums misappropriated by the father, as agent or trustee, on the ground that the debt in its inception, was honest and that subsequent dishonesty did not render it illegal or immoral.

In Kanemar Venkappayya v. Krishna-chariya (10), Erasala Gurunatham Chetty v. Addipally Raghavulu Chetty (11), Krishna Charan Mohanti v. Radha Kanto Roy (12) and Niddha Lal v. Collector of Bulandshahr (13), the sons were held liable, for sums misappropriated by the father but the judgment proceeded, on the ground that the father's act amounted not to a crime, but only to a breach of civil duty. It is impossible to understand this distinction, as, on the facts stated, the misapplication of funds was clearly criminal and rendered the father amenable to criminal law.

The argument that found favour in Tirumalaiyappa Mudaliar v. Veerabudra (7) does not seem to have impressed the learned Judges Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ., in Krishna Charan Mohanti v. Radha Kanto Roy (12) referred to above; for they refer to the distinction between an initial wrongful taking and a taking not wrongful, at its inception as a refined distinction and the learned Judges also seem more disposed to adopt the ground stated in Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6). In my opinion, the distinction between a crime and a breach of a civil duty in this context is extremely artificial and finds no support in the texts of the Hindu Law.

Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo Singh (14), Pareman Dass v. Bhattu Mahton (15) and McDowell v. Ragava Chetty (16) fall under a

(7) 4 Ind. Cas. 1030; 19 M. L. J. 759.

(8) 48 Ind. Cas. 740; 9 L. W. 1; 35 M. L. J. 661; 25 M. L. T. 86.

(9) 61 Ind. Cas. 530; 41 M. 214; 12 L. W. 390; (1920) M. W. N. 650; 39 M. L. J. 586.

(10) 31 M. 161; 17 M. L. J. 613; 3 M. L. T. 353; 2 M. L. T. 529.

(11) 31 M. 472; 3 M. L. T. 394; 8 Cr. L. J. 147.

(12) 16 Ind. Cas. 410.

(13) 35 Ind. Cas. 200; 14 A. L. J. 610.

(14) 6 A. 334; A. W. N. (1884) 47; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 852.

(15) 24 C. 672; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1117.

(16) 27 M. 71.

(6) 16 M. 99; 3 M. L. J. 1; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 776.

different category. The sons were held liable for moneys received by the father on the ground that the moneys were taken and misappropriated under circumstances, which constitute the taking itself a criminal offence. The debt was not in its origin clearly immoral and the sons were not on that ground held liable.

I have so far dealt with cases, where the debt arose out of a liability of the father to account for moneys. I shall pause here for a moment to see, if any intelligible principle can be deduced from the cases. It cannot be gainsaid that there is absolute want of harmony, so far as the decisions were made to rest upon particular grounds. But if the facts of the cases are examined, the conflict is only apparent and the true principle appears to be that the sons are not liable, where the moneys were originally obtained by the father by the commission of an offence; the son's liability is, on the other hand, recognised where, in its origin, the debt was not immoral, but there was a supervening dishonest act of the father.

In his very learned argument, Mr. Venkatasubramania Iyer, contended that this was the true position. I entirely agree. But I am not prepared to accept the next step in his argument, that the son is not liable, if there is an element of impropriety—however small—in the father's conduct in incurring the liability. If the father's conduct merely deserves blame or censure, the sons will not, according to this contention, be liable. This seems to me an extreme argument and, in my opinion, is not warranted by the texts of the Hindu Law, nor is the weight of modern authority in its favour. If it be borne in mind, that the debts condemned by the Smritis in this connection are debts such as those due for spirituous liquor, or for lust, or for gambling it will be obvious that the ancient lawgivers did not intend the sons to enjoy immunity, merely because the father's conduct was not above reproach, judged by the highest standards, of morality. So far as the decided cases are concerned, I must say, there is a want of uniformity; but, in my opinion, those rulings, which have laid down a contrary rule cannot be accepted as good law.

In Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (4), the son was held liable, in respect of a decree passed for damages against the father for injury done to the crops of a third party, by the obstruction of a channel, through which he was entitled to irrigate his lands. In Chandrika Ram Tiwari v. Narain Prasad Roy (17), the son was likewise held liable to answer a decree for damages, obtained against the father, for cutting trees and demolishing a house. A different view was taken in Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1), where a dam was erected by the father, which obstructed the passage of water and the son was held not liable to pay damages adjudged against the father.

This conflict is illustrated by several other cases. In Ratan Lal v. Birjbhukan Saran (18), the son was held not liable to satisfy a decree, obtained against the father, for damages for retracting from a bid at an auction. In Mahabir Prasad v. Siri Narayan (19), it was held that a son was not liable for money due on a contract of indemnity, by the father, in respect of a property sold. In Ramiengar v. Secretary of State for India (20), the Court-fee payable to the Government by a father who brought a suit in forma pauperis was held to be an immoral debt. In Sunder Lal v. Raghunandan Prasad (21), the son was held not liable for damages, awarded against the father for malicious prosecution.

On the other hand, in Raghunandan Prasad v. Chem Ram (22), it was held that it was the pious duty of a son to pay money due under an indemnity clause in a sale-deed, executed by the father and in Hari Singh v. Sant Prasad Singh (23), where one of two purchasers wrongly withdrew the whole of the purchase-money and was directed by decree of Court to re-pay the other purchaser's share, the son was held liable, on the ground that the act of the father was not immoral or criminal. In Sumer Singh v. Chaube Liladhar (24), it was held that the money borrowed by the father to defend a suit for defamation is a debt, which a Hindu son is liable to pay; from the report, it does not appear whether the (17) 79 Ind. Cas. 1036; 22 A. L. J. 468; 46 A. 617; (1924) A. I. R. (A.) 745; L. R. 5 A. 378 Civ.

(18) 61 Ind. Cas. 774.

(19) 46 Ind. Cas. 27; 3 Pat. L. J. 396; 4 P. L. W. 437; (1918) Pat. 328.

(20) 4 Ind. Cas. 105; 20 M. L. J. 89; 6 M. L. T. 308.

(21) 83 Ind. Cas. 413; 3 Pat. 250; 5 P. L. T. 135; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 465.

(22) 27 Ind. Cas. 895.

(23) 32 Ind. Cas. 969.

(24) 9 Ind. Cas. 624; 33 A. 472; 8 A. L. J. 306.

father was eventually found guilty of defamation or not. In Khalilul Rahman v. Gobind Pershad (25), it was held that the exception under the Mitakshara could not be extended to transactions, however, "unconscientiously imprudent" or "unreasonable" they might be.

Indeed, it is unnecessary to multiply these references. In the application of the rule, there is a great divergence of opinion.

In some of these cases, the father's conduct has been held to be immoral, by too rigid a standard being applied.

I would state the rules thus:—

(1) If the debt is in its inception not immoral, subsequent dishonesty of the father does not exempt the son.

(2) It is not every impropriety or every lapse from right conduct that stamps the debt as immoral. The son can claim immunity only, when the father's conduct is utterly repugnant to good morals, or is grossly unjust or flagrantly dishonest.

The rule as stated is necessarily elastic; but I am not aware that any test has in any case been so far laid down, which is not open to this criticism. The question no doubt becomes one of degree, but the rule of pious obligation, in its very nature, is incapable of more precise definition. Applying the two rules I have just enunciated, the sons cannot claim immunity from liability for mesne profits on the ground that they necessarily and always arise from an immoral transaction.

It is of the utmost importance to remember that it is foreign to any enquiry on this subject to consider, whether the son has really been benefited by the father's act. Untrammelled by the peculiar doctrine of the Hindu Law, or by authority, one would be disposed to think that, if the son was benefited, it would be his duty to pay back the debt; if he is not, there would be no such duty cast on him. But this utterly ethical consideration cannot be a factor at all, in the determination of this question; for, as Mookerjee, J., observes in Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (4), the liability of the son depends upon the nature of the debt and the test of benefit is immaterial. By an act of theft, on the part of the father, the estate might have benefited, but the son is not liable. By a reckless conduct, short of immorality, the father might have rendered the family desolate, but the son is liable. Reference, therefore, to abstract principles of morality, ignores this essential feature and is, therefore, apt to mislead.

Next, I pass on to a text, on which great stress was laid, by the learned Counsel and which has not, he contends, received its due share of recognition from Courts. I have referred to the text of Brihaspati, where, in the enumeration of obnoxious debts, he mentions promises made under the influence of lust or wrath, "kama krodha pratisrutham."

These words are supposed to have been more clearly and with greater precision defined by a Smriti of Katyayana.

The two following verses are ascribed to him:—

(1) The debt due upon a written bond, or on a promise to a woman, who was another's before (and not married by him,) is called a debt for love.

(2) Having done an injury to another, or destroyed his things, through anger, if anything is promised in satisfaction, it is called a debt for anger.

(Translation of Ghose, See this "Hindu Law, page 546).

Mr. Venkatasubramania Iyer's contention is that liability for mesne profits falls within the second verse above quoted.

The text of Katyayana has been referred to, by various commentators, of great authority, Apararka in his commentary on Yagnavalkya, after giving the text of Narada, which contains the words "kama krodha kritam" and then citing the two verses of Katyayana proceeds thus:—

"This is the meaning:—Whatever wealth is promised to another, for his gratification, on account of injury, caused to him due to loss of property, that debt is krodha krita, i. e., debt promised "under the influence of anger."

Smriti Chandrika, in the Chapter "Runa Dana Prakarana" gives the text of Brihaspati and interprets the expression "kama krodha pratisruta" in the words of Katyayana, who is referred to by name. The subject is dealt with thus:—

"Kama pratisruta and krodha pratisruta are explained by Katyayana". (Here the two verses are given) and the relevant verse is thus explained: "Where injury, etc.", means this "if, having caused from wrath, injury or loss of property to another, for its gratification, wealth is promised, that debt is krodhaja.

Saraswathi Vilasa's treatment is on lines very much similar to that of Smriti Chandrika and an extensive quotation is unnecessary.

Vivada Ratnakara cites the text of Katyayana. In the section, Runa Dana Taranda, the author quotes the text of Brihaspati and says "kama krodha pratisruta will be subsequently dealt with." Then he cites the text of Gautama and comments on it and next Vyasa or Usanas is likewise quoted and commented on and the commentator then gives the verses of Katyayana, without mentioning the authorship. He explains "kama krodha krita" thus:—If under the influence of wrath, another's property is destroyed, or injury is caused to him, and to give wealth for its gratification, if a debt is incurred, that debt is called krodha krita". The author concludes the discussion with these words:—

"These are just the kama krodha pratisruta referred to above.

Viramitrodaya similarly quotes Brihaspati and to explain the import of the words "kama krodha pratisruta, Katyayana is called in aid. Vivada Chintamani and Parasara Madhaviya also cite Katyayana and refer to him by name. Their treatment of the subject is more or less similar to that of Viramitrodaya and does not, therefore, require any further detailed notice.

Vivada Bhangarnaya (Jagannadha's Digest) similarly refers to Katyayana and contains a long discussion upon his text. It is unnecessary to extract the passage, as it can be readily found in Colebrooke's translation. The learned translator has, however, failed to understand the second verse of Katyayana, the one with which we are concerned and this mistake has vitiated the whole rendering, in so far as it relates to debts, incurred under the influence of anger. According to Colebrooke, the debt condemned is that incurred for payment to cause injury, in order to gratify anger:

"What is borrowed to give away, for the purpose of destroying another's property, or injuring another man, through resentment, is a debt, incurred under the influence of wrath."

According to this translation, the gratification referred to is the gratification of the debtor's anger, or to put the matter simply:

the debt contemplated is money promised to a ruffian, to gratify the debtor's resentment, by hurting another, or injuring his property. It is clear beyond doubt that Colebrooke is wrong, as not only the text of Katyayana is not susceptible of this interpretation, but the rendering is also opposed to that uniformly adopted, by the large number of commentators, who have expounded the text.

I shall now, in the light of this text of Katyayana, discuss the son's liability for mesne profits. Injury to another, or his property, from wrath, is what is contemplated. Is there any necessary connection between the awarding of mesne profits and destruction of another's property by wrath?

I would understand Katyayana's text to mean that the injury inflicted, or damage caused should be the result of a wanton and flagrant violation of another's right from anger, engendered by malice or revenge, for instance, an act of incendiarism. To such and similar cases only, the text of Katyayana is applicable. Why should it be assumed that Katyayana was laying down a very different rule from what the other Rishis did?

In my opinion, Katyayana gave, by way of illustration, an instance of a grossly immoral debt and I am not prepared to hold that he intended to enlarge and add to the class of debts from the payment of which the son is exempt. My view, therefore, is that in regard to the question of liability for mesne profits, the text of Katyayana does not lead to a different result.

I have so far dealt with the question, on the footing that it is not concluded by authority. The learned Vakil for the respondents relied upon Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (26), a decision of the Judicial Committee as laying down that a son is under a pious obligation, to satisfy a decree for mesne profits, obtained against the father. But the appellant's Counsel contended that the case is no authority for this position, as it only decided that the debt in question was a joint family debt, which the son was bound to pay, the other question regarding the son's duty to pay it, as a father's debt not having been decided. I have very carefully gone through the judgment of the Privy Council, the judgment of Cunningham, J., in the High Court and the argument of Counsel, as reported both in the Indian Law Report Volume and in the Indian Appeals Volume and I entertain no doubt that the question really decided is the son's liability under the pious obligation to pay his father's debt. It is pointed out that there is no reference, either to the original texts, or to the ancient writers, in the argument or in the judgment. But I cannot, on that ground alone, hold that the point was not decided.

(26) 13 C. 21; 13 I. A. 1; 10 Ind. Jur. 151; 4 Sar. P. O. J. 632; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 510.

I may state in the argument of Mr. Doyné, as reported there is a reference to the contention that the origin of the liability for mesne profits is a wrongful ouster: [see Nanomi Babuasin v. Madhun Mohan (26).]

In Karan Singh v. Bhup Singh (27), a Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court has understood the Privy Council decision in this sense. The Allahabad case just cited is also a direct authority, which favours the respondent's contention.

The observations of Rampini and Mookerjee, JJ., in Peary Lal Sinha v. Chandi Charan Sinha (28), though obiter, to the effect that a son is under a pious obligation to discharge a decree for mesne profits, obtained against his father, are entitled to great weight and are quoted with approval in many modern treatises on Hindu Law: (See Sircar Sastri's Hindu Law, 1924, Edition, page 347; Mayne, page 405).

I shall now dispose of two minor contentions. First, it was suggested that the liability for mesne profits is in the nature of "danda" or fine. I am not prepared to accept this contention.

In Prayag Sahu v. Kasi Sahu (29), costs, incurred by a father, in an unsuccessful litigation, were held not to come within the term "danda."

In Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6), the sons were held bound to pay the costs of the suit, as awarded against their father.

Secondly, it was contended that the obligation to pay mesne profits is not in the nature of a debt, that it is not in fact, "rina" which means strictly "what is taken under a promise to re-pay." I agree with Mookerjee, J. [see Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (4).] that the word "rina" as used in the texts has a much wider application than a mere debt or loan. I am prepared to go further than merely hold that at any rate a judgment debt comes within the expression "rina" for, if this narrow construction be adopted, a son can be held liable, only after a decree is passed against the father; whereas, if he is originally impleaded in the suit for damages, he can resist it, on the ground that there has been no debt, as there has not been a judgment. This would be a clear anomaly. In Raman Pandithan v. Satha Kudumban (30), when the sale by the father of the son's interest was set aside, and the vendee brought a suit to recover the price of that share, it was held that what he was seeking to recover was a debt and in Garuda Sanyasayya v. Nerella Muthemma (8), the learned Judges observed that the subtle distinction between debt and accountability did not commend itself to them.

Now, let me turn to the facts, which led to a decree for mesne profits. One Subramania died in 1880, leaving two widows and a son by each, Kandasami and Balasubramania. After Subramania's death, there was a partition, the mothers representing their sons and after the latter became majors, they ratified the partition in 1902. Kandasami died in 1903. His widow brought a suit against Balasubramania, for possession of property, on the ground that they fell to Kandasami's share at the partition. The suit was resisted by Balasubramania, who pleaded that there was no completed partition. A decree was passed in favour of the widow of Kandasami, for possession of the property and mesne profits. The suit was filed on the 20th October 1904, and the final decree of the High Court confirming the Subordinate Judge's judgment was made on the 25th July 1912. The mesne profits awarded were for the period between the date of the plaint and September 1912. After the properties were taken in execution and before mesne profits were recovered, Balasubramania died in 1922 and his sons now raise the question that they are not liable to answer the decree for mesne profits passed against their father. I am prepared to concede that the act of Balasubramania was not by any means honest, but at the same time his conduct in being in unlawful possession of the properties is not so grossly unjust or immoral, or so flagrantly dishonest as to make the debt "Avyavaharika" within the meaning of the Hindu Law.

(27) 27 A. 161; 1 A. L. J. 310; A. W. N. (1904) 151.

(28) 11 O. W. N. 103; 5 C. L. J. 80.

(29) 6 Ind. Cas. 258; 11 C. L. J. 599; 14 C. W. N. 659.

(30) 33 Ind. Cas. 387; 4 L. W. 366; 31 M. L. J. 502; 20 M. L. T. 320; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 217.

In the result, the appeal fails and is dismissed costs.

Madhavan Nair, J.—This appeal is directed against an order of the Subordinate Judge of Tinnevely, confirming the attachment of the joint family properties in the hands of the sons of one Balasubramania Pillai, in execution of a decree for mesne profits obtained against him. The respondent, a Hindu widow, instituted O.S. No. 39 of 1901, on the file of the Subordinate Judge of Tinnevely against Balasubramania Pillai, the father of the appellants and the half brother of her deceased husband, for the recovery of some specified items of immovable property, for past and future mesne profits and for various other reliefs. Alleging that there was a family partition in which separate items of properties were allotted to her late husband and the defendant, she stated, that after her husband's death the defendant interfered with her separate enjoyment of those and other properties and took possession of them. The defendant contended that there was no completed partition. Overruling this plea, the Subordinate Judge gave the plaintiff a decree for possession of the lands and other properties and also for past and future mesne profits. This decree was confirmed by the High Court with some slight modifications. The decree-holder sought to execute the decree for mesne profits, for the years 1901 (the date of the plaint) to 1912, by attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's family properties. He having died in the course of the execution proceedings, his sons, who are the present appellants, were brought on record, as his representatives. They contended that the decree-holder is not entitled to proceed against the family properties, which they have taken by survivorship on the grounds; (1) that the decree for mesne profits is in the nature of an immoral and illegal debt, contracted by their father, which they are not bound to discharge, on the ground of pious obligation to pay their father's debts, under the Hindu Law; and (2) that their father sent the income of the properties in his possession on dancing girls and boon companions. The Subordinate Judge overruled both these contentions and passed the order, now appealed against, confirming the attachment of the family properties. The question arising for decision is whether joint family properties, in the hands of the sons can be attached and sold in execution of a decree for mesne profits, obtained against their father.

Under the Hindu Law, the liability of a son to pay the father's debt rests upon the well-known pious obligation on the part of the son to relieve his father from punishment in a future state, for non-discharge of the debts. The general rule is that the son should discharge his father's debts, unless the debts fall within the well-recognized exceptions. In a very learned judgment, in Chakouri Mahtan v. Ganga Proshad (4) Mookerjee, J., after an examination of the various texts, bearing on the question, has thus summarised these exceptions:—

“If the provisions of all these texts are summarised the result appears to be that the debts, which a son is not under any obligation to pay, may be grouped as follows:—(1) debts due for spirituous liquors; (2) debts due for lust; (3) debts due for gambling; (4) unpaid fines; (5) unpaid tolls; (6) useless gifts or promises without consideration or made under the influence of lust or wrath; (7) suretyship debts; (8) commercial debts; and (9) debts that are not Vyavaharika; i. e., debts that are not lawful, usual, or customary, or if we accept the version of Colebrooke, debts for a cause repugnant to good morals.”

Bearing these exceptions in mind, the learned Counsel for the appellants has argued before us; (1) that the decree for mesne profits in this case is in the nature of an Avyavaharika debt; (2) that it is a debt which has originated under the influence of wrath; and (3) that a decree for mesne profits is not in the nature of a ‘debt’ at all.

The first question to be considered is whether the decretal debt in this case is Avyavaharika. The term Vyavaharika appears in the texts of Usanas, cited in the Mitakshara (commentary on Yagnavalkya, Bk. II, verse 47) which runs as follows:—

Dandam va dandasesham va sulkam thathseshmev va na dathavyam thu puthrana yathra na Vyavaharikhum.

“A fine, or the balance of a fine, likewise a bribe or a toll, or the balance of it, are not to be paid by the son, neither shall he discharge a debt, which is not lawful.”

There has been a considerable divergence of opinion, amongst the Judges, as regards the precise significance of this term and this has given rise to conflicting decisions

In the opinion of Mookerjee, J., the term Vyvaharika is equivalent to "lawful, usual, or customary." Sadasiva Iyer, J., is inclined to adopt Colebrook's paraphrase of "Avyavaharika debt," namely, "debt incurred for a cause repugnant to good morals," as more nearly approaching the true import of the expression, than any of the meanings given by the other authorities. He himself would paraphrase "Avyavaharika debt" as a debt, which is not supportable as valid by legal arguments and on which no right can be established in the creditor's favour, in a Court of Justice: [See Venugopal Naidu v. Ramadhan Chetty (5).] The term Avyavaharika is understood by Knight and Chandavarkar, JJ., in Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1) as "unusual or not sanctioned by law or custom." According to these learned Judges

"Put into simple English, the text amounts to this: that the son is not to be held liable for debts, which the father ought not, as a decent and respectable man, to have incurred."

The learned Counsel for the appellant argues that according to the decided cases, the real test to discover whether a debt is an immoral debt in the sense in which that term is understood in Hindu Law, is to find out the nature of the debt, at its inception and, if it is found that it has come into existence, under circumstances involving culpability or impropriety, on the father's part, and that it is, therefore, a debt, which a decent and respectable man would not incur, then he urges that it is an immoral, or illegal debt and the son is not at all liable to discharge it. He has sought to elucidate this principle by an examination of reported decisions, in which the son was held liable and also of those in which the son was held not liable, the most important of which are the following:—Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6), McDowell v. Ragava Chetty (16), Kanemar Venkappayya v. Krishnachariya (10), Erasala Gurunatham Chetty v. Addipally Raghavalu Chetty (11), Venkatacharyulu v. Mohana Panda (9), Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo Singh (14), Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1), Hanmant Kashinath v. Ganesh Annaji (3), Krishna Charan Mohanti v. Radha Kanto Roy (12), Niddha Lal v. Collector of Bulandshahr (13), Chandrika Ram Tiwari v. Narain Prasad Rai (17), Gadadhar Ramanuj Das v. Ghana Shyam Das (31) and Gursarandas v. Mohan Lal (32).

In Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6), it was held that, when a decree was passed against a Hindu father, for money dishonestly retained by him, from the plaintiff's family, to which he was accountable, in respect of it, the debt was not of an illegal or immoral nature, so as to exclude the pious obligation of the son to discharge it. In discussing the question, whether the debt was tainted with immorality and illegality, the learned Judges, after stating the general rule, observe that:

"Upon any intelligible principles of morality, a debt due by the father, by reason of his having detained for himself money which he was bound to pay to another would be a debt of the most sacred obligation, and for the non-discharge of which punishment, in the future state-might be expected to be inflicted, if in any," and then state that "The son is not bound to do anything, to relieve his father from the consequences of his own vicious indulgences, but he is surely bound to do that which his father himself would do were it possible, viz., to restore to those lawfully entitled money he has unlawfully retained."

This case has been distinguished and explained in McDowell v. Ragava Chetty (16). In that case, the father had taken money and misappropriated it, under circumstances, "which constituted the taking itself a criminal offence." Following the decisions in Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo Singh (14) and Pareman Dass v. Bhattu Mahton (15), it was held that in such circumstances the sons cannot be held liable, under the rule of Hindu Law, to pay the debts so incurred by the father. In Mahabir Prasad v. Basdeo Singh (14), the decree debt against the father, for which the son was sought to be made liable, was for money which he had embezzled and for which he was convicted and the son was held not liable to pay such debt, as the debt was an immoral debt. In Pareman Dass v. Bhattu Mahton (15), a decree against the father for damages for crops stolen by him was held to be not binding on the sons. The decision in Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6) was distinguished by the learned Judges in McDowell v. Ragava Chetty (16), on the ground that "the withholding of the money in Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6) amounted to nothing more than a breach of civil duty." In Erasala Gurunatham Chetty v. Addipally Raghavalu Chetty (11) the joint family property in the hands of the son was held liable, for the repayment of moneys misappropriated by the father, which were received by him, for the purpose of being paid to others, in the course of a kuri transaction, on the ground that the debt was not an immoral debt. In arriving at that conclusion, the learned Judges thus pointed out the distinction between the decisions in Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6) and McDowell v. Ragava Chetty (16).

(31) 47 Ind. Cas. 212; 3 Pat. L. J. 533.

(32) 76 Ind. Cas. 907; 4 L. 93; (1923) A. I. R. (L) 309.

In McDowell v. Ragava Chetty (16), the Court expressly based its decision, on the ground that the money was taken by the father and misappropriated under circumstances, which constituted the taking itself a criminal offence : whereas it was pointed out that the father's acts in Natasayyan v. Ponnusami (6), though characterised by the learned Judges as dishonest, amounted to nothing more than a breach of civil duty.

It was then mentioned that in the case before them, it was not shown that the father's act amounted to more than a breach of civil duty. The same distinction between a breach of civil duty and a criminal act was emphasised also in Erasala Gurunatham Chetty v. Addipally Raghavalu Chetty (11), Krishna Charan Mohanti v. Radha Kanto Roy (12), Niddha Lal v. Collector of Bulandshahr (13), Gadadhar Ramannuj Das v. Ghana Shyam Das (31), Gurusarandas v. Mohan Lal (32) and Hanmant Kashinath v. Ganesh Annaji (3), decisions where the sons were held liable for sums misappropriated by the father.

In Tirumalaiyappa Mudaliar v. Veerabudra (7), Garuda Sanyasayya v. Nerella Muthemma (8) and Venkatacharyulu v. Panda Mohana (9), it was held that if a debt was incurred by the father, as an agent or trustee, his son is liable to pay the debt and the liability of the son is not in any way affected by the fact that the father subsequently misappropriated the same, or even made himself criminally liable for it.

This distinction between a breach of civil duty and a criminal act is availed of, by the appellant's learned Counsel, for drawing the general inference, that, if the debt has come into existence, under circumstances, sufficient to condemn the conduct of the father, though they may not be strong enough to procure his conviction in a Criminal Court, then the son can claim absolute immunity from the payment of such debt. No such general inference is warranted from the decisions that I have examined. While discussing the above cases, in Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (4), Mookerjee, J., no doubt, points out that this limitation between breach of a civil duty and a criminal act is "real though refined" but as observed in Sreenivasa Aiyangar v. Kuppuswami Aiyangar (33), "the distinction between a civil and criminal breach of duty is very thin and it would not be easy, in all cases to say, whether the breach of trust is of such a character, as would not subject a father to a prosecution. Assuming that a son is bound to pay the undischarged debts of the father, for relieving him from the pangs of hell, it is difficult to see, why he should be relieved from paying the debts of his father, incurred by the commission of a criminal act."

However, it is not necessary for the purposes of this case, to decide the question, whether the distinction adverted to is a real one or not, as the debt in this case admittedly has not been incurred by doing a criminal act. In my opinion, these decisions do not enable us, to deduce the general principle, contended for, on behalf of the appellants but they no doubt show by way of inference—and to this extent they support the appellant's argument—that an examination of the nature of the debt, at its inception, is a necessary condition, for finding out whether a particular debt is an immoral debt; viewed in this light, they also serve to illustrate how this necessary condition is to be applied, in different and varying circumstances.

The argument that the son should be exempted from discharging debts, which the father ought not, as a decent and respectable man, to have incurred derives strong support from the decision in Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1). In that case, the plaintiff obtained a decree against the defendant's father, for damages caused by a dam erected by the latter, which obstructed the passage of water to the plaintiff's lands. On the death of the defendant's father, the decree was sought to be executed against the son, the defendant, with respect to the ancestral estate, in his hands. It was held that the son was not liable. The correctness of that decision has been doubted in Bombay: see Ramkrishna Trimbak v. Narayan Shivrao Aras (2) and Hanmant Kashinath v. Ganesh Annaji (3) and it has not been accepted as good law, in other High Courts also: [see Sumer Singh v. Chaube Liladhar (24), Venugopal Naidu v. Ramadathan Chetty (5), and Garuda Sanyasayya v. Nerella Muthemma (8). In Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (4), it was held that a decree for damages, obtained against a Hindu father, on account of injury done to the plaintiff's crops, by the obstruction of a channel, through which he was entitled to irrigate his lands, could be executed against the joint family properties, in the hands of the sons. In Chandrika Ram Tiwari v. Narain Prasad Rai (17), the son was held liable to pay damages, obtained against a Hindu father, for wrongfully cutting down trees, that did not belong to him, and for demolishing a house. If the test laid down in Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1) is the correct one, then it seems to me that these decisions as well as those cases of misappropriation of money by the father, which we have examined above, barring those, where the taking itself constituted a criminal offence, must be held to be wrong. The principle laid down in Durbar Khachar v. Khachar Harsur (1) seems to have been accepted by Wallis, C. J., in his judgment in Sreenivasa Aiyangar v. Kuppuswami Aiyangar (33). In that case one of the questions for consideration was whether, when the father's alienation of joint family property has been set aside, the sons are bound to refund the moneys paid to the father, in consideration of the alienation, on the ground that the sons incurred a pious obligation, to discharge the liability. Wallis, C. J., observed:—

(33) 64 Ind. Cas. 698; 44 M. 801; 14 L. W. 78; (1921) M. W. N. 630.

"Any liability which the father may incur to the alienees on such unconditional setting aside of the alienation arises from his own immoral act in making the alienation in the first instance, in breach of the duty which he owed to his sons as manager of the joint family property."

With very great respect, I am not prepared to accept this view of the son's liability.

If the question is to be looked at from the standpoint of the father's duty towards the sons, then the sons will be able to claim exemption from liability in almost all the cases that may be brought against them. Seshagiri Iyer, J., the other learned Judge, who heard the case, though he discusses the question of the pious obligation of the son, to pay the father's debts in the course of his judgment does not record any opinion on this question, but bases his judgment on quite a different ground.

I do not think it is necessary to discuss in detail the various other cases quoted before us, as they do not in any way support the general principles contended for by the appellant's learned Counsel, but only serve to illustrate the conflict of opinion, prevailing in the various High Courts, as regards the application of the rule, regarding the son's liability, to pay the father's debts. To take a few instances: In Mahabir Prasad v. Siri Narayan (19), a son was held not liable for money, due on a contract of indemnity, made by the father. In Ramiengar v. Secretary of State for India (20), it has held that the son was not liable to pay the Government costs, incurred by a father, who brought a suit in forma pauperis, on the ground that the debt was an immoral debt. It was held in Raghunandan Prasad v. Chem Ram (22), that the son was bound to pay the money due under an indemnity clause, provided in a sale-deed, executed by the father, on the ground that the debt is not an illegal and immoral one. In Khalilul Rahman v. Govind Pershad (25), the son was held liable to pay a debt, contracted by the father, for what was described as a highly needless and imprudent purpose of establishing an adoption by litigation, which ruined a prosperous family. For other instances see Ratan Lal v. Birjbhukan Saran (18) and Hari Singh v. Sant Prosad Singh (23).

This conflict is probably due to a confusion of the various standpoints, from which the nature of a particular debt may be regarded, viz., the standpoint of the creditor, the standpoint of the son (virtually the debtor) and the detached standpoint of an outsider. In view of the various decisions we have examined, it is obvious that an attempt to lay down a general test or a fresh interpretation of the rule, which would apply to all cases must be absolutely futile. The following conclusions emerge from the decided cases (1) A debt, which is not immoral, at its inception, is binding on the son, though subsequently it may be tainted by dishonesty and immorality; (2) improper, imprudent, unreasonable, or dishonest debts are not necessarily immoral; (3), their liability arising by the commission of offences by the father has been always held to be immoral; and (4) the test of benefit to the estate is not a material question for consideration, as "the liability of the son depends upon the nature of the act:" see Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (4). In my view, the interpretation, sought to be put upon the expression "an Aavyavaharika debt" by the learned Counsel for the appellants, is not supported by the texts of Hindu Law, or by the above-mentioned decided cases, to which he has drawn our attention.

The facts of the case and the findings of the Judges were also referred to by the learned Counsel, apparently for the purpose of showing that there was a wanton invasion of property, by the father of the appellants, which would bring his conduct within the "rule of culpability or impropriety," which he wished to enunciate and with which I have already dealt. I am prepared to assume that the conduct of the father has been dishonest. Except the odium and impropriety, attaching to the unlawful taking and retention of another person's property which exist in all cases of this description, no circumstances calling for special condemnation are disclosed in the records. The facts of the case and the findings of the Judges do not, in my opinion, lend any special support to the legal arguments advanced on behalf of the appellants.

The next argument of the appellant's learned Counsel is that a decree for mesne profits must be considered to be in the nature of a "debt due to anger." This is based on the text of Brihaspati, as explained by Katyayana and in this connection, the learned Counsel has referred to Apararka's interpretation of Katyayana's text and also to Smriti Chandrika (Mysore Sanskrit Series, page 396), Saraswati Vilasa (Mss. in Adyar Library), Vivada Ratnakara (Bibliotheca Indica, page 58), Viramitrodaya (Jibanda Vidyasagar's Edition, page 343), Vivada Chintamani page 17, Parasara Madhaviya (Bibliotheca Indica page 198) to show how the expression "debt incurred in anger" (kama krodha pratisrutam) occurring in the text of Brihaspati has been explained by Katyayana.

The text of Brihaspati runs as follows:—
Sourakshikam vritha dhanam kama krodha-prathisorutham prathibhavyam danda sulkasesham putrain dāpayath.

"The sons are not compellable to pay sums due by their father, for spirituous liquors, for losses at play, for promises made without consideration, or under the influence of lust or of wrath, or sums for which he was a surety; or a fine, or a toll, or the balance of either"

(Colebrooke's translation).

The following is the text of Katyayana:

Likhitham muktham, vapi dhayam yathu prathisorutham parapurvsthyii thathu vidhyath kamakritham rinam yathra himsam samuthpadhya krodhravyam vinasya vauktham thushtikaram yathnu, vidhyath krodhakritham thu thath.

"The debt due upon a written bond or on a promise to a woman, who was another's wife before and not married by him is called a debt for love".

"Having done an injury to another, or destroyed his things, through anger, if anything is promised in satisfaction it is called a debt for anger".

(Ghose's translation).

The argument of the learned Counsel is that the above text of Katyayana has been wrongly understood by Colebrooke in his Digest and misled by his comment, lawyers and Judges have not correctly appreciated the significance of the expression "debt incurred under the influence of wrath", occurring in Brihaspati and that, if that expression is properly understood, as explained in Katyayana's text, then a decree for mesne profits, comes, within the scope of that explanation and is, therefore, a debt, which falls within the category of debts, which the sons are not bound to pay. Colebrooke's translation runs as follows:

"What a man has promised, with or without a writing, to give to a woman, who had another husband before, let the Judge consider, as a debt under the influence of lust."

(2) But what has been promised to gratify resentment, by hurting another, or by destroying his property, let the Judge consider, as a debt incurred under the influence of wrath."

The second verse is thus explained in Colebrooke's Digest:

"What is borrowed to give away, for the purpose of destroying another's property, or injuring another man, through resentment, is a debt incurred under the influence of wrath."

According to this translation, the debt which the son is not liable to pay, is the money, which has been promised to one employed (a ruffian for instance), to gratify the promisor's resentment, by hurting another, or by destroying property. The interpretation by Colebrooke of Katyayana's text appears to be wrong, as the Sanskrit text does not support it and as it is also opposed to the interpretation, put upon the text, by the various commentators. However, the debt, for which the decree for mesne profits was passed in this case, not being shown in any sense to have been incurred in anger, the argument must be rejected. In this connection, it may be observed that a similar argument, advanced in support of the objections to the attachment of the joint family property, in execution of a money-decree obtained against a Hindu father, for his failure to account, as a trustee, was overruled by the learned Judges, in Hanmat Kashinath v. Ganesh Annaji (3).

It has been next argued that the liability of a son to pay a debt, incurred by his father, should be restricted to cases, in which the debt is a contractual obligation and that a decree for mesne profits cannot be considered to be a debt in this sense. The argument receives some support from the observations of Trevelyan and Beverley, JJ., in Pareman Dass v. Bhattu Mahton (15). As already pointed out, that was a case, where a decree was passed against the father, for damages for crops stolen by him. In overruling the argument, that there was an antecedent debt, the learned Judges state:—

"The cases cited refer to transactions which had been entered into by way of a contract or something approaching a contract between the father and some other person and the debt which was so contracted it became the pious duty of the son to pay off. But here there was no debt antecedent to the decree. There was merely a right to damages for a wrongful and criminal act; and so those cases would have no application to the present case".

The argument is based upon the meaning of the term "rina" as used in the texts. No doubt, the term "rina" strictly understood, means "What is taken under a promise to re-pay" (see Sabda Kalpadruma, Vol. I), namely, a debt or a loan. But in view of the judicial decisions, it is impossible to give the term this restricted significance. As observed by Mookerjee, J., in Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga Proshad (4):

"There is no substantial difference in principle between a case in which a person is under an obligation to re-pay money which he has actually borrowed and a case in which he is bound to discharge an obligation created by a judgment of Court. It is worthy of note that the dictum on Pareman Dass v. Bhattu Mahton (15) is of a very qualified character and fully recognises that a right to damages might be deemed to create a debt even before the suit is brought for its enforcement. In any event after a decree has been made in favour of the successful plaintiff, he is entitled to realise from his defeated opponent a sum of money precisely in the same manner as if he had actually advanced to the latter a sum of money by way of loan".

In Raman Pandithan v. Satha Kudumban (30), when a sale by the father of property, including the sons' share, was set aside as regards the son's share and a purchaser consequently brought a suit for recovering a portion of the consideration paid for the sale, it was held that "there was a debt due from the father, when the properties were sold" and that the plaintiff was suing "to recover a portion of the debt". In Garuda Sanyasayya v. Nerella Muthemma (8), which held that the son is accountable for the misappropriation of trust funds by his father and grand-father, the subtle distinction drawn between "accountability" and "debt" for the purpose of exempting the son from liability, was not accepted by the Court. For the above reasons, the argument that a decree for mesne profits is not in the nature of a "debt" as understood in Hindu Law, must also be rejected.

Lastly it was suggested that the decree for mesne profits is in the nature of "danda" or fine, but no authority has been cited in support of this argument. In Prayag Sahu v. Kasi Sanu (29), it was held that costs awarded against a Mitakshara father, who was unsuccessful in a litigation, do not come within the term "danda" or fine in the text of Yajnavalkya.

Thus far, the arguments have proceeded on the assumption that the question for decision in this case is not concluded by authority; but as argued by the learned Vakil for the respondent, it seems to me that the point is really concluded by the decision of the Privy Council in Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (26), which is a direct authority on the point, and that decision is really against the appellants' contention. In that case, in an ejectment suit, brought against the father, the plaintiff obtained a decree for mesne profits and joint family property was sold, in execution of that decree. Two questions arose for decision before the Privy Council, namely, (1) whether the sale in execution proceedings conveyed to the purchaser the entire joint family property, or only the father's co-parcenary interest in it; (2) whether if the entire joint family property was conveyed, the sons could object to such a sale. After having held on the first question, that "the purchaser had succeeded in showing that he brought the entirety of the estate, which could be lawfully sold to him, their Lordships proceed to deal with the second question in this way".

"That brings their Lordships to consider the nature of the debt in this case. There was a great deal of discussion, whether the debt originated in the loan of Rs. 45,000, or in Girdhari's receipt of the mesne profits for which the decree was given. It appears to their Lordships that the new debt for which the decree was made is the foundation of the sale. But, whichever it was, they think the High Court are clearly right in holding that it must be taken as a joint family debt. The Subordinate Judge does not give any opinion in this point. If it is a joint family debt, the sale to answer it, effected either by Girdhari or in a suit against him, cannot be successfully impeached."

In what sense did their Lordships of the Privy Council use the expression, "joint family debt", in the paragraph just now extracted? It has been argued by the learned Counsel for the appellants that the debt was held to be a joint family debt, because in the suit in which the decree was passed, the family was represented by the father as karta, that he defended the suit in this capacity, as manager of the family and that the question whether the decree "for mesne profits was in the nature of an immoral debt was not considered in that case. It is clear to our minds that the question must have been considered by their Lordships of the Privy Council and that in using the expression "joint family debt" their Lordships must be considered to have meant, that the debt, for which the joint family property was sold, not being a debt of an immoral nature, or binding on the family, and thus became a joint family debt.

The arguments of the learned Counsel, who appeared before the Privy Council, and the statement of the principle to be applied to the decision of the case, appearing in their Lordships' judgment, conclusively show that their Lordships were called upon to decide, and did decide, the question whether a decree for mesne profits was a debt, tainted with immorality and, therefore, not binding on the sons. It will be observed that the High Court held that the sons could not impeach the sale and this judgment was confirmed by the Privy Council. According to the summary of arguments, as given in the authorised reports. Messrs. Woodroffe and Arathoon, Counsel for the respondents argued:—

"The first and main point is that the whole family estate is liable, because the debt, contracted for no immoral purpose is due by the father of the family, living under the Mithila Law, on this point identical with the Mitakshara. This supports the sale of the family estate in satisfaction of the decree upon the father's debt. It may, however, be taken as a second ground that the father here was the manager of the family estate and represented the sons' interests; the family also profited by the money, and had the temporary benefit of the rents and profits after the ouster."

The arguments of Mr. Doyne, Counsel for the appellants, also show that the question whether the decree debt was in the nature of an immoral debt was put before the Privy Council. Their Lordships in their judgment state the principle thus:—

"Destructive as it may be of the principle of independent co-parcenary rights in the sons, the decisions have for some time established the principle that the sons cannot set up their rights against their father's alienation for an antecedent debt; or against his creditors' remedies for their debts, if not tainted with immorality. On this important question of the liability of the joint estate their Lordships think that there is now no conflict of authority."

Continuing their Lordships state in the next paragraph:

"The circumstances of the present case do not call for any enquiry as to the exact extent to which the sons are precluded by a decree and execution proceedings against their father from calling into question the validity of the sale, on the ground that the debt which formed the foundation of it was incurred for immoral purposes, or was merely illusory and fictitious. Their Lordships do not think that the authority of Deendayal's case bound the Court to hold that nothing but Girdhari's co-parcenary interest passed by the sale. If his debt was of a nature to support a sale of the entirety, he might legally have sold it without suit, or the creditor might legally procure a sale of it by suit. All that the sons can claim is that, not being parties to the sale or execution proceedings, they ought not to be barred from trying the fact or the nature of the debt in a suit of their own. Assuming they have such a right, it will avail them nothing, unless they can prove that the debt was not such as to justify the sale".

[90 I. C. 1925]

RAMASUBRAMANIA PILLAI v. SIVAKAMI AMMAL.

After thus laying down the principle, that a son cannot, question his father's alienation, unless the debt was tainted with immorality, their Lordships decided that the entire family property was conveyed by the sale and then proceeded to consider the nature of the debt, whether it was tainted with immorality. In these circumstances, it appears to me that when their Lordships used the term "joint family debt", they meant to say that the decree debt for mesne profits, not being a debt of an immoral nature, was binding on the joint family.

The Privy Council judgment has been understood, in the manner indicated above by the learned Judges of the Allahabad High Court, in Karan Singh v. Bhup Singh (21). That was also a case, where the joint ancestral property of a Hindu family was attached, in execution of a decree of means profits, obtained against the father of the family. Following the Privy Council decision in Nanomi Babuasin v. Modhun Mohun (26), it was held by the Full Bench that the decree in question was not in the nature of a debt tainted with immorality and that the sons were responsible for such a debt. The Privy Council judgment has also been understood in the same way in Shambhu Bhan Singh v. Chandra Shekhar Bhakhsh Singh (34).

In Zenamandra Papiiah v. Lanka Sub- basastrulu (35) and Ramdeo Prosad Singh v. Gopi Koeri (36) both of which were concerned with the execution of a decree for mesne profits against the joint family property in the hands of the sons, it was assumed without any discussion that such debts were not debts of an immoral nature, which exempted the sons from liability to discharge them.

In Peary Lal Sinha v. Chandi Charan Singh (28), Mookerjee, J., has expressly stated that the debt, for the recovery of which a decree for mesne profits has been obtained, was not tainted with immorality and illegality. In that case, the question did not arise directly for decision, as the creditor only sought to sell what he had attached, during the lifetime of the judgment debtor, and the interest of the judgment-debtor, which had been seized in execution and had been ordered to be sold was alone sought to be affected in those proceedings. But the learned Judge says :—

"If the question thus arise, we would without hesitation, answer it against the appellants."

and states the reasons thus :—"The original judgment-debtor became liable to pay a large sum of money because he had kept the respondent out of possession of property which lawfully belonged to the latter, and to the profits of which he was entitled. By unlawful receipt of those profits, the judgment-debtor enriched his own estate which has now by survivorship passed into hands of the appellants. We cannot discover any intelligible principle upon which a debt of this character may be described as immoral and illegal."

The benefit to the judgment debtor's estate, assigned as a reason was subsequently held by the learned Judge to be "possibly open to the criticism, that if the liability of the son depends upon the nature of the estate, the test of benefit to the estate becomes immaterial," but this does not affect the correctness of the decision for, as the learned Judge himself points out, the decision was substantially based upon the intelligible principle of morality, underlying the pious obligation of the sons to discharge the just debts of their father—the grounds mentioned in Natasayyan v. Pon-nusami (6): see Chakouri Mahton v. Ganga

(34) 80 Ind. Cas. 17; 10 O. & A. L. R. 912; 1 O. W. N. 343; (1925) A. I. R. (O.) 230.

(35) 25 Ind. Cas. 396; 27 M. L. J. 276; (1914) M. W. N. 616.

(36) 13 Ind. Cas. 349; 16 C. W. N. 383; 15 C. L. J. 256.

Prashad (4). This decision is quoted with approval in recognised text books on Hindu Law: [See Sarkar Sastry's Hindu Law page 317, Ed. 1924; Mayne's Hindu Law, page 405; and Trevelyan, page 302] and I am prepared to follow it.

In the result after carefully considering the able and exhaustive arguments advanced before us, I have come to the conclusion that the appellants in this case are bound to discharge a decree for means profits passed against their father and that the joint family properties in their hands may be attached and sold in execution of that decree. The lower Court's order is right and this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT. FULL BENCH.

CIVIL REVISION No. 20 OF 1925.

July 16, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay, Mr. Justice Sulaiman and Mr. Justice Daniels.

RAM SARUP—APPLICANT
versus

GAYA PRASAD—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 105, 115, O. IX, r. 13—Ex parte decree, application to set aside—Appeal—Appellate Court setting aside ex parte decree—Sufficient cause, absence of—Revision, whether lies—“Affecting the decision” in s. 105, meaning of.

Per Curiam.—The High Court can interfere in revision with an appellate order directing the setting aside of an ex parte decree where the applicant has not shown sufficient cause under r. 13 of O. IX of the C. P. C. [p. 184, col. 1.]

Per Lindsay, J.—Where there is an independent proceeding arising out of a case, such as a proceeding to set aside an ex parte decree, for which the Legislature has provided an independent remedy or a different procedure, such proceeding may be a case within the meaning of s. 115 of the C. P. C. [p. 181, col. 2.]

The expression “affecting the decision” in s. 105 of the C. P. C. signifies that there has been at work something which has influenced the Judge in the mental process of arriving at his decision that the error, defect or irregularity in the order, has, so to speak, warped the mind of the Judge so as to lead him to a wrong conclusion. The word “decision” in the section must, therefore, be taken to mean decision upon the merits. [p. 182, col. 1.]

An order setting aside an ex parte decree cannot be said to affect the decision of the suit within the meaning of s. 105 of the C. P. C. [p. 182, col. 2.]

Per Daniels, J.—Many things may affect a decision besides the reasons given by the Judge in his judgment. Where a suit has been finally decided but an illegal order is subsequently passed setting aside the decision with the possible result that the case is heard over again and decided in the opposite way, it cannot be said that the error committed in restoring the case has not affected the ultimate decision. An illegal order, and by consequence the illegality committed in passing that order, affects the decision of the case within the meaning of s. 105 of the C. P. C., if the order passed is one but for which the decision might have been other than it was. [p. 183, col. 2.]

Held, by the Division Bench, (Sulaiman and Daniels, JJ.)—An Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to set aside an ex parte decree outside the provisions of r. 13 of O. IX of the C. P. C. [p. 184, col. 1.]

Civil revision from an order of the District Judge, Bareilly, dated the 23rd December 1924.

Mr. U. S. Bajpai and Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Applicant.

Mr. B. Malik, for the Opposite Party.

REFERRING ORDER.

Sulaiman and Daniels, JJ.—This is an application in revision from an appellate order setting aside an ex parte decree. Both the Courts below agree in finding that the plaintiff's absence on the date on which the case was decided was intentional. The Court below has restored the case for extraneous reasons. It is not seriously disputed that it acted contrary to the provisions of O. IX, r. 13 in doing so. A Bench of this Court in Kallu v. Nadir Baksh (1) held that this was a mere interlocutory order from which no revision lay. We are at present inclined to think that this decision was wrong. We may point out that one of the reasons given in that ruling for holding that no revision lay was that the order could be attacked in appeal from the decree ultimately passed under s. 105 of the C. P. C. Under the recent ruling in Babu Ram v. Banke Behari Lal (2), this is not the case.

Before dissenting from a recent Bench ruling of this Court we think it proper that the case should come before a Full Bench. We accordingly direct that the record be laid before the Chief Justice with a view to its being laid before a Full Bench for the decision of the question whether a revision lies from an appellate order setting aside an ex parte decree when the Appellate Court had no power under the provisions of O. IX, r. 13 to direct the case to be re-heard.

(1) 64 Ind. Cas. 527; 19 A. L. J. 907; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 441.

(2) 87 Ind. Cas. 211; 23 A. L. J. 444; L. R. 6 A. 297 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 426; 47 A. 555.

JUDGMENT.

Lindsay, J.—The question which has to be determined by the Full Bench is whether this Court can interfere in revision with an appellate order directing the setting aside of an ex parte decree when the Appellate Court had no power, under the provisions of O. IX, r. 13 to give such a direction.

There are two grounds upon which it has been urged before us that the Court cannot subject this order to revision:—

(1) because the party against whom the order has been passed is not without another remedy; and

(2) because the order does not fall within the purview of s. 115 of the C. P. C. as there is no case which has been decided.

Dealing with these propositions in inverse order I would say that the second one of them is untenable. In my opinion we have before us a case which has been decided. It cannot with any show of reason be maintained that the order complained of is a mere interlocutory order passed in the course of the trial of the suit, for the suit had been brought to an end by the passing of the ex parte decree. At the time this order was made there was no suit pending between the parties. The proceedings in which the order was passed were quite distinct from the proceedings constituting the suit.

The defendant had had an ex parte decree given against him and was seeking to have it set aside under the provisions of O. IX, r. 13 which gives him a right to have the decree set aside provided he is able to satisfy the Court which passed it that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from appearing when the suit was called on for hearing. By these proceedings he was endeavouring to enforce a right which did not, and could not come into existence until the suit had been decided. These later proceedings being distinct from those in the suit; no order passed in the course of them could possibly be an interlocutory order in the suit. The application was rejected by the First Court, and the order of rejection was appealed. The order allowing the appeal is a final order not subject to further appeal and has clearly brought to a termination and the proceedings instituted for the setting aside of the ex parte decree.

And this being so I have no doubt we have here a "case" which has been decided,

It would be unprofitable to discuss the various rulings concerning the meaning of the word "case" as used in s. 115. No definition of the word is to be found in the C. P. C. and probably no exhaustive definition of the word could be given.

The cognate expression "cause" has been defined in England in the Judicature Act of 1873 as "including any action, suit or other original proceeding between a plaintiff and a defendant, and any criminal proceeding by the Crown;" and it seems to me that when an attempt is made by a defendant under O. IX, r. 13 to assert his right to have the ex parte decree set aside there is an "original proceeding" between a plaintiff and a defendant.

The meaning of the word "case" in s. 115 has been well-discussed in Heranchal Kunwar v. Kanhai Lal (3) and I would quote the following passage from page 413* of the report:—

"Where there are independent proceedings arising out of a case, such as a proceeding to restore a case dismissed in default, or to set aside a decree ex parte, for which the Legislature has provided an independent remedy or a different procedure, such proceeding may be a 'case' within the meaning of the section (i. e., s. 115)".

I agree with this view and hold, therefore, that in the Courts below these proceedings under O. IX, r. 13 were a 'case' and that that "case" has been "decided".

To turn now to the other proposition the argument is that the applicant here has another remedy available—a circumstance which debars this Court from the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction, and reliance is placed upon the provisions of s. 105, sub-s. (1) of the C. P. C. It is said that in the event of the plaintiff's suit being dismissed after fresh trial he will have a right of appeal and that in the prosecution of the appeal he would be entitled to challenge the order now under discussion by setting forth in his memorandum of appeal an objection to it on the ground of error, defect or irregularity "affecting the decision of the case." In reply to this it has been argued that as the appeal against the decree in the event contemplated would lie to the same Court which has passed the order now complained of s. 105 (1) would be of little or no avail to the appellant.

It would, perhaps be inexpedient or indis-

(3) 4 Ind. Cas. 879; 12 O. C. 405.

*Page of 12 O. C.—[Ed.]

oreet to approach the Appellate Court with a plea imputing error in its former order, but if the law allows the plea to be raised, the inconvenience of raising it would be no answer to the argument advanced here on behalf of the opposite party.

But I am definitely of opinion that s. 105 (1) does not provide any remedy for the prospective appellant in a case like the present.

I would observe, in passing, that on the grammatical construction of the latter part of the sub-section just mentioned, it is the "error, defect or irregularity" in the order which may be pleaded by way of objection, not the order—itself and that the ground of objection must be that the error, defect or irregularity is one "affecting the decision of the case." By the words "affecting the decision." I understand that there has been at work something which has influenced the Judge in the mental process of arriving at this decision—that the error, defect or irregularity in the order has, so to speak, warped the mind of the Judge so as to lead him to a wrong conclusion.

If this is the meaning to be attributed to the word "affect" it seems to me that the word "decision" must necessarily be taken to mean the decision upon the merits.

The learned Advocate for the opposite party while admitting that this view of the interpretation of the word "decision" has been taken protests against it as involving the introduction into the text of the sub-section the words "upon the merits" which are not there and he has been able to fortify his argument by reference to a number of rulings which support it. But although these words are not to be found in the sub-section they must be supplied by necessary implication if the context so requires and the use of the word "affect" does, in my opinion, render it necessary that the word "decision" should be taken to mean "decision upon the merits."

I am quite unable to see how any error, defect or irregularity in the order now complained of could in any sense "affect" the decision of the suit which may follow if the order setting aside the ex parte decree is maintained.

The error imputed to the Court below is that in spite of its finding that the defendant had no sufficient cause for non-appearance it has directed the ex parte decree to be set aside. The order which is vitiated by this error has, no doubt, provided the occasion for a fresh trial of the suit and has thereby created a possibility that the new trial may result in a decision different from that which was reached on the earlier trial but that to me appears to be a very different thing from saying that the decision in the second trial will be or can be affected by the preceding error of the Appellate Court.

I am satisfied that "decision" in s. 105 (1) means "decision upon the merits." That was the view taken in Chintamony Dass v. Raghoonath Sahoo (4). That case has been followed in this Court in Gulab Kunwar v. Thakur Das (5) in Tasaddug Hussoin v. Hyat-un-nissa (6) and in other cases more recently decided.

I dissent from the contrary view expressed in Nand Ram v. Bhopal Singh (7) and in other cases decided in the same sense. My answer to the reference is that it is competent to this Court to exercise its revisional powers in the case now before us.

Sulaiman, J.—I agree that the answer should be in the affirmative. I would like to emphasize the fact that the revision before us is from the order of the District Judge passed on appeal. When the appeal was before the Judge, there was certainly a case pending before him. That case has been finally decided so far as the Judge is concerned. No matter is now pending before him at all. His order cannot, therefore, be called an interlocutory one. We undoubtedly have jurisdiction to interfere under s. 115 of the C. P. C.

As to the contention that we should decline to exercise our discretion because another remedy is open to the applicant, I would say that the supposed remedy would by no means be convenient or expeditious, and could be availed of only after considerable expense has been incurred, and time spent. The remedy would at best be open only in second appeal for the decision by an Appellate Court would be binding on the parties so far at any rate as that Court is concerned. The existence of such remedy accordingly cannot be an insuperable obstacle in the way of our interference.

The question whether the propriety of

(4) 22 C. 981; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 651.

(5) 24 A. 464; A. W. N. (1902) 136.

(6) 25 A. 280; A. W. N. (1903) 39.

(7) 16 Ind. Cas. 1; 34 A. 592; 10 A. L. J. 130.

[90 I. C. 1925]

RAM SARUP V. GAYA PRASAD.

the order setting aside the ex parte decree can be challenged at a later stage in the suit does not directly arise in this case. The answer would depend on the interpretation of the words "affecting the decision of the case." Does that expression mean affecting its decision on the merits, or affecting its result? I confess that I do not like the idea of introducing new words into the language of a section in order to give it a suitable meaning. On the other hand the preponderance of authority is certainly in favour of the view that it means 'with reference to its merits'. I, however, do not feel that I am called upon in this case to express a definite opinion on the true interpretation of s. 105. Even a Full Bench of the Madras High Court, where apparently the view prevails that a second remedy is open, had no objection to entertain a revision in such a case, vide Gadi Neelaveni v. Marappareddigari Narayana Reddi (8).

Daniels, J.—The question referred for our decision is whether a revision lies from an appellate order restoring a case dismissed for default when the Appellate Court had no power under the provisions of O. IX, r. 13 of the C. P. C. to direct the case to be restored. The revision was necessitated by a doubt on the part of the Referring Bench as to the correctness of the decision in Sheikh Kallu v. Nadir Baksh (1) which held that no revision lay in such a case. The ground of that decision was that the case was covered by the Full Bench ruling in Budhoo Lal v. Mewa Ram (9). The Full Bench case is, however, clearly distinguishable. The order passed there was interlocutory. It was an order deciding separately a preliminary issue as to jurisdiction. Here the original suit had been decided when the order complained of was passed. It had been decreed ex parte by the Subordinate Judge, and the Subordinate Judge had rejected an application for restoration. The question is whether the restoration proceedings constituted a separate case within the meaning of s. 115 of the C. P. C. I have no doubt whatever that this question must be answered in the affirmative, and this does not conflict in any way with the interpretation placed on the word "case" by the majority of the Full Bench in Budhoo Lal v. Mewa Ram (9). The original suit had been so far as the Trial Court was concerned finally disposed of. The restoration application was a separate proceeding initiated not by the plaintiff in the suit but by the defendant, and the order passed upon it by the Appellate Court was in no sense an interlocutory order.

The respondent has sought to support his preliminary objection that no revision lies on the further ground that even if a case has been decided, this Court ought not to entertain a revision because the applicant, in the event of the case being ultimately decided against him, can question the validity of the order of restoration under s. 105 of the C. P. C. There is against him on this point the recent decision of a Bench of this Court in Babu Ram v. Banke Behari Lal (2). I am personally not satisfied of the correctness of the interpretation placed on s. 105 in that judgment. Where a suit has been finally decided, but an illegal order is subsequently passed setting aside the decision with the possible result that the case is heard over again and decided in the opposite way, it seems to me very difficult to say that the error committed in restoring the case has not affected the ultimate decision. Many things may affect the decision besides the reasons given by the Judge in his judgment. I am disposed to agree with the view taken by Piggott, J., in Budhu Lal v. Mewa Ram (9) that an illegal order, and by consequence the illegality committed in passing that order, has affected the decision of the case if the order passed by the Trial Court is one "but for which the decision might have been other than it was".

In this case the question does not really arise, because the order was one passed by the Appellate Court. Supposing the case is ultimately decided against the applicant, it would be very difficult for him to go to the District Judge and contend in appeal that the order passed by the District Judge himself at an earlier stage of the case was illegal. Indeed, the District Judge might very properly refuse to entertain an appeal at all on the ground that the order previously passed by him was a final order so far as his Court was concerned which was passed after contest and could not be challenged by the applicant at any subsequent stage of the litigation. This objection has, therefore, no force. I accordingly concur in answering the reference in the affirmative.

(8) 53 Ind. Cas. 817; 43 M. 94; 37 M. L. J. 599; 26 M. L. T. 377; 10 L. W. 676; (1920) M. W. N. 19.

(9) 63 Ind. Cas. 15; 43 A. 564; 19 A. L. J. 558.

By the Court.—The case is now returned to the Bench concerned for disposal in accordance with the answer to the reference.

JUDGMENT.

Sulaiman and Daniels, JJ.—The answer of the Full Bench to the question referred is in the affirmative. We, therefore, have jurisdiction to entertain this revision.

The lower Appellate Court had itself found that there was no sufficient cause for the defendant for not appearing when the suit was called on for hearing, and that his absence was intentional. The case accordingly did not fall under O. IX, r. 13. It is urged before us that apart from O. IX, r. 13, the Court had inherent jurisdiction to set aside an ex parte decree. It is to be borne in mind that the order setting aside the decree was passed by the Appellate Court to which an appeal had been preferred from an order under that rule. In our opinion it had no jurisdiction outside the provisions of that rule. This was the view clearly expressed by a Bench of this Court in the case of Sheik Kallu v. Nadir Baksh (1). A Full Bench of the Madras High Court in the case of Gadi Neelaveni v. Marappareddigari Narayana Reddi (8) has come to the same conclusion. The learned Advocate for the respondent relies on the case of Abdul Karim Abu Ahmad Khan Ghuznavi v. Allahabad Bank, Ltd. (10) which, however, is distinguishable inasmuch as there it was not an ex parte decree which had been set aside, but the case itself had been remanded by the Appellate Court.

In our opinion the Court below had no jurisdiction to set aside the ex parte decree.

We accordingly allow this revision and setting aside the order of the lower Appellate Court restore that of the Court of first instance. We allow costs to the plaintiff in all Courts.

Z. K.

Revision allowed.

(10) 41 Ind. Cas. 598; 44 C. 929; 21 C. W. N. 877; 26 C. L. J. 49.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 321 OF 1925.

July 22, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

Musammam KANIZ FIZZA BIBI—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

DATA DIN AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
RESPONDENTS

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 126—Hindu Law—Mortgage by manager—Suit for redemption—Term fixing period of redemption challenged—Article 126, applicability of—Redemption fixed after 40 years—Necessity, proof of—Suit to set aside mortgage by father—Major and minor sons—Cause of action, accrual of—Mortgage—Redemption suit—Accounts filed by mortgagee, proof of—Mortgagor failing to object, effect of.

Where in a suit for redemption of a mortgage executed by the manager of a Hindu joint family any term embodied in the mortgage-deed, such as the period fixed for redemption, or the interest stipulated, is challenged, it does not change the character of the suit for redemption into one for setting aside the mortgage. The object of such a suit is to obtain relief under the mortgage and not in spite of the mortgage, and Art. 126 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act cannot be invoked in bar of the relief claimed. [p. 186, col. 1.]

Jafri Begam v. Syed Ali Raza, 23 A. 383; 28 I. A. 111; 5 C. W. N. 585; 11 M. L. J. 149; 3 Bom. L. R. 311; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 27 (P. C.), followed.

A term of 40 years fixed for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage executed by the manager of a Hindu joint family is one that on the face of it calls for proof of necessity. [p. 186, col. 2.]

In a redemption suit the omission of the plaintiff to expressly deny the accuracy of the accounts filed by the mortgagee does not justify the inference that the accounts are admitted. It is the mortgagee's duty to support his accounts by evidence. [p. 187, col. 2.]

Obiter.—In a suit by Hindu sons to challenge an alienation by their father of ancestral property, the cause of action arises in favour of the major son and the minor sons can only take advantage of the same cause of action. [p. 186, col. 1.]

Ranodip Singh v. Parmeshwar Pershad, 86 Ind. Cas. 249; 2 O. W. N. 1; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 33; 48 M. L. J. 29; 21 L. W. 236; 23 A. L. J. 176; 27 Bom. L. R. 175; 12 O. L. J. 74; 26 P. L. R. 113; L. R. 6 A. (P. C.) 47; (1925) M. W. N. 262; 27 O. C. 343; 29 C. W. N. 666; 47 A. 165 (P. C.), relied on.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 22nd April 1924, reversing that of the Additional Sub-Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 22nd December 1923.

Mr. Haider Husain, for the Appellant.

Messrs. S. N. Roy and Bhawani Shankar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is the defendant's appeal in a suit for redemption of a mortgage, dated the 18th October 1889 (Ex. B-1) executed by one Beni Madho in favour of the predecessor-in-interest of the defendant-appellant for a sum of Rs. 4,000. The mortgage was a usufructuary one and in pursuance of the conditions of the mortgage the mortgagee entered into possession of the mortgaged property. The profits of the property exceeded the interest to which the mortgagee was entitled under the terms of the mortgage by a sum of Rs. 20 per annum. Under the deed this sum was to be re-paid annually by the mortgagee to the mortgagor. The claim as disclosed in the plaint was simply for the redemption of the mortgage just now mentioned. In defence, however, the appellant put forward two more mortgages executed by Beni Madho in relation to the same property which was the subject of the mortgage of the 18th October 1889. The first of these is dated the 20th February 1897 (Ex. B 2) and the second is dated 22nd May 1900 (Ex. B-3). Exhibit B-2 is a mortgage in consideration of a further loan of Rs. 658 8 0 and Ex. B 3 evidences a mortgage for an additional advance of a sum of Rs. 1,603-9 0. We have already seen that the property had passed into the possession of the mortgagee in its entirety under the deed of the 18th October 1889. Under the mortgage of the 20th February 1897, the sum of Rs. 20 due annually by way of paramasana to the mortgagor was thenceforward to be credited towards the part payment of the interest due on that deed. The rate of interest was fixed at 1 per cent. per mensem with compound interest to be calculated on the basis of monthly rests. Under the mortgage of the 22nd May 1900, the principal amount borrowed thereby was to carry the same rate of interest as was stipulated for in the mortgage of the 20th February 1897. The term of 5 years allowed for redemption in the first mortgage had expired and by the mortgage of the 22nd May 1900, the earliest mortgage was renewed for a term of 40 years certain at the end of which the mortgagor was given the right to redeem and in default of the exercise of that right the mortgagee was entitled to foreclose the mortgage. The defendant claimed besides the amount due under the mortgage of the 18th October 1889, the principal and interest at the rate agreed due under the mortgages of the 20th February 1897 and the 22nd May 1900.

It will now be convenient to state the array of the plaintiffs in the present suit. Beni Madho, the original mortgagor was succeeded on his death, in the right of survivorship, by his son, Datadin, Datadin's son, Chhatarpal Singh, and also by Danpal Singh, who is the son of another deceased son of Beni Madho, Datadin, Chhatarpal Singh and Danpal Singh are the plaintiffs Nos. 1, 2 and 3 respectively. It is common ground that the subject-matter of the mortgages in question was the joint ancestral property of the family of Beni Madho and his co-parceners.

In answer to the claim made by the defendant on the basis of the mortgages of the 20th February 1897 and the 22nd May 1900 the plaintiffs challenged the validity of the term postponing redemption for forty years and also of the agreement relating to the rate of interest. In other respects they accepted their liability for the sums advanced to their predecessor-in-interest under those mortgages. To this challenge the reply of the defendant was that it could not be entertained because the relief arising thereunder was barred by limitation. The Article relied upon is Art. 126 of the First Schedule of the Indian Limitation Act. This defence prevailed in the Court of the first instance and the result was that that Court held that the term of 40 years was binding and the suit brought within that period was premature. The suit was accordingly dismissed.

The plaintiffs appealed to the Court of the District Judge of Fyzabad from the decree of the Trial Court which was that of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Fyzabad. The learned District Judge accepted the appeal and decreed the suit for redemption. He held that the mortgagee defendant had failed to prove that there existed any legal necessity to justify the contract postponing the redemption of the mortgage for a period of 40 years and incurring interest at the rate of 1 per cent. per mensem compoundable on the basis of monthly rests. He has reduced interest to 12 per cent. simple. There are other minor points arising out of the judgment of the learned District Judge which will appear as this judgment proceeds.

In second appeal the first argument advanced by the learned Counsel for the defendant-appellant is that the plaintiffs' challenge of the terms of the mortgages of the 20th February 1897 and the 20th May 1900 is barred by limitation. In support of the argument reliance is placed upon Art. 126 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act. It may here be mentioned that the plaintiff No. 1 Datadin is major. The other two plaintiffs Chhatarpal Singh and Danpal Singh, are minors. It is agreed that the fact that the last two plaintiffs are minors does not affect the question of limitation. The cause of action for a suit of the nature contemplated by Art. 126 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act arose in favour of Datadin and the minor plaintiffs can only take advantage of the same cause of action. The view thus agreed to is supported by the recent decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council on appeal from a judgment of this Court in the case of Ranodip Singh v. Parmeshwar Pershad (1). I am, however, of opinion that the argument fails on merits. The present suit is not a suit to set aside any of the alienations made by Beni Madho. Indeed the object of this suit is to obtain relief under those alienations and not in spite of them. That any term embodied in one or the other of those alienations was ultra vires of the manager of the joint family will not change the character of the present suit for redemption into one for setting aside any of those alienations. The opinion which I have just now expressed is supported by a decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Jafri Begam v. Syed Ali Raza (2). That was a case which fell to be decided with reference to Art. 91 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act. So far as the nature of the suit contemplated by that Article is concerned it is described in the following words:—"To cancel or set aside an instrument not otherwise provided for." This language is almost identical with the description of a suit contemplated by Art. 126 of the same Schedule of the Limitation Act. It is as follows:—"By a Hindu governed by the Law of the Mitakshara to set aside his father's alienation of ancestral property." Of course the objectives of the two suits are different but the nature of the relief is the same. Now the case of Jafri Begam v. Syed Ali Raza (2) was one in which a claim was made to enforce an award with a prayer that a certain portion of it was void. The defence raised was that the suit was barred by Art. 91 of the Limitation Act. The Privy Council decided that it was not so barred. I, therefore, hold that there is no question of the application of Art. 126 of the Limitation Act in this case.

The next ground taken in support of the appeal is that the term postponing redemption for a period of 40 years was reasonable in the circumstances of the case and should have been held by the lower Appellate Court as binding on the plaintiffs-respondents. I am unable to accept this contention. On the face of it the term is of such a nature that it calls for proof of a necessity for it. No such proof is forthcoming. Reliance is placed upon certain circumstances. What are the circumstances then? In my judgment they all point to the absence of any such necessity. The property had all along been in the possession of the mortgagee since the mortgage of the 18th October 1889. This term of 40 years came to be embodied in the mortgage of the 22nd May 1900, that is to say, about 11 years after the mortgagee had come into the possession of the mortgaged property. At the inception the profits were in excess of the interest. Under the mortgage of the 20th February 1897, the excess profits were utilized towards the reduction of the interest which became due to the mortgagee under the deed of that date. When mortgage of the 22nd May 1900 came to be executed the mortgagee was still in possession of the entire property and was in the enjoyment of the entire profits in lieu of interest. Further interest was secured by a covenant in the mortgage of the 22nd May 1900. In these circumstances I see no justification for accepting the contract postponing the redemption for 40 years on the part of the manager of the family property. This argument, therefore, fails.

It is next urged that the learned District Judge should not have reduced the rate of interest to 12 per cent. simple. I have heard nothing in arguments to induce me to disagree with the learned Judge on this point. The original mortgage under which the defendant entered into possession being a usufructuary one and the mortgaged property having all along been admittedly of sufficient value to bear the burden of the entire debt which the manager of the family incurred I see no reason why he should have agreed to pay interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum compound-able on the basis of monthly rests. The learned Judge of the Court below is of opinion that no legal necessity for a contract of that nature has been established. It is not contended that there is any independent proof in respect of such a necessity. That the burden lay on the mortgagee to prove it is not disputed and there is no proof. The argument, therefore, fails and is rejected.

(1) 83 Ind. Cas. 249; 2 O. W. N. 1; (1925) A. I. R. (P. C.) 33; 48 M. L. J. 39; 21 L. W. 236; 23 A. L. J. 176; 27 Bom. L. R. 175; 12 O. L. J. 74; 26 P. L. R. 113; I. R. 6 A (P. C.) 47; (1925) M. W. N. 262; 27 O. C. 313; 29 O. W. N. 666; 47 A. 165 (P. C.).

(2) 23 A. 383; 28 I. A. 111; 5 C. W. N. 585; 11 M. L. J. 149; 3 Bom. L. R. 311; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 27 (P. C.).

Another ground taken against the decree of the lower Appellate Court is that that Court has wrongly omitted to award interest to the appellant on such sums of money as she paid in respect of the Government revenue payable on account of the mortgaged property in excess of the amount which was payable on the date of the original mortgage. That an enhancement in the Government revenue has taken place by a sum of Rs. 54-9-0 for the year 1302 Fasli and this sum has varied in the years following is not disputed. It is also not disputed that under a contract contained in the original mortgage of the 18th October 1889, the liability for the excess rested with the mortgagor. The lower Appellate Court has given a decree for that excess but has omitted to award any interest in respect of it. I am of opinion that the defendant-appellant is entitled to interest. Her claim is covered by the terms of s. 72 of the Transfer of Property Act and there is no proof of any contract to the contrary. The section provides rate of interest also and that is 9 per cent. per annum. In the present case the rate of interest as disclosed by the terms of the mortgage of the 18th October 1889 was about 6 per cent. per annum. I am of opinion that the defendant-appellant is entitled to interest at that rate. The decree of the Court below will be modified in this respect.

Another ground taken against the decree of the Court below is that it has wrongly disallowed the mortgagee's claim for arrears of rent due from the tenant. The mortgagee says that under the terms of the mortgage she is entitled to demand from the plaintiffs any arrears of rent that remain unrealized from the tenants on the date of redemption. Under this head she claimed a sum of Rs. 534-2-3. It is admitted that there is such a contract contained in the mortgages in question. The learned Judge has refused to accept this claim of the mortgagee on the ground that there is no proof on the record of any such arrears. In appeal before me no proof is pointed out. What is argued is that the claim was included in the accounts filed by the defendant and that the plaintiffs did not expressly deny those accounts. From the fact that the record does not contain any express and specified denial of the accuracy of the accounts filed by the plaintiffs I am unable to infer that they admitted them. It was the mortgagee's duty to support her accounts by evidence. She did not discharge that duty. The learned District Judge was, therefore, right in rejecting this claim of the mortgagee.

The last ground taken was that the learned Judge has wrongly directed that the exclusion of the interest on a sum of Rs. 500 for the period between the 22nd May 1900 and the 16th April 1918. The learned Pleader for the respondents frankly admits that the learned Judge in the Court below has made an error in this respect. This sum of Rs. 500 is part consideration of the loan advanced under Ex. B-3 and the mortgagee was under an obligation to pay it to a previous creditor of the mortgagor. She did not pay it until the 16th April 1918 (Ex. B-5). But when she paid it she paid Rs. 1,088-12-0 instead of Rs. 500 as is shown by Ex. 5. The mortgagee does not claim the former amount from the mortgagors. She only asks for interest on the sum of Rs. 500 as stipulated for in the mortgage (Ex. B-2). This she is entitled to. The decree of the lower Appellate Court will, therefore, be modified to this extent also.

The above were all the points urged in support of the appeal which is hereby dismissed except in so far as is indicated in this judgment. As regards costs the appellant will be entitled to costs in this Court in relation to the items which I have allowed in her favour in this judgment. For the rest of the appeal she will pay the costs of the respondents. The order of the lower Appellate Court as to costs is maintained.

N. H.

Decree modified.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 109 of 1923.

November 24, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Victor Murray Coutts-Trotter, Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.

KRISHNADOSS VITTALDOSS—
DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

GHANSHAMDOSS AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Letters Patent (Mad.), cl. 12—"Suit for land", what is—Suit for management of trust, whether suit for land.

A suit for the accounts of the management of a trust and for its administration is not a "suit for land" within the meaning of cl. 12 of the Letters Patent of the Madras High Court, though the whole of the immoveable property belonging to the trust may be outside the local limits of the jurisdiction of the High Court in its Original Side. [p. 188, col. 2.]

Srinivasa Moorthy v. Venkatavarada Iyengar, 11 Ind. Cas. 447; 34 M. 257; 15 C. W. N. 741; 8 A. L. J. 774; 13 Bom. L. R. 520; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 375; 14 C. L. J. 64; 21 M. L. J. 669; 10 M. L. T. 263 (P. C.), relied on.

Per Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—The expression "suit for land" must be construed as an action the primary object of which is to establish claims regarding title to property or possession of property and no suit can be described as a "suit for land" as the result of the decision in which the title to, or possession of, immoveable property will not in any manner or measure be directly affected. [ibid.]

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Devadoss, dated the 16th November 1923, passed in the exercise of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court, in C. S. No. 721 of 1923.

The Advocate-General, for the Appellant.
 Mr. Nugent Grant, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Coutts-Trotter, C. J.—No one, it seems to me, using language in its natural sense would ever think of describing this plaint (after the excision of two prayers which Mr. Grant gave up) as being a suit for land. But it is said that there are decisions of this and other Courts which compel such a construction to be put upon those words as would bring the present suit within them. It is sufficient for me to say that I do not think that any of the authorities cited has that effect. I only desire to say one thing, and that is chiefly in reference to the case of Srinivasa Aiyangar v. Kannappa Chetti (1). If that case is to be supposed to say that you are entitled to look at the amended C. P. C. for the purpose of construing the words of the earlier Statute, namely, the Letters Patent with which we are concerned, I do not agree with it. But I am by no means convinced that that case is an authority for the pure position for which it was cited. The appeal must be dismissed. The appellant will pay plaintiffs-respondents' costs. The memorandum of objections is dismissed, no order as to costs.

Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—The expression "suit for land" it seems to me must be construed as an action, the primary object of which is to establish claims regarding the title to property or possession of property and no suit can be described as a 'suit for land' as the result of the decision in which the title to, or possession of, immoveable property will not in any manner or measure be directly affected. Further, the proposition "for" in the expression "suit for land" would seem to indicate that the title to or possession of, immoveable property must be the primary object of the action. A suit for an office or for the removal of a person from an office is a well known form of action. This is a suit merely for the accounts of the management of a trust and for the administration of a trust. The decision of this Court, confirmed by the Privy Council in the case of Srinivasa Moorthy v. Venkatavarada Iyengar (2) is that an action for administration of an estate is not a suit for land, even though the whole of the immoveable property belonging to the estate may be outside the local limits of the Court. I do not see how on principle the present suit differs from an administration action. This being a suit for an account of the management of a trust by the first and second defendants and really a suit for the administration of a trust referred to in the plaint, it seems to me that the same principle applies and it cannot possibly be described as a "suit for land," and, therefore, excluded from the jurisdiction of this Court. The learned Judge was right in that decision; I may also add that the original application made on behalf of the first defendant to the learned Judge was to revoke the leave to sue granted by the Court. Leave to sue could not possibly have been granted in a case in which the whole of the property, the subject-matter of the suit, was outside the jurisdiction if the suit was a suit for land. Leave to sue was applied for and obtained in this case, because all the defendants did not reside within the jurisdiction and part of the cause of action may be said to have arisen beyond the jurisdiction of this Court. That leave to sue was granted in the first instance ex parte. To revoke that leave would not be to confer or take away any jurisdiction possessed by the Court in respect of the suit if it was a suit for land. Even if the order of the learned Judge refusing to revoke the leave to sue be set aside, the question would still remain, whether this Court had jurisdiction in respect of the suit. But Mr. Grant on behalf of the respondent, intimated that this appeal might be dealt with, as though it was an appeal from a decision on a preliminary question whether the Court had jurisdiction to try the action; and, by consent of both the appellant and the respondents, the appeal was so treated. The result of our decision, therefore, is that the Court has jurisdiction in this particular case having regard to the nature of the suit. I agree that the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

(2) 11 Ind. Cas. 447; 34 M. 257; 15 C. W. N. 741; 8 A. L. J. 774; 13 Bom. L. R. 520; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 375; 14 C. L. J. 64; 21 M. L. J. 669; 10 M. L. T. 263 (P. C.).

(1) 33 Ind. Cas. 906; 30 M. L. J. 120.

V. N. V.
Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL JURISDICTION APPEAL

No. 14 OF 1924.

July 29, 1924.

Present:—Sir Lallubhai Shah, Kt.,
Acting Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice
Kincaid.

MEGHJI MOORJI—PLAINTIFF—

APPELLANT

versus

TYEBALLI KAMRUDDIN—

DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Vendor and purchaser—Agreement to sell—Part-payment of purchase-money—Marketable title, stipulation as to—Waiver—Transfer of possession—Vendor, duty of.

In order that there may be an effectual waiver of any stipulation in an agreement, it must be intentional and based upon full knowledge of the circumstances. [p. 191, col. 2.]

If the purchaser enters into possession or pays the whole or part of the purchase-money, or does other acts, which a purchaser is not bound to do until a good title has been made, he may be deemed to have waived objections to the title. [p. 193, col. 1.]

The question as to whether the objection as to title is waived, is one of fact, and it may be that under certain circumstances the payment of purchase-money may indicate a waiver on the purchaser's part. [p. 193, col. 1.]

Where there is an agreement for sale, and where there has been transfer of possession in pursuance of that agreement to the purchaser and the contract price has been received by the vendor, the vendor cannot recover back the possession, but must be prepared to fulfil the contract by executing a conveyance. [p. 194, col. 1.]

Bapu Apaji v. Kashinath Sadoba, 39 Ind. Cas. 103; 41 B. 438; 19 Bom. L. R. 100, referred to.

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Fawcett.

FACTS.—The cause of action in the present suit arose out of a series of sale transactions with respect to a house situate in Bombay. In the first place the land on which the buildings were located was leased by its owners in 1861 for a period of 99 years with a freedom to the lessees, their heirs and assigns, to have a renewal of the lease from time to time, for like number of years in perpetuity, and under the same yearly rent. In 1901, the land was sublet under the same conditions of perpetual lease, the lessor agreeing to renew the lease, "if and when, he gets a renewal from his lessors."

The first sale transaction of the house was effected on November 29, 1919, in which one P. D. Lelinwala agreed to sell the lease hold property to Tyeballi Kamruddin, the present defendant, for Rs. 1,28,000 and received Rs. 12,000 as earnest money and undertook to complete the sale within two months. The seller undertook to convey a marketable title free from all reasonable doubts subject to the above mentioned lease of the provisions of which the purchaser was considered to have full knowledge. Messrs. Mulla and Mulla were engaged by the purchaser to complete this transaction.

The second sale transaction of the same property took place on January 20, 1920, and the property was re-sold by its new owner (the defendant) to the plaintiff for Rs. 1,72,000 who advanced Rs. 10,000 as earnest money in pursuance of the contract. The vendor agreed to duly make out a marketable title. The same Solicitors were engaged in this transaction as well.

On February 21, 1920, a third sale transaction was made. The plaintiff sold the property to Simon and Moti Lal at a profit of Rs. 18,000 and bound himself to give or sell the same to the purchasers on the same conditions subject to which he had purchased from his vendor, namely, the defendant. The Attorneys for the purchasers in the transaction were Messrs. Judah and Solomon.

The plaintiff paid a sum of Rs. 1,20,000 to Mulla and Mulla, the Attorneys of the defendant, as part-payment of the price. Out of this amount Rs. 1,16,000 was paid to the vendor in the first transaction who had received Rs. 12,000 already as earnest money and who was thus fully paid. The defendant to whom the title was now passed demanded Rs. 46,000 which remained due from the plaintiff before he was ready to execute the sale-deed in favour of the plaintiff.

In the meantime the purchasers in the third transaction raised an objection that the plaintiff had not made out a marketable title and that the clause about the renewal of the lease dated March 7, 1901, did not make out the tenure of the property to be a perpetual lease, because it only provided that the lessor shall renew the lease in favour of the lessee "if and when" he obtained a renewal from the landlord, but the lessor was not bound to obtain that renewal.

The plaintiff on the one hand being pressed by the defendant for the payment of the balance of the sale-price, and on the other, by his purchasers being confronted by the plea of having failed to pass a marketable title took out an originating summons in which he put the differences between him and sub-purchasers for the consideration of the Court. The answer went against him as it decided that the marketable title was not made out as stipulated between the plaintiff and his purchasers.

The plaintiff, therefore, put an end to his contract with the defendant, and demanded Rs. 1,20,000 plus Rs. 10,000, the money advanced by him. The defendant alleged that the contract was completed and made a counter-claim of Rs. 46,000. The plaintiff, therefore, brought the suit against the defendant for the amount claimed by him.

Mr. Judah (with him Mr. Coltman), for the Appellant.

Mr. Engineer (with him Mr. Desai), for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Shah, Ag. C. J.—[After stating the facts of the case His Lordship proceeded:—] In the appeal before us on these facts, it has been contended that there was no waiver on the part of the plaintiff to insist upon the stipulation as to the marketable title being deduced by the defendant, that there was no estoppel, and that in fact as the title was not marketable, no decree for specific performance could be, and should be, passed under the circumstances of the case. On the other hand, it is urged that the plaintiff really authorised Messrs. Mulla and Mulla to complete the sale on April 20, 1920, and as a result of that authority which Messrs. Mulla and Mulla had, the assignment, Ex. 1, was prepared, and as part-payment of purchase-money was paid by the plaintiff, he could not now call upon the defendant to make out a marketable title. In substance the argument is that he effectively waived his right to the marketable title being made out by the defendant, when he accepted the title through his Solicitors on April 20.

Before dealing with these points, it may be mentioned that it is not suggested before us that the plaintiff knew at the date of his contract with the defendant, or thereafter, of the express terms upon which the defendant had agreed to buy from Lelinwala. The finding on Issue No. 2 by the learned Trial Judge is not challenged before us, nor is the finding on Issue No. 1 questioned, and it is to be taken as found by the learned Trial Judge, that the plaintiff did not know that he was only obtaining a leasehold title for a limited term. Though the learned Judge does not consider it necessary to record any finding on Issue No. 6, which is whether the defendant has made out such title as he had agreed to make out, it is clear that for the purposes of this appeal it must be taken that in fact the title which the defendant was able to make out was not marketable. Though the learned Counsel for the defendant-respondent has made a somewhat faint attempt to suggest that it may be treated as an open question in this appeal, it seems to me that after the decision of the Court of Appeal between the plaintiff and the sub-purchaser, it cannot be treated as an open question. It may be mentioned that though the parties to this litigation may have known generally that it was a leasehold property, and not a freehold, it has been assumed by the parties throughout in this case that they at least expected, and were entitled to expect, to get a right to the renewal of the lease in perpetuity. The evidence of Mr. Dastur, who acted as a member of the firm of Messrs. Mulla and Mulla in connection with this contract both for the defendant and the plaintiff, says at the end of his evidence:—

"We didn't quite notice the point regarding the difficulty as to renewal, which was subsequently raised. But I believe I contended with Judah and Solomon that the plaintiff had never agreed to sell perpetual lease hold. When we examined the documents we took the title to be one of perpetual leasehold, I accepted the title on behalf of both, viz., defendant and plaintiff."

There is no doubt from the correspondence, and also from the evidence recorded at the trial, that at least the plaintiff and his sub-purchasers to whom the property was sold on the same terms on which the plaintiff had bought from the defendant, were under the clear impression that at least title to a perpetual leasehold was to be made out. That is the basis upon which the questions raised on the originating summons were considered; and that is the basis upon which the decision in that case proceeds.

In this view it is clear that for the purpose of determining whether marketable title was made out, it must be taken that, though it was known to be a lease-hold property, it was necessary to make out a title to a perpetual lease-hold or at least to the right to get such a lease-hold. From this point of view it has been definitely held that as between the plaintiff and his sub-purchasers the title was not marketable on the ground that Bai Avabai under the lease of 1901 did not bind herself to take out a lease at the end of 99 years' period fixed in the head-lease, but agreed that if and when the lease was renewed she and her heirs and assigns would pass on the benefit of that renewal to their lessee. That was not considered sufficient to give to the subsequent lessees the right to the renewal of the lease in perpetuity, and, therefore, the title was held to be defective. It is difficult to hold that as between the defendant and the plaintiff, if it is necessary for the defendant to make out a marketable title, that the defect does not exist. Taking it, therefore, for the purposes of this appeal that if it is essential for the defendant to make out a marketable title to this lease-hold property in the sense of the lessee getting the right to it as a permanent lease-hold, the defendant is not in a position to make out that title, according to the view taken in the proceedings, to which I have referred.

The main point, however, upon which the decision of the lower Court is based, and which has been argued before us, is the point of waiver as to the stipulation to make out a marketable title. Now it is clear that in order that there may be an effectual waiver of any stipulation in an agreement, it must be intentional and based upon full knowledge of the circumstances, then the question is whether the plaintiff in this case is proved to have waived his right to the benefit of this stipulation as to marketable title being made out by the defendant. In connection with this point, it is important to remember that Messrs. Mulla and Mulla had already investigated the title on behalf of the defendant with reference to his contract between the defendant and Lelinwala, and on this point the evidence of Mr Dastur is important:—

"Q. Did you tell him what he was purchasing under his agreement?

A. Yes, I did. That he was practically purchasing the interest of Tyeballi under his agreement. That is he was purchasing the property on the same terms that Tyeballi had agreed to purchase from Lelinwala. The completion of the matter proceeded on that basis. I remember plaintiff's agreement to sell to Simon and Motilal. I wrote to Judah and Solomon, who represented Simon and Motilal, that this assignment would be direct to them. I must have received a letter from Judah and Solomon dated March 11, 1920, as per this press copy. They refused to complete before May 31. It was then decided to take an assignment in plaintiff's favour as Shroff and Vachha were pressing to complete the matter on behalf of Lelinwala."

Then further on in cross-examination he says:—

"Mr. S. Mulla was only attending to the preparation of the agreement for sale between Lelinwala and Tyeballi. After that I was attending to the matter. The title was practically investigated before the agreement was prepared. I had gone through the title-deed; so also had Mr. S. Mulla. After the agreement was executed, we had gone through the title-deeds again and taken search in the Sub-Registrar's office. We hadn't taken search in that office (of head-lease of 1869; his records begin only from 1867). We began only with a title-deed of a certain date. I don't remember the year. A clerk took the search, not I. I can't say it was completed."

before plaintiff became our client. The notes of search are in the missing file. I don't know what took place between plaintiff and S. Mulla, before plaintiff was sent to me. There was not necessity to re-investigate the title after plaintiff became our client and I don't think I did. The agreement between plaintiff and defendant was executed outside our office. Our advice was sought and in regard to that agreement by plaintiff after it had been executed."

This evidence clearly shows that practically the title was investigated by Messrs. Mulla and Mulla as regards the contract between Lelinwala and Tyeballi, and they made no further effort when they were engaged by the plaintiff to investigate the title so far as the plaintiff was concerned. They were apparently satisfied that a title to a perpetual lease-hold was sufficiently made out, and as they did not realize the defect which came to be subsequently discovered, they thought that there was no need to investigate the title further. But it must be remembered that all the knowledge that Messrs. Mulla and Mulla had before the plaintiff engaged them for the purposes of the contract in question, was acquired by them on behalf of Tyeballi, and all the knowledge that they had acquired as regards the terms of the contract between Lelinwala and Tyeballi as regards the lease could not be attributed to the plaintiff. In fact the learned Judge has not attributed that knowledge to the plaintiff, and quite rightly, under the circumstances. The fact appears to be that Messrs. Mulla and Mulla being satisfied as to the marketable nature of the title, they naturally advised the defendant and the plaintiff accordingly, and they accepted that advice. The plaintiff paid Rs. 1,24,000 on April 16, 1920, a substantial part of which was used by Messrs. Mulla and Mulla for the purpose of getting the assignment, which is Ex. 1 in the case. On April 20, 1920, it was signed only by Lelinwala who got the balance of his money. The defendant beyond paying Rs. 12,000 as earnest money to Lelinwala had not paid anything to him, and Rs. 1,16,000 paid on April 20 to Lelinwala was part of the money received by Messrs. Mulla and Mulla from the plaintiff. The plaintiff was not present at the time, and he never agreed in terms to accept the conveyance or assignment. It is true that thereafter two letters were written by Messrs. Mulla and Mulla to the plaintiff, one on May 5, 1920, and the other on June 1, 1920. In the letter of May 5 it was distinctly stated that arrangement was made that defendant was to have possession of the property in the sense that he was to receive rents till the balance of the consideration money was not paid by the plaintiff to the defendant and Ex. 1 not completed, as it was intended to be completed. On June 1, again, there was a demand made for Rs. 46,000 and for the completion of the document; but the plaintiff did not reply. Thereafter there was practically silence for a long time until we come to September and October when at the request of Messrs. Merwanji, Kola and Co., Messrs. Mulla and Mulla informed the plaintiff of what the defendant was demanding. As I have already indicated in the statement of facts, that in December 1920, the plaintiff's Solicitors Messrs. Captain and Vaidya took practically the same view as to the marketable nature of the title as Messrs. Mulla and Mulla, and on behalf of the plaintiff they did their best to make out a marketable title. Unfortunately, however, with the best of efforts on the part of the plaintiff to make out that position he failed, and on this time the silence of both parties, namely, of the defendant and the plaintiff, appears to me to be attributable to the fact that they were waiting to see the result of the proceedings taken by the plaintiff to make out a marketable title. As soon as the plaintiff found that he failed in his efforts to make out a marketable title, and that it was definitely held by the Court of Appeal that a marketable title was not made out, he at once wrote to the defendant's Solicitors saying that he did not complete the contract, and that the contract was to be treated as rescinded.

Taking the conduct of the plaintiff as a whole, it seems to me that he was first acting according to the advice of Messrs. Mulla and Mulla, and thereafter, according to the advice of Messrs. Captain and Vaidya, and he was as anxious as the defendant to see that the contract was put through. That was natural under the circumstances as he stood to gain by making out that position, if not as much as the defendant, at least to a certain extent, and the defendant was also interested in the same sense. Therefore, both the defendant and the plaintiff really were waiting to see the result of the proceedings which the plaintiff took in this matter.

I am not prepared to hold on these facts that there was an intentional waiver of the stipulation as to marketable title, for the simple reason that at the time he had no knowledge of all the circumstances. In fact there had been no independent investigation of title on his behalf. Messrs. Mulla and Mulla who had already investigated the title thought that was sufficient, and under those circumstances it seems to me that it would not be right to hold that the plaintiff was consciously waiving his right to the benefit of the stipulation of marketable title in his agreement. As soon as Messrs. Judah and Solomon found the defect in the title, the plaintiff remained silent and waited to see the result of that dispute. He did his best to see that the dispute was settled in a manner he wished it to be settled. But he failed, and he at once put an end to the contract. Under the circumstances I am not satisfied that there was any waiver on the part of the plaintiff. Equally I am not satisfied that there was any estoppel in virtue of what happened on April 20, 1920, in connection with the assignment, Ex. 1. It is true that the plaintiff paid a part of the purchase-money, and the best part of it was used for the purpose of paying off Lelinwala on behalf of the defendant by Messrs. Mulla and Mulla. It is also true, as pointed out by the learned Trial Judge, that if the purchaser enters into possession or pays the whole or part of the purchase-money, or does other acts, which a purchaser is not bound to do until a good title has been made, he may be deemed to have waived objections to the title. The question as to whether the objection as to title is waived, is one of fact, and it may be that under certain circumstances the payment of purchase-money may indicate a waiver on his part. But here it seems to me that the whole thing proceeded upon what may be described as an honest error of judgment on the part of Messrs. Mulla and Mulla in advising that marketable title was made out, and so far as the parties are concerned, it must be taken to be a case of proceeding on a common mistake induced by the advice of the Solicitors.

With reference to this aspect of the case, it seems to me that the case of Jones v. Clifford (1), which the learned Judge had referred to, is somewhat similar to the present case, and it is in favour of the plaintiff, and not against him. In that case it was distinctly agreed that it was to be assumed that a person who died in 1841 was seized in fee of the freeholds, and that the defendant should not "require the production of or investigate or make any objection in respect of the prior title" thereto. The sub-purchaser happened to discover a defect after the title was accepted by the defendant and it was held that the defendant was not precluded by the condition or the acceptance of title from taking objection, and the Court could not decree specific performance. Although there was no fraud, there being a common mistake, the defendant there was held to be entitled to an inquiry as to the title to the freeholds at the date of the contract.

(1) (1876) 3 Ch. D. 779; 45 L. J. Ch. 800; 35 L. T. 937; 24 W. R. 979.

Similarly here, though the matter proceeded so far as the preparation of the assignment, Ex. 1, it seems to me that when the defect was discovered subsequently at the instance of the sub-purchasers from the plaintiff, the plaintiff is equally entitled to the benefit of the stipulation that marketable title was to be made out, even though he had in a sense accepted the title on April 20, 1920. Under the circumstances of this case it cannot be inferred that he waived his right to the stipulation or that he was estopped. In fact the basis for the plea of estoppel appears to me to be weaker even than the plea as to waiver. Beyond the conduct as indicated by what happened on April 20, 1920, there is nothing in the conduct of the plaintiff to show that he ever represented to the defendant, or that the defendant was in any sense influenced by the representation, that the title was good. In fact both of them were advised by the common Solicitors Messrs. Mulla and Mulla, and whatever the mistake underlying that advice may be, it was a case of a common mistake. It cannot be said in this case that the defendant acted on any belief induced by the representation of the plaintiff.

The learned Judge has referred to the doctrine of part-performance as accepted in Bapu Apaji v. Kashinath Sadoba (2). After a careful consideration of the facts of this case, I do not see how that doctrine could apply to this case. There was no question of any defect in the title of the vendor at all. Where there is an agreement for sale, and where there has been transfer of possession in pursuance of that agreement to the purchaser and the contract price has been received by the vendor, the vendor, cannot recover back the possession, but must be prepared to fulfil the contract by executing a conveyance. That really is the result of that judgment. It is not at all clear, and it is not necessary for the purpose of this case to decide, as to whether in a given case where there is admittedly a defect in the title of the vendor, the purchaser could not, even if these things had happened, get the benefit of the plea that he was not bound to complete the contract. That must depend upon the circumstances of the case. That point did not arise for consideration in Bapu Appaji v. Kashinath Sadoba (2), nor does it appear to have arisen for decision in any of the cases to which reference has been made in that judgment. For instance, in the case of Karalia Nanubhai v. Mansukhram (3) to which the learned Trial Judge has referred, there was no question of any defect in the title of the vendor at all. No doubt if a stage has been reached in a given case where practically the property has passed, though the legal ownership may not have, the question would arise as to whether the purchaser could repudiate the contract on the ground that no marketable title has been made out. The facts of the present case do not appear to me to invite the application of the principle underlying the decision in Bapu Appaji v. Kashinath Sadoba (2). In the first place, the possession such as there could be of this property, has been with the defendant, and has never been with the plaintiff. It is quite true that as a result of the arrangement it was intended to be given to the plaintiff, if he acted in a particular way. But he never did act in that way and he never took possession. The purchase-money was paid in part, and that fact does not appear to me to negative the possibility of a dispute as to marketable title arising between the parties. The dispute did arise in fact, and I have already referred to the way in which that dispute was ultimately disposed of as between the plaintiff and his sub-purchasers. The mere fact that Messrs.

(2) 39 Ind. Cas. 103; 41 B. 438; 19 Bom. L. R. 100.

Mulla and Mulla came to the conclusion that the title was marketable and advised both the parties to act on that basis and that both parties acted on that basis up to a certain point, does not preclude the plaintiff from taking up the position, if he is otherwise able to make out that the title is not marketable. The decision in M'Culloch v. Gregory (4) appears to be in point. It is not necessary to refer to the observations of the Vice-Chancellor in that case in detail. But the principle underlying that decision applies to the fact of this case. If we were to hold that the plaintiff is estopped from making out the plea that the title is not marketable, or that he has waived his right to the benefit of the stipulation about a marketable title, we would practically be holding that he was bound by the advice of Messrs. Mulla and Mulla which both parties accepted for the time being.

On the whole, therefore, we are satisfied that the view taken by the learned Judge in this case is wrong. We allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the Trial Court and pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff for Rs. 1,26,000 with interest at six per cent. from this date until payment, with costs of the appeal and of the suit. The defendant's counter-claim is dismissed. The decretal amount to be a charge on the property in question. We further direct that the amount paid by the defendant to Messrs. Merwanji Kola & Co., under the order of this Court dated November 18, 1921, as representing the net rents of the property recovered by the defendant should be paid over to the plaintiff in part satisfaction of this decree.

K. S. D.

Appeal allowed.

(4) (1855) 1 K. & J. 286; 3 Eq. R. 495; 24 L. J. Ch. 246; 3 W. R. 231.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 93 OF 1925.

May 25, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Sen.

KAWLESHWAR LAL—PETITIONER

versus

SATYA BRATA BANERJEE AND ANOTHER

—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 17
—Ex parte decree, application to set aside—Deposit

(3) 21 B. 400; 2 Bom. L. R. 220; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 799.

or security, absence of—Procedure—Dismissal of application.

Defendant made an application to set aside an ex parte decree passed against him by a Small Cause Court. The Court directed the defendant to file security under s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act by a certain date. One day before that date defendant filed a draft security bond for approval by the Court undertaking to register it after such approval. On the date fixed the Court passed an order dismissing the application on the ground that it was not accompanied by a deposit or security. No further application was made by the defendant within limitation to set aside the decree.

Held, that inasmuch as the application was not accompanied by a deposit or security as required by s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and no further application supported by a deposit or by a proper security was made within limitation, the Court had no option but to dismiss the application.

Revision from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Arrah, dated the 19th December 1924.

Mr. Bhagwan Prasad, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Benoy Bhusan Mukherji, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner is defendant No. 2 in a suit instituted before the Small Cause Court Judge of Arrah for recovery of a sum of Rs. 459 principal with interest.

On the 15th of December 1924 the petitioner filed his written statement stating that he had no concern whatsoever with the transaction referred to in the plaint and denying all liability on that account. On the same day the case was decreed ex parte.

On the 16th December 1924 the petitioner made an application under O. IX, r. 13 of the C. P. C. for setting aside the ex parte decree purporting to show sufficient cause for his non-appearance at the time when the suit came on for hearing. On the 17th December 1924 the learned Subordinate Judge directed the petitioner to file security to the extent of the decretal amount by the 20th December 1924.

It appears that on the 19th December 1924 the petitioner filed a draft security bond for approval by the Court undertaking to register it after such approval. On the 20th the Court passed an order dismissing the application on the ground that the petition was not, as it should have been accompanied by a deposit or security.

Now the dismissal of the application under O. IX, r. 13 was obviously in accordance with s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act which lays down the procedure for a cheap and expeditious disposal of petty claims. It provides that "An application for an order to set aside a decree passed ex parte or for a review of judgment shall at the time of presenting his application either deposit in the Court the amount due from him under the decree or in pursuance of the judgment, or give security to the satisfaction of the Court for the performance of the decree or compliance with the judgment as the Court might direct". In other words such an application would be deemed incompetent unless accompanied by a deposit of the decretal amount in Court or by security sufficient to the satisfaction of the Court for the performance of the decree.

It is contended by the learned Vakil appearing for the petitioner that inasmuch as the period of limitation for presenting such application had not as yet expired it was open to him to present his application supported by proper security at any time prior to the 14th of January, the date when such period would have expired. This view is supported by the decision in the case of Jeun Muchi v. Budhram Muchi (1) and Assan Mahomed v. Rahim Sahib (2). Both these cases lay down that "Although an application made without compliance with the provisions of s. 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act is to be deemed incompetent yet a subsequent application made within the period of limitation with proper observance of the provisions of that section would be competent and should be entertained."

Now, in this case what happened was that no such application was made afterwards. The application in this case whether deemed to have been filed on the 16th December, or the 20th of December, was obviously not competent, as there was no security before the Court but only a draft security and, unfortunately, no attempt was made subsequently to make an application supported by a deposit of the decretal amount or by a proper security.

The facts of the present case are, therefore, clearly distinguishable from those of the cases above-mentioned in which an application with proper security was made within the statutory period of limitation.

In the circumstances this application must be dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

(1) 32 Ind. Cas. 330; 1 C. L. J. 43.

(2) 55 Ind. Cas. 977; 43 M. 579; 11 L. W. 543; 38 M. L. J. 539; 28 M. L. T. 17; (1920) M. W. N. 375; 27 M. L. T. 273.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 19-B OF 1923.

February 11, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

DAULAT—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

RAMAPPA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 63—Berar Land Revenue Code, 1896, s. 96-I—Evidence Act (I of 1872), ss. 110—Execution of decree—Claim proceedings—Procedure—Title suit—Burden of proof—Entry in Record of Rights—Possession—Presumption.

The policy of the Legislature is to secure the speedy settlement of questions of title raised in claim proceedings and the finding of a Court in such a proceeding is a summary decision from which the suit allowed by r. 63, O. XXI of the C. P. C., is simply a form of appeal. The object of the Legislature in prescribing a suit by way of appeal is to give the parties an opportunity of placing their respective cases before a Court, because a summary investigation might not have furnished sufficient material for a decision by an Appellate Court. [p. 197, col. 1]

Sardhari Lal v. Ambika Pershad, 15 C. 521; 15 I. A. 123; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 172; 12 Ind. Jur. 210; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 931 (P. C.), Phul Kumari v. Ghanshyam Misra, 35 C. 202; 7 C. L. J. 36; 12 C. W. N. 169; 10 Bom. L. R. 1; 5 A. L. J. 10; 17 M. L. J. 618; 2 M. L. T. 506; 14 Bur. L. R. 41; 35 I. A. 22 (P. C.), Vedalingam Pillai v. Veerathal, 54 Ind. Cas. 530; 37 M. L. J. 517 at pp. 553, 554; 26 M. L. T. 513; (1920) M. W. N. 77, relied on.

Under the provisions of s. 96-I of the Berar Land Revenue Code an entry in the Record of Rights carries with it a presumption of correctness and would support the title, or, at any rate, the possession, of the recorded holder of a survey number. The absence of any plea that the plaintiff is out of possession would also entitle him to the presumption under s. 110 of the Evidence Act that he is in possession as an owner, and where the question of possession has not been investigated in claim proceedings these statutory presumptions would entitle the plaintiff to succeed in his title suit in the absence of any evidence of rebuttal. [p. 197, cols. 1 & 2.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Amraoti, in Civil Appeal No. 68 of 1922, dated the 11th October 1922.

Mr. G. V. Deshmukh, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. T. Mangalmurti, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The defendant-respondent attached entire filed Survey No. 19 subdivision No. 1 area 8 acres 19 gunthas rent Rs. 21-5-6 at Mouza Bhilapur taluq moashi in execution of his decree in Civil Suit No. 1354 of 1920 as if it is the property of his judgment-debtor Panjabrao Manikrao. The attachment was made on 25th September 1921 from plaintiff's possession. It gave rise to an objection by the plaintiff-appellant on the basis of his registered sale-deed dated 6th April 1914 for Rs. 1,940-10 out of which

Rs. 1,800 formed the consideration of a mortgage which the vendee executed in favour of the vendor under the same date and Rs. 140-10 were paid in cash before the Sub-Registrar. The objection was summarily rejected on 16th November 1921 on the ground of its being unnecessarily delayed. Hence this suit for declaration that the field belongs solely to plaintiff and is in his possession, and that the same is not liable to attachment and sale in execution of the defendant's decree as the property of his judgment-debtor. This suit was filed on 22nd February 1922. The defence which was recorded by Mr. Y. S. Jamdar, Munsif, was very short. It may be reproduced here :

"Plaintiff's purchase is denied. It is denied, bogus, fraudulent, and also void under s. 53 of Transfer of Property Act being made to defeat and delay the defendant's and other creditors' claims. The judgment debtor and plaintiff are mauvas bhau and they are colluding against the defendant. The claim is denied."

In these meagre pleadings there is no denial of the plaintiff's express allegation that he was and is in possession of the property.

The issues framed are :—

1. Is plaintiff a bona fide purchaser for value?
2. Is plaintiff's purchase void under s. 53 of Transfer of Property Act?
3. Is plaintiff entitled to the relief claimed?

The case, however, came before another Judge at the stage of evidence. He held on Issue No. 1 that because Rs. 1,800 were covered by a mortgage and only Rs. 140-10 were paid in cash the transaction was bogus and that the vendee was in possession were consequently considered unreliable. Issue No. 2 was found against the defendant for want of evidence. In the end the claim was dismissed on the ground that the sale in plaintiff's favour was bogus.

The District Judge has simply confirmed the finding on Issue No. 1 and dismissed the plaintiff's appeal. The plaintiff comes up in second appeal and contends that for want of a denial on the defendant's part of his express allegation of possession the defendant must under O. VIII, r. 5, C. P. C., be treated to have admitted it, that in any case the absence of an issue on that point has prejudiced him in the matter of production of documentary evidence for corroborating the oral testimony of his witnesses as to possession. That the only question which the Executing Court is authorized to enquire into is question of bare possession. But in the objection case that question even was not considered, because, the Court preferred to follow the other course allowed by law not to make the enquiry under O. XXI, r. 58, C. P. C., which is termed an "investigation" and "not a trial of issues between the parties." The policy of the Legislature is to secure the speedy settlement of questions of title raised at execution sales: Sardhari Lal v. Ambika Pershad (1) and the finding of a Court is a summary decision from which the suit allowed by r. 63 is simply a form of appeal; Phul Kumari v. Ghanshyam Misra (2). The object of the Legislature in prescribing a suit by way of appeal appears to be to give the parties an opportunity of placing their respective cases before a Court, because summary investigation might not have furnished sufficient material for a decision by an Appellate Court: see Vedalingam Pillai v. Veerathal (3).

It will thus be seen that the question of title under the sale-deed was not and could not be within the scope of the enquiry even if the same had been made under O. XXI, r. 58, C. P. C., and consequently the burden of proof is on the plaintiff as in other cases and not in any special sense. The burden, therefore, of introducing the evidence only is on him. This he has sufficiently done in this case. The plaintiff had it appears filed with the plaint a true copy of an entry in the Record of Rights showing that the field was entered in his name. This is marked Ex. P-1. I find no reference to this document. Under the provisions of s. 93-I of the Berar Land Revenue Code such an entry carries with it a presumption of correctness, and would support the title of the recorded holder of the survey number or at any rate his possession. The absence of any plea that the apparent purchaser was out of possession would also entitle plaintiff to the law's presumption under s. 110, Indian Evidence Act, that he was in possession as an owner. There was no investigation in the summary proceedings, and it could not, therefore, be said that even plaintiff's bare possession was negatived by virtue of the order rejecting his objection petition, much less could it negative plaintiff's possession of title: cf. Vedalingam Pillai v. Veerathal (3). The nature of the enquiry is a summary one. Rights relating to property far beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of a tribunal in regard to suits cannot be disposed of on the claim petition. Can the Legislature have contemplated such far reaching consequences to an order made under such circumstances as to conclude the right and title of the parties for all time to come, (page 550*)? An order passed without any jurisdiction, could much less have such an effect. Of course, if there had been an investigation, the matter would have been slightly different because the order negating the plaintiff's possession would have added to the burden, and the Court would have demanded greater degree of convincing proof on that point; no doubt the establishment of his title under the sale-deed must necessarily come to his aid in proving his possession in the regular suit.

Here we have absolutely nothing in the pleadings to go upon, or even to raise, a prima facie case against the plaintiff, beyond a bare denial of the sale transaction and a collection of certain vague pet phrases in the defence. No attempt has at all been made to state any indicia or badges of fraud or unreality or other relevant facts in the pleadings tending to throw suspicion on the genuineness or bona fides of the transaction of sale, and so to cast a heavier onus on plaintiff, beyond a mere assertion that plaintiff was a mawas bhanu of the judgment-debtor. But of this relationship there is absolutely no proof on record. This weak defence which is really no challenge of the plaintiff's bona fides, coupled with an omission to deny the fact of plaintiff's possession over the field, enabled the plaintiff easily to shift the onus of proof on to the defendant to show that what was apparently a sale was not a real sale, but that the transaction was mala fide and for no consideration. The express recital under such circumstances be treated rather as a sign of its genuineness followed as the sale was by transfer of possession, which is not disputed before me. The Court was, therefore, bound to give to the plaintiff the benefit of the statutory presumption that attached to the entry in the Record of

(1) 15 O. 521; 15 I. A. 123; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 172; 12 Ind. Jur. 210; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 931 (P. C.).

(2) 35 C. 202; 7 C. L. J. 36; 12 C. W. N. 169; 10 Bom. L. R. 1; 5 A. L. J. 10; 17 M. L. J. 618; 2 M. L. T. 505; 14 Bur. L. R. 41; 35 I. A. 22 (P. C.).

(3) 54 Ind. Cas. 530; 37 M. L. J. 547 at pp. 553, 554; 26 M. L. T. 513; (1920) M. W. N. 77.

Rights, and also, of the one provided for by s. 110 of the Indian Evidence Act; the Court ought to have, therefore, held that in the absence of any evidence to the contrary the transaction of sale was a real transaction. No attempt has been made to show that the sale was in respect of the entire property, or that the plaintiff's possession was not as owner, but merely in trust for the judgment-debtor, nor do I find any evidence on record to show that there were several creditors of the judgment-debtor, whose claims were awaiting settlement in 1914 so as to raise any presumption of an intention on the part of the debtor to enter into an unreal or fraudulent transfer. Much less is there any proof to show that plaintiff was a party to and shared in such an intention, even if such an intention on the part of the judgment-debtor be presumed for a moment. The First Court has decided Issue No. 2 against the defendant. This all the more strengthens my view that the sale transaction is real.

On the whole, I am not satisfied with the correctness of the view of law taken by the lower Courts and necessarily, therefore, the view of the facts is not such as binds me in second appeal. After carefully considering the evidence on both sides, I come to the conclusion that there is preponderance of evidence on plaintiff's side, and that he has established the reality and bona fides of the sale, and that the defendant has failed to show the contrary, and further that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree as prayed for. The decree appealed against is set aside and the plaintiff's claim decreed with costs in all the three Courts. The defendant will bear his own costs throughout.

S. D.

Appeal accepted.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

APPEAL FROM THE LOWER BURMA CHIEF COURT.

June 30, 1925.

Present:—Lord Atkinson, Lord Shaw and Lord Darling.

MAUNG BYA AND ANOTHER—

APPELLANTS

versus

MAUNG KYI NYO AND OTHERS—

RESPONDENTS.

Riparian owners, rights of—Artificial and natural water-courses—Law in Burma same as in England—Lower owner damming channel—Damage caused to higher owner's property—Liability of lower owner.

In the case of a natural stream or water-course, each of the riparian owners is entitled to the unimpeded flow of water in its natural course and to its reasonable enjoyment as it passes through his land as a natural incident of the ownership of his land; while in the case of an artificial water-course, any right of the owner to the flow of water-course must rest on prescription or grant from or contract with the owner of the land from which the water is artificially brought. [p. 203, col. 1.]

Menzies v. Breadalbane, (1828) 3 Bligh (N. S.) 414; 4 E. R. 1387; 32 R. R. 103 and Orr-Ewing v. Colquhoun, (1877) 2 App. Cas. 839 at p. 846, referred to.

A water-course originally artificial may have been made under such circumstances, and have been used in such a way, that an owner of land situate on its bank will have all the rights over it that a riparian owner would have if it had been a natural stream. [ibid.]

Abdul Hakim v. Gonesh Dutt, 12 C. 323; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 220 and Bickett v. Morris, (1866) 1 H. L. (Sc.) 47; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 803; 14 L. T. 835, referred to.

The law applicable in lower Burma to the flow of and flooding by fresh-water rivers or water-courses, whether they be natural or artificial, or trespasses on the bed or soil of such rivers and streams, is not different from the law as applied to similar subjects in England. [p. 199, col. 1.]

Abdul Hakim v. Gonesh Dutt, 12 C. 323; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 220 and Sankarappa Naicker v. Pari Naicker, 21 Ind. Cas. 62; 38 M. 149; (1913) M. W. 640; 25 M. L. J. 276, referred to.

A raised road or bund ran transversely across a depressed ground through which flowed a channel of water, and was properly provided with a gap for the flow and a bridge over the channel. The bund thus provided with an eye and a bridge to permit the inflow and out-flow of water, was interfered with by the owner of the land lower down who filled up the eye and channel course thereat and converted an innocuous bund into a dam, which dammed back the water on to the owner of the land higher up:

Held, (1) that the owner of the land lower down was responsible for the damage thus caused to the property of the higher owner; [p. 206, col. 1.]

(2) that it was wholly irrelevant who the body or person was which or who had actually formed the channel. [ibid.]

Appeal from a judgment of the Chief Court of Lower Burma (Maung Kin and Duckworth, JJ.), dated the 31st May 1921, reversing that of the District Judge, Pyapon, dated the 27th September 1919.

Messrs. G. Lawrence, K. C., and Besley, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Harney, K. C., and Leach, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Lord Atkinson.—This is an appeal from a judgment of the Chief Court of Lower Burma (Maung Kin and Duckworth JJ.), dated 31st May, 1921, allowing the appeal of the respondents against a decree of the District Court of Pyapon (Po Bye, District Judge) dated 27th September 1919 by which the said District Judge ordered the respondents to pay the appellants the sum of Rs. 8,821-4-8 by way of damages and the costs of the suit.

The appellants in the second paragraph of their case allege that "the question raised is whether in Burma a lower agricultural owner is liable to compensate a higher agricultural owner for damage to crops by inundation caused by the blocking of a canal running through the lands of the lower owner by which the water would otherwise have been drained from the land of the higher owner."

In a sense, but only in a limited sense, is that statement accurate. Save in the second and third of the reasons for their appeal it is put forward that the law applicable in Lower Burma to the flow of and flooding by fresh-water rivers or water-courses, whether they be natural or artificial, or trespasses on the bed and soil of such rivers and streams, is different from the law as applied to similar subjects in England. A little consideration of the two cases cited, Abdul Hakim v. Gonesh Dutt (1), Sankarappa Naicker v. Pari Naicker (2), will show that there is no conflict between the two systems of law, and it was not contended in argument on the hearing of the appeal that the general principles of the laws of England touching the matters above-mentioned did not apply to Lower Burma.

The action out of which the appeal has arisen was brought by the two appellants (who are husband and wife) in the District Court of Pyapon, Lower Burma, to recover damages amounting to Rs. 13,445 for the wrongful flooding by the acts and procurement of the respondents of a large tract of paddy lands 68,541 acres in extent, belonging to the appellants, whereby the productivity of these lands was, in the season in which the acts were done, so reduced that they only yielded 3,867 baskets of paddy instead of their normal yield of about 17,300. The District Judge decided in favour of the appellants and awarded them Rs. 8,821-4-8 damages. The Chief Court on appeal reversed the decree of the District Judge, and on grounds which appear to the Board strange, and are indeed unsound, decided in the respondents' favour.

Several maps of the locality were given in evidence; the two most intelligible and useful were the first, a map marked Ex. A, and the second, dated in the year 1906-7, described as Ex. 2A. With almost perverted ingenuity the draftsman of these and, indeed, of many other maps, has omitted to place upon the face of them any indication of the points of the compass, so that in dealing with them one is obliged to use the words left and right, and top and bottom of the maps in order to endeavour to fix any point or object. A study of these two maps, however, enables one to get an idea of the terrain, especially as the map of 1906 represents what was the nature of the tract of country with which the case is conversant before any of the works were executed, the misuse of which is alleged to have caused the flooding, and as the second map, Ex. A, shows what were the features of that tract after these works had been executed. The map of 1906-7 purports to be a plan 126 of Sakangyi circle, Bogale township. It corresponded closely with the map Ex. A.

Many rivulets or water-courses are depicted upon it. They correspond with those depicted upon Ex. A. The main difference between them is that on the latter a prolongation of the water-course from Singu Chaung is to be found which is absent from 2A of 1906-7.

The water-course, styled extravagantly the canal, represented on A, and lettered A, B, C, D, G, H, emptying into the sea creek at A is precisely the same water-course as is represented on the map of 1906-7 coming from Singu Chaung and debouching into the same sea creek at the same place. No doubt the so-called canal is represented as being something broader than the corresponding stretch of water-course on the map of 1906, but the fact of vital importance is that all the rivulets or watercourses are depicted as of the same width and kind, and resemble each other in all respects. There could be no object in depicting on this map a water-course, as existing where none, in fact, existed when the map was made. The map, therefore, absolutely refutes the contention put forward with some hardihood on behalf of the respondents, that before the canal was made its site was a mere depression in the earth surface through which no stream ran; but in which, after heavy rain, stagnant water for a time accumulated. Now

(1) 12 C. 323; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 220.

(2) 21 Ind. Cas. 62; 38 M. 149; (1913) M. W. N. 640; 25 M. L. J. 276.

what was done in 1913-14 was, in their Lordships' view, the widening a little, and deepening a little, possibly trimming the banks a little, of an existing ancient fresh-water natural water-course, not in their view the making by excavation and such work of a watercourse, styled a canal, where none such theretofore existed.

The lands of the first respondent lie to the left-hand side of the map, between the lands of the appellant and the sea creek Kyonkan Chaung. On the map Ex. A they are numbered 17, 18, 30, 31, 32. The other respondents are merely cultivators in the village of Kamakalu. The lands of the appellants are comprised in three kwin's lands and named respectively Kasung Ngotto (both marked on Ex. A), and Sakangyi South and Casaung Ngotto (both marked on map B). They are numbered separately 1-14 on map marked B. In addition to the refutation of the respondents' suggestion as to there never having been formerly a rivulet or water-course where the canal exists now, one finds that several witnesses depose to there having been a small Yo where the bridge was afterwards erected, that a jungle log was placed across the Yo before the bridge was built, which certainly suggests to their Lordships that this log was designed to fulfil the function of stepping stones to enable people to cross the stream, possibly dry-shodded and in safety.

In the present case the early history of this locus in quo, this large tract of paddy land intersected with rivulets of water, large or small, is very vague. The evidence as to what were the rights and obligations which the inhabitants owed to each other in reference to these water-courses, the local law as to their regulation, their enjoyment and protection, is so confused and contradictory that it has occurred to the Board that it would possibly be better to reverse the usual order of procedure and, before dealing with the evidence of the witnesses, the facts proved, and the rulings of the Judges, to demonstrate, by reference to four or five well-known English cases, what the well-established law is touching the flow of and flooding by rivers and water-courses, the diminution of their currents or the diversion of their course, the trespass upon their beds, the incursion of the sea upon one's land, and the measures the owner may take to protect himself, and then by applying a coherent and consistent body of principles to the facts proved, thus endeavouring to solve in harmony with English Law the issues raised, considering any local law which may modify the English Law.

The first of these cases is Bickett v. Morris (3). It deals with trespass on the alveus or bed of a fresh water water-course.

The appellant obtained, in consideration of £10 paid by him, permission from a riparian owner on the river Kilmarnock, in Ayrshire, to extend a certain wall then standing on the respondents' premises on to the alveus of the river as far as was indicated by a red line drawn on an identified ordnance map. The appellant proceeded to build the wall, but, as the respondents alleged, not in the direction indicated. The respondents accordingly applied for an interdict against him, and brought an action for a declaration that the appellant had no right to erect buildings on the solum of the river beyond the red line aforesaid. Lord Cranworth, in delivering judgment, dealt at length with the legal points raised in the discussion. At page 58* of the report he said:—

"By the law of Scotland, as by the law of England, when the lands of two conterminous proprietors are separated from each other by a running stream of water, each proprietor is prima facie owner of the soil of the alveus or bed of the river ad medium filum aquæ. The soil of the alveus is not the common property of the two proprietors, but the share of each belongs to him in severalty, so that if from any cause, the course of the stream should be permanently diverted, the proprietors on either side of the old channel would have a right to use the soil of the alveus, each of them up to what was the medium filum aquæ, in the same way as they were entitled to the adjoining land. The appellant contended that, as a consequence of this right, every riparian proprietor is at liberty at his pleasure to erect buildings on his share of the alveus, so long as other proprietors cannot show that damage is thereby occasioned or likely to be occasioned to them. I do not think that is a true exposition of the law."

Lord Cranworth then dealt with the difficulty, almost the impossibility, of determining in anticipation what damage may result in flood time by the erection of buildings on the alveus of a stream and speaking of the riparian proprietors, put their case succinctly in these words.

(3) (1866) 1 H. L. (Sc.) 47; 12 Jur. (N. S.) 803; 14 L. T. 835.

*Page of (1866) 1 H. L. (Sc.)—[Ed.]

[90 I. O. 1925]

"They are allowed to say, 'We have all a common interest in the unrestricted flow of the water, and we forbid any interference with it.' This is a plain, intelligible rule, easily understood, and easily followed, and from which I think your Lordships ought not to allow any departure."

Lord Westbury, at page 61* of the report, thus expresses himself:—

"When, however, it is said, that proprietors of the bank of a running stream are entitled to the bed of the stream as their property usque ad medium filum, it does not, by any means, follow, that that property is capable of being used in the ordinary way, in which so much land uncovered with water might be used; but it must be used in such a manner as not to affect the interest of riparian proprietors in the stream. Now, the interest of a riparian proprietor in the stream is not only to the extent of preventing its being diverted or diminished, but it would extend also to prevent the course being so interfered with or affected as to direct the current in any different way that might possibly be attended with damage at a future period to another proprietor."

So much as to interference with the alveus which is stated in the head note of this case to be sacred.

In Menzies v. Breadalbane (4) it was held that a proprietor on the bank of a river, having commenced the building of a mound, which, according to the opinion and report of an engineer, would if completed, in times of ordinary flood throw the waters of the river on to the grounds of a proprietor on the opposite bank so as to overflow and injure them, should be restrained by perpetual interdict from the further erection of any bulwark or other work which might have the effect of diverting the stream of the river in time of floods, i. e., ordinary flood, from its accustomed course and throwing the same upon the lands of the appellant. Lord Eldon, in delivering the judgment of the House (at page 418†) said:—

"It is...unnecessary to trouble your Lordships with any observations on the law of England.....because it is clear beyond

(4) (1828) 3 Bligh (N. S.) 414; 4 E. R. 1387; 32 R. R. 103.

*Page of (1866) 1 H. L. (Sc.)—[Ed.]

†Pages of (1828) 3 Bligh (N. S.)—[Ed.]

the possibility of doubt, that by the Law of England, such an operation (i. e., as that complained of) could not be carried on..."

At p. 419† he then said:—

"But let us see what is said on this subject by the institutional writers on the law of Scotland."

He then quotes with approval the following passage from Erskine's Institutes:

"When a river threatens an alteration of the present channel, by which damage may arise to the proprietor of the adjacent or opposite ground, it is lawful for him to build a bulwark ripae muniendae causa to prevent the loss of ground that is threatened by that encroachment."

Lord Eldon then proceeds:—"so that the proprietor whose lands are threatened to be washed away, may, for the purpose of protecting his own property in a case of that description, raise a bank for his own security; but this bulwark must be so executed, as to prejudice neither the navigation, nor the grounds on the opposite of the river."

This right of navigation, however, is not a right of property. It is simply a right of way which must not be interfered with: Orr-Ewing v. Colquhoun (5).

In Nield v. London & North Western Ry. (6), the defendants owned a canal which was threatened with an overflow into it of flood water from a neighbouring river, and, fearing damages to their premises situated on the banks of the canal, placed across the canal some planks rising up higher than the level of the water in the canal, which, being obstructed when the flood increased, rose till it flooded the plaintiff's premises. In an action brought by the plaintiff to recover damages for this injury, it was held that the defendants were not liable on the ground that they had not brought on to the plaintiff's premises the water which did the injury, and that there was no duty on the owners of a canal analogous to that resting on the owners of a natural watercourse not to impede the flow of the water down it.

So much as regards fresh water streams. As regards the right of an owner of land whose land is exposed to the inroads of the sea, the case of Rex v. Commissioners of Sewers for Pagham (7), many times approved of, is a distinct authority. In delivering his judgment that most able and learned Judge, Bayley, J., stated the rule of law in these words:—

(5) (1877) 2 App. Cas. 839 at p. 846.

(6) (1874) 10 Ex. 4; 44 L. J. Ex. 15; 23 W. R. 60.

(7) (1828) 8 B. & C. 355; 2 Man & Ry. 468; 6 L. J. K. B. (O. S.) 338; 108 E. R. 1075.

"Every land owner exposed to the inroad of the sea has a right to protect himself, and is justified in making and erecting such works as are necessary for that purpose, and the Commissioners (i. e., the defendants) may erect such defences as are necessary for the land entrusted to their superintendence. If, indeed, they made unnecessary or improper works, not with a view to the protection of the level, but with a malevolent intention, to injure the owner of other lands, they would be amenable to punishment by criminal information or indictment, for an abuse of the powers vested in them. But if they act bona fide, doing no more than they honestly think necessary for the protection of the level, (i. e., the land they superintend) their acts are justifiable, and those who sustain damage therefrom must protect themselves."

The last English case necessary to refer to on this subject is that of Whalley v. Lancashire & Yorkshire Ry. Co. (8). It is somewhat peculiar in its features. The defendants were proprietors of a railway which ran along from east to west over a flat country on a low embankment. A ditch ran along on each side of this embankment for the purpose of draining the railway. The surrounding land sloped from south-east to north-west, so that the land on the north west side of the railway embankment, where the damage occurred, was at a lower level than on the south-east side of the embankment. The plaintiff was a farmer occupying lands on the north-west side, the lower side of the railway, but separated from it by other lands belonging to other persons. By reason of an unprecedented rainfall a quantity of water which accumulated on the south-eastern side of the embankment, was dammed up against it, and ultimately rose to such a height as to expose the embankment to danger. This water, it was apparently considered, might possibly have percolated through the embankment, and in no sense did the Company, as did the defendant in Rylands v. Fletcher (9), bring the water upon or up to the Company's lands, but when the water had risen to such a height that the defendants thought it was necessary for the protection of their embankment, they caused trenches to be cut in the embankment, through which the water was enabled to escape to the north-west side of the railway and from thence to flow into the adjoining lands and ultimately to the plaintiff's land, damaging his crops. The case was tried before Mr. Justice Day and a Jury. The Jury found that the cutting of the trenches through which the water flowed was reasonably necessary for the protection of the defendants' property, that it was not done negligently, and that the plaintiff was injured by the water that so came through the trenches to the extent of £138 beyond what it would have been if the trenches had not been cut. On these findings the learned Judge gave judgment for the plaintiff for £130. Brett, M. R., deals in his judgment with the facts of the case and the principles applicable to it. At page 137* he said:—

"But then it is suggested that if a person has not brought the danger on his land it makes a difference. So it does. If he has not brought the danger there, and without any act of his it breaks through his land on to his neighbour's land, I take it he is not liable. In that case both have suffered from a common extraordinary danger, but one has suffered before the other; that is all.....In this case the water endangered the embankment, and moreover it would have gone on to the plaintiff's land in any event, but then if it had been left alone and allowed simply to percolate through the embankment, even though all of it would have gone on the plaintiff's land, it would have gone without doing the injury which was done by reason of its passing through the cuttings which the defendants made. The defendants did something for the preservation of their own property which transferred the misfortune from their land to that of the plaintiff, and, therefore, it seems to me that they are liable."

Lord Justice Lindley, at page 140* of the report says: "It appears to methis case is more analogous to the Scotch case of Menzies v. Breadalbane (4) Nield v. London & North Western Ry. (6) "It seems to me established by those cases that if an extraordinary flood is seen to be coming upon land the owner of such land

(8) (1884) 13 Q. B. D. 131; 53 L. J. Q. B. 285; 50 L. T. 472; 32 W. R. 711; 48 J. P. 500.

(9) (1868) 3 H. L. 330; 37 L. J. Ex. 161; 19 L. T. 220.

*Page of (1884) 13 Q. B. D.—[Ed.]

may fence off and protect his land from it, and so turn it away, without being responsible for the consequences, although his neighbour may be injured by it.

"Rex v. Commissioner of Sewers for Pagham (7) is another step in the same direction We must look at the broad question which is, whether a land owner on whose land there is a sudden accumulation of water, brought there without any fault or act of his, is at liberty actively to let it off on to the land of his neighbour without making that neighbour any compensation for damages, because the landowner, by doing so, has been able to save his own property from injury? I can see no authority for that, and it appears to me the general rights and duties of landowners are decidedly against it."

Some point was made in this case to the effect that the stream alleged to have been stopped up was at best merely an artificial water-course and not a natural one. In the latter case the successive riparian owners have been each entitled to the unimpeded flow of the water in its natural course, and to its reasonable enjoyment as it passes through his land as a natural incident of the ownership of his land. In the former case, however, any right of the owner to the flow of the water must rest on prescription or grant from or contract with the owner of the land from which the water is artificially brought: Rameshur Pershad Narain Singh v. Koonj Behari Pathuk (10), Kensit v. Great Eastern Ry. Co. (11).

There is, however, a well-established principle of law directly bearing upon this case and vitally affecting it, namely, that a water-course originally artificial may have been made under such circumstances, and have been used in such a way that an owner of land situate on its bank will have all the rights over it that a riparian owner would have if it had been a natural stream: Sutcliffe v. Booth (12), Holker v. Porrit (13),

(10) (1879) 4 A. C. 121; 4 Q. 633; 6 I. A. 3rd; 3 Sar P. C. J. 856; 3 Ind. Jur. 179; 2 Shome L. R. 194; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 402 (P. C.).

(11) (1881) 27 Ch. D. 122 at p. 134; 54 L. J. Ch. 19; 51 L. T. 862; 32 W. R. 885.

(12) (1863) 32 L. J. Q. B. 136; 9 Jur. (N. S.) 1037; 139 R. R. 744.

(13) (1873) 8 Ex. 107; 42 L. J. Ex. 85; 21 W. R. 414.

Bailey & Co. v. Clarks Son & Morland (14).

It is not necessary in order to apply the principles of these decisions to analyse the evidence in detail. It was proved by a Public Officer, the Superintendent of Land Records, and not contradicted, that this so-called canal went right up to the boundary of the appellants' land; while on the following five paragraphs of the written statement of the respondents they practically admitted the facts founding the charge against them, though at the same time they misrepresent the conduct and action of the appellants. These paragraphs run thus:—

6. The said channel became wider and longer through erosion, with the result that the salt-water from Kyonkan Chaung overflowed, on the lands of this defendant and of adjoining cultivators and caused damage thereto.

7. In order to prevent such damage in or before the year 1914 the first defendant admits there was a bund erected across the said channel at a point where it flows through the land of this defendant and others. Such erection was said to be by the permission of Maung Thi Hla, the then Township Officer of Bogale.

8. The said bund gave way in or about the year 1916-17, and this defendant with his assistants repaired the bund formerly erected at the same place where the original bund was erected without any objection on the part of the plaintiffs or any one else.

9. On the 1st July 1917 the first plaintiff and other illegally trespassed on the first defendant's lands originally acquired and land purchased afterwards and opened the said bund, but the bund was erected again as there was no legal order and report that effect was made to Thugyi Maung Shwe Loon.

10. On or about the 25th August, 1917, in pursuance of an order of the Deputy Commissioner of Pyapon, the said bund was opened, and after such date it has not been closed.

The evidence and findings of the Judges upon these statement establish, as will presently be shown, that the defendants themselves erected the bund referred to in the second as well as in the third of these paragraphs. To effect this work they must have gone in upon the alveus of the canal closed up with this bund the eye of the bridge what was the outfall of the canal into the sea, and thus have offended against the law as laid down in the English cases. The District Judge framed for himself certain issues and answered them thus: To the second issue he gave the answer that the canal was not a Government constructed work, but was for a long time before 1906-1907 a naturally-formed channel. The third issue so framed ran, "Did this canal facilitate the free out-flow of rain-water from the plaintiffs' (appellants') paddy lands?" His answer ran thus: "There cannot be any doubt that as all the parties admitted the canal takes the water into the Kwin from the Kyonkan Creek at flood tide, and takes the water out from the Kwin into the creek at ebb tide, therefore, a certain extent of rain water must find its way into the Kyonkan Creek as a natural consequence." And, again, "there cannot be any doubt as to the motive of the defendants that they erected the bund and closed the canal to protect their own fields from salt-water; but there cannot also be any doubt that the stoppage of the out-flow at ebb tide caused the excess water to remain in the fields of both the parties." He answers the fifth issue in the following words: the "weight of evidence is clearly in favour of the plaintiffs," and I would [thus] answer the fifth issue.

(14) (1902) 1 Ch. 619 at pp. 661, 669, 673; 71 L. J. Ch. 396; 50 W. R. 511; 86 L. T. 309; 18 T. L. R. 364.

He further finds that Map 2A makes it clear that the channel had been in existence before the year 1906-1907, and that there was no canal construction by any one. He ultimately gave a decree in favour of the appellants for Rs. 8,821-4-8. No case has been made that these damages were excessive in amount if the legal wrong complained of had been actually committed. There was ample evidence in the case to sustain the findings of the District Judge if he believed the witnesses who gave it, as apparently he did, having seen and heard them. It appears to their Lordships plain that the access of some salt water from the creek through the eye of the bridge into the canal twice in the twenty-four hours in flood tide does not resemble in any way those incursions of the sea dealt with in Rex v. Commissioners of Sewers for Pagham (7) and still less did the closing up of the eye of the bridge, by this bund, and in seasons of heavy rain the ponding up of the fresh water in the canal, so that lands higher up the stream were flooded resemble those necessary precautions which a landowner whose land is at the mercy of these incursions of the sea is entitled to take to protect his property. If the stopping up of the outfall of the canal was justifiable by reason of this access of some salt water at flood then every fresh-water tributary to a tidal river could be closed up at its mouth to prevent the like consequences.

Both the cases Abdul Hakim v. Gonesh Dutt (1) and Sankarappa Naicker v. Pari Naicker (2) referred to in the third reason for the appellants' appeal deal with surface water, the rain which falls on agricultural land not with water-courses of any kind. They are irrelevant, therefore, to the questions in controversy in this case, and are not in conflict, it appears to their Lordships, with any of the English cases cited.

The respondents appealed, and on the appeal the learned Judges of the Chief Court of Appeal seem to have taken a course as unwise as it was extraordinary. The appellants had undoubtedly in para. 4 of their plaint stated that the Government had in the year 1913 dug this canal, shown by letters A, B, C, D, on Ex. "A." That was no doubt found to be untrue, but no evidence whatever was given to show that the Government had any jurisdiction or authority to do such a thing, and what is much more important that if they had such authority an action could not be brought for any injurious consequence resulting to individuals from its execution.

That paragraph of the plaint is followed by two others, Nos. 5 and 9

5. The said canal thus facilitated the free out-flow of the rain water from the plaintiff's paddy lands aforesaid into the said Kyonkan Chaung and rendered cultivable all the lands situate in Kasaung Ngotto West Kwin and Sakangyi South (A) and (B) Kwins, which adjoin the said Kamakalu Kwin.

9. The plaintiffs have been informed and verily believe that during the month of Kason or Nayon, 1279 B. E., the first defendant's tenants and servants by order of the first defendant and the defendants Nos. 2 to 8 closed the said canal at the point B shown in red ink in the plan Ex. A.

The alleged wrong for which the plaintiffs claim damages was the stopping up by a bund of the out-fall of the canal, by which means the water of the canal, having been denied escape at the proper place, was ponded up, flowed back, and flooded their lands. The identity of the body or person which or who actually formed the canal was a matter wholly irrelevant to the matters in issue. It did not form even an ingredient in the cause of action, and there is not an averment in the plaint to show that the plaintiffs did not rely upon the canal being an old natural water-course enlarged, but new or artificial. The plaint is entirely consistent with their relying upon the one thing or the other, as suited them best.

Yet strange to say, one of the learned Judges in the Chief Court (Mr. Justice Duckworth) considered that this statement as to the digging of the canal by the Government was a matter of such vital importance, that the judgment of the District Judge should be reversed, and his decision in the plaintiff's favour be overruled because this allegation had not been proved.

In justice to Mr. Justice Duckworth, the following passages from his judgment should be quoted:—

"I have only to add a few remarks. It appears to me that the plaintiff-respondent Maung Bya set up a certain case in his pleadings, by which he must either stand or fall. It is clear, from his plaint, that his case was that, until Government made a canal, the lands which belong to him were unworkable, but that, after Government made a canal connecting the Fishery creeks with the Kyonkan Chaung, his fields became culturable. Further, he contended that owing to the appellant Maung Tet closing this canal, at the Kyonkan Chaung end, by a bund, in 1917 he suffered certain damage through his fields becoming inundated."

It does not appear to their Lordships that this is at all an accurate or fair construction of the plaint of the appellants.

The learned Judge then proceeds:—

"In fact treating this channel, as I think we must, as a natural watercourse [see Maung Kaw La v. Maung Ke (15)] we find that appellant is a riparian proprietor, whereas the respondent is not.

"This is only view of the case which can be inferred from the evidence.

"This would go to show that the map of 1906 was right, and that what was done in 1913 was to clean up flooded areas and deepen a natural watercourse, and not to create a new one, involving the forfeiture of the riparian owners' rights."

(15) 35 Ind. Cas. 356; 8 L. B. R. 556; 9 Bur. L. T. 83.

The last paragraph, the different portions of which seem scarcely consistent with each other, runs thus:—

"It is quite unnecessary to consider any other points. The respondent set up a case, which he failed to prove, and obtained a decree before the District Court on a case which he had not pleaded. It is settled law that a plaintiff must not be permitted to succeed on a case which he has not put forward directly or indirectly in his plaint. Further, it is apparent that the learned Judge of the District Court took a mistaken view of the facts, his chief error being his overlooking the fact that respondent's lands drew no advantage whatever from this channel until it had opened a way through the road bund into the Kyonkan Chaung, and that only some four years prior to any cause of action having arisen.

"I concur with my learned brother in allowing the appeal with costs, and in the decree passed by him, including special costs to Messrs Leach and Lentaigne Junior."

The passage appears to suggest that a defendant who diverts or stops the flow of a natural water-course and thereby floods the lands of a riparian owner is not to be held responsible in damages for the wrong unless he, the defendant, has made a profit by it. In their Lordships' opinion such a doctrine is unsound.

The other learned Judge, Mr. Justice Maung Kin, deals with this point somewhat differently. He says:—

"The finding that the canal was not one made by the Government is not contested before us. It is, however, contended that plaintiff had the right to the undisturbed flow of water from his land through the canal into the Kyonkan Chaung on the ground that the canal is a natural water-way.

"It is doubtful whether the learned District Judge was right in giving a decree upon a case not set up by plaintiff in his plaint. The basis of the suit as described in the plaint is that the canal was dug by the Government for the benefit of the cultivator, and that it, in fact benefited them, because it drained the surplus rain water from plaintiff's land."

This, as has been already pointed out, is not a true construction of the appellants' case and contention.

The learned Judge then proceeds to add:—

"I may add that there is no equity in favour of plaintiff. He had not derived any benefit before the depression became sufficiently wide and deep to allow of its carrying water coming from the direction of his land, and when the bund was built by Government, there was no reason for thinking that that water would flow in the direction of the bund. But the defendants have all along enjoyed the benefit of the existence of the bund, because it has prevented blackish water coming to defendant's land from the Kyonkan Chaung. I do not see any justice in allowing plaintiff's claim to remove the bund for the benefit of his land, unless he has a natural or prescriptive right to make it. I have held that he has no natural right, and sufficient time has not elapsed for a prescriptive right to ripen.

"For the above reasons I would allow the appeals Nos. 183 and 188 of 1919, with costs."

It appears to their Lordships difficult to understand what the learned Judge meant by the first of these paragraphs.

Their Lordships are quite unable to concur with the learned Judges of the Chief Court in the views they have taken of the rights and liabilities of the parties litigant in this case. They think these views are conflicting inter se, unsound and misleading. To gather together the points fully dealt with above it may be said that in their Lordships' view it is clearly established (I) that a raised road or bund ran transversely across the depressed ground through which flowed the channel of water, and was properly provided with a gap for the flow and a bridge over the channel, (II) that the bund thus provided with an eye and a bridge to permit the inflow and out-flow of water was interfered with by the respondent who filled up the eye and channel course thereat and converted an innocuous bund into a dam, which dammed back the water on to the appellant's land, and that in law (III) the respondents are responsible for the damage thus caused to the appellant's property. They think the judgment appealed from was erroneous and ought to be set aside, that the decision of the District Judge was right and should be restored, and will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly. The respondents must pay the costs of the appellants in the hearing of the Chief Court and of this appeal.

S. D. Appeal allowed.

Solicitors for the Appellants:—Messrs. Light & Fulton.

Solicitors for the Respondents:—Messrs. H. Hilberry & Son.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL APPEAL No. 223 OF 1923.

December 11, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Phillips and Mr. Justice Krishnan.

I. L. LAKSHMANA AND OTHERS
—DEFENDANTS NOS. 1 TO 6—APPELLANTS
versus

V. V. C. RAMALINGA MUDALIAR AND SONS FIRM THROUGH THEIR PARTNER CHINNAPPA MUDALIAR—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Vendor and purchaser—Vendor agreeing to purchase goods from third persons—Tender—Goods not in vendor's physical possession, effect of—Repudiation of contract, effect of—Advance, whether can be recovered—Damages.

Plaintiffs agreed to purchase 50 bales of yarn of a particular brand from the defendants from out of a lot which the latter had agreed to buy from L & Sons who in their turn had agreed to buy from S & Sons. Defendants gave intimation to the plaintiffs of the arrival of "two bales out of the bales mentioned in the contract letter," but the latter ignored the intimation. Reminders were sent by the defendants stating that L & Sons had intimated to them that the terms of the contract would be enforced and that the defendants were giving intimation to the plaintiffs accordingly. In a suit by the plaintiffs to recover from the defendants the amount of the advance paid by the former in respect of the contract:

Held, (1) that the description of the goods mentioned in the letter of intimation sent by the plaintiffs was sufficiently definite and must be presumed to correspond to that in the contract; [p. 207, col. 2.]

(2) that it was not a condition precedent to delivery by defendants to plaintiffs that there should have been actual delivery to each of the prior purchasers in turn, and that the tender by the defendants was, therefore, good and valid and plaintiffs committed a breach of the contract by failing to take delivery; [p. 208, col. 1.]

(3) that the plaintiffs' breach of contract as to the lots tendered amounted to a repudiation of the whole contract and the defendants were not bound to tender the rest of the goods under the contract; [p. 209, col. 1.]

(4) that the plaintiffs' suit must fail inasmuch as the amount of damages which the defendants could have claimed was in excess of the amount of the advance claimed by the plaintiff. [p. 209, col. 2.]

Bowes v. Shand, (1877) 2 A. C. 455; 46 L. J. Q. B. 561; 36 L. T. 857; 25 W. R. 730, referred to.

A. S. No. 150 of 1922, followed.

Ramier v. Runa Cheena Mana Navanna Ona and Bros., 78 Ind. Cas. 326; 19 L. W. 654, dissented from.

Appeal against a decree of the Court of the Second Additional Subordinate Judge.

Madura, in O. S. No. 78 of 1922 (Original Suit No. 81 of 1924 on the file of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Madura.)

Mr. C. V. Anantakrishna Iyer, for the Appellants.

Mr. N. Chandrasekara Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Phillips, J.—In this case the plaintiffs have brought the suit to recover the advance of money paid in respect of a contract for yarn. The contract is evidenced by Ex. A and was entered into on the 19th August 1918. The plaintiffs agreed to purchase 50 bales of Madura Meenakshi Brand Yarn No. 40 at Rs. 14-7-0 per bundle. On the 23rd of September, the defendants sent intimation to the plaintiffs that two bales according to the contract had arrived and on the 1st of October they gave intimation of arrival of another bale. Plaintiffs sent no answer to this intimation and consequently on 11th October 1918, defendants wrote a reminder in which they said that their vendors Lakshmana Iyer and Sons had intimated that the terms of the contract would be enforced and added "we too give intimation to you accordingly" In this letter they asked the plaintiffs to pay for and take delivery of the bales at once. A similar request was again made on 16th October 1918 and finally a third letter was written on 30th November 1918 asking the plaintiffs to pay the money with interest on receipt of the letter and take delivery of the said bales. After that there was no further correspondence in the matter and what happened has to be inferred from the conduct of the parties. Plaintiffs sent no reply at all to any one of these letters either orally or in writing but ignored them completely.

The first question we have to determine is whether there was a proper tender of the goods by the defendants. Exhibit B informs the plaintiffs that "two bales out of the bales mentioned in our varthamanam letter of 19th August 1918 have arrived." An objection to this was taken that it does not give any description of the bales so as to enable plaintiff to ascertain what the bales were. But inasmuch as it refers to the contract of the 19th August under which the bales were tendered, it is quite clear that it amounts to a tender of contract goods and it was open to the plaintiffs, if they suspected the truth of that assertion, to ask for an inspection or for an opportunity of verifying the facts. As it stands, it is an unconditional assertion by the defendants that the goods tendered were of the description mentioned in the contract, and unless there is anything to show the contrary, we must take it that they were of the description in the contract.

A second objection is taken that the contract provides "for the receipt of bales through the said persons, namely, the purchasing merchants in the chain of contracts, namely Lakshmana Iyer and Sons, the defendants' vendors, and K. M. Subbier and Sons, the vendors of Lakshmana Iyer and Sons, and it is argued that unless each of these merchants actually took delivery of the bales and had physical possession thereof, there would be a breach of the contract in delivering those bales. Reliance is placed on Bowes v. Shand (1) a case in which goods had to be sent by shipments on a particular date and it was held that when they were shipped on a later date, they did not answer the description of the contract. Another case relied on is Ramier v. Runa Cheena Mana Naranna Ona & Bros (2) to which I was a party and it was there held on the recitals in the contract note that it was one of the conditions precedent that there should have been actual delivery to each of the purchasers in turn. The contract in that case is somewhat more particularised than in this and I held that the language of the contract was such that it was capable of bearing this interpretation of a condition precedent as held by the other Judge in the case, and consequently did not dissent from his view. After hearing arguments in this case, I now feel that perhaps I should have given effect to my doubt in the matter, but in this case I am clearly of the opinion that there is no condition precedent as to delivery. The goods ordered were the goods which came from the Mill and those very goods were tendered by the defendants. There can, therefore, be no mistake in the description as was the case in Bowes v. Shand (1) and also in another case in this Court, i.e., Sivarama Aiyar v. Subbiah & Sons (3). Here the goods were the same and the only argument that could be put forward is that there was a condition precedent, namely, that those goods should be carted from warehouse before they were actually delivered to the plaintiffs. I do not think it can be contended that that was an essential condition of the contract and that simply because goods had not been put into a cart and taken out again two or three times, these goods could be refused as not answering to the description on the contract. A similar case has recently been decided by another Bench of this Court, Appeal No. 150 of 1922, and there the view was taken dissenting from Ramier v. Rana Cheena Mana Navanna Gona & Brothers (2) that physical delivery to each merchant in turn was unnecessary. With that view I agree. The tender, therefore, was good and by refusing to accept the goods, plaintiffs have committed a breach of the contract.

(1) (1877) 2 A. C. 455; 46 L. J. Q. B. 561; 36 L. T. 857; 25 W. R. 730.

(2) 78 Ind. Cas. 326; 19 L. W. 654.

(3) 70 Ind. Cas. 346; 15 L. W. 9; (1922) A. I. R. (M.) 28.

The next question arises whether by this breach they have repudiated the whole contract. We see that a tender was made on two occasions of separate lots of yarn and that, on three subsequent occasions, the defendants wrote reminders, in effect fresh tenders, to the plaintiffs and received no reply at all. What inference could the defendants draw except that the plaintiffs did not intend to carry out the contract? The market was falling and plaintiffs had good reason for refusing to carry out the contract and, consequently, this was a very legitimate inference. Defendants consequently never tendered any more goods and this fact is sufficient to show that they accepted this repudiation when coupled with the fact that they retained the advance given by the plaintiffs. It is thus clear that they treated the contract as at an end as they were justified in doing. This does not necessarily forfeit the advance paid by the plaintiffs at the time of the contract, but it appears from the finding of the Subordinate Judge that, if defendants had claimed damages they would have been enabled to make good their claim for a very much larger amount than the advance they received; consequently plaintiffs are not entitled to any refund of this advance.

The appeal is allowed and the plaintiffs' suit dismissed with costs throughout.

Krishnan, J.—I agree with my learned brother that this appeal succeeds and that the suit should be dismissed with costs as ordered by him. My learned brother has dealt with the points raised by the learned Vakil before us on the question whether the tender was a proper tender or not. But the learned Subordinate Judge has taken two other objections which may also be noticed; he says because Exs. B and C, documents under which the intimation of arrival of goods was given to the plaintiffs, did not mention exactly where the goods were and also because they did not show that the defendants had not the bales in their disposal or control, the two letters, Exs. B and C, could not be treated as proper letters of tender. I am unable to agree with the view taken by the Subordinate Judge. It was not necessary for the defendants to have intimated to the plaintiffs exactly where the goods were to be found. If the plaintiffs wanted to know where those goods were, it could have been easily done by their asking as to where the goods were and they could have then gone and inspected the goods. As a matter of fact, they took no steps whatever. They ignored all the letters from the defendants.

As regards the second point there is nothing to show that, if the plaintiffs wanted the delivery of the goods and were prepared to pay for the goods, there would have been any difficulty in giving them delivery. The bales were evidently with Subbier because they were afterwards sold by Subbier and he was under a contract to supply to Lakshman Iyer and Sons and Lakshman Iyer to the plaintiffs. This objection could not, therefore, be said to be well-founded. The other objections to the tender have already been dealt with by my learned brother. I may add that for the disposal of this case it is sufficient for us to rely upon the recent ruling of the learned Chief Justice and Srinivasa Iyengar, J., in Appeal No. 150 of 1922. They held that it was not necessary for the defendants to have actually got physical possession of the bales. The view to the contrary taken by Venkatasubba Rao, J., in Ramir v. Rana Cheena Mana Navanna Gona and Brother (2), has not been followed in that case and with all respect to the learned Judge, I do not think it is right, if he meant to lay down generally that in all cases of this kind of contract it is necessary for the person selling to get actual possession of the goods before he could make a proper tender. It may be on the facts of that particular case the ruling can be supported; but it is not necessary for me to express an opinion on that point.

Then as regards the tender of the 47 bales which the Sub-Judge thinks should have been tendered, I am in agreement with my learned brother that it was not necessary as the repudiation of the contract by the plaintiffs in not having taken delivery of the three bales shows that they were not going to accept any goods at all. Their conduct was not peculiar to the particular three bales, but indicated generally that they were not going to be bound by the contract; and that, for a very good reason, because the market was going down very rapidly and it was in their interests to get out of the contract. It was not necessary on the part of the defendants to have actually sent a notice to the plaintiffs that they were treating the failure to accept delivery of the goods tendered by the plaintiffs as amounting to a repudiation of the whole contract. If they were keeping alive the contract they should have under s. 39 of the Contract Act sent an intimation to that effect, but to accept the breach as putting an end to the contract, further intimation is not necessary. The contract of the defendants shows that they did accept the breach by failure to accept delivery of the goods as a breach of the whole contract and they subsequently did not treat the contract at all as subsisting. The letter of the 30th November on which much reliance has been placed by the learned Vakil for the plaintiffs as showing that the contract was kept alive up to that date does not seem to have such effect. It was a conditional offer which the defendants made to the plaintiffs to waive the breach committed by the plaintiffs. If the money was paid and delivery taken at once as proposed, no doubt, the breach would have been waived, but as the plaintiffs failed to accept the offer it fell through and the original breach of contract remained. In these circumstances I agree with my learned brother that the contract was broken by the plaintiffs by not taking delivery when the three bales were tendered and their failure showed that they were treating the contract as broken and it was not thereafter necessary for the defendants to tender any goods in pursuance of the contract. The question, therefore, whether goods were available to make such a tender or not is quite irrelevant.

As regards damages, it is clear that, if the defendants were entitled to damages, the same would be much more than the money in their hands as advance paid by plaintiffs. I agree that the suit must be dismissed and the appeal allowed with costs.

V. N. V.

Appeal allowed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 479 OF 1923.

June 19, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

E. I. RAILWAY COMPANY—DEFENDANT
—APPELLANT

versus

BADRILAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Second appeal—Finding of fact, whether can be impeached—Evidence, consideration of—First Appellate Court, position of.

The mere fact that upon the documents and evidence placed before the learned District Judge the High Court would have come to a different conclusion is no ground for second appeal, it is precisely this revision of evidence which is excluded by the limited character of a second appeal [ibid.]

Nafar Chandra Pal v. Shukur Sheikh, 51 Ind. Cas. 760; 45 I. A. 183 at p. 189; 46 C. 189; 23 C. W. N. 305; 9 L. W. 552 (P. C.), relied on.

If there is evidence to be considered the decision of the second Court, however unsatisfactory it might be when examined, must stand final. [p. 210, col. 1.]

East Indian Railway Company v. Changa Khan, 28 Ind. Cas. 215; 42 C. 888; 19 C. W. N. 1034; 22 C. L. J. 212, followed.

Given certain set of facts, from which two inferences are possible it is open to the first Appellate Court to draw any one of them. [ibid.]

Rajaram v. Ganesh Hari Karkhanis, 21 B. 91; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 63, followed.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Saugor, in Civil Appeal No. 48 of 1923, dated the 28th July 1923.

Mr. P. Lobo, for the Appellant.

Sir B. K. Bose and Mr. V. Bose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal is filed by the East Indian Railway Company against a decree passed by the District Judge, Saugor, confirming in material particulars the decree passed by the Sub-Judge for the amount of loss sustained by plaintiff for short delivery of 122 tins of ghee out of 356 tins entrusted for carriage to Howrah. It is contended that the findings arrived at by the lower Appellate Court are based on conjectures and cannot, therefore, be accepted as correct, or bind this Court of second appeal.

The whole of the argument addressed by the learned Pleader for the Company was aimed at showing that the theft of the 122 tins of ghee which occurred according to the findings of the District Judge, at Kulharia, must have taken place while the train was in motion and running between Arrah and Kulharia. Whether the train was in motion or stationary when the theft took place is, therefore, the point which requires a decision in this second appeal.

Given certain set of facts, from which two inferences are possible it is open to the first Appellate Court to draw any one of them, vide Rajaram v. Ganesh Hari Kar-khanis (1) and his decision will not be open to challenge in second appeal. Their Lordships of the Privy Council discountenanced the practice of undue interference in second appeal with findings of facts duly supported by evidence proper for consideration. They have expressed their disapprobation in the following passage of their judgment in Nafar Chandra Pal v. Shakur Shaikh (2). The mere fact "that upon the documents and evidence placed before the learned District Judge the High Court would have come to a different conclusion" is no ground for second appeal, "it is precisely this revision of evidence which is excluded by the limited character of a second appeal."

In East Indian Railway Company v. Changa Khan (3) it was held that after there has been a decision of fact in the two Courts of original and first appellate jurisdiction the High Court cannot entertain a second appeal upon any question as to the soundness of findings of fact by the lower Appellate Court. If there is evidence to be considered the decision of the second Court, however unsatisfactory it might be when examined, must stand final.

In view of this state of the law regarding second appeals, I think, I am precluded from considering the soundness of the findings arrived at by the First Appellate Court on the ground that they were based on conjectures which is not the case.

The District Judge has held that a theft by the Railway servants while the train was stationary at Kulharia was more probable than while it was running between Arrah and Kulharia and in view of the several circumstances discussed by him, I think this conclusion is perfectly correct and is not liable to challenge in second appeal.

Certain new points were sought to be urged for the first time in second appeal but I do not think I will be justified in allowing them to be pressed.

On the whole the case has been rightly decreed and the decision must stand. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs. Costs in the lower Courts will be paid as already ordered.

K. S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 498-B of 1922.

March 19, 1924.

Present:—Mr Kotval, A. J. C.

CHOTURAM BHIKRAJ—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT
versus

NARAYAN AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Alienation—Debt previously secured on joint family property, whether antecedent—Practice—Decree correct according to Privy Council ruling—Appeal—Subsequent change—Decree, whether should be confirmed.

A debt previously borrowed on the security of the joint family property is an antecedent debt for which the joint family property is liable. [p. 211, col. 1.]

Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad Rai, 77 Ind. Cas. 689; 21 A. L. J. 934; 46 M. L. J. 23; 5 P. L. T. 1; 28 C. W. N. 253; (1924) M. W. N. 68; 19 L. W. 72; 2 Pat. L. R. 41; 10 O. & A. L. R. 82; (1924) A. I. R. (P. C.) 50; 33 M. L. T. 457; 46 A. 95; 26 Bom. L. R. 500; 11 O. L. J. 107; 51 I. A. 129; 1 O. W. N. 48; 41 C. L. J. 232 (P. C.), followed.

Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh, 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 44 I. A. 126; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213 (P. C.), not followed.

Whenever the Privy Council lays down a principle, in theory it only declares what is and has always been the law, any previous declaration not in consonance with its present declaration not having been the law at all [ibid.]

Therefore, a decision of the lower Appellate Court which was right according to the view of the law then prevailing is liable to be set aside in second appeal if a subsequent ruling of the Privy Council takes a contrary view. [ibid.]

Appeal against a decision of the District Judge, Amroati, in Civil Appeal No. 15 of 1922, dated the 5th of August 1922.

(1) 21 B. 91; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 63.

(2) 51 Ind. Cas. 760; 45 I. A. 183 at p. 189; 46 C. 189; 23 C. W. N. 345; 9 L. W. 552 (P. C.).

(3) 28 Ind. Cas. 245; 42 C. 888; 19 C. W. N. 1034; 22 C. L. J. 212.

Mr. W. R. Puranik, for the Appellant.
Mr. M. R. Bobde, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—According to the interpretation put upon Sahu Ram Chandra v. Bhup Singh (1) the decision of the lower Appellate Court that the debt previously borrowed on the security of the joint family property is not an antecedent debt for which the joint family property is liable is correct, but in view of the recent decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Brij Narain Rai v. Mangala Prasad Rai (2) in which Sahu Ram Chandra's case (1) is reviewed, it must now be held that the debt is such.

The facts of the present case so far as the question of the antecedency of the debt is concerned are materially the same as in Brij Narain Rai v. Mangal Prasad Rai (2).

It is contended by the respondents' learned Pleader that the decision of the lower Appellate Court which was right according to the view of the law then prevailing in this Court should not be set aside because of the subsequent ruling of the Privy Council. But the question is not whether the decision would have been considered right when it was given but whether it should be now confirmed by this Court as right. The contention is based on the notion that the Privy Council has altered the law, and the alteration does not affect the decision which is correct under the law as it was before its alteration. This notion is not correct. Whenever the Privy Council lays down a principle in theory it only declares what is and has always been the law, any previous declaration not in consonance with its present declaration not having been the law at all.

The appeal succeeds. The plaintiffs' suit will be decreed for the amount claimed with the exception of Rs. 38 against the whole of the joint family property mortgaged with costs in the First Court. I fix the 19th September 1924 as the date by which the amount should be paid to the plaintiff by the defendants. Under the circumstances of the case I direct that the costs in this and the lower Appellate Court be borne by the parties as incurred.

(1) 39 Ind. Cas. 280; 39 A. 437; 44 I. A. 126; 21 C. W. N. 698; 1 P. L. W. 557; 15 A. L. J. 437; 19 Bom. L. R. 498; 26 C. L. J. 1; 33 M. L. J. 14; (1917) M. W. N. 439; 22 M. L. T. 22; 6 L. W. 213 (P. C.).

(2) 77 Ind. Cas. 689; 21 A. L. J. 934; 46 M. L. J. 23; 6 P. L. T. 1; 28 C. W. N. 253; (1924) M. W. N. 68; 19 L. W. 72; 2 Pat. L. R. 41; 10 O. & A. L. R. 82; (1924) A. I. R. (P. C.) 50; 33 M. L. T. 457; 46 A. 95; 26 Bom. L. R. 503; 11 O. L. J. 107; 51 I. A. 129; 1 O. W. N. 48; 41 C. L. J. 232 (P. C.).

K. S. D.

Appeal accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT. FULL BENCH.

FULL BENCH REFERENCE No. 1 OF 1925

IN

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 586
OF 1923.

July 22, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Hugh Walmsley, Kt.,

Justice Sir Ewart Greaves, Kt.,

Mr. Justice C. C. Ghose, Mr. Justice

B. B. Ghose and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

KAILASH CHANDRA MITRA—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

BROJENDRA KUMAR CHAKRAVARTI

AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Rent suit, whether maintainable against some heirs of deceased tenant—Liability to pay rent—Tenants-in-common, rights and liabilities of—Joint and several liability—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 43, applicability of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. I, rr. 6, 9, 10 (2)—Court's duty—Amendment—Dismissal.

By the Full Bench (C. C. Ghose and Mukerji, JJ. dissenting):—A suit for rent is maintainable against some of the heirs or successors-in-interest of a deceased tenant without bringing all the heirs and successors-in-interest on the record. [p. 213, col. 1; p. 214, col. 1.]

The liability of a tenant to pay rent arises from the fact of possession of the land as a tenant, where there is no express contract, and all persons in possession of land as tenants are under an implied obligation to pay the rent for the land to the landlord, whether they get into possession by right of succession or assignment. [p. 213, col. 2.]

The heirs of a deceased tenant do not take the tenancy as an entire body forming as it were a partnership or a corporation, the individual members of which have no definite interest. They take as tenants-in-common, each having a definite share in the whole. [ibid.]

A tenant-in-common is entitled to possession of every part of the estate and there is a privity of estate between him and the landlord in the whole of the leasehold. Again, as, on the basis of the privity of estate a tenant-in-common is liable for all covenants running with the land and as his estate is an estate in the whole of the leasehold, he is liable for the entire rent. [ibid.]

Whether a contract is implied for payment of rent by all tenants-in-common in possession of a leasehold, or whether the law be held to impose the liability for payment of rent by reason of privity of estate, any one of such tenants may be sued for entire rent due to the landlord. This may be either in accordance with the provisions of s. 43 of the Contract Act, or under general law based on privity of estate. [p. 213, col. 2; p. 214, col. 1.]

A decree in such a suit will not have the effect of a decree for rent under Ch. XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act. [p. 214, col. 1.]

Per Mukerji, J.—Section 43 of the Contract Act has no application except in the case of original lessees or persons who were party to the contract and it makes, as far as the liability under a contract is concerned, all joint contracts joint and several. [p. 216, col. 1.]

Persons who are under a joint liability to pay rent are necessary parties in a suit for rent. But a decree obtained in the absence of some of the co-tenants is not necessarily a nullity. It is a valid decree but is effective only as a decree for money. If, however, objection is taken at the right moment to the maintainability of the suit, the Court must proceed under O. I, r. 10 (2), C. P. C., to make an order for the addition of such of the persons as are not already on the record as defendants and it is only in the event of the necessary amendments not being made that the suit is liable to be dismissed. [p. 216, cols. 1 & 2.]

ORDER OF REFERENCE TO A FULL BENCH.

Greaves and Mukerji, JJ.—This appeal arises out of a suit wherein the plaintiffs as four-annas co-sharers of a certain talug sought to recover arrears of rent from the defendants who, they alleged, were holding under them as tenure-holders. The defence of the defendants, in substance, was that they were not tenure-holders but co-proprietors of the estate and further that the suit was not maintainable as all the persons who are successors-in-interest of the original transferee Gour Sunder Singh and whose names are recorded as such in the finally published Record of Rights were not made defendants therein.

The suit was decreed by the Court of first instance, and the said decision has been upheld by the lower Appellate Court. The defendants have thereupon preferred this appeal, in which the validity of the decisions of the Courts below has been challenged upon the two grounds which formed their defence as stated above.

As regards the first of these grounds we are not prepared to accede to the appellant's contention. This necessitates our dealing with the second ground.

So far as the second ground is concerned, on the finding of the lower Appellate Court it is clear that some of the persons on whom devolved the interest of the original transferee Gour Sundar Singh, by purchase and inheritance, have not been made parties to the suit. The question whether under such circumstances the suit is maintainable is one about which there is a clear conflict of judicial opinion in this Court, and we must necessarily dissent from one or other of the catena of decisions dealing with the point.

The authorities in favour of the view that a suit framed in this way is maintainable are the cases of Champat Kaphini Dasi v. Triguna Nath Sardar [S. A. No. 1015 of 1915 decided 18th July 1916] Subashi Dassi v. Raj Krishna Roy (1), and Meajan Mondal v. Jogendra Nath De (2). A contrary view has been taken in the cases of Kashi Kinkar Sen v. Satyendra Nath Bhadro (3), Shaikh Sahed v. Krishna Mohan Basak (4), Siba Krishna Sinha v. Jagat Chandra Taluqdar (5) and Abinash Chandra Roy v. Fulchand Chaudhuri (6). In the case of Krishna Dos Roy v. Kali Tara Chowdhurani (7), Chatterjea, J., expressed an opinion that the liability of all the heirs of a contracting tenant is a joint liability, but Richardson, J., reserved his opinion on that question.

This conflict has been noticed in several cases decided in this Court; amongst which reference may be made to the decision in the case of Mohendranath Bose v. Abinash Chandra Bose (8), in which the advisability of referring the matter to the Full Bench was recognised. In the present case, the question directly arises and, in our opinion, it must be decided in order to dispose of the appeal.

The point upon which we must necessarily differ from the one or the other set of decisions referred to above is as to whether a suit for rent is maintainable against some of the heirs or successors-in-interest of a deceased tenant without bringing all the heirs or successors-in-interest on the record.

We accordingly refer the case to the Full Bench in accordance with the provisions of r. 2, Ch. VII, of the High Court Rules, Appellate Side.

Babu Upendra Kumar Roy (with him Babu Mon Mohan Banerjee), for the Appellant.

(1) 23 C. W. N. xxvii (27).

(2) 63 Ind. Cas. 949; 48 C. 518.

(3) 7 Ind. Cas. 840; 15 C. W. N. 191; 12 C. L. J. 642.

(4) 35 Ind. Cas. 563; 24 C. L. J. 371.

(5) 45 Ind. Cas. 732.

(6) 74 Ind. Cas. 1032; 50 C. 737; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 165.

(7) 44 Ind. Cas. 80; 22 C. W. N. 289.

(8) 77 Ind. Cas. 364; 27 C. W. N. 521; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 615.

Babus Prokas Chandra Pakrashi and Ramendra Mohan Majumdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT OF THE FULL BENCH.

Walmsley, J.—I agree in the view expressed by my learned brother Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose in the judgment which he is going to deliver.

Greaves, J.—I also agree in the view expressed in that judgment.

C. C. Ghose, J.—The question that has been referred to the Full Bench is as to whether a suit for rent is maintainable against some of the heirs or successors-in-interest of a deceased tenant without bringing all the heirs or successors-in-interest on the record. In my view, the answer to the question ought to be in the negative. It will serve no useful purpose to discuss the conflicting authorities on the point. It is sufficient for me to observe that I adhere to the view which I expressed in the case of Abinash Chandra Roy v. Fulchand Chaudhuri (7). I have heard nothing during the course of the argument to induce me to depart from the opinion expressed by me in the above case. In my opinion, the suit as framed, should be dismissed and the appeal preferred by the defendants allowed.

B. B. Ghose, J.—The facts of the case which led to this reference shortly stated are these: The plaintiff is entitled to 4 annas share of a taluq under which there is a tenur which formerly belonged to one Gour Sundar Singh and which by successive devolutions and assignments has come into the possession of about twenty persons. The plaintiff has sued for his share of the rent of the tenure for the years 1324 to 1327 B. S., five persons some of whom have acquired their interest by succession and others under assignments from some of the heirs of Gour Sundar. All these persons were in possession during the period in suit along with others who have not been made parties. The only plea which now requires consideration is that the suit is not maintainable as the other tenants have not been made parties. The Trial Court passed a decree for money personally against the defendants and held that the tenure would not be bound by the decree, and on appeal that decree was affirmed by the Subordinate Judge. One of the defendants preferred a second appeal to this Court. There are two lines of cases in this Court taking contrary views, which has made it necessary for a reference to the Full Bench of the question "whether a suit for rent is maintainable against some of the heirs or successors-in-interest of a deceased tenant without bringing all the heirs or successors-in-interest on the record."

It would scarcely serve any useful purpose to examine the various conflicting authorities. The question should be decided on well-recognised general principles. It is argued that the tenancy as well as the liability for payment of rent has been inherited by the representatives of the deceased tenant as one body and this body as a whole is liable for the rent on the contract of their predecessor. If the landlord omits to implead anyone of them in his suit for rent, the suit is defective and must be dismissed for not having been brought against the body of representatives as a whole. This argument seems to me to be grounded on a misconception. The heirs did not take the tenancy as an entire body forming as it were a partnership or a corporation, the individual members of which have no definite interest. They took as tenants-in-common, each having a definite share in the whole, which he might deal with in any way he pleased. As a matter of fact, as already stated, some of the heirs of the original tenant had assigned their interest to third persons. The liability of a tenant to pay rent arises from the fact of possession of the land as a tenant where there is no express contract, and all persons in possession of land as tenants are under an implied obligation to pay the rent for the land to the landlord, whether they got into possession by right of succession or assignment. A tenant-in-common is entitled to possession of every part of the estate and there is privity of estate between him and the landlord in the whole of the leasehold. The law imposes a liability on a tenant-in-common based on privity of estate for all covenants running with the land, and as his estate is an estate in the whole of the leasehold, there is no reason why he should not be liable for the entire rent. This view is supported by what is stated in Leake on Contracts, 7th, Edn., at p. 931, that each tenant-in-common being possessed of the whole may be sued separately upon covenants running with the land. Thus whether a contract is implied for payment of rent by all tenants-in-common in possession of a leasehold, or whether it is held that the law imposes the liability for payment of rent by reason of privity of estate, anyone of such tenants may be sued for the entire rent due to the landlord. This may be either in accordance with the provisions of s. 43 of the Indian Contract Act which applies to express as well as implied promises, or under the general law based on privity of estate.

It is hardly necessary to add that a decree in such a suit will not have the effect of a decree for rent under Ch. XIV of the Bengal Tenancy Act.

On the grounds stated above I would answer the question in the affirmative, with the result that the appeal should be dismissed.

Mukerji, J.—The authorities bearing upon the point involved in this reference have all been noticed and their precise effect accurately summarised in the judgment of my learned brother Chatterjea, J., in the case of Mohendra Nath Bose v. Abinash Chandra Bose (9) and it is unnecessary to discuss them as the question has to be answered upon broad and general principles.

The question is whether a suit for rent is maintainable against some of the heirs or successors in-interest of a deceased tenant without bringing all the heirs or successors in-interest on the record. To answer this question, the matter has to be considered from two distinct points of view: Firstly, from the point of view of the defendants' liability, and secondly from the point of view of the frame of the suit.

As regards the first of these matters, we start with the position that in view of s. 88 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, it must be conceded that when a person obtains a share of a tenure either by assignment or by inheritance he becomes a co-tenant with the other tenant or tenants in the whole tenure, and in so far as the relations between him and his landlord are concerned he cannot be deemed to hold any estate in severalty. Each one of the persons in whom a share of the estate may vest by assignment or inheritance becomes a tenant-in-common in the whole of the estate by reason of the indivisibility of the estate without the landlord's consent. Each one of such co tenants has a privity of estate with the lessor in respect of the whole estate. The proposition is thus enunciated in Foa on Landlord and Tenant, Sixth Edition, p. 469: "Where, however, the share of the demised premises is not held by the assignee in severalty—as where they become vested in joint tenants or tenants-in-common, the case is different because he, with others, holds the whole estate, and privity in respect of it exists accordingly between him and the lessor." From this it would seem to follow that each of the joint tenants or tenants-in-common would be liable to the lessor on the covenants running with the land, and so for the whole rent. The contrary view was contended for in the case of United Dairies, Ltd. v. Public Trustee (9). In that case Greer, J., observed as follows:—"The present case was argued before me on the assumption that in English Law, whatever may be the case in Ireland, a tenant-in-common is not liable for the whole rent, but only for a proportionate part; but I do not think this question appears to be definitely concluded by any of the decisions in the English Courts." The learned Judge exhaustively dealt with the authorities bearing upon the point and explaining the decision in the case of Merceron v. Dawson (10) which apparently contains dicta to the contrary effect, further observed as follows:—"It seems to me on the authorities, that it has never been conclusively established that an assignee holding with other tenants under the terms of the original lease is not liable jointly with those other tenants for the whole rent. He has an interest in the whole of the land leased...and I see no valid reason why tenants-in-common should be in a position as regards liability for rent different from that of joint tenants. I am inclined to think that each of the tenants-in-common has the privity of estate with the landlord in the whole of the land leased." The reasoning of the learned Judge seems to be unassailable and I agree in his conclusions. I am accordingly of opinion that each one of the defendants in the present suit is liable for the entire rent and there can be no objection to the maintainability of the suit on that ground. I am further of opinion that except in the case of original lessees or persons who were parties to the contract, the provisions of s. 43 of the Indian Contract Act have no application and need not be resorted to.

Turning now to the other question, namely,

(9) (1923) 1 K. B. 469 at p. 471; 92 L. J. K. B. 326; 128 L. T. 768; 67 S. J. 199; 39 T. L. R. 825.

(10) (1823) 5 B. & C. 479; 8 D. & R. 261; 4 L. J. K. B. (o. s.) 211; 108 E. R. 179.

whether the suit is maintainable by reason of defect of parties, the point is as to whether all the persons who are under a joint liability are necessary parties to a suit based upon such liability. Here again we start with the following propositions: If lands are let out to two or more tenants their liability to pay the rent is joint and several, except where it is made joint and not several by express agreement; the liability of assignees of the original tenant or tenants may be a joint liability inter se as amongst the assignees, or it may be a joint and several liability if there is an agreement to that effect. The liability of the persons upon whom the rights of the original tenant or tenants devolve on the death of the latter is a joint liability to the extent of the interest which devolves and not a joint and several liability in respect of that interest, as the whole body of persons who succeed in this way constitute in law but one heir.

Section 43 of the Indian Contract Act expressly refers to "promisor" and "promisee." As far as the liability under a contract is concerned it appears to make all joint contracts joint and several. Order I, r. 6, C.P.C., provides that the plaintiff may, at his option join as parties to the same suit all or any of the persons severally, or jointly and severally, liable on any one contract including parties to Bills of Exchange, hundis and promissory-notes. Cases of joint liability or of joint and several liability which do not come within s. 43 of the Contract Act or O. I, r. 6 must be treated as cases for which no exception has been made in this country to the general rule which obtains in English Common Law and which is in consonance with justice, equity and good conscience. In the words of Lord Redesdale: "All persons materially interested in the subject ought generally to be parties to the suit, plaintiffs or defendants, however numerous they may be, so that the Court may be enabled to do complete justice by deciding upon and settling the rights of all persons interested, and that the orders of the Court may be safely executed by those who are compelled to obey them, and future litigation may be prevented." This general rule embraces two classes of parties as defendants, that is to say, those who are indispensable and, necessary parties without whom no decree at all can be rendered, and those who are proper parties whose presence makes the adjudication more complete and effectual. Under the English Law where the liability is a joint and several one the plaintiff will not be compelled to add all the persons so liable as defendants, Chalmers v. Guthrie (11), but where an action has been commenced against one or some only of several joint contractors the defendant or defendants can apply to have the other joint contractor or contractors added and the proceedings stayed until this is done, Kendall v. Hamilton (12). The effect of the latest decision seems to be that a joint debtor, though he has not an absolute, has an ordinary and a prima facie right to have his co debtors joined; Wilson v. Balearres Brook Steamship & Co. (13) and Robinson v. Geisel (14). There is, in my opinion, no reason why this general right should be denied in this country to a person under a joint liability where the liability arises not under a contract to which O. I, r. 6 is confined and where the persons are neither severally nor jointly and severally but are only jointly liable.

In a case where the liability of the defendants arises not on contract, but on account of privity of estate, the defendant may insist on all the persons jointly liable, to be made party defendants. All such persons, in my opinion, are not merely proper, but also necessary parties. If objection is taken to the maintainability of the suit in their absence, the Court has to follow the provisions of O. I, r. 10 (2) of the C. P. C. In England it has been the essence of the procedure since the Judicature Acts to take care that a suit shall not be defeated by the non-joinder of the right parties. The same rule has been embodied in O. I, rr. 9 and 10, C. P. C. These two rules correspond to O. XVI r. 11 of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883 with regard to which the following is what has been said in Chitty and Marks' Yearly Practice of the Supreme Court, 1925:—"This Rule has not altered the legal principles with regard to the parties to actions or the right of a defendant to insist on the necessary parties before the Court. It has, however, altered the procedure and substituted an application to add the parties improperly omitted or to strike out the parties improperly joined or to (11) (1923) 156 L. T. Journal. p. 382.

(12) (1879) 4 A. C. 504; 48 L. J. C. P. 705; 41 L. T. 418; 28 W. R. 97.

(13) (1893) 1 Q. B. 422; 62 L. J. Q. B. 245; 4 R. 286; 68 L. T. 312; 41 W. R. 486; 7 Asp. N. C. 321.

(14) (1894) 2 Q. B. 685; 9 R. 555; 71 L. T. 70; 42 W. R. 609.

stay the proceeding until the necessary parties are added. The Court has now, however, a discretionary power to refuse the order; but in the exercise of this discretion it is guided by the same principles as were applicable to the old plea in abatement."

In my judgment persons who are under a joint liability to pay the rent, are necessary parties in a suit for rent. They are so from more points of view than one. They are necessary for determining whether the liability which is prima facie joint is also joint and several; for protecting the defendant from being made to pay what may have already been paid by others; for safe-guarding against the eventuality of his being defeated in a suit for contribution, as the co-tenant against whom a suit for contribution is brought will not be bound by the result of the earlier suit; for preventing conflicting decisions as to the character and incidents of the same tenancy being arrived at in different suits; and for various other reasons. That a lessor is bound to implead in his suit all the lessees or assignees from the lessees who are known to him is a principle recognised from the earliest times. Bayley, J., in the case of Merceron v. Dawson (10), observed thus: "It may be conceded to the defendant that when the plaintiff is informed of the persons in whom the whole interest is vested they must be sued jointly." This principle has been seldom dissented from in this country, and there is no reason that I can think of why it should have been departed from. I do not suggest that a decree obtained in the absence of some of the co-tenants is necessarily a nullity; it is a valid decree and is effective only as a decree for money. But, if objection is taken at the right moment as to the maintainability of the suit, I am clearly of opinion that it should be held that the suit is not properly constituted. In Roop Narain Singh v. Juggol Singh (15), it was ruled that a suit for rent from several rai-yats on account of a holding which has been let out to them, cannot be brought against one of them, but must embrace all of them as defendants. The decision was passed before the Indian Contract Act was enacted. Section 43 of the Act and the provisions of the C. P. C. relating to parties to an action have abrogated this rule in some measure only. In Khetter Mohan Pal v. Prankristo Kabiraj (16), it was assumed as well-settled that upon the death of the original tenant the landlord would be bound to sue so many at any rate of the heirs as had notified their names to him. The same principle appears to have been recognised almost consistently in this Court, and the following cases will show the current of judicial opinion on the point, Ananda Kumar Naskar v. Hari Dass Haldar (17), Sreemuty Jogemaya Dasi v. Girindra Nath Mukherjee (18), Ramoyi Desi v. Rupai Pramanick (19), Abdul Rab v. Eggar (20), Basli Bibi v. Hanif-ud-din Mandal (21) and Kashi Kinkar Sen v. Satyendra Nath Bhadro (3). I am aware that the rule has been departed from in recent years in some instances, but only on rare occasions and under exceptional circumstances. To depart from this rule gives rise to serious anomalies. To take the case of a permanent tenure, as an instance, it would make nugatory the provisions of s. 17 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and deprive the transferee of a share of his right to recognition which he is entitled to under the law.

It follows from what I have said above that in my opinion the suit as framed was not maintainable without impleading as defendants all the parties who are known to be the tenants of the holding. The plaintiff cannot take shelter under the plea of ignorance as to who the persons are: their names are entered in the finally published Record of Rights. The suit, however, cannot be dismissed on that ground. The Court must proceed under O. I, r. 10 (2), C. P. C., to make an order for the addition of such of these persons as are not already on the record as defendants, and it is only in the event of the necessary amendments not being made that the suit is liable to be dismissed. On such amendment being made the suit should be tried out in accordance with law, it being noted that the suit will not fail merely because the plaintiff may have lost his remedy against the added defendants.

In my judgment, therefore, the decree passed by the Courts below should be set

(16) 3 C. W. N. 371.

(17) 27 C. 545; 4 C. W. N. 608; 14 Ind. Dec. (N. 8.) 359.

(18) 4 C. W. N. 590 at p. 592.

(19) 9 Ind. Cas. 801; 13 C. L. J. 267 at p. 269.

(20) 35 C. 182 at p. 184; 12 C. W. N. 160.

(21) 6 Ind. Cas. 570; 12 C. L. J. 267.

(15) 10 W. R. 304.

aside, and the suit remanded to the Court of first instance to be dealt with as indicated above, and all costs hitherto incurred including the costs of this reference should abide the result.

In accordance with the judgment of the majority the appeal is dismissed with costs before the Divisional Bench but without any order as to costs in respect of this reference.

s. D.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 56 OF 1925.

May 5, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

JAGANNATH SAHU AND ANOTHER—

DEFENDANTS—PETITIONERS

versus

SHEGOBIND PRASAD—PLAINTIFF—

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r. 1—Withdrawal of suit—Leave, when can be granted—“Other sufficient grounds,” scope of.

Under r. 1 of O. XXIII of the C. P. C. a Court has power to allow a plaintiff to withdraw a suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter only when the suit is bound to fail by reason of some formal defect or on other sufficient grounds. The other sufficient grounds, however, must be grounds analogous to that provided for in sub-cl. (a) of the rule.

The fact that upon the case as made in the plaint the plaintiff is bound to fail is no ground for allowing a plaintiff to withdraw from a suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit.

Mahendra Ram v. Singi Lal, 48 Ind. Cas. 197; 3 P. L. J. 651, followed.

Revision from the decision of the Munsif, Ranchi, dated the 3rd January 1925.

Mr. P. K. Mukherji, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. Rai Guru Saran Prasad and Dhyani Chandra, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision on behalf of the defendants against the order of the Munsif of Ranchi passed under O. XXIII, r. 1, cl. (2) of the C. P. C. granting the plaintiff permission to withdraw from the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the subject matter of the suit.

The learned Munsif has allowed the withdrawal on the ground that upon the case as made by the plaintiff in the plaint the suit could not succeed. The case made by the plaintiff in the plaint was that the property in dispute was the property of Musammam Jamuni, the maternal grandmother of the plaintiff and the plaintiff claimed the property as the assets of Musammam Jamuni claiming to be the heir of Musammam Jamuni. At the hearing of the suit the plaintiff wanted to adduce evidence to show that the property belonged to the husband of Musammam Jamuni and that the plaintiff inherited the property as the reversionary heir of the husband of the lady. The defendant objected to such evidence going in, on the ground that in the plaint he did not claim the property as the heir of Musammam Jamuni's husband. The learned Munsif says that unless the plaintiff was the heir of Musammam Jamuni's husband the suit would not be successful, because the defendants had produced a Will alleged to have been executed by Musammam Jamuni and had applied for Probate of the Will before the District Judge, and the question was pending before the District Judge. He accordingly gave the plaintiff permission to withdraw the suit. Now, under O. XXIII, r. 1, the Court could allow a plaintiff permission to withdraw the suit with liberty to institute a fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter only when the suit is bound to fail by reason of some formal defect. Sub-clause (b) of cl. (2) of r. 1, however, gives the Court power to allow the withdrawal of a suit on other sufficient grounds. The other sufficient grounds, however, have been held by this Court to be grounds analogous to those provided for in sub-cl. (a). In my opinion, the Court had no jurisdiction to grant permission to withdraw the suit, because upon the case as made in the plaint the plaintiff was bound to fail. There is nothing in the plaint or in the order of the Munsif from which it could be held that there was a formal defect or a defect of such a nature as would prevent the suit being properly tried. The fact that upon the case as made in the plaint the plaintiff could not succeed is no ground for allowing the plaintiff to withdraw from the suit with liberty to bring a fresh suit. The conditions under which a suit may be allowed to be withdrawn with permission to bring a fresh suit have been discussed by this Court in the case of Mahendra Ram v. Singi Lal (1). In my opinion, the learned Munsif was wrong in the present case to allow the suit to be withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit.

(1) 48 Ind. Cas. 197; 3 P. L. J. 651.

The order of the Munsif must be set aside, and the suit will proceed in the ordinary course. The petitioners are entitled to their costs: hearing-fee one gold mohur.

Z. K.

Order set aside.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE

No. 5 of 1923.

May 15, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Hugh Walmsley, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

KARIMANNESSA BIBI—CLAIMANT No. 4
—APPELLANT

versus

HAMEDULLA alias RAJA AND OTHERS—

CLAIMANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Waqf—Marz-ul-mout, what is—Death illness—
Paralysi—Possession of senses—Apprehension of death —Mutwalli's misfeasance, whether affects validity of waqf.

An old Muhammadan was attacked in February 1895 by paralysis of the lower limbs rendering him a helpless invalid, permanently confined to his bed. In March he executed a waqfnama and died in the following November:

Held, that the doctrine of marz-ul-mout applied and that the waqf was valid only to the extent of one-third of the waqif's assets. [p. 220, col. 1.]

Per Mukerji, J.—The limit of one year in cases of marz-ul-mout does not constitute a hard and fast rule. [p. 224, col. 2.]

In order to make the doctrine of marz-ul-mout applicable there must be (1) illness, (2) expectation of a fatal issue, and (3) certain physical incapacities which indicate the degree of illness. [ibid.]

Death illness is illness in which death is highly probable whether incapacities exist or not. [ibid.]

The question to be considered in cases of marz-ul-mout is whether the donor executed the deed of gift under apprehension of death. [p. 225, col. 1.]

Possession of one's senses and mental faculties is no index of the pressure of sense of imminent death. [p. 226, col. 1.]

Case-law and authorities reviewed.

Malfeasance or misfeasance of a mutwalli does not invalidate a waqf which at its creation was a valid one. [p. 221, col. 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal, Calcutta, dated the 12th of August 1922.

Dr. D. N. Mitter, and Babu Narain Chandra Kar, for the Appellant.

M. Nuruddin Ahmed, and M. A. S. M. Akram, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Walmsley, J.—This appeal is directed against a decision of the President of the Calcutta Improvement Trust Tribunal in a dispute about the apportionment of some compensation money.

Premises No. 32, Durga Road have been acquired by the Trust. The Collector's valuation has not been accepted by those who appear to be the owners, and before making the valuation the President has decided the principles on which the compensation when it is fixed will be apportioned.

The former owner was Muhammad Tayeb; he had a wife named Sarifannessa; he died in November 1895, leaving a widow, five sons and three daughters. The claimant No. 4 is the appellant, and she is one of the daughters. Her claim as to the share that would ordinarily be hers is resisted on the ground that Muhammad Tayeb made a waqf of the property a few months before his death. The question, therefore, that the President had to decide was whether the waqf was valid or not. He held that it was valid, and it is against that decision that the appeal is directed.

The first ground on which the appellant assails the waqf is that it offends against the doctrine of mushaa. The reason for this assertion is two-fold. First, it is said that the wife Sarifannessa was owner of a portion, and secondly, that one Azimannessa also had a share in the property covered by the waqf. Neither of these assertions can be supported. Sarifannessa's plot of land was not an undivided share, but specific land with Tayeb's land forming the boundary on one side. It may be an open question whether the husband or the wife is the owner of the portion standing in Sarifannessa's name, but for my present purpose it is enough to point out that the premises are divided into specific plots. As for Azimannessa's portion, her name appears with that of the lady who sold to Sarifannessa, and with that of a third person in Billon's Register of 1893. In 1911 she asked for the holding to be sub-divided, and for permission to redeem her share of the rent. This was done without any objection. The circumstances indicate that the sub-division consisted of recognizing her possession of a specific plot, and not of carving out from an undivided whole a plot equivalent to her interest. Further if the areas are considered, it appears that there were specific plots with ascertained areas, together amounting approximately to the area of the whole. I, therefore, agree with the learned President's finding that the doctrine of mushaa does not render the waqf invalid.

The second objection to the waqf is that it is really a disposition for the benefit of the grantor's family. The question is whether there is a substantial dedication of the property to charitable uses. The income from the property is not large, and a very considerable part of it must be spent for the benefit of members of the grantor's family. There are, however, specific sums to be paid for the maintenance of worship in a mosque established by the waqif's father, and directions are also given for using the income for the benefit of the travellers and students. The terms of the disposition are such that without scrupulous honesty on the part of the mutwalli little if any thing is likely to be left for the student and the traveller, but there may be a little and in the ordinary course of nature there should be more. I think the instrument lies very near the border line, and my own inclination would be to hold against its validity, but in deference to the opinion expressed by Greaves, J., in another suit, an opinion which is, of course, not binding but is entitled to consideration, and to the view taken by my learned brother on this Bench. I have come to the conclusion that I ought to regard the waqf as valid, so far as this objection is concerned.

The third objection is based upon the difficult doctrine of marz-ul-maut, or death bed illness. In Sir Roland Wilson's Book on Anglo-Muhammadan Law this doctrine is set out as follows: "A gift made in mortal sickness is so far regarded as a bequest that it cannot operate on more than a third of the testator's nett assets unless with the consent of all the heirs, nor in favour of one heir without the consent of all the others. Explanation I-A gift is said to have been made in mortal sickness, only if it was at the time, and seemed to the donor himself highly probable that the malady would soon and fatally, and if in fact it did so end. The donor's state of mind, which is the real ground of the rule, may be, but it is not necessarily, to be presumed from the gravity of the symptoms. On the other hand no evidence of actual apprehensions of death will suffice in the absence of external indicia of danger, chief among which is inability to attend to ordinary avocations." There have been numerous decisions on the subject since those words were first written but I think that they set out the doctrine correctly.

The facts which appear to be proved in the present case are that Muhammad Tayeb then a very old man, was attacked by paralysis of the lower limbs in February 1895: he at once became a helpless invalid, permanently confined to his bed; he could not perform the ordinary offices of nature without assistance, and, more important, he could not leave his bed for religious exercises. He continued in this state until he died in the following November. The waqfnama which we are considering was executed in March.

The fact that Muhammad Tayeb was ill or at any rate bed-ridden for nine months, has given scope for the suggestion that the saving principle established for those who suffer from a malady of long continuance will make this waqf valid. Sir Roland Wilson, quoting from Baillie's Digest, has this note "The lame, the paralytic, the consumptive, and a person having a withered or a palsied hand, when the malady is of long continuance, and there is no immediate apprehension of death, may make gifts of the whole of their property," and adds, "The Hedaya fixes the period of long continuance at one year, but this is not taken as a hard and fast rule." In this case it is argued that the illness lasted for nine months, and that is almost a year, and, therefore, under this principle, Muhammad Tayeb was competent to make a gift of the whole of his property.

I do not think it is necessary to consider whether this rule is to be construed elastically or not, for the reason that I have no doubt that in March 1895 Muhammad Tayeb was expecting to die very soon. Not only was the immediate apprehension present to his own mind: there was also external signs which those about him would naturally interpret as indicating that death was at hand. It is true that as a fact he lingered for seven or eight months, and that no fresh illness supervened, and, therefore, it may be said that his own fears and his relatives, expectations were mistaken, and that the malady did not soon end, in death. It was from that malady, however, that Tayeb died: he never got any better, and from February to November there was never a time when the malady became a mere disability; throughout it threatened an early end, and at the last it did prove fatal without any fresh illness supervening. I think, therefore, that the months of lingering before actual death do not take the case out of the doctrine. My conclusion, therefore, is that the waqf is valid only to the extent of one-third of the waqf's assets.

The appellant succeeds in part and the President is directed to appertain the compensation when determined in accordance with this view.

The appellant will be entitled to recover her costs from the contesting respondents in both Courts: hearing-fee in this Court is fixed at three gold mohurs.

Mukerji, J.—The only question that has been raised in this appeal is as to the validity of the waqf executed by one Muhammad Tayeb in respect of certain properties, one of which, namely, Premises No. 32, Durga Road comprising an area of 1 bigha 13 cottas 7 chattaks 25 square feet, has been acquired under the Land Acquisition Act. The validity of the waqf is questioned upon three grounds:—First, that the waqf offends against the doctrine of mushaa as the premises in question were the joint property of Muhammad Tayeb and his wife Sarifannessa and also because one Azimannessa was a co-sharer in the holdings of which the said premises formed a part; second, that the waqf is illusory and contains directions which are vague and incapable of execution; and third, that the waqf is invalid under the law of marz-ul-mout.

As regards the first of these grounds what appears upon the evidence is this. The premises aforesaid are comprised within revenue holding No. 318. This holding consists of two distinct plots of lands carved out of old holdings Nos. 64, 64 A, 66, 66 A and 67. The total area of all these holdings was more or less 2 bighas 8 cottas 9 chattaks. By a kobala Ex. G, dated the 20th March, 1889, Sarifannessa Bibi, wife of Muhammad Tayeb, purchased a plot of land 10 cottas in area, and it was recited in the document that previously her husband had acquired by several purchases 1 bigha 5 cottas 14 chattaks of land, and in the Schedule to the document this land was stated as forming one of the boundaries on the East. On the 20th March 1895 Muhammad Tayeb executed a waqfnama in respect of various properties, including the aforesaid lands which were purchased by him as well as that purchased by his wife. The plots of land being distinct, neither Muhammad Tayeb nor Sarifannessa Bibi can be said to have had an undivided share in the lands in respect of which the waqf was made. As regards Azimannessa, all that appears upon the evidence is that in Billon's Register of 1893-94 one Azeman Bibi and one Meher Bibi and two others were recorded as tenants in respect of the aforesaid holdings. Meher Bibi sold the 10 cottas of land to Sarifannessa in 1889. Azimannessa applied in 1911 for sub-division of the holdings and for redemption of the holding to be allotted to her, and the said application was granted. The holding allotted to her appears from the order-sheet in that case to have consisted of an area of less than 5 cottas. The total area of the lands of the above-mentioned old holdings as stated in the kobala Ex. G was 2 bighas 8 cottas 9 chattaks, of which according to Billon's Register the portion in which Aziman Bibi was a joint tenant with Meher Bibi and others was 1 bigha 19 cottas and 6½ chattaks. The purchases by Muhammad Tayeb and Sarifannessa did not extend to the whole of the said 1 bigha 19 cottas and 6½ chattaks but only to 1 bigha 15 cottas 14 chattaks as stated in Ex. G. The evidence of Khoda Bux, witness No. 2, for the claimant No. 4, was that Aziman had 3½ cottas of land, in the holdings, and this seems to be the quantity left to her after the purchases made by Muhammad Tayeb and Sarifannessa. There is nothing to show that the land of Azimannessa was not a separate plot of land such as Meher's was, and it has not been proved that she was a co-sharer in the premises covered by the waqf. The doctrine of mushaa, therefore, has no application to the case.

The second ground may be disposed of in a few words. The object set out in the waqfnama was to make arrangements and provisions for the due performance of religious services in the mosque which had been erected by the father of Muhammad Tayeb at No. 26, Collinga Bazar Street. The inalienability of the properties and the usual limitations and restrictions as to the powers of the mutwalli to deal with the waqf properties were laid down. It was provided that if any land or building included in the waqf estate were acquired by the Government for public purposes, the compensation money would be utilised for purchasing some other property for the purposes of the waqf. In para. 6 directions were given for the yearly repair of the mosque, and the daily lighting thereof, and for arranging for the five prayers that are to be held daily, and also the jumma prayer, the azan and namaz, and the Id and Bakhr-id prayers, and for the employment of khatib and moazan, the distribution of iftari during ramzan, the reading of tarabi prayer by a hafez, and for providing for such accessories as are ordinarily necessary for the purpose. The remuneration of the hafez was fixed at Rs. 25 a year, the khatib was to get Rs. 2 per month and his food, and the moazan Re. 1 a month and his food. Directions were given for the maintenance of students, and the entertainment of travellers and mendicants. Provision was also made for the accommodation and maintenance of a sister of the waqif and her daughter, and also the daughters of the waqif in certain circumstances. The five sons were appointed mutwallis, each for a year, and it was directed that the mutwalli in office will get his food and a salary of Rs. 5 and shall be bound to provide for the food of the four future mutwallis. The other directions need not be referred to. The income of the property was small, being about Rs. 100 or Rs. 125; and though a substantial part of it, under the directions contained in the waqfnama would go to the relations of the waqif, it is manifest that the primary object of the endowment was to support a mosque, to make arrangement for the performance of religious services therein, to carry on works of charity connected therewith, to feed travellers and to educate poor students. The provisions made for the relations can hardly be said to be such from which it may be deduced that the main purpose of the settlement was the aggrandisement of a private family. The directions given to the future mutwallis left a good deal of discretion in them as to how the work was to be carried on, but it was stated that they were to keep to the standard followed by the waqif. The directions, therefore, cannot be said to have been vague or unascertainable, and the waqf must be taken to have been a valid one. It is perhaps true that the waqf has been administered by the mutwallis in a manner not altogether satisfactory and some of them appear to have dealt with the properties as if they were proprietors. Malfeasance or misfeasance on the part of the mutwallis, however, cannot invalidate a waqf which at its creation was a valid one.

The third ground raises one of the difficult questions which the Muhammadan Law abounds in, namely, as to whether the waqf was invalid under the law of marz-ul-mout. The law of marz-ul-mout is not the same amongst all the schools; and moreover the reason of the rule as well as its essentials have been differently enunciated by different jurists. Lawyers who may be said to belong to the orthodox school expound the doctrine on the basis of certain principles, modern jurists seek to rest the law upon what they consider to be more in consonance with rational ideas, and judicial decisions have served to break the rigidity of it in no small measure, by interpreting it in a broad and liberal spirit.

A reference to the translations of some of the texts relating to this branch of the law, which are to be found in books of undoubted authority or have been relied upon in judicial decisions may not be unprofitable. In some cases the translations do not agree, and in others it is not easy to appreciate the exact meaning, the passages being darkened by parentheses or obscured by the translator's gloss. In the case of Labbi Beebee v. Bibbun Beebee (1), the following texts were referred to:—

Futawa-i-Alumgiri, Vol. 4, Ch. XI: "Now they speak of the definitions of 'fatal disease.' What has been adopted in futwas is that a disease from which death may probably result is a fatal disease, irrespective of whether the patient keeps to his bed or not" (page 552). "He who is affected with paralysis, partial or total, and he who has lost the use of any limb, or is effected with phthisis, and the disease is prolonged, and there is no fear of death, may make a gift of his whole property." (page 562).

Futawa-i-Fusul-Amadi:—"They have explained prolongation to mean one year, so that if the disposition has been made after one year from the attack of the malady it is like a disposition made in the enjoyment of health." (page 414 M. S.)

(1) 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 159;

Futawa-i-Alumgiri, Vol. I, Book of Divorce, page 640: "Our learned Doctors have explained the duration of sickness to be of one year, so that if the same sickness lasts for one year the acts of the sick person after one year would have the same effect as if he had done them in a state of health." There is no reason to suppose that the law of marz-ul-mout is not the same in regard to talaq as it is in the case of waqf.

Futawa-i-Shami, Vol. II, page 521: "If the sickness becomes old, that is to say, if one year elapses from its commencement, and no increase or decrease occurs in it, the sick person shall be deemed a healthy person, but if the sickness increases, whether before or after one year, and during the continuance of such increase the person dies of the same, he shall be deemed a sick person." Other futwas also to the same effect appear to have been produced before the Court. Another translation of the passage last quoted will be found in the case of Fatima Bibee v. Ahmad Baksh (2) and runs in these words:—"If the disease becomes old in this way, that it extends beyond a year, and no increase occurs within that (period), then he (the sick person) is (to be deemed) in health, but if he dies in a state of increase, whether the increase takes place before the year's prolongation of it, he is (to be deemed to be) sick."

A passage from Jamai ul-Rumcoz was also produced before the Court which, while admitting that some authorities doubt the prescription of the period of one year, gave, as supported by the better opinion, the rule that "gifts by paralytics are valid if the sickness lasts for a long time, so that a year elapses from the time when it first commenced."

Mr. Ameer Ali in his book on Muhammadan Law, Vol. I, page 56, quotes with approval the observations of Radd-ul-Mukhtar and says:—"It is not merely the fact that the disease is ordinarily fatal that requires consideration but the effect it is likely to have on the mind of the sufferer, which is the chief determining element. A malady of such a nature is called Marz-ul-mout or the illness of death. But where a person has suffered from an illness for a long time so that it has become, as it were, 'a part of his constitution,' or where the progress of the disease is so imperceptible as to cause no apprehension to him, it does not come within the definition of Marz-ul-mout."

At page 57 is quoted the following passage from the Durr-ul-mukhtar: "The gift of a person suffering from paralysis, palsy and phthisis is invalid as to the whole when the disease has lasted over a year, and there is no fear of death from it, but if it has not extended for a year and there is no fear of death (on his part) the gift will take effect in respect of the third." The learned author states that the reason is there is said to be that if a person suffers from a malady which is ordinarily mortal for over a year, it ceases to have any appreciable influence on his mind as it has become a part of his nature.

At page 58, Futawa Kazi Khan is quoted in support of the proposition that "one struck with paralysis, phthisis or palsy is accounted sick whilst the disease is on the increase; but when the illness has lasted a long time and is not becoming worse, the sufferer is as one in health." Then the following passage of the text is quoted, "some lawyers have laid down that if a disease, however mortal, lasts for over a year, it should not be regarded as such, because the man becomes so accustomed to it as to lose all apprehension as to his own condition."

At page 59, Durr-ul-Mukhtar is quoted where it says on the authority of the bazacia, that "when a person is in imminent fear of death whether from disease or any other cause, so that in the case of an illness the man is so broken or weakened by it as to be incapacitated from conducting his ordinary avocations outside his house, for example, a Faki (Jurist) from going to the mosque, a tradesman to his shop, a woman from attending to her indoor occupations" it is marz-ul-mout and also on the authority of the mujtaba, that "where the illness has become so severe as to make it permissible for the sufferer to offer his prayer without standing up (Lit: in a sitting posture) it must be regarded as an illness of death."

The above doctrine, however, is different from that of Futawa-i-Alumgiri which was accepted in the case of Fatima Bibi v. Ahmad Baksh (2) and where the proposition was laid down in these words:—"A death illness is one which it is highly probable will end fatally whether the sick person has taken to his bed or not; or whether in the case of a man, it disables him from rising up for necessary avocations out of the house or not, such as for instance, when he is a Faki or lawyer, from going to the musjid or place of worship, and when he is a merchant from going to his shop or whether in the case of a woman it does or does not disable her from necessary avocation within doors. But the illness is to be considered death-illness when a man cannot pray standing." This extract with the exception of the last sentence seems to be the translation of a passage from the Futawa-i-Alumgiri.

Mr. Tyabji in his Principles of Muhammadan Law quotes Baillie's Digest, Vol. I, 543, Grady's Edition of Hamilton's Hedaya 684, in support of the proposition that "pains of child birth are considered by the Muslim authors as prima facie a death illness whereas lameness, gout, paralysis, consumption or withered or palsied hand, after they have continued for a long time and have no immediate danger of death do not constitute death illness."

It is not very easy to reconcile this mass of conflicting dicta which, as they stand, present numerous points of diversity. Some jurists contend that every command of the sharah was characterised by its illut or reason or principle which is a mental idea and its subub or the cause or the way leading to it, which has an external and physical existence, and that one must adopt the subub in order to reach the obligation which the illut creates. According to them the reason of the rule is that when all hope of life is lost and there is every fear of likelihood of death taking place the right of the heirs to the property is created just in the same manner as it is created on the death of the owner who ceases by death to have any need for property. Hence it is, they say, that the law has set out in detail the manifestations, indications and signs, and these should be adhered to, whatever might be the doctor's opinion as to the character of the disease. According to them the limit of one year is conclusive and lays down a hard and fast rule which is to be preferred to a doubtful one depending upon such an uncertain thing as a mental condition like fear. Some others contend that in the case of a disease like paralysis, gout, consumption, etc., a year was required to ascertain whether the illness was a death illness or not; that if the same illness continued uninterruptedly and death takes place on account of it within a year, the illness is a death illness and a gift made within the year is invalid; but if the illness is a lingering one and death does not take place before the end of the year reckoned from the time it commenced, the illness during the year or subsequent to it is not to be considered as death illness, and any gift made within or after the year is valid. According to some, a subjective apprehension on the part of the patient himself is hardly of any importance because though the reason or motive underlying the law is that illness weakens a man's physical and mental powers and he is, therefore, likely to act under such circumstances to the detriment of his spiritual interest by disappointing his heirs in their just expectations, according to the principles of Muhammadan Jurisprudence that has not to be proved as a fact in each particular case, but the law itself lays down hard and fast rules and criteria by which the validity of a sick person's act has to be determined. The efforts of modern jurists have been directed towards removing the conflict, and judicial decisions have tended to disentangle this mass of complications and lay down some principles which may be of easy application.

In the case of Labbi Beebec v. Beebun Beebee (1), Pearson and Turner, JJ., relying upon the authority of certain passages in Futawa-i-Alumgiri, Futawa-i-Fusul-i-Amadi, and Futawa-i-Shami, quoted above, held that under the Muhammadan Law the term marzul-mout is applicable not only to diseases which actually cause death, but to diseases from which it is probable that death will ensue, so as to engender in the person afflicted with the disease an apprehension of death that a person labouring under such a disease cannot make a valid gift of the whole of his property until a year has elapsed from the time he was attacked by it. Some of the texts referred to in that case dealt with paralysis 'partial or total,' characterized it as 'a fatal disease' and laid down the doctrine that when the sickness becomes old, that is to say, if one year elapsed from its commencement and no increase or decrease occurs and the same sickness continues, the sick person should be deemed a healthy person, and a disposition made after a year from the attack of the malady was to be treated as a disposition made in the enjoyment of health. In that case the learned Judges overruled the contention that in the case of disease like paralysis, etc., a year was required to ascertain whether the illness was a death-illness or not, that if the same illness continued uninterruptedly and death took place on account of it within a year, the illness was a death-illness, and a gift made within the year was invalid, but if the illness was a lingering illness and death did not take place before the end of one year reckoned from the time it commenced, the illness during the year or subsequent to it, was not considered a death illness, and any gift made within or after the year was valid. They went on to observe: "The Muhammadan Law, as it would seem, in order to guard against acts done by a person afflicted with a disease which may disturb his calm judgment, has provided that the person afflicted with the disease shall be deemed incompetent to pronounce a divorce, or make a gift of his property until after the expiration of a year from the date on which he was attacked with the disease." This decision was followed in the case of Muhammad Gulshere Khan v. Mariam Begum (3) and the principle was laid down in these words: "According to the Muhammadan Law a gift by a sick person is not invalid, if at the time of such gift his sickness is of long continuance, i.e., has lasted for a year, and he is in full possession of his senses, and there is no immediate apprehension of his death." The doctrine as to the validity of the gift when the disease has lasted over a year is considered not to have been correctly appreciated in these decisions (Ameer Ali's Muhammadan Law, Vol. I, page 57, Footnote). In the case of Hassarat Bibi v. Golam Jaffar (4) Ameer Ali and Pratt, JJ. observed as follows:—"A careful study of the principles enunciated in the most authoritative Hanafi works would show that in determining whether the donation of a person suffering from a mortal illness comes within the doctrine applicable to marz-ul-mout gifts, several questions have to be considered, viz., (1) Was the donor suffering at the time of the gift from a disease which was the immediate cause of his death? (2) Was the disease of such a nature or character as to induce in the person suffering, the belief that death would be caused thereby, or to engender in him the apprehension of death? (3) Was the illness such as to incapacitate him from the pursuit of his ordinary avocations or standing up for prayers, a circumstance which might create on the mind of the sufferer an apprehension of death? (4) Had the illness continued for such a length of time as to remove or lessen the apprehension of immediate fatality or to accustom the sufferer to the malady? The limit of one year mentioned in the law books does not, in our opinion, lay down any hard and fast rule regarding the character of the illness; it only indicates that a continuance of the malady for that length of time may be regarded as taking it out of the category of mortal illness." In the case of Fatima Bibi v. Ahmad Baksh (2), it was laid down (Rampini and Pargiter, JJ.) that ordinarily a malady should be considered to be of long continuance, if it has lasted a year, but agreeing with the observations made in the case of Hassarat Bibi v. Golam Jaffar (4), it was held the limit of one year does not constitute a hard and fast rule and that it may mean a period of about a year. In this case it was laid down that the texts mentioned three matters:—(i) illness, (ii) expectation of a fatal issue, and (iii) certain physical incapacities which indicate the degree of illness, and the following observations appear in the judgment:—"The learned Vakil for the defendants contends that the meaning of this is that, if the first and third exist then the second must necessarily be presumed, namely, that there is an expectation of death. The learned Vakil for the plaintiff contends, on the other hand, that there is no such necessary presumption that the matters of the third class are only evidence, and that the Court must decide from that and the other evidence whether the second actually exists, that is whether there is expectation of death. The latter appears to us to be the correct view: for the passage from Futawa-i-Alumgiri distinctly states twice that the definition of death illness is illness in which death is highly probable, whether the incapacities mentioned exist or not. These incapacities, therefore, are not infallible signs of death-illness.... At the time when this law was laid down, little medical knowledge existed. It was necessary, therefore, to decide when an illness was a death-illness; and

(3) 3 A. 731; A. W. N. (1881) 48; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 407.

(4) 3 C. W. N. 57.

that could only be done by simple rules dealing with certain symptoms which all persons could notice and comprehend. Yet it appears from these passages that even while the lawyers suggested that certain physical incapacities indicated dangerous illness, they did not lay down positively that these incapacities are conclusive...for it was no part of their definition of death-illness, whether the incapacities mentioned existed or not. It is only with regard to the extreme case, where a man cannot stand up to perform the primary and simple obligation of saying his prayers, that they declared the illness should be deemed a death-illness." The learned Judges upon the evidence held that there was nothing in the symptoms of the patient which should necessarily have excited in him an apprehension of death. This case was carried in appeal to the Privy Council and the Judicial Committee in Fatima Bibi v. Ahmed Baksh (5) dismissed the appeal, holding that the test which was treated as decisive on the point of the validity of the gift, namely, whether the deed of gift was executed by the donor under apprehension of death, was the right question in the case. The case of Ibrahim Golam Ariff v. Saiboo (6) went up to the Privy Council from a judgment of Chitty, J., then a Judge of the Burma Chief Court, which had been affirmed on appeal by Thirkell White, C. J., and Bigge, J. In that case the Courts appear to have proceeded upon the test which they considered to be the crucial test in the case, namely, whether there was an apprehension of death in the mind of the donor at the time of the execution of the deed of gift which formed the subject-matter of that case, and concurrently found that question in the negative. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee on those findings refused to interfere holding that "the law applicable was not in controversy; the invalidity alleged arises where the gift is made under pressure of sense of imminence of death."

These cases must be taken to have set at rest the controversy relating to the rigidity of the one year rule. In view of these cases it is also impossible to contend any longer that the subjective apprehension of death in the mind of the donor as distinguished from the apprehension caused in the mind of others, does not count in the law of marz-ul-mout. The existence of this subjective element as an ingredient in the law of marz-ul-mout, doubted by Woodroffe, J., in the case of Kulsom Bibee v. Golam Hossein Cassim Ariff (7) and Sir Abdur Rahim in his Principles of Muhammadan Jurisprudence, page 256 says that it is not a test at all in such matters.

The law of marz-ul-mout was considered in the case of Sarabai v. Rabiabai (8) in which Batchelor, J., laid down that "In order to establish marz-ul-mout there must be present at least three conditions:—(1) Proximate danger of death, so that there is, as it is phrased, a preponderance (ghaliba) of khauf or apprehension, that is, that at the given time death must be more probable than life, (2) there must be some degree of subjective apprehension of death in the mind of the sick person, and (3) there must be some external indicia, chief amongst which would be the inability to attend to ordinary avocations." These principles were adopted in a later decision of the same Court, Rashid v. Sherbanoo (9).

In view of the decisions of the Judicial Committee referred to above it may perhaps be doubted as to whether the third condition mentioned in the Bombay cases is really a sine qua non.

As regards the investigation into the nature of the illness in the present case we are to some extent relieved by reason of the fact that the malady that Mahammad Tayeb was suffering from was a specific one, and was definitely diagnosed as paralysis of the lower limbs. There is hardly any divergence amongst the witnesses as to the chief characteristics and features of the illness, except perhaps as to minor details as regards which very little preference may be given to one witness more than to another, in view of the fact that the evidence of each witness is coloured by his or her conception of what would or would not constitute marz-ul-mout. The evidence, or such of it as may be safely taken to be reliable points to the first attack of the illness having come in the month of February 1895. The waqfnama was executed, as I have said, on the 20th March, 1895,

(5) 35 C. 271; 10 Bom. L. R. 50; 7 C. L. J. 122; 12 C. W. N. 214; 18 M. L. J. 6; 3 M. L. T. 110; 14 Bur. L. R. 268; 35 I. A. 67 (P. C.).

(6) 35 C. 1; 4 A. L. J. 572; 11 C. W. N. 973; 9 Bur. L. R. 872; 17 M. L. J. 408; 6 C. L. J. 695; 2 M. L. T. 479; 4 L. B. R. 154; 34 I. A. 167 (P. C.).

(7) 10 C. W. N. 449.

(8) 30 B. 537; 8 Bom. L. R. 35.

(9) 31 B. 264; 9 Bom. L. R. 252.

It was presented for registration on the 21st March 1895, and actually registered on the 23rd.—Muhammad Tayeb died in February, 1895. There is no reliable evidence, one way or the other as to whether the intensity of the affliction went on on the increase or whether it varied at any time during the period he suffered from it. The trend of the evidence is to the effect that from the first attack medicines began to be administered and he was kept on liquid diet. The lower limbs having been paralyzed he would always remain on bed and had to be helped or raised to a sitting posture. On the other hand, we have it that he was taken on a chair into a palanquin on which he was carried to the Office of the Registrar where he personally admitted the execution of the document. There is, therefore, no reason to hold that his brain was affected about the time that the document was executed or at any time; and the evidence of the witnesses who want to make out that his mental faculties had been in any way impaired cannot possibly be believed. The evidence relating to the part that he took in connection with the preparation of the drafts for the waqfnama and the instructions that he gave in connection with the transaction clearly show that he was in full possession of all his faculties. There was nothing suggestive of senile decay, and he was fairly well with all his powers, but for the paralysis of the lower limbs, for the ripe old age of 94 or 95 that he is said to have been of at the time. These findings are substantially the same at which the learned President has arrived on the evidence in the case, and with his findings in this respect I entirely agree.

The question, however, is not what the testamentary capacity of Muhammad Tayeb was at the time the document was executed, but to quote the words of the Judicial Committee in the case of Fatima Bibi v. Ahmed Buksh (5) "Whether the deed was executed under an apprehension of death," or in other words of their Lordships as used in the case of Ibrahim Golam Ariff v. Saiboo (6) whether the waqf was made "under pressure of a sense of imminence of death." The possession of one's senses and mental faculties is no index of this apprehension; in fact the proportion of the one to the other would, if anything, vary in the inverse ratio. We have the fact that from the day that he was struck by the disease he was kept in liquid diet, the fact that he was an old man of 94 or 95, the fact that there was nothing before him suggesting that the disease had taken a favourable turn, the fact that the illness continued till the 21st March 1895 on which date the document was executed and the fact that steps were taken the very next day to get the document registered, these facts to my mind suggest unmistakably that Muhammad Tayeb apprehended that he would not survive the illness and that his end was approaching. Apart from the texts to which I have already referred, the one thing which was held in the case of Hassarat Bibi v. Golam Jaffar (4), as likely to create in the mind of Muhammad Tayeb an apprehension of death, and which dictum was approved in the case of Fatima Bibee v. Ahmed Baksh (2) exists in the present case. It has been found by the learned President and rightly so upon the evidence, and in fact that finding has not been challenged before us, that Muhammad Tayeb from the time that the disease came upon him was unable to stand up for prayer. There is a rational foundation for the rule as to why this inability is regarded in Muhammadan Law as creating such apprehension. It is only in a case of utter and absolute disability that one would say his prayers without standing; and when one finds this disability attending him during prayers, it is bound to fill his mind with an apprehension that the end is not far off. At the date of execution of the deed the disease was a little over a month old, and in no sense had continued for a sufficient length of time so as to be a part of his nature. I think all the circumstances point to his having apprehended at the time he executed the deed that it was highly probable that the malady would soon end fatally. At that point of time there was a preponderance of apprehension that death was more probable than life though he lingered on for seven or eight months more and then expired. The waqf, in my opinion, was made under a sense of impending death which he feared was coming on as a result of the illness he was suffering from. The learned President has relied upon a passage in Baillie's Digest, page 543, which runs thus:—"The lame, the paralytic, the consumptive, when the malady was of long continuance and there is immediate apprehension of death may make gifts of the whole of the property." In my opinion the facts indicate that the apprehension of death was immediate, and that the deed was executed under an apprehension that death was imminent in the sense that there was nothing to stand between the illness and the death, or, in other words, that the latter would follow inevitably as a necessary result of the former and at no distant date. More than that is not necessary under the law of marz-ul-mout.

There is on the record a judgment of my learned brother Greaves, J., dealing with the question of the validity of this waqf. That judgment is, undoubtedly, entitled to every respect but as the learned President has held it cannot operate as res judicata in the present case. It may also be remarked that Greaves, J., was able to find upon the evidence that was before him, that Muhammad Tayeb suffered for more than a year from his illness before his death, a finding which the evidence before us does not support.

For the above reasons I am unable to agree in the view taken by the learned President on the question of the validity of the waqf. I am of opinion that the waqf was invalid except to the extent of a third of the properties covered by it, which belonged to the waqf.

The appeal will be allowed and apportionment of the compensation in respect of the premises, when it is made, will be made on the basis indicated above.

The appellant will be entitled to her costs from the contesting respondents both in this Court and of the Court below.

S. D.

Appeal allowed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2243 OF 1924.

January 30, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

MANGTU AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS

versus

LACHHI RAM—DEFENDANT—
RESPONDENT.

Appeal, second—Nuisance—Finding of fact—Interference by High Court.

Where an Appellate Court on a consideration of the evidence in the case and all the circumstances, local and others, comes to the conclusion that a latrine does not constitute a nuisance, the finding is one of fact and cannot be interfered with in second appeal.

Second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Delhi, dated the 9th May 1924.

Mr. N. C. Pandit, for the Appellants.

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The defendant in this suit, Lachhi Ram of Rewari, obtained permission, from the local Municipal Committee, to build a house including a sandas which is described, in the present memorandum of appeal before me, as a latrine of a very filthy and primitive kind. It appears to be an arrangement by which excrement and dirty water is expelled from the first storey of a house on to the ground underneath. The two plaintiffs sued for an injunction directing the defendant to close the sandas as a nuisance.

The Trial Court decreed the suit but in appeal it was dismissed by the learned District Judge who held that no nuisance had been proved.

It appears to me that the finding of the learned District Judge is one of fact and that there can be no interference with his decision in second appeal. Admittedly the sandas has been built on the defendant's own land and the plaintiffs can only interfere with him on the ground of nuisance being created. The District Judge has considered all the circumstances, local and others, in coming to his conclusion and appears to have studied all the evidence. I cannot presume, as I am invited by the learned Counsel for the appellant to do, that he did not realize what sandas is, or he did not realize the precise character and position of the sandas in question.

Rewari town has a Municipal Committee and under the Municipal Act the Committee must be presumed to have powers to deal with any nuisance which may be created hereafter by this sandas. This fact has also been mentioned by the learned District Judge and the plaintiffs will have their remedy in that direction.

I find no ground for interference on second appeal and dismiss the appeal with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE ORDER No. 324
OF 1923.

May 19, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy and
Mr. Justice Duval.

BANSHIBADAN MANDAL—APPELLANT
versus

CHHAUNAT BIBI alias CHHANNU

BIBI AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 2 cl. (2) (a), 47, 104 (2), O. XXI, rr. 89, 92, O. XLIII, r. 1 (j)—Second appeal from appellate order setting aside execution sale.

An order under s. 47, C. P. C., which is an adjudication from which an appeal lies as an appeal from an order, is excluded from the definition of a decree under sub-cl. (2) (a) of s. 2, C. P. C. Therefore, under s. 104, cl. (2), C. P. C., no second appeal lies from an order passed under O. XXI, r. 92, against which an appeal lies under O. XLIII, r. 1 (j), C. P. C., even if the auction-purchaser happens to be decree-holder.

Appeal against an order of the District Judge, 24-Pergannas, dated the 28th May 1923, affirming that of the Munsif, Second Court, at Barasat, dated the 2nd January 1923.

Mr. Hemendra Nath Sen and Babu Gopendra Nath Das, for the Appellant.

Babu Dwijendra Krishna Dutt, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the auction-purchaser in execution of a money decree. The respondents deposited the amount for which the property was sold and purchased by the appellant; but it was contended the money deposited was short by 12-annas. Both the Courts below have held that this was due to a bona fide mistake and set aside the sale. The second appeal is from the appellate order of the District Judge of 24-Parganahs.

A preliminary objection is taken by the respondents that no second appeal lies. We think that this contention should prevail. The order passed after the deposit made under O. XXI, r. 89 is an order under r. 92. An appeal lies from an order passed under that rule under O. XLIII, r. 1 (j), C. P. C. But no second appeal lies from the order passed upon first appeal, under s. 104, cl. (2). It is argued by the learned Advocate for the appellant that as the auction-purchaser was the decree-holder, the matter is covered by s. 47; and under s. 2, C. P. C., the order passed under s. 47 is a decree and is appealable. We think that this contention is not sound. Section 47 covers matters arising between parties to the suit relating to execution, discharge and satisfaction of the decree. An order passed under that section is a decree as defined in s. 2, C. P. C. But cl. (a) of that section excludes an order which is an adjudication from which an appeal lies as an appeal from order. All orders, therefore, between decree-holder and judgment-debtor under s. 47 are not decrees and appealable as such. In the present case an appeal lies as an appeal from order under O. XLIII, r. 1 (j). A second appeal, therefore, does not lie. We are fortified in our view by the decision in the case of Asimuddi Sheikh v. Sundari Bibee (1). The appellant has referred to the case of Raghubar Dayal Sukul v. Jadu Nandan Missir (2) which was, however, a case under the Bengal Tenancy Act. In this view we hold that a second appeal does not lie and this appeal is dismissed with costs two gold mohurs.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 345; 38 C. 339; 15 C. W. N. 844; 14 C. L. J. 224.

(2) 13 Ind. Cas. 365; 15 C. L. J. 89; 16 C. W. N. 736.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS SECOND CIVIL APPEAL

No. 1864 OF 1924.

March 12, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

SHEO NATH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

PURAN MAL—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. III, para. 7—Execution of decree—Agricultural land, farming out of—Conditions of farm, determination of—Duty of Court.

Where in execution of a decree the Executing Court proposes to farm out agricultural land belonging to the judgment-debtor, the term of the farm and the other conditions must be decided by the Court itself. The Court must seek the Collector's advice on the subject and should ordinarily follow it, but is not bound to do so. [p. 229, col. 1.]

Mr. Shamair Chand, for the Appellant.

Mr. G. S. Salarya, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Puran Mal held a decree against Surjan Singh and in execution thereof after the death of Surjan Singh attached certain land in the possession of Sheo Nath, son of Surjan Singh. Sheo Nath objected that the land was ancestral and, therefore, not liable to attachment in execution of the decree. The Court held that 22 bighas $7\frac{1}{2}$ biswas were not ancestral that the rest was ancestral that the 22 bighas $7\frac{1}{2}$ biswas could be attached and sold in execution of the decree but that the decree-holder should be "made to pay the mortgage money of Sheo Nath with respect to this land."

The meaning of this last provision is to be found in the fact that Surjan Singh had mortgaged this area and that after his death the mortgage was redeemed by Sheo Nath with his own money. In effect, therefore, the learned Subordinate Judge held that the equity of redemption only of the 22 bighas $7\frac{1}{2}$ biswas was liable for the satisfaction of the decree.

Against this order the decree-holder did not appeal, but Sheo Nath appealed contending that the 22 bighas $7\frac{1}{2}$ biswas were ancestral land. He failed, but the learned District Judge upheld a second objection that sale of the land would be in contravention of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act. He accordingly accepted the appeal so far as to direct that instead of the land being sold it should be farmed out to the decree-holder for such term of years as the Collector might deem fit.

Sheo Nath has come to this Court in second appeal, and his learned Counsel has pointed out with reason that the learned District Judge overlooked the fact that the First Court made no more than the equity of redemption of the land liable for the decree. The contention that no more than this can be ordered to be farmed out in such satisfaction as aforesaid must prevail. I wish to observe also that the learned District Judge was wrong in directing that the farm should be for such term of years as the Collector might deem fit. The term of years and other conditions have to be decided by the Court. The Court understanding instructions must seek the Collector's advice on the subject and should ordinarily follow it, but is not bound to do so.

I accept the appeal with costs and direct in modification of the learned District Judge's order that the First Court shall arrange for the temporary alienation in satisfaction of the decree of such proportion of the 22 bighas $7\frac{1}{2}$ biswas as it may hold to represent the value of the equity of redemption as against that of the mortgage charge paid off by Sheo Nath. The Court may, however, if it thinks fit, adjust the matter in such other equitable manner as may present itself, e g., by farming out the whole land and arranging that the annual profits shall be divided between the decree-holder and Sheo Nath in proportion to the respective values of the equity of redemption and the mortgage charges.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 28
OF 1923.

May 1, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Hugh Walmsley,
Kt., and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

RAKHAL CHANDRA BARDHAN—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

PROSAD CHANDRA CHATTERJEE

AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Fraud—Suspicion—Circumstantial evidence—Letters of Administration—Position of Hindu widow as administrator—Registration Act (XVI of 1908), s. 58 (1) (e)—Consideration—Endorsement by Registering Officer—Presumption—Burden of proof—Purdah nashin lady—Independent advice, etc.

Fraud is not presumed or inferred lightly. [p. 233, col. 2.]

Moonshee Buzloor Raheem v. Jadonath Bose, 11 M. I. A. 551 at p. 602; 8 W. R. P. C. 3; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 59; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 259; 20 E. R. 208, referred to.

Circumstances of mere suspicion should not be taken as proof of fraud, there must be sufficient evidence to overcome the natural presumption of honesty and fair dealing. [ibid.]

Circumstantial evidence is not only sufficient but in many cases it is the only proof that can be adduced to establish fraud. [ibid.]

Mathoor Pandey v. Ram Ruchya Tewaree, 11 W. R. 482; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 108, referred to.

A Hindu widow obtaining Letters of Administration of the estate of the last male owner is in the same position as any other administrator and a sale effected by her with the sanction of the District Judge cannot be questioned on any ground not available against any other administrator. [p. 234, col. 2.]

Kamikhya Nath Mukerjee v. Hari Churn Sen, 26 C. 607; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 990, Chuni Lal Halder v. Makshada Debi, 52 Ind. Cas. 309; 23 C. W. N. 652 and Anoda Charan Mondal v. Atul Chandra Malik, 54 Ind. Cas. 197; 23 C. W. N. 1045; 31 C. L. J. 3, relied upon.

An endorsement made on a kabala by a Registering Officer in accordance with the statutory provision in s. 58 (1) (e) of the Registration Act that a certain sum of money was paid as consideration in his presence raises a presumption that the consideration was paid and the onus lies on the person who alleges that it is untrue to prove it. [ibid.]

Ali Khan Bahadur v. Indar Parshad, 23 C. 950; 23 I. A. 92; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 63; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 631 (P. C.), referred to.

Any person taking a conveyance from a purda nashin lady must prove that the document was explained to her, that she understood what she was doing and that she had independent advice. Where, however, it is established that the lady knew what the nature of the document was that she was executing and that she had independent advice, it is not necessary to prove the formal reading over or explanation of the document. [p. 235, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Third Court, 24-Pergannas, dated the 4th December 1922.

Sir Provash Chandra Mitter, Messrs. A. N. Bose, S. P. Ghose and Babu Shyama Das Bhattacharji, for the Appellant.

Dr. S. C. Basak, Babus Sitaram Banerji and Haripada Ghose, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Walmsley, J.—This appeal is preferred by the principal defendant Rakhal Chandra Prodhan, and it is directed against a decree declaring the right of the plaintiffs to the property in suit as reversioners to the estate of the late Rakhal Chandra Banerji and directing that they should recover possession with mesne profits.

The facts that need be stated are as follows. One Haridas Banerjee died, leaving a widow, three daughters, and one son, the Rakhal Chandra Banerjee just mentioned. Rakhal died in 1883, soon after his father, without issue, and his estate went to his widowed mother Thakomani. Thakomani died in 1909, and her three daughters were then the mothers of nine sons, and these nine grandsons inherited each $\frac{1}{9}$ th of the estate. The original plaintiffs are the two sons of Kusum Kumari; they have bought the shares of five of their cousins, and thus become owners of $\frac{7}{9}$ th. The other $\frac{2}{9}$ th belonged to the defendants Nos. 2 to 4, and these defendants were transferred to the category of plaintiffs after the institution of the suit, so that the claim is for the entire interest in the property described in the schedule.

Rakhal Chandra Banerjee's estate consisted of a house and some paddy land at Italghatta, on the outskirts of Calcutta, and a house at Bhowanipur in the suburbs.

In 1819 Thakomani applied for Letters of Administration to the estate of her son, and she was appointed Administratrix. An order was made in her favour in November, but the grant was not made until the following June. A few days later Thakomani sought and obtained permission from the Judge to sell the house and 10 bighas at Italghatta, and on July 26, 1890, she sold the same to the appellant for the sum of Rs. 2,400. The suit is aimed at this alienation. It is said that the proceedings connected with it were fraudulent from beginning to end. The fraud is described in paras. 7—12 of the plaint. Briefly stated the fraud is said to be as follows; first, that Thakomani did not really apply for Letters of Administration, her name was used, but without her knowledge; secondly, that the application for Letters of Administration contained inaccurate statements, intended to deceive, about the property and about the other persons interested in the estate; and thirdly, that Thakomani was persuaded to execute the conveyance by false representations that the document was nothing more than a lease.

The persons who are said to be guilty of this trickery are the appellant, and Shyam Lal Chatterji one of Thakomani's sons-in-law.

The defendant's case on the other hand is that everything was above board, that Thakomani found it impossible to keep up the house at Italghatta, that she needed money, that she knew all about the application for Letters of Administration and fully understood that she was selling the property.

The learned Judge has found in favour of the plaintiffs on all points in a judgment which seems to me extremely one-sided. He has been very free in his findings of fraud, and he says that the conclusion is irresistible that the fraud was committed at the instance of the appellant.

To take the last point first, I find it impossible to agree with the learned Judge's view. It is common ground that overtures were made to the appellant for the purchase of the house. Either the appellant, or his broker, I do not think it matters which, pointed out that a purchase from Thakomani as a Hindu widow was dangerous, and suggested that she should obtain Letters of Administration and then secure the Judge's permission to sell. That suggestion was perfectly legitimate. In fact no cautious Solicitor would advise a client to buy on any other terms. I have no doubt that the application for Letters of Administration was made with this end in view, but that fact cannot afford any ground for suspecting fraud instigated by the appellant.

The learned Judge proceeds to argue that the whole proceedings were fraudulent, because there was a mis-description of the assets of the estate, and because the grandsons were incorrectly described as minors living with their grandmother. I am not prepared to regard either of these mistakes or mis-representations as amounting to fraud. The learned Judge does not say on whom the fraud was committed: the most that can be said is that by understating the assets the revenue was defrauded of a few rupees, and that by describing the grandsons erroneously the citations were imperfect. But that is all, and I cannot hold that there was fraud. Further the Probate Act contains provisions for revoking a grant made improperly. Here the grandsons grew to manhood and saw the Italghatta house in possession of the appellant: they cannot have imagined that he was in possession as lessee and not as owner, and I cannot believe the plaintiff's statement that they knew nothing of the sale until the appellant filed his written statement in the suit of 1917. That being so they have had ample opportunity of challenging the validity of the grant, and as they have not done so I do not think that they can now in this suit ask to have it treated as void.

Then there is the last charge of fraud: that Thakomani was deceived as to the nature of the instrument. There is a little evidence to the effect that she spoke of a lease, but there is no evidence that she ever made a grievance of the matter. For many years she saw the appellant in possession and she received no rent from him: it is impossible, therefore, to believe that she laboured under the mistaken idea that she had only given a lease. Moreover it is proved that her son-in-law Shyam Lal was acting as her adviser, and there is no evidence that he was interested in deceiving her. There is the further fact that a substantial sum of money was paid to Thakomani in the presence of the Sub-Registrar. I cannot, therefore, hold that any deception was practised on Thakomani to induce her to execute the conveyance.

On all these points I think that the learned Judge is wrong. There is, however, one point on which there is more to be said for the plaintiffs. Thakomani was a parda nashin lady, and as such entitled to special protection. It is said that she had no independent advice, and, therefore, the transaction is voidable. It is true that she had no advice except that of her son-in-law, Shyam Lal. Now it is not essential in every case that a pardanashin should have independent advice. The circumstances surrounding the transaction have to be considered and the present case is one in which I think it was not necessary. Surrounding circumstances show that she fully understood what was being done, that the transaction was a reasonable one, that for years neither the widow nor any member of her family felt that unfair advantage had been taken of the lady. Further the document was a short and simple one: it was not beyond Thakomani's understanding to know that she was selling the house outright; and she had at her elbow her son-in-law Shyam Lal whose good faith there is no reason to doubt. I think, therefore, that the mere fact that there was no independent adviser is not fatal to the transaction. *

There is one other point. The defendant has gratuitously created some difficulty for himself in regard to 10 cattas of the land in suit. My learned brother has dealt with this story of a gift to the spiritual guide's son at some length and for me it is enough to say that the kabala also covers these 10 cattas.

In my opinion, therefore, the appeal should be allowed and the suit dismissed with costs in both Courts.

Ghose, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant and arises out of suit for recovery of possession of a house and lands attached to it situated in a village Italghatta in the district of 24-Pargannas described in the schedule to the plaint. This property and certain other properties belonged to one Rakhal Chandra Banerji, the last male owner, who died sometime in 1883. His property was inherited by his mother Thakomani. He had three sisters, Kusum Kumari, Uttam Kumari and Basanta Kumari, plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 are the two sons of Kusum Kumari, Uttam Kumari had five sons and Basanta Kumari two sons. Thakomani died on the 9th of January 1909. Plaintiffs claim the property as reversioners of their maternal uncle Rakhal Chandra Banerjee. Plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 claim $\frac{2}{9}$ th share by right of succession and another $\frac{5}{9}$ ths share by purchase from three of the sons of Uttam Kumari and also from the two sons of Basanta Kumari, $\frac{7}{9}$ ths share in all. The other $\frac{2}{9}$ ths share is represented by a son and two grandsons by a deceased son of Uttam Kumari. They were originally made pro forma defendants but were transferred to the category of plaintiffs on their application. Thakomani obtained Letters of Administration of the estate of her son Rakhal as an intestate, from the District Judge of Alipur on the 26th of June 1890 and made an application for permission to sell the disputed property on the 16th of July 1890 which was granted. Thakomani thereupon sold the property to the defendant Rakhal Chandra Burdhan on the 26th of July 1890, who has since been in possession.

The plaintiffs allege that the Letters of Administration as well as the sanction for sale were fraudulently obtained by collusion between the defendant and Shyam Lal Chatterjee, the husband of Uttam Kumari. The kabala was also similarly obtained by fraud. The defendant, therefore, acquired no right to the disputed property by his alleged purchase. Defendant denied the allegations of the plaintiff and asserted that he was no party to any fraudulent transaction. The Trial Court made a decree in favour of the plaintiffs for possession of the disputed property except 1 bigha of land, which defendant had subsequently purchased from another person and with regard to which there is no question before us. There was also a decree for mesne profits against the defendant.

A large number of issues were raised before the Subordinate Judge but the principal questions for decision are covered by Issues Nos. 2, 7, 9, 10 and 12. Those are: whether the suit is barred by limitation; whether Thakomani applied for Letters of Administration or somebody else did so in collusion with defendant; whether the Letters of Administration and permission for sale were fraudulently obtained by Sham Lal in collusion with defendant; whether Thakomani received any consideration for the kobala; and whether defendant acquired any title to the property and is entitled to retain possession of it after the death of Thakomani. All these questions were found in favour of the plaintiffs. Appellant disputes all the findings of the Court below.

Besides the disputed property Rakhal Chandra Banerji left some agricultural lands at Italghatta, about 23 bighas in area, and another house at Bhowanipur, a suburb of Calcutta. After the death of her son, Thakomani with her mother-in-law removed to her house at Bhowanipur as there was no one in the village to look after her and as her son-in-law Shyam Lal was living near her house at Bhowanipur. The Subordinate Judge has held that the disputed house was in a good condition at the time when it was sold. I am unable to agree with that finding. He does not seem to have dealt with the evidence of defendant's witness Barada Kanta Mandal, an old man of about 80 years, and who lives near the disputed property. He is one of the landlords with regard to the rent-paying portion of the disputed land and seems to be independent. He says that the house was in a dilapidated condition and overgrown with pepul trees. It was an old house in which the grandfather of Rakhal had lived, and it is quite probable that when it was left untenanted for several years it would be overgrown with trees and fall into decay as is usual in this part of the country. There is no evidence, as the Subordinate Judge supposed, that there was a durwan to take care of the property, and the fact that a dhobi, an "untouchable", was allowed to live in a portion of the house belonging to a Brahmin shows that the house was abandoned by the lady, and was not really fit for her to live in.

The fraud alleged by the plaintiffs shortly stated is that Shyam Lal was a poor man who had many dependants to support and he made the application for Letters of Administration in the name of Thakomani for his own benefit in collusion with the defendant, and got the kobala executed in favour of the defendant by representing to her that it was a lease on rent. Further the defendant in concert with Shyam Lal caused it to be mentioned in the application that the property in suit was the only property left by Rakhal Chandra Banerjee and also obtained the permission for sale by suppression of the fact that Rakhal had other properties and also alleging that the value of this property was Rs. 2,000 only whereas it was worth Rs. 15,000 at least.

I am unable to hold that Thakomani did not herself apply for Letters of Administration on the evidence, and I do not attach any importance to the fact on which so much stress was laid by the Subordinate Judge, that the name of the person who signed the name of Thakomani does not appear in the petition. The petition was presented by a Pleader on behalf of Thakomani and, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it must be presumed that he had proper authority from the lady to do so and the Court which made the grant must have been satisfied as to that fact. It is not possible for the defendant to disprove the allegation of the plaintiffs at this distance of time when all the persons who took part in the transaction are dead. The subsequent events also show that Thakomani could not have been ignorant of those proceedings. It is quite true that there were certain mis-statements of facts in the application for grant of Letters of Administration, notably the omission to state that Rakhal had two other properties. The statement that the daughters and their sons ordinarily lived under her care may not have been quite correct and it may be that one of the sons of her daughters had attained majority at that time, although it is stated they were all minors. The question is whether these mis-statements were made with a fraudulent motive. If Thakomani had made the application, as I consider it to be the case, she was a party to the intended fraud and it is alleged that Shyam Lal was also acting in this matter. Shyam Lal was the husband of Uttam Kumari who had five sons and it is difficult to hold in the absence of any other evidence that Shyam Lal was taking part in a fraudulent transaction which would affect the interest of his sons who were prospective reversioners with regard to 5/9ths share of the property. It rather seems to me that the house was really a burden on the estate, which was difficult to keep, and it was, therefore, thought expedient to sell it. There would not be many purchasers of such a dwelling house in a village and the purchaser who was found would not purchase it without the production of Letters of Administration and the sanction of the District Judge for sale. It became, therefore, necessary to apply for Letters of Administration, and the other properties of Rakhal were not included in the application presumably for avoiding the payment of stamp duty with regard to those properties and as it was not necessary for the enjoyment of those properties. The grant shows that the stamp duty for this property only was readily available, as the order for grant was made on the 28th of November 1889 and the Letters of Administration was issued on the 26th of June 1890, when the stamp duty was paid. It does not appear to me that these mis-statements in the application were made with any fraudulent intent. If Shyam Lal had any such desire he would have managed to sell the 23 bighas of agricultural lands or the house at Bhowanipur for which he might probably have got many willing purchasers.

Assuming that the Letters of Administration and the permission to sell were fraudulently obtained, it is contended by the appellant that there is no evidence to show that the defendant was a party to the fraud. In this case there is no direct proof that the defendant was in any way concerned with the transactions in the matter of obtaining the Letters of Administration or the permission for sale. It is quite true that circumstantial evidence is not only sufficient but in many cases it is the only proof that can be adduced to establish fraud. But as was observed in the case of Mathura Pandey v. Ram Ruchya Tewaree (1) cited by the Subordinate Judge, circumstances of mere suspicion should not be taken as proof of fraud, but the evidence must be sufficient to overcome the natural presumption of honesty and fair dealing. In approaching this question one must be careful not to add an illustration to the observation made by the Privy Council many years ago, that Judges in India are perhaps somewhat too apt to see fraud everywhere Moonshee Buzloor Raheem v. Jadonath Bose (2). It has been held in numerous cases that fraud is not to be presumed or inferred lightly. This cannot be too strongly emphasized especially in a case like this. In this case the plaintiff does not give any evidence of any circumstance which would lead to an inference of fraud. The facts on which the fraud of the defendant has been found by the Court below are shortly these:—Defendant says in his written statement that he came to know of the Letters of Administration and the permission to sell when the broker made the proposal for sale of the property to him, but it appears that the date of the bainapatra or agreement to sell, was prior to the application for Letters of Administration which was made on the 26th of August 1889. Defendant says in his evidence that when the bainapatra was made he went with it to Mr. Rutter, who was an attorney of this Court, for his advice, who told him not to purchase the property, but when some months afterwards the broker brought the Letters of Administration and the permission for sale, Mr. Rutter advised him to make the purchase. From this the learned Subordinate Judge infers that the defendant asked the broker to produce Letters of Administration from the District Judge as well as the permission to sell. I agree that it might have been so. Mr. Rutter as an attorney might reasonably have advised the defendant not to make a purchase from a Hindu widow unless she obtained Letters of Administration and permission to sell the property from the District Judge, and the defendant might have informed the broker of this advice. But I am unable to make a further inference that the defendant afterwards took part in the making of the application and the mis-statements contained in them. This seems to me to be a violent presumption to make. There was nothing wrong on the part of the defendant to inform the broker as to the conditions under which he was willing to purchase the property and it may be reasonable to infer that the broker represented those facts to Thakomani or Shyam Lal. Thereupon the application was made with those mis-statements and the object of those mis-statements might have been as I have indicated above. The circumstances do not, in my opinion, override the presumption of honest dealing by the defendant. The Subordinate Judge attached great importance to the fact of the non-production of the bainapatra by the defendant. After the execution of the kobala I do not see that the bainapatra had any importance with regard to the title of the defendant, and there was no reason whatsoever for his filing it in Court. If the plaintiffs thought that the bainapatra would support their case in any way it was their business to call for it. This they had not done at anytime in the course of the suit nor did they ask the defendant to produce it when he was being examined. I do not think it fair to the defendant to make any adverse inference against him for not producing that document. Nor do I see what inference of fraud can be made for the non-production of the bainapatra or how it could have established fraud if produced. It is not shown that the defendant was very anxious to purchase the property. If he was so anxious there would not have been a delay of seven months in taking out the letters after the order for it had been made, apparently for non-payment of Rs. 40 as stamp duty. Besides there is nothing to show that the defendant had any particular attraction for that property. He was a resident of Calcutta and it has not been shown that he had any other property in the place which would make it especially desirable for him to acquire this property. This was not used by him as a dwelling house and only recently when that part of the country has been developed he has filled up the tanks and let out the lands for the purpose of erecting rice mills. On these grounds I am unable to agree with the finding of the Subordinate Judge that the defendant was a party to any fraud in the matter of the proceedings taken in the Probate Court, and I think the circumstances are quite consistent with the presumption of his honest dealing.

(1) 11 W. R. 482; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 108.

(2) 11 M. I. A. 551 at p. 602; 8 W. R. P. C. 3; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 59; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 259; 20 E. R. 208.

If the defendant was no party to any fraud in the matter of the grant of the Letters of Administration and the permission to sell, the purchase by the defendant cannot be assailed on the ground of want of legal necessity. A Hindu widow obtaining Letters of Administration of the estate of the last male owner is in the same position as any other administrator and a sale effected by her with the sanction of the District Judge cannot be questioned on any ground not available against any other administrators. This was held in Kamikhya Nath Mukerjee v. Harichurn Sen (3), which was followed in Chuni Lal Haldar v. Makshada Debi (4) and Annoda Charan Mondal v. Atul Chandra Malik (5).

The next question is whether Thakomani received any consideration for the kobala. There is an endorsement on the kobala by the Registering Officer that Rs. 2,049 was paid in his presence. This endorsement was made in accordance with the statutory provision in s. 58 (1) (c) of the Registration Act. This raises a presumption that the consideration was paid and the onus is on the person who alleges that it is untrue to prove it. Ali Khan Bahadur v. Indar Parshad (6). No evidence has been given by the plaintiffs that the consideration was not paid. But it is contended on their behalf that their allegation is proved by

(3) 26 C. 607; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 990.

(4) 52 Ind. Cas. 309; 23 C. W. N. 652.

(5) 54 Ind. Cas. 197; 23 C. W. N. 1045; 31 C. 1, J. 3.

(6) 23 C. 950; 23 I. A. 92; 7 Sar. P. C. J. 63; 12 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 631 (P. C.).

the defendant's own evidence. Defendant says in cross-examination, "I paid the consideration money either to Nirmal or to Shyam Lal in the presence of the Sub-Registrar". This it is urged shows that the money was not paid to Thakomani. It does not seem to me that this evidence contradicts the endorsements on the kobala. It might have been that the defendant handed over the money to either of those persons and he made it over to the lady. Defendant's witness Hari Das Chandra proves that he saw the money being handed over to the lady. The Subordinate Judge has commented on the evidence of this witness adversely, because he made some wrong statements as regards the date of execution and the house in which Thakomani lived. But this witness gave his deposition more than 32 years after the execution of the kobala and it is not improbable that even an honest witness might have made mistakes in these matters. He was an attesting witness to the document and it is likely that he would remember only the important facts, it would not, therefore, be correct to hold that the consideration for the kobala was not paid.

The Subordinate Judge has further observed that there is no evidence that the document was read over or explained to the lady and, therefore, it was not binding on the lady herself much less on the reversioners. This question was not put in issue and probably for that reason there is no such evidence. It is true that any person taking a conveyance from a purda nashin lady must prove that the document was explained to her, that she understood what she was doing and that she had independent advice. I think that the question should have been raised in the pleadings and issues so that the defendant might know what he was required to prove. I think, however, where it is established that the lady knew what the nature of the document was that she was executing and that she had independent advice, it is not necessary to prove the formal reading over or explanation of the document. The defendant here was a stranger to the lady and he had no other dealings with her. Shyam Lal her son-in-law was looking after her interest and it is not proved that Shyam Lal was acting in collusion with the defendant. Defendant took possession of the property in 1890 immediately after his purchase. Thakomani lived till January 1909, nearly 19 years after the sale, and never questioned the transaction during all this period. If the positive case made by the plaintiffs that she executed the deed thinking that it was a lease was true, she would certainly have demanded rent during this period and would have been able to discover if any fraud had been committed on her. If she had believed that she had executed any document other than a kobala there was ample time to discover the fact. There is also an important fact which proves that the lady was fully aware that she was executing a kobala. The defendant proves, and there is no reason for disbelieving him on this point, that the lady had religious scruples about selling the temples and idols of Shiva to a non-Brahmin, as the defendant is. She, therefore, proposed that she would execute a deed of gift for them in favour of a Brahmin, and so a deed of gift Ex. B was executed in favour of defendants spiritual guide. That being so, it shows unmistakably that the lady knew she was executing a kobala for the house in dispute. If the lady knew that she was making an out and out sale, the importance of reading over the document disappears altogether. Moreover, it appears that the plaintiff No. 1 had been to the house. He also knew that the lady was not in possession, but he says that she told him that a portion of the house had been leased out. Shyam Lal Chatterji appears to have died before the lady, plaintiff No. 1 being the eldest of the reversioners, it may be expected that he would enquire about the state of the property. But he says that even after the death of his grandmother when he went to the village, he did not make any enquiry as to who was in possession of the property and if anybody had purchased it. This leads me to the conclusion that everything relating to the transaction about the property was known to the plaintiffs and it was for that reason he made no enquiries. If the plaintiff's case had any foundation, it is inexplicable why they delayed 11 years and 11 months after the death of Thakomani in bringing this suit, as plaintiffs appear to be fairly well to do. This leads weight to the suggestion of the defendant that the locality having now improved and the land having become profitable being let out for erecting rice mills, the plaintiffs are trying to oust the defendant. In my judgment the circumstances show that Thakomani was fully aware that she was executing a kobala and that she had the advice of her son-in-law Shyam Lal in the matter and the transaction was quite fair and lawful.

The next question is one of limitation. If Art. 141 of the Limitation Act is applicable to the suit, it is within time having been brought on the 7th of December 1920 the lady having died on the 9th of January 1909. The pro forma defendants were made plaintiffs on the 4th of January 1912. This was within 12 years. The appellant, however, argues that the plaintiffs seek possession in this case not simply on the ground that they are entitled to the property on the death of a Hindu female, but they also claim on the ground that the alienation by the lady as administratrix was tainted by fraud. Unless they can get relief on the ground of fraud they are not entitled to succeed. The period of limitation must, therefore, be three years under Art. 95 of the Act. I think there is a good deal of substance in this contention but as I have found there is no fraud on the merits, I do not think it necessary to elaborate the discussion on the point. Lastly a question was raised on behalf of the respondents that assuming they are unable to succeed with regard to the house and lands, they are entitled to a decree for the temples and idols and the land included in the deed of gift Ex. B as the lady was not entitled to make a gift. This question was not raised in the Court below and was not put in issue. If this had been done evidence might have been led to show that it was for the benefit of the idols that the gift was made. The recitals in Ex. B show that the daily worship, etc., of the idols were not being properly carried on. But the further difficulty in the plaintiff's way is that the properties sued for in the plaint are all included in defendant's kobala Ex. A, as would appear from a comparison of the boundaries given in the kobala with the boundaries given in Ex. L (the previous plaint in a suit brought by the plaintiffs and withdrawn with regard to the disputed property). Although there have been some changes in the description of the boundaries in the present plaint, it is clear that the property is the same as included in the other documents. It is apparent, therefore, that Ex. B was executed by the lady only to satisfy her religious scruples and not with the object of conferring a new title.

I agree on these grounds that the appeal should be allowed and the suit dismissed with costs in both Courts.

S. D.

Appeal allowed.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL MISCELLANEOUS No. 196 of 1923.

April 12, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.
DAVID SASSOON & Co. LTD.—
RESPONDENTS No. I

versus

SHIVJIRAM DEVIDAS—RESPONDENTS
No. II.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. IX, r. 13—Ex parte order—Defendants' default—Application to set aside order—Terms—Discretion of Court.

Where an order passed ex parte is not challenged on the ground of an irregularity entitling the applicant to have it vacated ex debito justitiæ, but the defendant applies to be relieved of his own default, he should be put to terms, for instance, he may be called upon to deposit the amount claimed by the opposite party before a judgment which is otherwise regular is vacated, specially when the bona fides of the applicant's defence are not free from doubt. [p. 237, col. 2; p. 238, col. 1.]

Watt v. Barnett, (1878) 3 Q. B. D. 183, followed.

Application to set aside an order passed ex parte on 8th December 1924 on Respondents I's application under O. XXI, r. 50 (2), C. P. C.

Messrs. Pahlajsing and B. Advani, for Respondents No I.

Messrs. Srikishondas and H. Lulia, for Respondents No. II.

ORDER.—I am not satisfied at present either as to the sufficiency of the alleged cause for non-appearance on December 2 and 5, 1924, or as to the bona fides of this application.

Mr. Pahlajsing has pointed out that the medical prescriptions prior to December 5, produced by the applicant are not original, but copies. There is some apparent discrepancy in the certificates produced, and the fact that the three different doctors have been consulted at different times, and have been asked to give medical certificates also requires an explanation. Dr. Kishorilal's certificate dated November 28, 1924 shows that the applicant had fever on that date. Dr. Gopichand's certificate shows that the applicant had fever on December 1, and that he was under his treatment from December 1 to December 8, and again from December 12. This certificate does not refer to applicant having been suffering from pneumonia. This certificate is dated December 14. The certificate of the third doctor which is dated December 12 refers to the applicant suffering from some sort of pneumonia. The certificates require to be proved and the discrepancies may possibly be reconciled and the cause of different doctors being called and explained, when and if the doctors are examined on commission.

Proceeding, however, on the assumption that if permitted the applicant would be in a position to reconcile the discrepancies and to offer a reasonable explanation for his non-attendance on the two dates fixed to bring his case within the purview of O. IX, r. 13, C. P. C. I think this is a fit case in which I should in that event in the exercise of the discretion vested in me by that rule insist on at least the principal amount, viz., Rs. 7,487-14 0 awarded to respondents No. 1 being deposited in this Court as a condition precedent to the order of December 8, 1924 being vacated. In that order I have given full details of the present litigation, and the causes which have contributed to respondents No. 1 not being able to enforce the award in question as a decree upto now, though it was passed on June 26, 1923.

The subject matters of the award are certain ordinary mercantile contracts containing the usual submission clause, which according to the admission of the applicant's Pleader are all signed by the applicant, though he now pleads that he was not a partner of the firm for whom he signed the contracts, but was either their manager or authorized representative.

A notice issued by this Court calling upon respondent No. 2 to show cause why the award should not stand filed, and if the award was objected to, to apply within 20 days of the service of the notice to have the award taken off the file, was tendered to the applicant by the bailiff of the Lahore Court on August 19, 1923. In this notice he was described as the managing partner of respondents No. 2. He refused to accept the notice, and failed to apply to this Court within the time allowed under the rules of this Court to have the award by this Court taken off the file.

This notice was held by this Court to have been duly served, and the award proceedings transferred to the Lahore Court to enable respondents No. 1 to apply in execution proceedings to that Court for recovery of the amount due under the award.

An unfortunate mistake had, however, occurred in this office and the note put up by the office showed that the notice was served on the applicant as the manager of respondents No. 2 and not as managing partner of respondents No. 2. This mistake appears to have been availed of by the applicant in avoiding payment of the amount awarded to respondents No. 1.

Respondents No. 1 experienced some difficulty in realising the fruits of their award in the executing Court. In order to rectify the mistake they applied to this Court for issue of fresh notice on the applicant as the managing partner of respondents No. 2. It was only in response to this notice that the applicant applied to this Court to take the award off the file and inter alia pleaded that respondents No. 1 could not enforce the award against him without special leave under cl. (2) of O. XXI, r. 50 C. P. C., and that it had been so held by the Executing Court. This plea resulted in a fresh application filed by respondents No. 1 for leave under this rule which is said to have been filed by them ex majore cautela. Both the applications for leave to take the award off the file which is headed "Objections to the award" and the application for leave under O. XXI, r. 50, C. P. C., cl. (2), have been dealt with by me by my order dated December 8, 1924.

This order is not challenged on the ground of an irregularity entitling the applicant to have it vacated ex debito justitiæ. He admits his default and explains it by alleging that he was ill. It is doubtful if he has a bona fide defence. If a commission issues, it would mean further delay. The applicant showed no anxiety to deny his liability as a partner actual or ostensible at the earliest opportunity afforded to him when the first notice was tendered to him, and was refused by him. Such refusal was a contempt of the process of this Court. He has also shown no desire to expedite the disposal of this all important question, though he was aware that the witnesses were being brought down by respondents No. 2 from Lahore to give evidence, he failed to give proper instructions to his Pleader to cross-examine the witnesses.

Rule 13 of O. IX, C. P. C., gives me a wide discretion to impose terms before granting the application, and I see no reason why I should not follow the English precedents which as a rule require that the defendant when applying to be relieved of his own default, should be put to terms before vacating a judgment which is otherwise regular, specially when the bona fides of the applicant's defence are not free from doubt. Yearly Practice 1924 notes to O. XXVII, r. 15 at page 371 and Watt v. Barnett (1) where a defendant served by substituted service applied to have the decree set aside on the ground that he had no knowledge of the proceedings and was ordered to give security. Though the amount due to respondents No. 2 is far in excess of Rs. 6,487-14-0, I think it would meet the ends of justice, if I make it a condition precedent to the applicant depositing this amount in Court within fifteen days of this date to prove his bona fides before he can claim this indulgence. If he makes the deposit I shall be prepared to assume that he was ill on the dates fixed and shall vacate the order dated December 8. If no deposit is made, then this application shall stand dismissed with costs.

Call up for further orders on 8th May 1925.

P. B. A.

Order accordingly.

(1) (1878) 3 Q. B. D. 183.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1612 OF 1924.

July 24, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and
Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal.

BACHAN SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—APPELLANTS

versus

BIJAI SINGH AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—
Lis pendens, doctrine of, applicability of—Pre-emption suit—Property transferred after institution of suit in favour of person having equal right of pre-emption with plaintiff, effect of.

The doctrine of lis pendens applies to pre-emption suits just as well as to other suits. [p. 239, col. 1.]

Where after the institution of a suit for pre-emption but before the expiry of the limitation for the institution of such a suit, the vendee transfers the property to a person who has an equal right of pre-emption with the plaintiff, any rights which the plaintiff had against the transferee at the date of the institution of the suit cannot be affected by the subsequent transfer of the property in the latter's favour. The position in such a case is the same as if the transferee instead of taking a transfer of the property had brought a rival suit for pre-emption. [ibid.]

Second appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Farrukhabad, dated the 24th September 1924.

Mr. Gulzari Lal, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. L. Banerji, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—After hearing the arguments in this case we have come to the conclusion that the appeal must be allowed. It is quite true that the judgment of the lower Appellate Court is based upon a ruling of this Court reported as Har Keshi v. Mewa Ram (1). There can be no doubt that on the facts that case is not distinguishable from the case now before us, but nevertheless, for the reasons we are about to give, we think it should not be followed.

What happened in the present case was this. One Charan Singh sold some property to Bijai Singh and Chandrahas. This Bijai Singh was a co-sharer in the property while Chandrahas was a stranger. This sale was made on the 15th December 1922.

The four plaintiffs-appellants here before us filed a suit for pre-emption on the 1st December 1923.

On the 14th December 1923 a rival set of pre-emptors Gulzar Singh and others filed their suit for pre-emption and on this very day, that is on the 14th December 1923, the vendees Bijai Singh and Chandrahas sold the property to one Pokhar Singh. It is conceded before us that Pokhar Singh has as good a right of pre-emption as any of the parties who brought the rival pre-emption suits.

The result of the litigation in the Court of first instance was that it was found that the rival pre-emptor and Pokhar Singh had an equal status to pre-empt and a decree was framed dividing the property four-tenths to one party, five-tenths to another party and one-tenth to Pokhar Singh.

On appeal the decree of the Court of first instance has been reversed and the suits of the plaintiffs-pre-emptors have both been dismissed. The result of this, therefore, must be to leave all the property with Pokhar Singh.

In the case of Har Keshi v. Mewa Ram (1) upon which the lower Appellate Court relies, no question was raised regarding the application of the doctrine of lis pendens.

(1) 72 Ind. Cas. 247; (1928) A. I. R. (A.) 294; 9 O. & A. L. R. 495.

We think, however, that that doctrine must be applied to pre-emption suits as well as to any other suits. We have laid this down in a ruling in Bhikhimal v. Debi Sahai (2). Now it is plain that in the present case the transfer which was made to Pokhar Singh was pendente lite and the plaintiffs-appellants before us can say that the doctrine of lis pendens ought to be applied in the suit which they instituted, and that any rights that they had against Pokhar Singh at the institution of the suit should not be interfered with by anything done by the original vendees of the property pending the trial of the suit.

It has been said that the plaintiffs and Pokhar Singh have equal status in the matter of claiming pre-emption and it is clear that if Pokhar Singh instead of taking a transfer of the property had brought a rival suit for pre-emption, he would have been given a share of the property in proportion to the extent of his claim along with the other plaintiffs-pre-emptors.

It appears to us, therefore, that on the application of this principle the decree of the Court of first instance was correct in the circumstances as they then existed. We have, however, to take notice of the fact that one set of pre-emptors has dropped out and has allowed the decree of the lower Appellate Court to become final. We have, therefore, now before us only one set of four pre-emptors and the purchaser Pokhar Singh, and applying the principles laid down above, we think that the proper decree to pass is that the plaintiffs-appellants be given four-fifths of the pre-empted property on payment of Rs. 320. Pokhar Singh who has already purchased may retain the remaining one-fifth of the property. We allow the plaintiffs two months to deposit the sum mentioned above in the Court of first instance to the credit of Pokhar Singh. If the deposit is made within the time limited the plaintiffs' claim will be decreed to that extent and they will be entitled to four-fifths of their costs in both the Courts below. If the deposit is not so made then their suit will stand dismissed with costs to Pokhar Singh in both the Courts below. As regards the costs of this Court we leave the parties to bear their own costs.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

(2) 89 Ind. Cas. 219; 23 A. L. J. 615; L. R. 6 A. 487 Civ.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 69-B OF 1924.

August 4, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

DULICHAND—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

Musammam SONI—DEFENDANT—NON-APPLICANT.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 196—Contract by guardian—Ratification by minor after attaining majority—Effect—Repayment—Appropriation—Court, powers of—Hindu Law—Minor, when bound by acts of guardian—Test.

An admission by a person who has attained majority, which imparts complete ratification by him of the acts of his guardian, dispenses with the necessity of any proof being adduced by the creditor to show that the debts were binding. [p. 240, col. 2.]

In the absence of anything to show that a re-payment was towards a particular item a Court is entitled to appropriate it towards the earliest outstanding item irrespective of its being in time or not. [p. 241, col. 1.]

A minor will be bound by the act of his guardian, if the act is such as the infant might reasonably and prudently have done for himself if he had been of full age. [p. 241, col. 2.]

Application for revision against the decree of the Judge Small Cause Court, in Small Cause Court Suit No. 291 of 1923, decided on the 29th February 1924.

Mr. A. V. Khare, for the Applicant.

Mr. G. G. Hatwalne, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—In this case the Small Cause Court Judge has given a partial decree to plaintiff against the assets of one deceased Ramchandra. The claim so far as it was based upon a bond dated the 19th June 1920, executed by his guardian mother Sonai on his behalf during his minority has been dismissed on the ground that the debts which went to form the consideration of that bond were not proved to be binding on the minor and that the only item which was binding on the minor's estate was more than satisfied out of the re-payments. The plaintiffs have, therefore, come up in revision.

I have gone through the record and I find that the judgment of the lower Court is not according to law and is liable to be upset.

The document or bond dated the 19th June 1920, contains words "This bond shall bind my estate and heirs." These words indicate that the intention of the executant was not merely to create a personal covenant or to bind the minor by a personal promise to pay, but did indicate the source, namely, the estate out of which the debt was

A reference to Ex. P-III shows that the re-payments of Rs. 6-12-0 were made before the silver worth Rs. 2-8-6 was purchased. In the absence of anything to show that it was a re-payment towards any particular item I am entitled to appropriate it towards the earliest outstanding item irrespective of its being in time or not. This will necessarily go towards the 1st item of Rs. 100. There is no re-payment towards the 2nd item of Rs. 160 on account of price of cotton seed. Thus at the end of the year 1975 Sambat a balance of Rs. 255-12-6 remained outstanding. In the year 1976 there were dealings in gold and silver. Reading the debits and credits in juxtaposition and taking into consideration their identical nature and the dates when the transactions took place and the re-payments were made, I am of opinion, that the circumstances under which the re-payments were made clearly showed that they were meant to wipe off the transactions of gold and silver purchases. This would show that the re-payments aggregating Rs. 235-6-6 must go to wipe off the debit of Rs. 265-7-6 of the year 1976 Sambat. This leaves a balance of Rs. 30-1-0 only against the debtor's name. Thus the aggregate outstanding debts come to Rs. 285-13-6. Adding Rs. 204-4-0 on account of interest the total debits come to Rs. 490-1-6. Adding Rs. 9-14-6 taken in cash the total comes to Rs. 500 which is the consideration of the bond which is ratified.

The lower Court has already held that the seed that was supplied, was for cultivation and for feeding the agricultural cattle. The minor was, therefore, bound to re-pay this loan. It was a pre-existing liability which he as owner of agricultural land was bound to satisfy. This liability was incurred for the minor's benefit; he could not deny his liability for the same. As regards the old bond debt of Rs. 100, there is no doubt no direct evidence about the circumstances in which it was incurred; but in my opinion in the face of the debtor's own admission as to its binding character, there is no escape from liability for that item also. Now the only item which remained is Rs. 30-1-0 on account of ornaments. The same argument applies to this item also. It is said that there must be conscious admission with full knowledge of facts for purposes of ratification and that the deceased Ramchandra must not be credited with knowledge of the facts especially as his mother was not there and the bond was not taken out. I am not prepared to uphold this contention. Moreover, when major portion of the amount is proved to be due, I do not see any force in the contention that each item has not been proved by the creditor to have been incurred for the benefit of the minor. Moreover, Mr. Mayne lays down the following test in Hindu Law, para. 218, 9th Edition:—

"That the minor will be bound by the act of his guardian, if the act is such as the infant might reasonably and prudently have done for himself if he had been of full age."

In view of these circumstances I am disposed to hold that the debt was of a nature as the infant might reasonably and prudently have himself borrowed had he been of age. The observations of the Allahabad High Court in Peare Lal v. Sunder Singh (1) are also very significant and show how the question should be looked at. For all these reasons, I am of opinion, that the debt was such as bound the estate and, therefore, it was that it was ratified by the debtor; it is consequently recoverable out of assets of the minor in the hands of his mother defendant No. 2, who has since succeeded to them owing to her daughter-in-law's (defendant No. 1's) re-marriage after the date of the decree.

Treating the debts as Sonai's own debts they have been kept alive by her by the execution of the bond, dated the 19th June 1920 and they are recoverable out of the assets in her hands.

I, therefore, upset the decree dismissing the plaintiff's suit, and decree the full claim and costs of both Courts and direct that the decretal amount shall carry interest at Rs. 0-8-0 per cent. per mensem, and the entire amount due to plaintiffs shall be recoverable out of the assets of Ramchandra held by Sonai.

G. R. D.

Order accordingly.

(1) 68 Ind. Cas. 805; 44 A. 756 at p. 758; 20 A. L. J. 658; (1922) A. I. R. (A.) 436.

SIND JUDICIAL COMMIS- SIONER'S COURT.

ORIGINAL CIVIL SUIT No. 458 of 1920.

August 13, 1923.

Present:—Mr. Rupchand Bilaram, A. J. C.

LAKHMICHAND GHANDAMAL—

PLAINTIFFS

versus

FIRM OF GOKULDAS RANCHORDAS—

DEFENDANT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXX, r. 3
—Firm, suit against, nature of—Liability of each partner—Summons, whether to be served on each partner—Firm having another firm as partner—Dissolution of former, effect of, on latter.

A firm as such has no legal existence and partners in a firm carry on business both as principals and as agents for each other within the scope of the partnership business. A firm's name is a mere expression, not a legal entity. [p. 242, col. 2.]

Sadler v. Whiteman, (1910) 1 K. B. 868 at p. 889, In re Vagliano Anthracite Collieries, (1910) 79 L. J. Ch. 769; 103 L. T. 211; 54 S. J. 720 and R. v. Holder, (1912) 1 K. B. 483 at p. 487; 81 L. J. K. B. 327; 106 L. T. 305; 76 J. P. 143; 22 Cox C. C. 727; 56 S. J. 188; 28 T. L. R. 173, followed.

When a suit is instituted against a firm in the firm's name it is a suit filed against every partner of the firm and a decree against the firm has the same effect as a decree against all the partners thereof. [p. 242, col. 2.]

Clark v. Cullen, (1882) 9 Q. B. D. 355; 47 L. T. 307, followed.

Where, therefore, a suit is instituted against a firm in the name of the firm and some of the partners are individually served under the provisions of O. XXX, r. 3 of the C. P. C., the suit cannot be held to be incompetent on the ground of all the partners not being individually served. [p. 243, col. 1.]

Where the partners composing a firm as one single entity form a partnership with another person the dissolution of the latter partnership does not dissolve the former partnership. [ibid.]

A cause of action against the partners of a firm is a joint cause of action against all partners and each one is jointly and severally liable for the whole of the claim and not only to the extent of his share in the partnership. [p. 243, cols. 1 & 2.]

Mr. Kimatrai Bhojraj, for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. Jhamatmal Valiram, for the Defendant.

ORDER.—The plaintiff Lakhmichand son of Ghandamal has filed this suit on 3rd May 1920 against the firm of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co., of Bombay for accounts of a dissolved partnership and for recovery of the amount which may be found due to him. He has served four persons Valji, Chaturbhuj, Gangji and Purshotam under O. XXX, r. 3, C. P. C. He asserts that the defendant's firm which carried on business at Bombay entered into partnership with him in respect only of certain dealings for the purchase of certain commodities in the Punjab and Karachi and sale thereof in the Punjab, Karachi or Bombay, the plaintiff being entitled to eight annas share and the firm of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. to the remaining eight annas share.

Valji who has been served as one of the partners of the defendant's firm filed a written statement on 3rd January 1922 inter alia denying that he was a partner of the defendant's firm and contended that "the Court has no jurisdiction as all the partners of the defendant's firm resided and still reside and carry on business or work for gain in Bombay," and that the cause of action had arisen at Bombay where the partnership was entered into and the accounts had to be settled.

Ex parte orders were passed against Chaturbhuj, Gangji and Purshotam. Subsequently, however, the ex parte order against Chaturbhuj was set aside and he has adopted the same defence as that of his brother Valji. The suit has been proceeded with and is part-heard.

An application has been made on behalf of Valji on the 22nd of May 1923 for permission to raise a further defence alleging that the suit is bad for non-joinder of one Gokaldas Ranchoredas as a co-defendant and the suit is, therefore, incompetent. Not only has this application been filed at a very late stage of the suit, but it is altogether misconceived. The suit has not been instituted only against the four persons who have been individually served but the suit is against each partner of the firm of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. It is, no doubt, true that the firm as such has no existence and that the partners carry on business both as principals and as agents for each other within the scope of the partnership business, and that the firm's name is a mere expression and not a legal entity. Sadler v. Whiteman (1), In re Vagliano Anthracite Collieries (2), R. v. Holder (3). But Order XXX, r. 1, C. P. C., corresponding to O. 48 A, R. S. C., permits the use of the firm's name for the sake of convenience. When a suit is instituted against a firm in the firm's name, it is a suit filed against every partner of the firm and a decree against the firm has the same effect as a decree against

(1) (1910) 1 K. B. 868 at p. 889.

(2) (1910) 79 L. J. Ch. 769; 103 L. T. 211; 54 S. J. 720.

(3) (1912) 1 K. B. 483 at p. 487; 81 L. J. K. B. 327; 106 L. T. 305; 76 J. P. 143; 22 Cox C. C. 727; 56 S. J. 188; 28 T. L. R. 173.

all the partners formerly had. Clark v. Cullen (4).

If Gokaldas Ranchoredas was a partner of the firm at the time the cause of action accrued to the plaintiff, then he is a party to the suit, and is one of the defendants on the record already. If the plaintiff had brought this suit under the C. P. C. of 1882 he would have sued A, B, C, D and E carrying on business in the name of Gokaldas Ranchoredas by their managing partners A or A, B, C and D the mere fact that he did not apply for service against any individual partner of the firm would not at all affect the maintainability of the suit.

It is next contended that the suit is a suit for accounts of a dissolved partnership, and, therefore, O. XXX, r. 1, C. P. C., has no application to the present suit and that the partnership having been dissolved each partner must be sued and served individually.

Whether the business of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. was then continuing or not, there is no substance in this contention as well. The plaintiff does not allege that he became a partner in the firm of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. or that under the partnership terms each partner had a separate or individual share, but his case is that all the partners composing the firm of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. as a body or as one single entity formed another partnership with him, their joint share being eight annas. The dissolution of this new partnership did not, therefore, dissolve the partnership between the partners of the firm of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. inter se. Even if it be assumed that the business done by Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. in partnership with the plaintiff was also done in the same name, then technically there were in the eye of law two partnership firms one of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. consisting of the five original partners and another of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. consisting of the original partners and the plaintiff. The dissolution of the second partnership did not dissolve the first partnership.

The cause of action of the plaintiff against the partners of the firm of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co. is a joint cause of action against all the partners, though in view of

s. 43, Indian Contract Act, each of the partners of that firm is jointly and severally liable to the plaintiff for the whole of his claim and not only to a part of his claim limited to the proportionate amount of the interest which he may have as a member of the firm of Gokaldas Ranchoredas & Co.

Order XXX, r. 9, C. P. C., permits the institution of suits in the firm's name even in the case of suits between a partner and the firm and of suits between two firms having a common partner.

The suit being instituted in the name of a firm is only an easy mode of suing each individual partner and saves the plaintiff the necessity of ascertaining the name of each person who is jointly or severally liable to him.

There is no greater hardship on the persons served as representing the firm in a suit for accounts by a principal against his commission agent than in a suit for accounts of a dissolved partnership.

The object of the application is to delay the disposal of the suit which is part-heard.

I reject the application with costs.

Z. K.

Application rejected.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 50 OF 1925.

July 16, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and
Mr. Justice Daniels.

AHMAD HUSAIN KHAN alias
CHHANGU KHAN—DEFENDANT—
APPLICANT

versus

HARDIAL alias LALMAN—PLAINTIFF—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 115, O. IX, rr. 9, 13—Ex parte decree, application to set aside—Order setting aside ex parte decree on condition of payment of costs within fixed period—Extension of time, application for, refusal of—Revision.

An order restoring a case dismissed for default, or setting aside an ex parte decree, on condition of the payment of a reasonable amount of costs to the opposite party, within a time fixed by the order, is not an illegal order, but on the contrary is an order contemplated by rr. 9 and 13 of O. IX of the C. P. C. [p. 244, col. 1.]

Where in the case of such an order, the petitioner applies to the Court for extension of the time fixed for payment of costs and the Court refuses to extend the time, its order is not open to revision. [ibid.]

Civil revision from an order of the District Judge, Shahjahanpur, dated the 16th December 1924.

Mr. A. P. Bagchi, for the Applicant.

Mr. U. S. Bajpai, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application in revision under the following circumstances. A suit was decreed ex parte against the applicant on 29th April 1924. On 26th July the Subordinate Judge set aside the ex parte decree on condition of the defendant paying the plaintiff Rs. 40 as costs by the 28th of July. The defendant did not at the time make any objection that the time allowed was too short. On the 28th of July the defendant having failed to deposit the money applied for ten days' further time, which was refused. An appeal from this order was dismissed by the learned District Judge. It appears to us that because the learned Subordinate Judge in the exercise of his discretion considered that the defendant was not entitled to an extension of time for payment of the money this does not amount either to a failure to exercise jurisdiction against which a revision can lie. The applicant has drawn our attention to a decision in Jagarnath Sahi v. Kamta Prasad Upadhyaya (1), in which the opinion was expressed that a conditional order was not a proper form in which to pass the order, and that an order should first be made directing payment of the money by a certain time and then a separate order passed restoring or declining to restore the suit according as the money had been paid or not. The real question in that case was as to the order from which an appeal lay, and it was held that the final order dismissing the suit or refusing to restore the suit was the one from which an appeal could be filed. In a later case, Nand Lal v. Kishori (2), to which one of the same learned Judges was a party, some doubt appears to have been felt as to the correctness of the earlier ruling. However that may be, to prevent any misapprehension we wish to lay down definitely that an order restoring a case dismissed for default on condition of the payment of a reasonable amount of costs to the opposite party within a time fixed by the order is not an illegal order, but, on the contrary, is an order contemplated by O. IX, r. 13 of the C. P. C. This application has no force, and we dismiss it with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.
APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 54
OF 1923.

July 27, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Adami and
Mr. Justice Sen.

RAMJEE PRASAD—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT
versus

Rai BISHUNDUTT AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 14—Land Registration Act (B. C. VII of 1876), ss. 28, 29, 30—Proceedings before Land Registration Collector, whether "civil proceedings"—Land Registration Collector, whether "Court."

The term "civil proceeding" used in s. 14, Limitation Act, is not meant to cover an application made under ss. 28 and 29 or s. 42 of the Land Registration Act nor can the Land Registration Deputy Collector be called a "Court" within the meaning of s. 14, Limitation Act, for the purpose of deciding cases under those sections of the Land Registration Act. [p. 246, col. 1.]

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Muzaffarpur, dated the 23rd June 1923, reversing that of the Additional subordinate Judge, Muzaffarpur, dated the 10th January 1917.

Messrs. Sivanandan Ray and Satyadeo Sahay, for the Appellant.

Mr. Rai T. N. Sahai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Adami, J.—The plaintiff in this suit sought for a declaration of his title to, and confirmation of his possession in certain shares in the estate of Bisbunpur Sad. Previous to 1896, the plaintiff's share was shown in the Register D of the Land Registration Department to be 2 annas, 16 gundas 1 kowri 1 krant 1 dant. In 1896 the estate was partitioned and divided into eight puttis, one of these was the residuary putti which is the subject of the suit.

Shortly stated, the plaintiff's case is that after the partition the shares of the various co-sharers in the residuary putti were entered in the name of one of the sharers only, and the separate sharers of the different co sharers were not shown. Rai Brahma

(1) 23 Ind. Cas. 138; 12 A. L. J. 38; 36 A. 77.

(2) 26 Ind. Cas. 895; 12 A. L. J. 1270.

Dutt who alone was shown in Register D seems to be the brother of the plaintiff.

The plaintiff, in February 1902, purchased an eight annas share in the patti at an auction-sale held in execution of a mortgage decree, and in June 1902 he applied for the registration of his name in respect of the purchased share. He was registered for 7 annas, 14 gundas share and was left jointly recorded with the other co-sharers for the rest of the share. The plaintiff afterwards in 1912 applied to the Land Registration Department under s. 42 of the Land Registration Act, pointing out that the Register D did not show his shares separately as had been shown in the Register previous to the partition. The Deputy Collector held that s. 42 did not apply and rejected his application. The plaintiff then made another application under ss. 28 and 29 of the Act, making the same request as he had before, namely, that his shares should be separately recorded. The defendants 1st and 2nd parties to this suit both objected before the Deputy Collector and on the 7th of May 1914, the Deputy Collector found that a question of title was involved and that he could not decide the case; he rejected the application telling the petitioner that he might go to the Civil Court if so advised, for a declaration of his specific interest in each of the three villages which formed the putti.

The plaintiff then instituted the present suit on the 30th July 1914. According to his plaint, the defendant No. 1 Ramjee, had been recorded in the Register for a larger share than he was entitled to and the plaintiff sought to have some part of this share taken from Ramjee, and also a portion of a share taken from another defendant, and added to his own share.

It is unnecessary in this second appeal to mention the shares claimed; it is sufficient to say that both the Courts below have found that the plaintiff is entitled to the share he claims. The Subordinate Judge, however, dismissed the suit of the plaintiff finding that the defendant No. 1 or his vendors had been in possession of the shares claimed by the plaintiff since 1902 at least, and that the plaintiff had never been in possession of those shares.

On appeal the learned District Judge, agreeing with the Subordinate Judge as to the title of the plaintiff; found with regard to the present appellant, defendant No. 1, that he was recorded in Register D for a considerably larger share than he was entitled to, and, after considering the question of limitation and finding that the time taken in prosecuting his case before the Land Registration Department would be excluded, he decreed the plaintiff's suit as against defendant No. 1 and directed that 18 gundas out of the defendant No. 1's share in village Bakarpur should be transferred to the plaintiff and 3 gundas of defendant No. 1's share in Mirpur should be similarly transferred, while 11 gundas out of the share recorded in the name of the defendant's grandfather should be recorded in the plaintiff's name. The plaintiff was also declared to be entitled to be recorded for eight annas 12 gundas out of the group entry relating to village Doberkothi.

The main question which arises in this second appeal is whether the decision of the learned District Judge regarding limitation was correct. The learned Advocate for the appellant does not attack the findings come to as to the amount of shares of the parties and in fact he could not as these are findings of fact.

Mr. Sivanandan Ray points out that according to the findings the plaintiff has never been in possession since February 1902 at least, when the entry of the defendant's shares was made in the Land Registration Department Register D, that the shares are held by the co-shares exclusively, and since the suit was not instituted till the 30 July 1914 and the entry of the defendant No. 1's shares was made in the Land Registration Department, Register D in February 1902, more than 12 years have elapsed and the suit must be barred.

The defendant No. 1 has been recorded separately for his share in the Land Registration Department and, as shown by the learned District Judge, where the co-sharers are found to have exclusive possession of a specific and stated share, limitation may run against the other co-sharers claiming that share in a suit.

The learned District Judge has found that the time taken in prosecuting his case before the Land Registration Deputy Collector and before the Commissioner and the Board of Revenue in appeal, that is to say, from the 23rd of November 1912 to the 7th of May 1914 should be excluded under the provisions of s. 14 of the Indian Limitations Act, 1908. That s. runs as follows:—"In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding whether in a Court of first instance or in a Court of Appeal, against the defendant, shall be excluded, where the proceeding is founded upon the same cause of action and is prosecuted in good faith in a Court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it."

The question is whether the proceeding in the Land Registration Department can be called a civil proceeding and whether the land Registration Deputy Collector can be held to be a Court for the purposes of the section; thirdly, whether the cause of action is the same in this suit as it was in the Land Registration Department and whether in can be said that the cause is one which from defect of jurisdiction or cause of a like nature the Land Registration Deputy Collector was unable to entertain.

I have myself grave doubts on each of these points. I do not think that the term "civil proceeding" used in the section is meant to cover an application made under ss. 28 and 29 or s. 42 of the Land Registration Act; nor do I think that the Land Registration Deputy Collector could be called "a Court" for the purpose of deciding cases under those sections. Then again though the cause of action is in both cases the record made in the Land Registration, Register D, after the partition, the relief sought before the Deputy Collector was different from the relief sought here. Before the Deputy Collector the plaintiff merely asked that his share should be separately shown and he stated what he alleged that share was. Before this Court the plaintiff seeks to have his title declared and to be confirmed in possession, or in the alternative to recover possession. It is difficult to say that the Land Registration Deputy Collector had no jurisdiction to order that the register should show the shares separately; but it was found that really the question was one of title and, therefore, the Deputy Collector refused to deal with it. I do not think that it can be said that the Deputy Collector was unable to entertain the application before him from defect of jurisdiction or other cause of a like nature. The plaintiff really sought to have his title declared by the separate record of his shares in the Register D and the proper venue for obtaining the relief he really wanted was the Civil Court. Instead of going to the Civil Court, he went to the Land Registration Department, and when the Deputy Collector had decided that the case was one in which title had to be decided instead of at once coming to the Civil Court, the plaintiff prosecuted his case in appeal before the Revenue Authorities. In my opinion s. 14 of the Limitation Act will not save the suit from limitation.

The learned District Judge has relied on the case of Girjanath Roy Chowdhory v. Ram Narain Das (1), where the plaintiff was allowed under s. 14 to deduct the period during which he was bona fide seeking redress from the Revenue Authorities who had no jurisdiction to deal with the question raised by him, and the suit was held to be not barred by lapse of time. In that suit the question was very shortly dealt with and I think is distinguishable from the present case.

The defendant No. 1 had bought shares in three villages from admitted co-sharers in 1886, 1902 and 1905; he was recorded in Register D in 1902 with regard to the lands purchased in 1886 and 1902, and his vendor was recorded in 1902 in respect of the lands bought by the defendant in 1905, and the Trial Court found that the defendant and his vendors had been in possession ever since and the plaintiff had never been in my possession. The suit was instituted more than 12 years after February 1902, and in my opinion the learned Subordinate Judge was correct in finding that the suit was barred by limitation as against defendant No. 1.

The learned Advocate for the respondent raised an objection to the appeal on the ground that defendant No. 1 had sold his interest in the patti in 1919 and, therefore, he had no right to appeal. I do not think that this contention can be upheld, for it is quite clear that it is due to the defendant's vendees that his title to the shares should be supported and upheld. It seems that an application was made for substitution but it was rejected by the Court.

I would, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the learned District Judge so far as it affects the shares which are the subject-matter of this appeal and dismiss the suit as against the defendant No. 1. Each party will pay his own costs throughout.

Sen, J.—I agree.

S. D.

Appeal allowed.

(1) 20 C. 264; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 179.

[90 I. C. 1925]

SHEODAYAL v. RAMPRASAD.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL NO. 434 OF 1923.

March 20, 1924.

Present :—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

SHEODAYAL—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

RAMPRASAD—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), ss. 11, 12, 13, 14, 105—Hindu Law—Widow—Will of property inherited by widow, validity of—Occupancy holding, devise of—Ejectment, suit for—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts.

A Hindu widow has only a restricted power of alienation over property which she has inherited from her husband. She has only a life-estate in such property and can make no disposition which would enure beyond her lifetime; much less she can make one which is to come into operation after her death. [p. 247, col. 2.]

A Hindu widow, therefore, who inherits an occupancy holding from her husband cannot make a testamentary disposition of it and thus defeat the provisions of s. 11 of the C. P. Tenancy Act. [ibid.]

The intention of enacting the law of tenancy in the Central Provinces was to recognize a tenant-right of a restricted character as regards its heritability, transferability and partibility under certain conditions and limitations; but it was never understood to carry with it the incident of devisability by Will at the instance of the tenant. It is property in which the interest carved out is more of a limited or personal character, than of a character conveying unlimited powers of disposition to the incumbent for the time being. [p. 247, col. 2; p. 248, col. 1.]

Where a transfer is invalid, irrespective of the provisions of the C. P. Tenancy Act, the Act is not called into operation; there is nothing upon which it can fasten; there is no legal transaction for the consideration of the Revenue Officers. In such a case the intended transferee is not a transferee at all and if he enters upon possession under colour of the transaction his entry is a trespass at civil law and he can be ejected from the land by a suit in the Civil Courts. The jurisdiction of the Civil Courts to entertain such a suit is not ousted by anything contained in ss. 12, 13, 14 and 105 of the C. P. Tenancy Act. [p. 248, col. 2; p. 249, col. 1.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal against a decree of the Additional District Judge, Narsinghpur, in Civil Appeal No. 20 of 1923, dated the 6th July 1923.

Mr. J. C. Ghosh, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—One Saraswati Bai inherited an occupancy holding from her husband. She died in April 1921. Before her death she made a testamentary disposition in respect of the occupancy holding as per Will bearing vernacular Mitti Magh Sudhi 9 of Sambat 1977 which corresponds to 15th February 1921 (Ex. D-1) in favour of defendant-appellant who is her husband's relation but not necessarily the next heir. The landlord, therefore, instituted a suit to eject the defendant from the land as a trespasser. It has been concurrently found that defendant is not the next heir entitled to succeed to the holding. The First Court, however, held that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit because the Will was a transfer and consequently the plaintiff's remedy lay in an application to the Revenue Officer to set it aside, and not in a civil suit. The suit was accordingly dismissed. The lower Appellate Court has, however, upset the decree of the First Court and decreed the claim. Hence this second appeal. The finding that the defendant-appellant is not the next heir is final and binding as between the parties as a finding of fact and no attempt was made to challenge it before me.

The property in suit being admittedly inherited property in the hands of Saraswati Bai, she, as a Hindu widow, had only a restricted power of alienation over it. Her own interest in the holding like the other inherited estate was for her lifetime: cf. Bhura v. Ramrao (1), she could make no disposition of it which would enure beyond her lifetime; much less could she make one which is to come into operation after her death: cf. Mukund v. Larman (2). If this was her position under Hindu Law as I hold it was, she could under that law make no testamentary disposition of her inheritance, by means of a Will and thus defeat the provisions of s. 11 of the new Tenancy Act, 1920, which are to the effect that the occupancy holding shall on the death of the tenant pass by inheritance in accordance with his personal law. To uphold a tenant's right to make a testamentary disposition of his occupancy holding would be to defeat these plain provisions of the Statute which alone can govern question of succession to such holdings. It is argued that s. 11 must be read as if the words "dying intestate" were inserted between the words "tenant" and "shall" in that section. There is absolutely no warrant in law for reading the section in this manner. The intention of enacting the law of tenancy in the Central Provinces has been understood, in all the law Courts for all these years to be to recognize a tenant's right of a restricted character as regards its heritability, transferability, partibility under certain conditions and limitations but it has never been understood to carry with it the incident of devisability by Will at the instance of the tenant. It is property in which the interest carved out is more of a limited or personal character, than of a character conveying unlimited powers of disposition to the incumbent for the time being. The whole trend of the decisions on the question of tenancy has always been one way and I dare say consistent with such intention.

(1) 17 Ind. Cas. 306; 8 N. L. R. 151,

(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 752; 6 N. L. R. 46,

As far back as in 1887 Crosthwaite, J. C., with reference to s. 43 of the old Tenancy Act of 1883, then in force held in Laxmi Bai v. Alyar Khan (3) that an occupancy tenant could not make any disposition of his tenant's right by Will. Had this view been erroneous the Statute which has been changed twice since then would have surely undergone a change in this respect so as to clothe the tenant with a right to make a bequest of his tenant's right? The question had arisen again in 1901 in connection with the powers of an absolute occupancy tenant to make a testamentary disposition of his right in the holding and it was held by Ismay, J. C., in Anandi Bai v. Harlal (4) that a Will by an absolute occupancy tenant was invalid. This case was apparently under the Tenancy Act of 1898. Since then there has been a change and the new Tenancy Act of 1920, has appeared in the Statute book, but we do not find any change which would vest a devisable interest in the tenant of the Central Provinces. This clearly supports the argument that the Legislature thinks that the Statute has all along been rightly interpreted by the Court of the Province in this matter.

Ismay, J. C., has pointed out in Anandi Bai v. Harlal (4) that, the word "transfer" implies the making over of possession or control, an alienation of property or of some interest in property made as between living persons. That a "Will" is not a "transfer" is clear from the above definition of the latter word, as also from that of the term "Will" itself which means a disposition of property which is to come into effect after the testator's death. The distinction between a testamentary disposition and an alienation or transfer is well pointed out in a ruling in Muhammad Sayeed v. Muhammad Ismail (5), where it was held that the word "alienate" in para. 11 of the Third Schedule of the C. P. C., contemplates a transfer which is to take effect immediately and not after death and that it does not, therefore, include a disposition of property by Will. It is thus clear that a bequest is not a "transfer" and, therefore, according to the personal law of the tenant as qualified by the Tenancy Act, it is a disposition beyond the legal competence of a tenant to make.

The decision of Hallifax, A. J. C., in the case of Ramchandra Balkrishna v. Ramchandra Jairam (6) is cited as an authority for the view that an absolute occupancy tenant can make a valid bequest of his right in the holding. I have gone through the decision and I find that although that learned Judge has doubted the correctness of the view taken in Anandi Bai v. Harlal, (4) he has not actually deemed it necessary to give his dissentient decision on that point. Even if he had dissented from the view in Anandi Bai v. Harlal (4), I for my part would not be prepared to endorse his view on this point as it is not at all in consonance with Hindu notions much less with the policy of the law of tenancy so long recognized by the Legislature and the law Courts of these Provinces, and I would respectfully dissent from the same.

I, therefore, hold that the decision of the lower Appellate Court that a "Will" is not a "transfer" is correct. It, therefore, follows that there being no transfer, the Revenue Officer's jurisdiction could not be invoked. Even assuming for the sake of argument that the disposition in question amounted to a transfer, it is, in my opinion, invalid under the Hindu Law which gives no testamentary power to a Hindu widow over property inherited from her husband, and consequently it is a transfer which is otherwise invalid, irrespective of the prohibition contained in the C. P. Tenancy Act. The remarks of Stanyon, A. J. C., in Ganeshdas v. Shankar (7) are very pertinent here: "Where a transfer is invalid, irrespective of the provisions of s. 46 or 70 of the C. P. Tenancy Act of 1898, the enactment is not called into operation: there is nothing upon which it can fasten: there is no otherwise legal transaction for the consideration of the

(3) 2 C. P. L. R. 167.

(4) 15 C. P. L. R. 1.

(5) 8 Ind. Cas. 834; 33 A. 233; 7 A. L. J. 1176.

(6) 65 Ind. Cas. 952; (1923) A. I. R. (N.) 222.

(7) 13 Ind. Cas. 909; 8 N. L. R. 22 at p. 27.

[90 I. O. 1925]

RAMSEKHAR PRASHAD SINGH v. MATHURA LAL.

Revenue Officer. He cannot be required to make terms upon the basis of a nullity. In such a case the intended transferee is not a transferee at all, and if he enters upon possession under colour of the transaction, his entry is a trespass at civil law."

It is thus clear that the Civil Court's jurisdiction to entertain the suit is not ousted by anything contained in ss. 12, 13, 14 or 105 of the new Tenancy Act, and that the same was rightly entertained. The decision appealed against is correct and the appeal, therefore, fails and is dismissed with costs throughout against the appellant.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 171
OF 1922.

May 27, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay and
Mr. Justice Sen.

*Babu RAMSEKHAR PRASHAD
SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—
APPELLANTS*

versus

*MATHURA LAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS
—RESPONDENTS.*

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 132—Mortgage—Money payable by instalments—Entire amount becoming due on default in payment of one instalment, effect of—Option of mortgagee—Waiver—Limitation.

Where a mortgage-bond provides for the payment of the mortgage-money by instalments and there is a condition attached that if default is made in payment of any one of the instalments the mortgagee would be entitled to demand the full amount secured by the bond with interest, the mortgagee has the option to demand the entire amount if there is default in payment of any one of the instalments. It is, however, open to the mortgagee to avail himself of this right or to waive it. He can exercise his option and demand payment of the entire amount on default of any one of the instalments or he can, under the terms of the bond, wait until the last instalment falls due. It is not obligatory for the mortgagee to bring a suit for realization of the entire amount as soon as any one of the instalments falls due. If he waits until the expiry of the time for payment of all the instalments, his claim would not be barred in so far as the instalments which are within the period of limitation from the date of the institution of the suit are concerned. [p. 250, col. 1.]

Mata Tahal v. Bhagwan Singh, 63 Ind. Cas. 477; 19 A. L. J. 406, Rup Narain Bhattacharya v. Gopi Nath Mandol, 11 O. W. N. 903 and Narna v. Ammani Amma, 35 Ind. Cas. 418; 4 L. W. 77; 20 M. L. T. 174; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 125; 31 M. L. J. 865; 39 M. 981, relied on.

Appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Shahabad, dated the 11th November 1921, confirming that of the Munsif, First Court, Arrah, dated the 20th December 1920.

Messrs. Atul Krishna Roy and Shashi Sekhar Prasad Singh, for the Appellants.

Messrs. Parmeshwar Dayal and S. C. Mazumdar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs against the decision of the District Judge of Shahabad, which confirmed the decree of the Munsif and dismissed the plaintiffs' suit.

The suit was on the basis of a kishtbandi mortgage-bond, dated the 16th April 1909, executed by the defendant No. 1 Mathura Lal in favour of the plaintiffs. The principal amount secured was Rs. 291 and the stipulations contained in the bond were that this sum of Rs. 291 was to be paid in 9 annual instalments, the first 7 instalments being of Rs. 33 and the last two of Rs. 30 each. The instalments were to be paid in the month of September each year. There was a condition attached that if default was made in payment of any one of the instalments the mortgagees would be entitled to demand the full amount secured by the bond with interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. The first instalment was payable on the 29th of September 1909. It appears that there was default in the very instalment and the plaintiffs brought the present suit on the 13th January 1920 to enforce the mortgage. In this suit not only the mortgagor the defendant No. 1 but also the other members of his family were made defendants.

The defence of the defendants other than defendant No. 1 was that the debt was not contracted for any legal necessity of the family and, therefore, the mortgage was invalid. As regards the claim for a personal decree against the defendant No. 1 it was pleaded that the suit was barred by limitation and the defendant No. 1 further pleaded payment.

It has been held by both the Courts below that the debt has not been proved to have been contracted for any necessity of the family or for the benefit of the family and that the mortgage was, therefore, invalid. It has further been held that the personal claim against the defendant No. 1 was barred by limitation.

It is contended on behalf of the appellants that the finding of the learned District Judge on the question of limitation was erroneous. His finding on the question of legal necessity for the loan has not been challenged.

As regards the question of limitation, it is contended that the instalments which fell due within six years of the institution of the suit were not barred by limitation. The question as to whether those instalments which fell due within six years of the suit were or were not barred by limitation would depend upon the terms of the bond. The bond provides for payment of a sum of Rs. 291 in 9 annual instalments. The instalments which fell due within six years of the date of the suit, namely, the 13th January 1920, would, therefore, be saved from limitation. But it is contended that the entire amount fell due when there was default in the payment of the first instalment and, therefore, the suit ought to have been brought within six years of the first instalment which fell due on the 29th September 1909. In our opinion this contention is not sound. The contract was for payment of the debt by instalments extending up to the 29th September 1917. It was left to the option of the creditors to demand the entire amount if there was default in payment of any one of the instalments. It was open to the creditors to avail themselves of this right or not to do so. They could exercise their option and demand payment of the entire amount on default of any one of the instalments or they could under the terms of the bond wait until the last instalment fell due. It was not obligatory for the creditors to bring a suit for realization of the entire amount as soon as any one of the instalments fell due. If they waited until the expiry of the time for payment of all the instalments, their claim would not be barred in so far as the instalments within the period of limitation were concerned. This view has been taken in a number of cases: vide, Mata Tahal v Bhagwan Singh (1), where the facts appear to be very much similar to the facts of the present case in Rup Narain Bhattacharya v. Gopi Nath Mandol (2) and Narna v. Ammani Amma (3). In this view of the case it is clear that the claim of the plaintiffs in so far as the instalments from September 1914 to 1917 are concerned was not barred by limitation.

The plaintiffs will, therefore, get a personal decree against the defendant No. 1 for a sum of Rs. 126 being the instalments from September 1914 to September 1917, with interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum from the date of default of each instalment, and proportionate costs of the suit throughout.

Z. K.

Order accordingly.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2762 OF 1923.

January 3, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Campbell.

MEHR DAD AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
APPELLANTS

versus

MOHAMMED ALI SHAH AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 11—Res judicata between co-defendants—Question decided between co-defendants in previous suit after contest.

The parties to a suit were both impleaded as defendants in a former suit and in their pleadings in that suit contended with each other on a question of relationship, the decision of which was involved in the relief given to the plaintiff in that suit:

Held, that the decision in the previous suit on the question of relationship operated as res judicata between the parties to the subsequent suit. [p. 251, col. 1.]

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Gujranwala, dated the 31st August 1923.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—My order dated the 1st of May 1924, should be read as part of this judgment. [Vide 84 Ind. Cas. 927.] The lower Appellate Court has returned a finding that the plaintiffs have succeeded in proving that Ghulam Shah is the common ancestor of themselves and Mohammad Shah by virtue of the testimony of a witness Fateh Shah coupled with the finding in a previous suit decided by Mr. Harrison District Judge, Gujranwala, on the 31st of March 1917.

The learned Counsel for the appellants concedes that if the lower Appellate Court's finding was based solely on the evidence of Fateh Shah, he could not contest it because it is a finding of fact; but he argues that the decision in the previous suit is

(1) 63 Ind. Cas. 477; 19 A. L. J. 406.

(2) 11 C. W. N. 903.

(3) 35 Ind. Cas. 418; 4 L. W. 77; 20 M. L. T. 174; (1916) 2 M. W. N. 125; 31 M. L. J. 865; 39 M. 981.

altogether irrelevant and, therefore, the learned District Judge's finding being based only partly on Fateh Shah's evidence and partly on an inadmissible judgment in a former case is bad.

In the former suit the descendants of Ghulam Hussain and Ghulam Kadir (See the pedigree table in the judgments of the Courts below) sued the present appellants and others for the whole occupancy tenancy of Mohammad Shah. They joined the present plaintiffs as pro forma defendants admitting their rights to hold the tenancy jointly with them but saying that they were unable to join in the suit because they lived in another District. Of these pro forma defendants Nur Shah and Mohammad Ali Shah appeared and pleaded that the claim of the then plaintiffs was correct. The landlord defendants denied the alleged relationship with Mohammad Shah or that common ancestor held the land. The First Court dismissed the suit, but in appeal the District Judge held that the land was held by the grandfather of Mohammad Shah who was also the grandfather of the plaintiffs and gave the latter a decree for half the tenancy. These being the facts I agree with the present learned District Judge that the finding in the previous case is binding on the landlords who were parties to that case. In that suit the relationship between the present plaintiffs and the then plaintiffs was never denied and s. 11 of the C. P. C., in my opinion, is a bar to the question of the relationship of Mohammad Shah with the descendants of Mahbub Shah being tried again, both by operation of Explanation VI (in view of the terms of the plaint in the former suit) and because the two sets of defendants in that suit (the present plaintiff and the contesting defendants) contended with each other in their pleadings on this very point and its decision was involved in the relief given to the plaintiffs.

Thus there is nothing contrary to law in the present learned District Judge's return to the reference which can render his finding open to attack. As a result the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES NOS. 615
AND 677 OF 1922.

February 25, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

IN S. A. No. 615 OF 1922.

Musammât RAMDULARI KUER—DEFENDANT No. 2—APPELLANT

versus

UPENDRANATH BASU—PLAINTIFF,
NARUL HUDA AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

IN S. A. No. 677 OF 1922.

NARUL HUDA—DEFENDANT No. 1—
APPELLANT

versus

UPENDRANATH BASU—PLAINTIFF, Musammât RAMDULARI KUER AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

*Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 52—
Lis pendens—Execution sale—Compromise decree—Compromise brought about by inducement of money—Fraud—Suspicion.*

It is not safe to come to a finding of collusion and fraud on mere suspicion. [p. 253 cols. 1 & 2.]

The doctrine of lis pendens applies to a purchase at an execution sale during the pendency of a suit which terminates in a consent decree and the fact that the compromise was the result of inducement in money makes no difference. [p. 253, col. 2.]

Appeals from a decision of the District Judge, Gaya, dated the 21st February 1922, affirming that of the Subordinate Judge, Gaya, dated the 14th December 1920.

IN S. A. No. 615 OF 1922.

Messrs. S. Sultan Ahmad and N. K. Prasad, II, for the Appellant.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick and Siva Narayan Bose, for the Respondents.

IN S. A. No. 677 OF 1922.

Sir Ali Imam, Messrs. Rai G. S. Prasad, and N. C. Ghose, for the Appellant.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick, and S. N. Bose, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—These appeals arise out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondent for declaration of his title to and recovery of possession of four-annas share in the eight annas purwari takhta of Mouza Garua. Both the Courts below have decreed the suit. Appeal No. 615 is by the defendant No. 2, and Appeal No. 677 by the defendant No. 1.

The facts giving rise to the suit are shortly these:—

Mouza Garua in Mahal Rampur Mafi, Touzi No. 6758, in the district of Gaya is divided into two takhtas of eight-annas each known as the purwari takhta and the pachhiari takhta. Four-annas out of the eight annas pachhiari takhta belonged to the plaintiff and the father of the defendant No. 4. The remaining four-annas was wakf property. Defendant No. 3 Reyaz Ali Khan was the owner of the entire purwari takhta. He, however, sold one anna-share to a third person and he had seven-annas of the purwari takhta left to him. The four-annas share belonging to the plaintiff and to the father of the defendant No. 4 in the pachhiari takhta was held in lease by the defendant No. 3. In 1915 a rent suit was brought by the plaintiff and the father of the defendant No. 4 against the defendant No. 3, and a decree was passed against the defendant No. 3 on the 23rd November 1905. In execution of this decree the defendant No. 3's four-annas share in the purwari takhta was attached on the 5th of June 1907 and it was sold in execution of the 19th September, 1907 and was purchased by the plaintiff and the father of the defendant No. 4. The sale was confirmed on the 26th November 1907 and a sale certificate was granted and delivery of possession was formally given to the auction-purchasers on the 12th June 1908. It is alleged by the plaintiff that he and the father of the defendant No. 4 applied for mutation of their names by right of the purchase in the execution sale, but they discovered that in the Collector's register the name of the original defendant No. 2 Rai Bindeswari Prasad stood recorded by right of purchase under a deed of sale dated the 16th November 1907 executed by the defendant No. 3 in favour of Rai Bindeswari Prasad. The application for registration of name was accordingly withdrawn. The father of the defendant No. 4 sold his interest to the plaintiff on the 15th of October 1908, and the plaintiff as the owner of the entire four-annas share purchased at the auction-sale on the 19th of September 1907 brought the present suit for declaration of his title and for recovery of possession.

The suit was contested by the defendant No. 1 and the defendant No. 2. The original defendant No. 2 Rai Bindeswari Prasad died after filing a written statement and his widow Musammam Ramdulari Kuer was substituted in his place and is now the defendant No. 2. The defendant No. 1 is a purchaser from the defendant No. 2 under a deed of sale dated the 20th Baisakh 1323 (May 1916). Their defence was that the property originally belonged to one Jaikaran Lal who was the maternal grandfather of Rai Bindeswari Prasad. Jaikaran Lal died leaving a widow, Jasoda Kuer, and on her death the property passed to her daughter, Musammam Lochan Kuer, who was the mother of Rai Bindeswari Prasad. Musammam Lochan Kuer sold the property to one Musammam Peyari and she in her turn sold it to the defendant No. 3.

The case of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 was that the sale by Musammam Lochan Kuer was without any legal necessity and all that passed by the conveyance executed by Musammam Lochan Kuer was only her life interest. Musammam Lochan Kuer died on the 5th of May 1906 and, on the 5th of May 1907, Rai Bindeswari Prasad instituted a suit (No. 69 of 1907) against the defendant No. 3 for possession of the property on the allegation that the sale by Lochan Kuer was inoperative after her death. This suit was compromised and a compromise decree was passed in favour of Rai Bindeswari Prasad on the 13th of December 1907. It is contended on behalf of the contesting defendants that the purchase of the plaintiff in execution sale on the 19th September 1907 was during the active prosecution of the suit brought by Rai Bindeswari Prasad which was a contentious suit and that the doctrine of lis pendens applied to the plaintiff's purchase. It was further contended that the sale by Masammam Lochan Kuer was without any legal necessity and was not binding on the reversioner Rai Bindeswari Prasad after the death of Lochan Kuer. It was further alleged that the deed of sale dated the 16th of November 1907 mentioned by the plaintiff in his plaint as having been executed by the defendant No. 3 in favour of Rai Bindeswari was not executed with the knowledge or permission of Rai Bindeswari and, that he did not acquire the property under that deed of sale but under the compromise decree passed on the 13th December 1907.

Both the Courts below have held that the Suit No. 69 of 1907 instituted by Rai Bindeswari was a collusive suit and the compromise decree was also a collusive decree and, that, therefore, the doctrine of lis pendens did not apply to the plaintiff's purchase. They further held that the deed of sale of the 16th of November 1907 was executed with the knowledge and consent of Rai Bindeswari Prasad and that having regard to the fact that the interest of defendant No. 3 had already been sold in the execution of the plaintiff's decree on the 19th September 1907 no interest passed to the defendant No. 2 under that deed of sale.

The important question for decision in the present appeals is as to whether the purchase of the plaintiff at the auction-sale held on the 19th September 1907 is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens. This would depend on a finding as to whether the Suit No. 69 of 1907 brought by Rai Bindeswari Prasad against the defendant No. 3 was a bona fide and contentious suit or whether it was a collusive suit. The learned District Judge as well as the learned Subordinate Judge have held that this suit was a collusive suit. This finding is based on mere suspicion. The dates of the various transactions are set out in the judgment of the learned District Judge and, from the fact that the suit of Rai Bindeswari was brought in May 1907, within a month of the date on which the plaintiff had filed his application for execution, namely, the 11th of April 1907, and that Rai Bindeswari entered into an agreement of sale with defendant No. 3 while his suit was still pending and after attachment of the property in the execution of the plaintiff's decree and, in fact, after the auction-sale thereof, and that on the 16th of November 1907 Rai Bindeswari took a kobala of the same property from the defendant No. 3 while the suit was still pending, and that in December 1907 after the sale in execution in favour of the plaintiff had been confirmed there were consultations between Rai Bindeswari and his Pleaders with reference to his suit and that on 12th December 1907 a petition was filed in Bindeswari's suit that the parties were compromising and on the next day, that is on 13th December 1907 a petition of compromise was filed in the suit wherein the defendant No. 3 stated that Bindeswari's claim was correct and that he was not in a position to refute it by evidence, the learned Judge came to the conclusion that Rai Bindeswari's suit was not bona fide and contentious suit, but was a fraudulent and collusive suit in order to defeat the plaintiff. I am, however, not prepared to agree with the conclusion of the learned Judge. It is not safe to come to a finding of collusion and fraud on mere suspicion. The suit brought by Rai Bindeswari on the face of it appears to be a bona fide suit. It appears that the suit was instituted on the 5th of May 1907; written statement was filed on 24th of June 1907; issues were settled on the 2nd July 1907; documents were filed by the defendant on the 11th July 1907; time was taken by the plaintiff to produce evidence and on the 25th of July 1907 a list of witnesses was filed by the plaintiff Rai Bindeswari. All these took place before the auction-sale in favour of the present plaintiff and there is no reason to assume that the proceedings taken in Rai Bindeswari's suit were not bona fide proceedings in active prosecution of a contentious suit. I agree with the learned Judge that the kobala of the 16th November 1907 must be taken to have been executed with the knowledge and consent of Rai Bindeswari and the defence of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 in the present case that the said kobala was executed at the instance of a servant of Rai Bindeswari without his knowledge and consent cannot be true. But it is quite evident that that kobala was really in settlement of the dispute between Rai Bindeswari and the defendant No. 3. No doubt a sum of money was paid by Rai Bindeswari to the defendant No. 3 as a consideration for the kobala but that would not in any way affect the result of the case. When, however, Rai Bindeswari discovered that before the execution of his kobala on the 16th November 1907 the property had already been sold in execution of a decree in favour of the plaintiff there was a consultation between him and his lawyers and as his suit had not been finally disposed of Rai Bindeswari was advised by his lawyers to file a petition of compromise in the suit and to obtain a compromise decree. To my mind the fact that Rai Bindeswari had taken a kobala before the compromise petition was filed will not affect the rights of the parties and it must be held that the purchase of the plaintiff was during the active prosecution of a contentious suit. That the doctrine of lis pendens will apply to a purchase during the pendency of a suit which terminates in a consent decree is settled by authorities. I may only refer to the case of Tinoodhan Chatterjee v. Trilokya Saran Sanyal (1). This case is also an authority for the proposition that the doctrine applies to a purchase at an execution sale. The fact that payment was made by Rai Bindeswari to the defendant No. 3 in order to obtain the consent decree will not affect the doctrine of lis pendens. This view is supported by the case of Tangor Majhi v. Jaladhar Dowari (2), where in spite of the fact that a sum of Rs. 2,000 was paid by the plaintiff in order to induce the defendant to agree to a compromise decree it was held not to affect the doctrine of lis pendens.

The learned District Judge has observed that the plaintiff in the present suit had established his title as against the defendant No. 3 before any proceedings were instituted by the defendant No. 2. It is difficult to understand what the learned Judge means by this observation. The mere fact of the plaintiff having applied for execution and asked for attachment of the property at the time when the suit of Rai Bindeswari was brought did not establish the title of the plaintiff as against the defendant No. 3. I have already observed that the sequence of dates as set out in the judgment of the District Judge does not lead to the irresistible conclusion that Rai Bindeswari's suit was not a contentious suit. I am, therefore, of opinion that the purchase of the plaintiff is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens and, under s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, his purchase must be subject to the rights of Rai Bindeswari under the compromise decree passed in Suit No. 69 of 1907.

It has been contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the kobala of the 16th of November amounts to an admission on the part of Rai Bindeswari that the sale by Lochan Kuer was a valid sale and binding upon the reversioner and, in this view of the case, it must be held that the defendant No. 3 had a valid title which passed to the plaintiff under the auction-sale. The question as to whether the sale by Lochan Kuer was a sale binding upon the reversioner need not be gone into in the present case. The learned District Judge has refused to consider this question on grounds which do not appear to be sound. The question was distinctly raised in the written statement and in the issues framed in the Trial Court and evidence was adduced on the point. Had it been necessary to consider this question it would have been necessary to make a remand, but in view of the fact that the plaintiff's purchase is affected by the doctrine of lis pendens it is not necessary to decide this question.

In the circumstances the plaintiff is not entitled to the declaration asked for by him and his suit must be dismissed. The decision of the learned District Judge, must be set aside and the suit dismissed with costs throughout, and the appeals allowed. There will be only one hearing-fee in both the appeals.

Mullick, J.—I agree. In my opinion there was no legal evidence to support the finding that the suit brought by Rai Bindeswari Prasad on the 5th May 1907 was fraudulent and collusive. I agree that the plaintiff's purchase was subject to the rule of lis pendens and he acquired no title as against Rai Bindeswari Prasad.

The appeals must, therefore, be decreed.
S. D. Appeals decreed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 2778 OF 1923.

March 5, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Broadway and Mr. Justice Jai Lal.

NUR MAHOMMAD—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

LALCHAND—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Provincial Insolvency Act (III of 1907), s. 6 (4)—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 5—Insolvency, petition for, by creditor—Debtor denying debt—Insolvency Court, power of, to determine existence of debt—Limitation for petition—Extension of time—Act of insolvency, date of—Transfer of property by debtor—Interpretation of Statutes.

The meaning of an Act is not to be interpreted with reference to what its framers intended to do but with reference to the language which they did in fact employ. [p. 255, col. 2.]

Gulam Muhammad v. Panna Ram, 72 Ind. Cas. 433; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 374, followed.

Where a petition for insolvency is presented by a creditor and the debtor denies owing anything to the petitioning creditor, the Insolvency Court has jurisdiction to decide whether or not the debt alleged by the creditor is owing to him. [p. 255, col. 1.]

Mohr Singh v. Laukra Mal, 181 P. R. 1883, distinguished.

Section 5 of the Limitation Act does not apply to a petition for insolvency presented under the provisions of the Provincial Insolvency Act. [p. 255, col. 2.]

(2) 5 Ind. Cas. 621, 14 C. W. N. 322.

Trasi Deva Rao v. Parameshwara, 27 Ind. Cas. 144; 39 M. 74; 29 M. L. J. 451, relied on.

Where the act of insolvency relied on by a petitioning creditor is an alienation of his property effected by the debtor, the date of the act of insolvency must be taken to be the date of the alienation, that is to say, the date of the deed of transfer, and not the date on which mutation is attested. [p. 256, col. 1.]

Second appeal from an order of the District Judge, Multan, dated the 8th August 1922.

Dr. Nand Lal, for the Appellant.

Mr. Nanak Chand, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This appeal has arisen out of certain proceedings instituted by one Lal Chand against one Nur Mohammad under s. 6 of Act III of 1907. The lower Appellate Court found that Nur Mohammad owed more than Rs. 500 and was unable to pay his debts. These being questions of fact are binding on us. It was, however, contended by Dr. Nand Lal for Nur Mohammad that, inasmuch as Nur Mohammad had denied owing any debt whatever to the petitioning creditors, the Insolvency Court had no jurisdiction to go into the question of his indebtedness. It was further urged that the act of insolvency—in this case the transfer in favour of Nur Mohammad's minor son Haji of all Nur Mohammad's property—had occurred more than three months prior to the presentation of the petition and was, therefore, barred by limitation, s. 5 of the Indian Limitation Act being inapplicable so as to extend the time. The question as to the applicability of s. 5 being of importance was referred to a Division Bench by an order made by me on the 20th March 1923. The points referred to were (1) whether when a debtor denies owing anything to the petitioning creditor the Insolvency Courts had jurisdiction to decide whether or not a debt was owing to the petitioning creditor, and (2) whether time could be extended under s. 5 of the Indian Limitation Act.

These points have been argued before us by Dr. Nand Lal on behalf of Nur Mohammad and Mr. Nanak Chand on behalf of the petitioning creditor. Dr. Nand Lal urged on the authority of Mohr Singh v. Laukra Mal (1) that when a debtor denies owing anything to the petitioning creditor the proper order should be to refer the petitioning creditor to the Civil Courts directing him to prove his claim in those Courts. That decision was based on the Punjab Laws Act and is, therefore, distinguishable, the present proceedings being under Act III of 1907. Section 6, sub cl. (1) of Act III of 1907, provides that a creditor shall not be entitled to present an insolvency petition against a debtor, unless (a) the debt owing by the debtor to the creditor amounts to Rs. 500, and (b) the act of insolvency on which the petition is grounded has occurred within three months before the presentation of the petition.

Dr. Nand Lal contended that the words "the debt owing by the debtor" imply that the debtor must admit the debt to be owing and that unless he does so the Insolvency Court has no jurisdiction to decide whether or not the debt is owing. In this view we are unable to agree, as, in our opinion, it is for the Insolvency Court to decide whether a petitioning creditor is owed a sum exceeding Rs. 500.

The second question as to limitation appears to us to be clear. Admittedly s. 5 of the Indian Limitation Act does not apply to application of this nature. In addition to the authorities referred to in the referring order Dr. Nand Lal places reliance on Trasi Deva Rao v. Parameshwara (2). Having regard to what was held in these authorities we hold that s. 5 of the Indian Limitation Act did not apply to petitions made under Act III of 1907. We note that the Legislature has altered the law on the subject and under the new Insolvency Act s. 5 has been specifically declared to be applicable.

Next it was contended by Mr. Nanak Chand that the act of insolvency must be held to have taken place on the 20th August 1919, i. e., on the date when mutation of the transfer was sanctioned. To this proposition Dr. Nand Lal strenuously demurred pointing out that in s. 6 (4) (c) what was laid down was that the Act of Insolvency must "have occurred" within three months before the presentation of the petition. We are in agreement with the view taken by Scott-Smith and Brasher, JJ., in Gulam Muhammad v. Panna Ram (3), and consider that the meaning of an Act is not to be interpreted with reference to what its framers intended to do, but with reference to the language which they did in fact employ. In the present case it is perfectly clear to us that whatever the intention of the Legislature may have been the words employed clearly mean that the act of insolvency must have occurred within three months of the petition. Here, in our judgment, the transfer in favour of the minor son must have taken place not later than the 8th of July 1919. The attestation of the mutation on the 20th of August 1919 is only further evidence of the transfer which had already been effected and we, therefore, are constrained to hold that the petition is bad, having been made more than three months after the act of insolvency had occurred.

(2) 27 Ind. Cas. 144; 39 M. 74; 29 M. L. J. 451.

(3) 72 Ind. Cas. 433; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 374.

(1) 181 P. R. 1883.

We, therefore, accept this appeal and, setting aside the decision of the lower Appellate Court, restore that of the Court, of first instance dismissing the petition. In the circumstances of the case we leave the parties to bear their costs throughout.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND EXECUTION OF DECREE APPEAL

No. 26 OF 1925.

August 17, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

Musammāt MOHAN DEI—JUDGMENT-

DEBTOR—APPELLANT

*versus*BALMUKUND RASTOGI—DECREE-HOLDER
—RESPONDENT.

Landlord and tenant—Hereditary non-transferable lease—Execution of money-decree against lessee—Lease, whether can be sold—Lessee, whether can object.

The condition against alienation in a hereditary non-transferable lease in Oudh is inserted for the benefit of the superior proprietor and it is not competent to the transferor of the interest, in a suit between himself and the transferee, to raise the plea that the transfer is void. Where, however, an attempt is made to sell the interest of the lessee in execution of a money-decree against him, not only the lessee can raise the objection that his interest under the lease is not transferable but he is bound to do so. If he allows the lease to be transferred in execution of a decree he would be liable to the taluqdar. [p. 259, col. 2.]

Case-law discussed.

Appeal against an order of the District Judge, Gonda, dated the 30th March 1925, upholding that of the Subordinate Judge, Gonda, dated the 26th January 1925.

Mr. Aditya Prasad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Ramachandra and H.D. Chandra, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second appeal in execution proceedings. The appellant Musammāt Mohan Dei, is the judgment-debtor. The respondent, Balmukund, is the decree-holder. The appellant's point is that the property, which the decree-holder wishes to sell, is not transferable. In fact, it is one of those hereditary non-transferable leases, which have frequently been before this Court.

I have before me the judgment of the Settlement Officer, dated 16th September 1869, under which the land in suit is still held. The suit was between the ex-zemindar of the village and the taluqdar. The ex-zemindar sued for sub-settlement. This was refused, but, with the consent of the taluqdar, the ex-zemindar received 600 kachcha bighas of land as sir. With that we are not now concerned. But the taluqdar also gave what is called "the right of taking the lease" of certain villages at such jamās as may be determined between the parties. "The sir land is held on a tenure both heritable and transferable. The right to lease is heritable but not transferable." These are the express words of the judgment. But both the Courts below have attached importance to the immediately preceding sentence, in which it was said that the taluqdar cannot possibly pay the Government demand, unless his under-proprietors paid him. They have considered that these words amount to a decision by the Court that the ex-zemindars were under-proprietors. This is a mistake. There is no justification for pressing the expression used, to that extent. All that the Settlement Officer wished to say was that the taluqdar cannot pay the Government demand unless those holding under him pay him. The expression "under-proprietor" is used loosely. It is perfectly clear that the right to lease was not transferable, and that the lease-holders, as such, were not under-proprietors.

The land in suit was held under this lease by one Bhabhuti. The respondent, Balmukund, obtained a decree against Bhabhuti. The judgment and decree are before me. It was a simple money-decree. He proceeded to attach these leases with a view to selling them. Bhabhuti objected in an application dated 28th November 1922. Among other pleas, he raised one that the property in question was held under a perpetual lease, and could not be sold in execution of a decree. This application was dismissed for default on 6th January 1923. This decision may be res judicata against the present appellant, Musammât Mohan Dei, who is the widow of Bhabhuti, but Counsel for the respondent has not supported the decree on this ground, so I do not propose to take up that point.

The proceedings dragged on, and in October 1924, Bhabhuti died. On the 14th November 1924, his widow Musammât Mohan Dei, made the application, against the dismissal of which she now appeals. She set up a case that the lease being hereditary but non-transferable, was, in effect, a series of life-estates, and that she was applying, not as the representative of her husband, but as the next holder of a life-estate in the lease. The learned Subordinate Judge considered that the question of res judicata turned on whether the lease was transferable or not. He thought that if the lease was not transferable, her contention would be sound, because her husband would have only a life-estate in the lease. On the other hand, if the lease was transferable, there would be a res judicata against her, but she would also fail on the merits. He passed, therefore, to the main contention, and there he decided that the lease could be sold in execution of the decree. He relied upon Rampher Singh v. Ram Khelawan Singh (1), Wazir Mohammad v. Har Prasad (2), Golak Nath v. Mathura Nath (3) and Jogeshar Misra v. Nath Koeri (4).

On appeal, the learned District Judge said that the question had to be determined on the interpretation of the settlement decree. He mentioned the use of the word "under-proprietor", which, as I have already shown, is of no importance. He pointed out correctly that the condition against alienation is inserted for the benefit of the superior proprietor, and that it is not competent to the transferor of the interest, in a suit between himself and the transferee, to raise the plea that the transfer is void. He concluded by dismissing the appeal, adding that he had considerable hesitation in arriving at this conclusion.

Musammât Mohan Dei comes here on second appeal. Her point is that the lease is not saleable in execution of a money-decree. Along with this another point has to be decided, and that is, whether such an objection lies in her mouth, or can be taken only by the superior proprietor. I propose to review all the cases which have any bearing on the point, but I may say at once that the matter is really concluded in appellant's favour by two decisions of this Court, which related to the same lease, namely, Nand Ram v. Amanat Fatima Begam (5) and Mohammad Abdul Karim Khan v. Niwaz Singh (6) which will be dealt with in their proper order.

The first case to be considered is Kanhaiya Bakhsh v. Raja Mehdi Ali Khan (7). In this case, certain persons had sued the taluqdar for a sub-settlement. On 23rd April 1870, the Settlement Courts dismissed their claim, but passed a decree in their favour conferring on them a heritable non-transferable lease of the village at a yearly rent of Rs. 600. These lessees executed a deed in favour of the plaintiffs. It is not necessary to set forth the exact terms of this deed, but the suit was brought by the plaintiffs on the basis of this deed against the taluqdar, who had obtained possession of the land. It was held, that if the transaction had been a sub-lease or a usufructuary mortgage, it would be valid and not prohibited by the decree of the Settlement Court, because it would not be a complete transfer by the lessees of their rights. But seeing that this transaction was neither, but was transfer which might result in the complete transfer of all the rights possessed by the lessees, it was prohibited by the Settlement Court decree and was invalid. Consequently, the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. This case is authority for saying that the condition that the lease shall not be transferred is enforceable, at least between the transferee and the taluqdar.

The next case is Rameshwar Bakhsh Singh v. Radhay Panday (8). In this case, certain occupancy tenants executed a usufructuary mortgage in favour of the plaintiff and put him in possession. Then they relinquished the right of occupancy in favour of the superior proprietor, who dispossessed the plaintiff-mortgagee. The plaintiff-mortgagee brought a suit for possession. It was held, that the usufructuary mortgage was not valid, because it might result in a complete transfer of the occupancy right.

(1) 2 O. C. 252.

(2) 13 Ind. Cas. 613; 15 O. C. 67.

(3) 20 O. 273; 10 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 185.

(4) 65 Ind. Cas. 335; (1922) Pat. 49; 3 P. L. T. 205; 4 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 9; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 19 & 114; 1 Pat. 317.

(5) 6 O. C. 94.

(6) 3 Ind. Cas. 868; 12 O. C. 267.

(7) 2 O. C. 12.

(8) 2 O. C. 204.

The obiter dictum in Kanhaiya Bakhsh v. Raja Mehdi Ali Khan (7) that a usufructuary mortgage was not prohibited by the Settlement Court decree in that case, was dissented from, on the ground that usufructuary mortgage may, by operation of law, become a complete transfer of the right of the mortgagor. That is, of course, a point with which we are not now concerned [Kanhaiya Bakhsh v. Raja Mehdi Ali Khan (7)] was not overruled. This case decided that a usufructuary mortgage by an occupancy tenant is not valid.

The next case is one of those relied on by the learned Subordinate Judge, Rampher Singh v. Ram Khelawan Singh (1). Certain representatives of the zemindari body of a village brought a suit against the talukdar. A compromise was arrived at between the parties, by which the members of the zemindari body were to pay to the talukdar the Government revenue and a certain portion of the profits, and to have a heritable but not a transferable right in the village. Nineteen years later, one of them sold a fractional share in the village, and the purchaser obtained possession. The son of the vendor brought the suit for possession of the fractional share sold, and, among other pleas, he alleged that the tenure which his father held was not transferable, and that, therefore, he was entitled to have the transfer set aside, and to recover possession of the share sold by his father. The Courts below found that the restriction on the right of transfer in the decree of the Settlement Court was imposed entirely for the benefit of the talukdar. It was not intended for the benefit of the decree-holders or their descendants. They found that repeated transfers had been made in past years, that the talukdar had acquiesced in these transfers, and that it was not open to the plaintiff, a member of the zemindari body, to question the transfer. These decisions were upheld on second appeal. It was held that the restriction of alienation was intended for the benefit of the talukdar, and his heirs as an obligation on the subordinate holders and their heirs. There was no intention to create an estate in tail for the benefit of the subordinate holders' heirs. The points decided in this case are more clearly brought out in later decisions, but I may note the bearing of the decision on the learned Subordinate Judge's view that the res judicata and the liability to sell in execution of a decree, are bound up together. The true doctrine is, that such a lease as this is, is not liable to sale in execution of a money-decree. but, nevertheless that it is not a succession of life-estates, and that each hereditary owner fully represents the estate. I may say further that this case is no authority for saying that this lease can be sold in execution of a money decree. It merely decides (1) that if a lessee makes a transfer in breach of the condition, he is estopped from taking the plea in a suit between transferor and transferee, and (2) that the consent of the talukdar will validate the transfer.

Next comes Kesho Singh v. Chaudhri Mohammad Azim (9). In this case there was a decree of the Financial Commissioner of Oudh, dated 27th April 1869, under which the appellant obtained, by consent of the talukdar, a decree for a permanent hereditary farming lease. The point for decision was whether the appellant was liable to pay interest on arrears of rent, and that question again turned on the question whether he was, or was not, an under-proprietor. It was held, that his estate was hereditary under the decree, and that it must also be held to be transferable under s. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act, because all property is transferable unless otherwise provided. The estate, being hereditary and transferable, satisfied the definition of an under-proprietor. This case must be considered to have been overruled by the next case, which is the most important one for our present purpose.

Nand Ram v. Amanat Fatima Begam (5). In this case the first defendant obtained a money-decree against the second and third defendants, and, in execution of this decree, he attached and proclaimed for sale one of these hereditary leases. The plaintiff was the talukdar, and she objected, but her objection was thrown out, and a sale took place, at which the first defendant himself purchased the property. The plaintiff then brought a suit for a declaration that the rights of the second and third defendants in the village were not liable to sale, and for a decree for cancellation of the sale. All three Courts decreed plaintiff's claim. This case is directly in point. It is authority for the proposition that leases of this kind cannot be sold in execution of money-decrees. Yet, the case was not so strong as the case now before me, for the decree was for a perpetual hereditary farming lease. There was not, as there is in the case before me, the express word "non-transferable" in the judgment of the Settlement Court. Yet, it was held that the lease was not transferable. Kesho Singh v. Chaudhri Mohammad Azim (9) was overruled on the ground that in the proceedings before the Financial Commissioner, the defendants had claimed decrees for sub-settlement on the ground that they were under-proprietors, but that they had failed. It was decided, therefore, that their successors, the defendants, in the case before the Court, were not under-proprietors but something less. It was said, that if they did not obtain an under-proprietary right, they must have acquired some sort of tenancy right, and it was decided that the right was that of a tenant holding under a decree of a Court, such as is referred to in s. 41 of the Rent Act of 1868 and s. 52 of the Rent Act of 1886. (Section 52 was re-cast when the Rent Act was amended in 1921 but the law not changed in any way). It was then considered whether such a tenant has a transferable right. It was said:—

"It may safely be assumed that prior to the introduction of British rule into Oudh no mere tenant could have transferred his right to another and compelled his landlord to recognize the transferee as his tenant. Indeed a prolonged inquiry into the supposed existence of 'occupancy right' in Oudh left it at least doubtful whether the status of any tenant in Oudh was higher than that of a tenant-at-will. The right of such a tenant to transfer his interest would have been of no practical value. In this state of things, it was only natural that the rights of tenants of all kinds should, in the Settlement Courts, have been regarded as not transferable.

"The first Rent Act for Oudh probably helped to maintain this view, for 'under-proprietor,' was defined as meaning any person possessing a heritable and transferable right of property in land for which he is liable to pay rent, and 'tenant' was defined as meaning 'any person not being an under-proprietor who is liable to pay rent.' These definitions appear also in the Act of 1886. I have seen the records of a great many cases in the Settlement Courts in which the taluqdar, while not willing to concede under-proprietary rights to a claimant, consented to the passing of a decree for a 'farming,' 'hereditary' or 'permanent' lease at a rate almost, if not quite as favourable as the claimant would have obtained under a decree for sub-settlement. It was evidently understood by the Courts, the taluqdars and claimants against taluqdars, that a decree for a lease, however, permanent and at whatever rate, conferred upon the claimant a right inferior to that of an under-proprietor, and I have no doubt that the reason was that the rights of such lessee were regarded as not transferable, while under-proprietary rights were, of course, transferable. If we hold that the rights of tenants holding under a decree of Court are transferable, we shall create a large number of new under-proprietary rights in Oudh.

"In my opinion, unless the contrary is shown expressly or by implication, tenants holding under decrees of Courts cannot transfer their rights. They are the persons referred to in s. 40 of the Land Revenue Act of 1876 as holders of heritable non-transferable leases whose rent has not been fixed by contract.

"Holders of leases under decrees of Courts who can transfer their rights must be held to be under-proprietors. To hold in the present case that Badulla, the ancestor of defendants Nos. 2 and 3, obtained a transferable right in the village would be equivalent to holding that he was an under-proprietor, although the Financial Commissioner expressly held that he had failed to prove under-proprietary rights.

"For these reasons, I would hold that the second and third defendants have not transferable rights in the village and I would dismiss this appeal with costs."

There is only one possible distinction that can be drawn between that case and the case which I have to decide. It is, that in that case, the taluqdar was the plaintiff, while in the case before me, the objection is taken by the lessee. I do not think that this distinction holds good. If the lease is not transferable, because the lessee is under an obligation to the taluqdar not to transfer it, then not only can the taluqdar enforce the condition against the transferee, as in Nand Ram v. Amanat Fatima Begam (5), but the lessee himself can raise the same objection against the holder of a money-decree. In fact, he is bound to do so. If he allowed the lease to be transferred in execution of a decree, he would be liable to the taluqdar. Possibly, in English Law, it would be different, but English Law has no application to these leases. The case we have just considered is some authority for saying so, but it is more plainly laid down in the next case.

Jang Bahadur v. Rae Raja (10). This was a case of a mortgage. As in the present case, there had been a claim for sub-settlement which was rejected, and there had been a consent decree for possession at the rent which they were paying. Their status was not defined in the decree, but it had been held in a previous litigation to be a heritable and non-transferable right. They mortgaged some of this land, and then relinquished their holding to the landlord. The mortgagee would not give up possession, and the landlord had to sue to eject him. An argument was advanced, which had found favour with the Allahabad High Court, that a man must not be allowed to derogate from his own grant, and that a tenant who has granted a mortgage, cannot relinquish his holding so as to defeat the rights of the mortgagee. But this argument was rejected. It was said, that it was not just that the taluqdar should be compelled to recognise the transfer of a non-transferable right, and that if the mortgagee chose to advance money on a bad title that was his own affair. An argument was advanced, based upon English Law, that every lease is transferable, and that even if there is a clause in the lease against assignment, it will not entitle the landlord to eject the sub-lessee, unless there is a special clause in the original lease providing re-entry as a penalty in case of assignment. This argument was rejected. It was said:

"The Settlement Courts in Oudh in 1867 were presided over by men of good common-sense, but they were not trained lawyers, and the province was not in those days over-run with members of the legal profession, to insist upon stipulations, based on niceties of English Law, being put into decrees. I have no doubt that at the time this decree was given, it was the intention of every one concerned that, if the tenants transferred their holdings, out they should go."

The importance of this decision is, that it lays down that English Law is not applicable to these leases, and, therefore, the Calcutta and Patna cases, on which the learned Subordinate Judge relies, have no bearing on the present case.

The next case is Mohammad Abdul Karim Khan v. Niwaz Singh (6). This case dealt with the same rights which were the subject of the litigation reported as Nand Ram v. Amanat Fatima Begam (5). It had been held then that these rights were not transferable, and, therefore, not saleable in execution of that decree. The taluqdar afterwards obtained three decrees for arrears of rent, and he asked to have the same right brought to sale. The sole contention taken in second appeal was that the question of non-transferability of the tenure could not be raised against the appellant for whose benefit alone the tenure is made non-transferable. Rampher Singh v. Ram Khelawan Singh (1) was cited in favour of the appellant, and also Binda Prasad v. Rajendra Prasad (11) in which it had been held that a sale of an occupancy tenure by a tenant to his landlord is valid, such a sale being nothing more than a relinquishment of the holding for consideration. But this argument did not find favour with the Court. It was said that the object of the taluqdar, appellant, was to get rid of the law of ejectment laid down in s. 52 of the Rent Act, and that the rights, not being transferable, could not be sold in execution of a decree, even if the taluqdar wished to sell them. This is a strong case. Even the taluqdar could not bring these rights to sale in satisfaction of a decree for arrears of rent, much less can the present respondent do so. And this does away with any such distinction as there might be between the present case and Nand Ram v. Amanat Fatima Begam (5).

The next case is Hirday Behari v. Prag Tiwari (12). In this case, the appellant, who held certain of these leases, mortgaged them with possession to the defendant, and then brought a suit for possession on the ground that his own mortgage was illegal. It was held that he was estopped from taking this plea. A distinction was drawn between a prohibition against alienation contained in a Statute, and a similar prohibition contained in a contract. It was held that a prohibition contained in a decree was of the contract class. It was held, therefore, that the mortgage,

(11) 10 O. C. 235.

(12) 11 Ind. Cas. 527; 14 O. C. 144.

(10) 7 O. C. 265.

in breach of the conditions of the Settlement Court decree, was not a transfer for an illegal purpose, within the meaning of s. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act, or for an unlawful object or consideration within the meaning of s. 23 of the Contract Act. It was merely in breach of the conditions imposed by the decree of the Settlement Court, and on the same footing as a transfer, contrary to the terms of a contract or deed. The plaintiff, therefore, was held bound by his own act, and estopped from pleading that he had no power of transfer. This decision does not show that these leases can be sold in execution of a money decree, though it might show that they could be sold in execution of a mortgage decree.

Lastly, there is the case of Wazir Mohammad v. Har Prasad (2). In this case one Bala Prasad obtained a consent decree in the Settlement Court on the 28th April 1879. It conferred a heritable but non-transferable right in the land, which was to be held rent free. Bala Prasad died in 1909, and the land came into the possession of his son-in-law, Harhar Prasad. The plaintiff was the talukdar, and had sued for the ejectment of Harhar Prasad, on the ground that the heirs of Bala Prasad were his daughters, and as they had failed to take possession of the property, the land must be taken to have been abandoned, and to have escheated to the talukdar. The defence was that the defendant was in rightful occupation. The first point was, that Bala Prasad had a right to transfer the property; and had transferred to his daughter, the wife of Harhar Prasad, and, that this transfer had been attested by the plaintiff's father, who had thus consented to it. Harhar Prasad, defendant, also set up a just tertii, by pleading that as Bala Prasad had admittedly left heirs, the plaintiff had no right to get possession. The case came before a single Judge, who referred it to a Bench, saying that the reference will provide an opportunity for finally determining the question of the interpretation of these settlement decrees under which so much land is held in this Province. The Bench proceeded to discuss this general question, and, in particular, whether the declaration in the decree, that the right conferred is non-transferable, is absolute so as to render any transfer made by the decree-holder absolutely void, or whether it is only qualified, amounting merely to a restriction upon such alienations as are made without the consent of the superior proprietor, with the result that a transfer made with such consent is good in law. It was held, as had already been held in Hirday Behari v. Prag Tiwari (12), that s. 6 (h) and (i) of the Transfer of Property Act had no application. Clause (i) refers to interests created by Statute, and not to interests created by a decree. The question was then discussed of the force to be attributed to the condition against alienation. A distinction was drawn, as in the previous case, between a statutory prohibition and one founded on contract or decree. It was laid down that an alienation which violated a statutory prohibition would be totally void, and that it would be open to the grantor to take the plea that his own grant was illegal, but that a prohibition contained in a contract or decree merely regulates the relation of the parties. The party for whose benefit the condition is inserted may waive the condition, and in that case the transfer will be valid. It is not open to the transferor in a suit between himself and the transferee to raise a plea that the transfer is void. This decision will not help the respondent. The talukdar has not waived the condition. There has been no transfer to which he could consent. There is only a money decree, and an attempt to execute it by sale of the property, contrary to the decisions of this Court in Nand Ram v. Amanat Fatima Begam (5) and Mohammad Abdul Karim Khan v. Niwaz Singh (6).

The law is, therefore, quite clear, and it is a special law relating to a special tenure granted by the Settlement Courts of Oudh. Decisions of other High Courts will not help us. The learned District Judge laid down two entirely correct propositions of law, namely, that the condition against alienation is inserted for the benefit of the superior proprietor and that it is not competent to the transferor of the interest, in a suit between himself and the transferee, to raise the plea that the transfer is void. But this is not a suit between a transferor and a transferee. The condition may be for the benefit of the superior proprietor, but it is the right, and indeed the duty, of the lessee to enforce it against an attempt to sell the property under a decree.

For these reasons, I allow the appeal and set aside the orders of the Courts below. I allow Musammam Mohan Dei's objection. I declare that the property in question Cannot be sold in execution of this decree. Musammatt Mohan Dei will get her costs in all three Courts.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 60 OF 1925.

May 21, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Adami and
Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

BAIJULAL MARWARI AND ANOTHER—
PETITIONERS

versus

THAKUR PRASAD MARWARI AND OTHERS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation (III of 1872), s. 5—Area declared under settlement—Officer appointed under sub-s. (2) of s. 5—Execution proceedings, pending, disposal of—Procedure.

An execution proceeding is merely a continuation of the suit and proceedings in execution are proceedings in the suit. Therefore, an application in a pending execution proceeding is a "suit" within the meaning of s. 5 of the Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation III of 1872. [p. 263, col. 1.]

Where an officer has been appointed under sub-s. (2) of s. 5 of the Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation III of 1872, an Execution Court must transfer a pending execution proceeding to the officer so appointed and ought not to dismiss the proceeding on the ground of want of jurisdiction. [p. 263, col. 2.]

Appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Godda, dated the 11th December 1924.

Messrs. S. M. Mullick and L. K. Jha, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Juggernath Prasad, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—This is an application against an order of the Subordinate Judge, Godda, dismissing the petitioners' application under O. XXI, r. 100 of the C. P. C. The facts stated in the petition are shortly these:—

The petitioner brought a money suit against one Gurudeyal Baram and obtained a decree, and in execution thereof purchased 5 annas 6 pies share in two properties belonging to the judgment-debtor, namely, in Ghat Lachmipur bearing Touzi No. 494 and in Ghat Fauzdar bearing Touzi No. 485. The petitioner's purchase is dated the 9th July 1918, the property having been attached on the 26th March 1917. The opposite party Nos. 1 to 4 had also obtained a money decree against Gurudeyal Baram and they also applied for execution of their decree and in execution thereof they purchased the remaining 10 annas 6 pies share in each of the two ghats. The petitioner got delivery of possession of the share purchased by him on the 16th November 1919. In the meantime it appears that the opposite party Nos. 1 to 4 had taken an assignment of an 8-annas share in a certain mortgage-bond executed by Gurudeyal Baram in favour of the opposite party Nos. 5 to 7. A mortgage suit was brought on the basis of that mortgage-bond to which the petitioners were not parties. It is to be remembered that the attachment in execution of the decree of the petitioners had taken place on the 26th March 1917 and the mortgage suit was brought on the 1st December 1918. It was, therefore, necessary under O. XXXIV, r. 1 of the C. P. C., to make the petitioners parties to the mortgage suit inasmuch as under s. 91, cl. (f) of the Transfer of Property Act they had a right to redeem. A mortgage-decree was obtained on the 18th December 1918, and in execution of the mortgage-decree, the opposite party No. 1 to 4 purchased the whole of the two ghats mentioned above on the 28th May 1923. They obtained a sale certificate and applied for delivery of possession and possession was delivered to them in respect of ghat Lachmipur on the 21st December 1923 and in respect of Ghat Fauzdar on the 23rd December 1923. As a result thereof the petitioners say that they were dispossessed of the shares purchased by them. They accordingly made an application under O. XXI, r. 100 on the 19th January 1924. After various adjournments, this application came on for hearing before the Subordinate Judge on the 11th December 1924. On that date an application was made on behalf of the petitioners for time. This application was refused. The learned Subordinate Judge then rejected the application under O. XXI, r. 100 on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the application on account of the provisions of s. 5 of the Regulation III of 1872.

It appears that under a Government Notification dated the 27th October 1923, the area within which the property in dispute is comprised was declared to be under settlement from the 1st of November 1923, and the learned Subordinate Judge held that under the provisions of s. 5 of the Regulation he had no jurisdiction to entertain the present application under O. XXI, r. 100, C. P. C. He accordingly rejected that application. Against this order, the petitioners have come up in revision to this Court; and it is contended that the Subordinate Judge was wrong in holding that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the application, and further he was wrong in rejecting the application without giving the petitioners an opportunity to substantiate their case. In my opinion the contention of the petitioners is sound and ought to prevail.

As regards the first point, namely, the application for time it is clear that because the petitioners' application for time was rejected, the learned Subordinate Judge was not right in rejecting their application under O. XXI, r. 100 without calling upon them to adduce evidence to substantiate their case. As regards the question of jurisdiction, the learned Subordinate Judge, relies on the provisions of s. 5 of the Regulation III of 1872. Now this section provides that, "from the date on which the Lieutenant-Governor declares under s. 9 by a notification in the Calcutta Gazette, that a settlement shall be made of the whole or any part of the Sonthal Parganas until the date on which such settlement is declared by a like notification to have been completed, no suit shall lie in any Civil Court established under the Bengal, Agra and Assam Civil Courts Act, 1887, in regard to any land or any interest in, or arising out of land in the area covered by such notification; nor shall any Civil Court proceed with the hearing of any such suit which may be pending before it."

It has been contended that an application in a pending execution proceeding is not a suit within the meaning of s. 5. This contention does not appear to be sound, because execution is merely a continuation of the suit and proceedings in execution are proceedings in the suit. The question, however, is whether the application of the petitioners ought to have been rejected on the ground that a notification as contemplated by the section had been issued by the Government. Sub section (2) of s. 5 provides that "between the dates referred to in sub-s (1), all suits of the nature therein described shall be filed before or transferred to an officer appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor under s. 2 of the Sonthal Parganas Act, 1855 or s. 10 of the Regulation III of 1872."

In the present case if an officer had been appointed under sub-s. (2) of s. 5, then the Subordinate Judge ought to have transferred the application to that officer. It was a pending execution proceeding at the time when the notification was issued, and under sub-s. (2) the Court could only transfer such applications to the officer appointed under sub-s. (2) of s. 5, and it ought not to have rejected the application on the ground of want of jurisdiction.

The order of the learned Subordinate Judge will, therefore, be set aside and he will proceed according to the provisions of sub-s. (2) of s. 5 of the Regulation III of 1872.

There will be no order for costs.

Adami, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Order set aside.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 472 OF 1922.

February 8, 1924.

Present :—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

BEHARILAL—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

GORELAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—
RESPONDENTS.

Practice—Pleadings and proof—Both parties failing to prove case set up—Procedure.

Where A comes into Court with an allegation that certain property is exclusively his by reason of its allotment to his share at a partition effected between him and his other co-parcener B, and that it is not, therefore, liable to attachment and sale in execution of a money-decree obtained by a creditor against B, but fails to prove the allotment, and the attaching creditor who similarly contended that the said item of joint property had become the exclusive property of his judgment-debtor by virtue of its allotment to his share, also fails to prove the alleged allotment, and the Court finds that the property is the joint property of the family, it is open to the Court to grant to the plaintiff such relief as flows from the finding and if the Court adopts this procedure it cannot be successfully impeached in second appeal. [p. 264, col. 1.]

Lola v. Pyare, 33 Ind. Cas. 497; 12 N. L. R. 57 at p. 60, followed.

In such a case the plaintiff may be given a decree that the attachment and sale would not affect his undivided interest in the property in dispute. [p. 264, col. 2.]

Second appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Hoshangabad, in Civil Appeal No. 30 of 1922, dated the 11th August 1922

Mr. J. Sen, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. B. Gokhale, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This second appeal raises a novel point of law. Where A comes into Court with an allegation that certain property was exclusively his by reason of its allotment to his share at a partition effected between him and his other co-parcener B, and that it was not, therefore, liable to attachment and sale in execution of a money-decree obtained by a creditor against his debtor B, but fails to prove the allotment and the attaching creditor who similarly contended that the said item of joint property had become the exclusive property of his judgment-debtor by virtue of its allotment to his share, also fails to prove the alleged allotment and the Court finds that the property was the joint property of the family, is it open to the Court to grant to the plaintiff any lesser relief on the footing of the findings arrived at by it as regards the actual state of facts? I find that this question has been discussed by this Court in Loola v. Pyare (1). The following quotation will show that plaintiff could be given such relief as flows from the findings and if the Court does it, it cannot be successfully impeached in second appeal:—

“The tendency now is not to dismiss suits on purely technical grounds. In the present suit the facts admitted and found fell between, as it were, the cases of both parties. The plaintiff claimed possession of the land as an ordinary tenant thereof against the defendant as the trespasser. The defendant admitted the tenure of the plaintiff but set up a perpetual sub-tenure under a contract with the plaintiff. The Court of Appeal below found that the defendant is neither a trespasser nor a perpetual sub-lessee but a licensee, and has given the plaintiff what it held to be the relief to which he is legally entitled on that finding. This procedure cannot successfully be impeached in second appeal. Whether the Court was justified in giving the relief it did, without further trial, is a separate question to be decided hereafter. For the present it is enough to say that the lower Appellate Court was entitled to apply the law to the facts actually proved by the evidence, even though they showed the allegations of both parties to be untrue, incorrect or incapable of proof and judicial recognition.”

(1) 33 Ind. Cas. 497; 12 N. L. R. 57 at p. 60.

It is contended by the plaintiff-appellant before me that the lower Appellate Court ought to have under the prayer for general relief given him a decree declaring that the attachment and sale does not affect his undivided half interest in the plaint property, or in other words, it should have been held that the auction-purchaser's title related, only, to the right, title and interest of his judgment-debtor in, and not to the whole of, the premises attached and sold. It is contended on behalf of the respondents that the decision of this question depended upon the nature of the debt for which the decree was passed and that as it was the plaintiff's duty to set up an alternative case from the beginning so as to give them a full opportunity for contesting it, and whereas he has not done so he cannot blame the lower Appellate Court for not granting him that relief. On the other hand the appellant contends that it was for the creditor or for the matter of that for the auction-purchaser to plead and prove facts which would support the attachment and sale of the larger interest of the family, rather than of the individual co-parcener sued by him, in the property sought to be proceeded against. The question is not quite free from difficulty.

The present is a suit by an unsuccessful claimant to set aside the summary decision of the Executing Court, under O. XXI, r. 63, C. P. C., and it is arguable that it was for the plaintiff to take his stand on an alternative case from the very outset, if he wanted to make that a ground of attack on the auction-purchaser's title, relying on the fact that a decree was obtained against a minor son of the debtor Ramprasad or more correctly against the assets of Ramprasad in his hands. The plaintiff, on the other hand, contends that he was entitled to presume that the creditor did not intend to proceed against the other members of the family so as to make them also liable for the debt incurred by Ramprasad on the ground that it was a family debt and as such bound the other members and that the decree was, therefore, one in respect of a personal debt of Ramprasad for which only his interest would be liable to be sold in execution. It is further contended that if the defendants-respondents thought that Ramprasad acted in the matter of borrowing the debt in question as manager, or after borrowing the debt utilized it for proper and necessary purposes of the family, or that the family has derived benefit from the borrowing, it was their duty to set up such a case, because even assuming that Ramprasad was the manager, there is no presumption that a debt contracted by a manager is one for the benefit of the family: vide Ganpat Rai v. Munni Lal (2).

I am also referred by the plaintiff-appellant to the following elaborate exposition of the law bearing on this point, by Mr. Mayne in his learned treatise on Hindu Law and Usage, para. 350, 9th Edition:—

"One point as to which there seems at first to be a conflict of decisions, is as to the amount of proof incumbent upon a purchaser under a decree, or upon one who lends money to the manager of an estate to pay off a decree, or who purchases a part of an estate from the manager to supply him with funds for that purpose. Is the production of a bona fide decree sufficient of itself to establish a case of necessity, or is it incumbent upon the purchaser or creditor to go further, and to show that the decree was passed for a purpose which would bind the estate? The result of the decisions appears to be, that the party who relies on the decree is entitled to assume that it was properly passed, and that everything done under it was properly done. But the extent to which this will benefit him depends upon the nature of the decree, and the person against whom it was given, and upon the form of the proceedings taken in execution of the decree. It is evident that a decree may be one which upon its face, and by the mere fact that it was passed, binds the person against whom it is enforced. Or it may be one which will not bind him unless something was proved in the course of the case, and that something may or may not have been proved. Again, the form of the decree, and of the proceedings taken under it, may show that the creditor, while only suing his debtor by name, sued him as the representative of the family, in order to bind its property. Or, conversely, it may appear that, although the creditor had a remedy, which he might have enforced, against the whole family and its property, he chose to restrict his claim to his original debtor and the interests of that debtor: Radha Krishna Chanderjee v. Ram Bahadur (3)..... It would be otherwise where the decree was given against a simple co-parcener. It would be a perfectly valid decree against him, and might during his life be enforced by execution and sale of his interest in the property. But as his debt would not bind his co-parceners or their share in the property, unless it was contracted by their consent or for their benefit, so a decree against him can create no higher liability. It ascertains his debt, but does no more. If it is intended to procure payment of the debt, directly or indirectly, out of the shares of the other members, the creditor must show that the debts themselves were such as to be properly binding upon those who have not personally incurred them. This proof must be given in a suit to which the joint members of the family are parties, and in which they can resist the allegations made against them. If the managing member of the family executes a document which would bind the other members, the proper course is to sue them all. If the creditor chooses, he may sue only the person who executed the document to enforce his liability as executant. But if he adopts this course his execution will only take effect upon the share of the execution debtor. He cannot enforce it against the other members (not being the sons of the debtor) merely by proving that the transaction was entered into for the benefit of the family. This only shows that he had a larger remedy, of which he did not avail himself: Deendyal Lal v. Jugdeep Narain Singh (4), Armugam Pillai v. Sabapathy Padiachi (5), Subramaniyayan v. Subramaniyayan (6), Dorasami Vayappayya v. Atiratra Dikshatar (7), Viraragamma v. Samudrala (8), Gururappa v. Thimma (9), Abilak Roy v. Rubbi Roy (10),

(3) 43 Ind. Cas. 268; 34 M. L. J. 97; 16 A. L. J. 33; 23 M. L. T. 26; 4 P. L. W. 9; 7 L. W. 149; 22 C. W. N. 330; 27 C. L. J. 191; (1918) M. W. N. 163; 20 Bom. L. R. 502 (P. C.).

(4) 4 I. A. 247; 3 C. 198; 1 C. L. R. 49; 3 Sar. P. O. J. 730; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 468; 1 Ind. Jur. 604; 1 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 715 (P. C.).

(5) 5 M. 12; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 9.

(6) 5 M. 125; 6 Ind. Jur. 297; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 87.

(7) 7 M. 136; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 680.

(8) 8 M. 208; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 144.

(9) 10 M. 316; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 973.

(10) 11 O. 993; 9 Ind. Jur. 425; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 955.

Maruti Narayan v. Lilachand (11), Kisan-sing Jivansing Pardesi v. Moreshwar Vishnu Joshi (12) and Doolar Chand Sahoo v. Lall Chabeel Chand (13).

Finally, there is a class of cases in which it has been held that a suit against one member of the family must be taken as a proceeding against the family represented by him, so that the decree binds them, and may be enforced by execution against the shares of all: Hari Saran Moitra v. Bhubaneswari Debi (14) and Sheo Shankar Ram v. Jaddo Kunwar (15)."

It will thus be seen that the question as to which of the two parties to this suit ought to have set up the alternative case appears to me to depend upon the circumstances of each case and the view one takes of them.

As both the parties seem to me to have laboured under an erroneous impression as to which of them ought to have set up the alternative case and as I think that this relief cannot be granted by me in the present state of the record and that further trial of several important questions of law and fact, is necessary, I must, as justice demands it, grant to the parties one chance to have the matter thrashed out in this litigation itself and thus avoid the necessity of a fresh litigation between the parties.

The appeal is, therefore, allowed and the decrees of the lower Courts are set aside and the case is remanded to the First Court for a fresh decision with advertence to the above remarks after taking the necessary pleadings and framing the necessary issues and giving the parties an opportunity to prove their respective cases. As to costs I direct that there will be no refund of Court-fees in this or in the lower Appellate Court. Costs here will be borne by the party incurring them. As regards the costs hereto incurred in Courts below they will be in the discretion of the Trial Court with due regard to the circumstances that both parties have failed to establish the cases pleaded by them.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed;
Case remanded,

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 972 OF 1925.

July 7, 1925.

Present:—Mr Justice Sulaiman.

FIRM MANGAL CHAND-PARAMSUKH DAS—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât ZAINAB BIBI AND ANOTHER—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Attachment, wrongful—Damages, suit for—Malice—Reasonable and probable cause, absence of, whether necessary.

Where a decree-holder attaches property belonging to a third party and wrongfully deprives the latter of the use of the property attached in consequence of such attachment, the third party is entitled to damages on account of the loss which it suffers by the wrongful attachment without proving any malice or any absence of reasonable and probable cause on the part of the decree-holder. [p. 267, col. 1.]

Thakdi Hajji v. Budrudin Saib, 29 M. 208, Surajmal v. Manekchand, 6 Bom. L. R. 704 and Nanjappa Chettiar v. Ganapathi Gounden, 12 Ind. Cas. 507; 35 M. 593; 10 M. L. T. 365; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 414; 21 M. L. J. 1052, distinguished.

Raynor v. Sungheer Singh, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 211, Soobjan Beebee v. Shaikh Shureutoollah, 12 W. R. 329; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 413, Kanaye Pershad Bose v. Hur Chand Manoo, 14 W. R. 120; 5 B. L. R. App. 71 and Kissorimohun Roy v. Harsukh Das, 17 C. 436; 17 I. A. 17; 13 Ind. Jur. 452; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 472; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 830 (P. C.), relied on.

Second appeal from a decree of the District Judge, Ghazipur, dated the 16th of February 1925.

Mr. U. S. Bajpai, for the Appellant.

JUDGMENT.—This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for damages. The plaintiff's case was that the defendant in execution of a decree against her husband Abdul Rashid and others attached a hand-loom belonging to her on the 24th of May 1924 and thereby deprived her of its use till the 1st of September 1924 when on objection being raised by her the attachment was released. She alleged that she could not work the hand-loom for three months and eight days and suffered a loss of Rs. 94. The defence was an assertion that the hand-loom belonged to the judgment-debtor and a plea that the attachment was bona fide and the damage claimed was remote and excessive. The denial of the plaintiff's ownership of the hand-loom does

(11) 6 B. 564; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 821.

(12) 7 B. 91; 7 Ind. Jur. 264; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 61.

(13) 6 I. A. 47; 3 C. L. R. 561; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 885.

(14) 16 C. 40; 15 I. A. 193; 12 Ind. Jur. 373; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 198; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 27 (P. C.).

(15) 24 Ind. Cas. 504; 36 A. 383; 18 C. W. N. 968; 16 M. L. T. 175; (1914) M. W. N. 593; 1 L. W. 615; 20 C. L. J. 282; 12 A. L. J. 1073; 16 Bom. L. R. 810; 41 I. A. 216 (P. C.).

not appear to have been seriously pressed in the Courts below, both of which have assumed that the hand-loom belonged to the plaintiff. In the grounds of appeal before me there is no suggestion that that was not so.

The main contention on behalf of the defendant now is that inasmuch as he had acted in a bona fide manner and the plaintiff has failed to prove any malice or any want of reasonable and probable cause her claim for damages should not have been allowed. The learned Advocate for the appellant relied on the cases of Thakdi Hajji v. Budrudin Saib (1), Surajmal v. Manekchand (2) and Nanjappa Chettiar v. Ganapathi Gounden (3). In the last mentioned case it was remarked: "There is no reason for departing, when a suit is filed for damages, from the well-established rule that when the plaintiff's grievance arises directly from the order of a Judicial Tribunal though it is moved thereto by a private party, the defendant would not be responsible in damages unless he had acted with malice as well as without reasonable and probable cause."

All these three cases, however, were cases where damages were claimed against a person who was not a party to the proceeding.

In my opinion there is a clear distinction between cases of that kind and the cases where a decree-holder attaches property belonging to a third party and wrongfully deprives him of its use in consequence of such attachment. The innocent third party would be entitled to damages on account of the loss which he suffers by the wrongful attachment without proving any malice or any absence of reasonable and probable cause.

This was the view expressed by this Court as early as 1873 in the case of Raynor v. Sungheer Singh (4). The learned Judges remarked "a judgmentt-creditor is responsible in damages to any person whose property he wrongfully causes to be attached in execution of his decree without proof of mala fides."

A similar view was expressed by Calcutta High Court in the case of Soobjan Beebee v. Shaikh Shvreeutoollah (5) and in the case of Kanaye Pershad Bose v. Hur Chand Manoo (6).

The case of Kissorimohun Roy v. Harsukh Das (7) is an authoritative pronouncement by their Lordships of the Privy Council on this point. In that case the decree-holder had attached properties belonging to persons who were no parties to the decree. In a suit for damages brought by the persons whose properties had been attached it was contended before their Lordships that the defendants were not responsible unless the plaintiffs alleged and proved that they had litigated maliciously and without probable cause. Their Lordships repelled this contention and remarked at page 442* "That is a rule which obtains between the parties to a suit when the defendant suffers loss through its institution and dependence. It does not apply to proceedings taken by the injured party, after the wrong is done, in order to obtain redress...The summary proceeding under s. 278 was taken by the respondent for the purpose of getting the release of an attachment issued in a suit to which he was not a party; and it does not appear to their Lordships that in order to entitle him to recover full indemnity for the wrongful attachment of his goods, the respondent is bound to allege and prove that the appellants resisted his application maliciously, and without probable cause."

In face of such a clear pronouncement by the highest Tribunal there can be no room for any controversy.

The appeal is dismissed under O. XLI, r. 11.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(6) 14 W. R. 120; 5 B. L. R. App. 71.

(7) 17 C. 436; 17 I. A. 17; 13 Ind. Jur. 452; 5 Sar. P. C. J. 472; 8 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 830 (P. C.).

*Page of 17 C.—[Ed.]

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 207 OF 1924.

March 6, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Ewert Greaves, Kt., and Mr. Justice Cuming.

Kumar SURENDRA NARAIN DEB

—APPELLANT

versus

PRINCE VICTOR NITYENDRA NARAIN

AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 10
—Assignment of interest pending suit—Assignment challenged—Substitution—Court, power of.

(1) 29 M. 208.

(2) 6 Bom. L. R. 704.

(3) 12 Ind. Cas. 537; 35 M. 598; 10 M. L. T. 385; (1911) 2 M. W. N. 414; 21 M. L. J. 1052.

(4) 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 211.

(5) 12 W. R. 329; 3 B. L. R. A. C. 413.

The Court has power to decide the question as to the validity or otherwise of an assignment of interest pending suit, when an application for substitution is made to the Court under O. XXII, r. 10 of the C. P. C. The power of the Court to effect substitution is not confined to cases where the assignment is unchallenged. [p. 268, col. 2.]

Appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge, First Court, 24-Pergunnahs, dated the 13th of May 1924.

Mr. Basak, Babus Prokash Chandra Pak-rasi and Promatha Nath Mukerjee, for the Appellant.

Mr. D. N. Mitter, Babu Kanai Dhan Dutta, Messrs. H. D. Bose and Amarendra Nath Bose, Babus Palit Paban Chatterjee, Surendra Nath Guha and Ambika Pada Choudhuri, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Greaves, J.—This appeal arises from an order of the 13th of May 1924 made in a suit by the Subordinate Judge and relating to two applications made for substitution in place of the deceased plaintiff No. 2, Kumar Udai Narain. The two applications were made by the only surviving son of Kumar Uday Narain and by Prince Victor Narain, who claims as an assignee of the interest of the deceased plaintiff, to be substituted in the suit in place of Kumar Udai Narain. The suit relates to the Bijni Raj and it was commenced by two persons, the present plaintiff and by deceased plaintiff No. 2. On the 14th of February 1922 Udai Narain who was then plaintiff No. 2 in the suit executed a deed of conveyance of his interest whatever he had in the raj to Prince Victor. Subsequently a dispute arose between plaintiff No. 1 and plaintiff No. 2 by an order of the 19th September, 1922, the conduct of the suit was given to plaintiff No. 1 and plaintiff No. 2 Udai Narain was made a defendant in the suit. There was some order made with regard to costs which is not material for the purposes of this appeal. Prior to that order, namely, on the 10th March 1922 Prince Victor applied for substitution of his name in the suit in place of Udai Narain by virtue of his purchase of the 14th February 1922. Udai Narain consented to the substitution asked for by plaintiff No. 2 and the other defendants opposed it and on the 22nd April 1922 Prince Victor applied to the Court for leave to withdraw his application and this was allowed. The learned Subordinate Judge by his order of the 13th May 1924 allowed both the applications to which I have referred. He added Prince Victor as a defendant by virtue of the assignment and he added Kumar Surendra Narain by virtue of some small interest which remained vested in Udai Narain after his conveyance to Prince Victor which interest is now vested by reason of the death of Udai Narain in the present appellant Kumar Surendra Narain. The appeal is by Kumar Surendra Narain who objects to the substitution of Prince Victor by virtue of the conveyance and it was urged before us that under the provisions of O. XXII, r. 10, the order for the adding of Prince Victor as a party should not have been made for it was suggested that O. XXII, r. 10 only applied to a case where the assignment or the devolution was not challenged and not to a case like the present where the assignment to Prince Victor was challenged on various grounds. It was sought to support this argument by a reference to O. XXII, r. 5 which provides that where it is necessary to substitute a representative and question arises as to who is the legal representative the Court is bound to determine the question before effecting a substitution and it was suggested that owing to the absence of these words from O. XXII, r. 10 and as there was no obligation on the Court so to decide O. XXII, r. 10 must only apply to a case of assignment where the assignment was not disputed. A similar argument was raised in the case of Enday Ali v. Binodini Dutt (1) and the Division Bench which decided the case were against the contention which I have indicated and came to the conclusion that under the provisions of O. XXII, r. 10, the Court had a power to decide the question as to the validity or otherwise of the assignment when an application for substitution was made to the Court under O. XXII, r. 10. We agree with that decision and we do not think that it is possible to confine the provisions of O. XXII, r. 10 to a case where the assignment is not disputed. Then it was sought to urge that by reason of the previous withdrawal of the application for substitution Prince Victor is now debarred from making the application on which the order of the Subordinate Judge was made. We do not think, however, that this is so. At the time the withdrawal was made the interest of Udai Narain and Prince Victor was practically identical and they were friendly. Now Udai Narain is dead and

(1) 51 Ind. Cas. 233; 29 C. L. J. 362.

Prince Victor Narain and the present appellant are at arms length and we do not think that Prince Victor can be debarred from making the application upon which the learned Judge passed the order complained of. We think, therefore, that the order was right and that the suit should proceed in the presence of both the added parties namely, Kumar Satyendra Narain and Prince Victor. The order substituting Prince Victor does not decide the validity of his assignment. This is a question that ultimately may have to be decided in other proceedings. On the other hand the question may never arise if the decision in the present suit goes on one way.

For the reasons we have indicated we think that the order was a correct one and that the learned Judge has rightly confined Prince Victor to the case of Udai Narain in whose stead he has been substituted. Under the circumstances of this case we think that the Court was justified in adding Prince Victor without going into the various allegations that are made with regard to the assignment to him.

The appeal accordingly fails and is dismissed with costs to be paid to Prince Victor Nityendra Narain represented by Mr. H. D. Bose. We assess the hearing-fee at three gold mohurs.

Cuming, J.—I agree.

N. H.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION NOS. 98 TO 101
OF 1924.

February 17, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Spencer.

CHAKIRI SUBAYYA—DEFENDANT No. 1
—PETITIONER

versus

YERADODDI MAL REDDY AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFF
—RESPONDENTS.

Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908), ss. 3, (2) (d), 189
—Shrotriendar, suit by, for rent—Shrotriem, whether estate—Grant of melvaram only to person not owning kudivaram—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts —Appeal, second—Mixed question of fact and law.

Where in a suit instituted in the Civil Court for arrears of rent by a shrotriendar, the tenants raise the plea of want of jurisdiction of the Civil Court, on the ground that the shrotriem is an estate, the point for decision is whether at the time of the grant the shrotriendar had not the kudivaram, right also. In other words whether it is proved by evidence that at the time of the grant there were any tenants in the village holding lands with any right of occupancy by custom or otherwise. It is immaterial that at the date of suit the shrotriendar may have only the melvaram right. [p. 270, cols. 1 & 2.]

If the shrotriendar was originally the kudivaramdar and the melvaram also was granted to him, but he subsequently divested himself of the kudivaram right, the village is not an "estate" since on a proper construction of s. 3 (2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act, the words "to a person not owning the kudivaram thereof" refer to the time when the inam was granted. [p. 270, col. 2.]

Under the Madras Estates Land Act not all shrotriendars and inamdars are landholders but only those who at the time of the grant did not own the kudivaram, in other words, the share of a tenant with a right of occupancy. [p. 269, col. 2.]

The question whether a grant was of the melvaram only to a person not owning the kudivaram within the meaning of s. 3 (2) (d) of the Madras Estates Land Act is a mixed question of fact and law. [p. 270, col. 1.]

Petition, under s. 25 of Act IX of 1887, praying the High Court to revise the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Madanapalli, dated the 25th June 1923, in S. C. S. Nos. 721, 876, 878 and 879 of 1920.

Mr. V. C. Seshachariar, for the Petitioner.

Mr. N. S. Rangasami Iyengar, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—These civil revision petitions raise a question of jurisdiction. The connected suits were brought by a shrotriendar to recover rent for Faslis 1327, 1328 and 1329 and were filed in the District Munsif's Court of Madanapalli. The defendants, who are the petitioners in the High Court contend that these suits, being suits brought by a land-holder of an estate to recover arrears of rent, are exclusively cognizable by a Revenue Court. Under Act VIII of 1865, s. 1, shrotriendars fell under the category of "land-holders" and could proceed against their tenants before the Collectors for recovery of rent provided that they had taken written leases or muchalikkas from them, but they might also be the tenants of a superior landlord [vide Rama v. Venkatachalam (1) and Suryanarayana v. Appa Rau (2).] Under s. 87 suits for arrears of rent could also be instituted in Civil Courts. Under Act I of 1908, not all shrotriendars and inamdars are landholders, but only those who at the time of the grant did not own the kudivaram, in other words, the share of a tenant with a right of occupancy.

(1) 8 M. 576; 9 Ind. Jur. 460; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 395.

(2) 16 M. 40; 2 M. L. J. 249; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 736.

Under s. 189 the jurisdiction of Civil Courts to try suits by land-holders to recover arrears of rent is taken away. After this Court's order of remand the District Munsif has now found on re-consideration that the suits are cognizable by his Court and he has granted decrees to the plaintiff. In revision the question of jurisdiction of the Civil Court is again mooted in this Court. The District Munsif found upon such evidence as the parties produced before him that the original grant was not shown to be a grant of the melvaram only. He should have added "to a person not owning the kudivaram." I am not satisfied, after hearing arguments, that this finding which is a mixed one of law and fact is wrong and should not stand.

The plaintiff has acquired by purchase the rights of certain vrittidars or sharers in the village of Shrotriem Chinnarao Kottapalli alias Mahal. The original grant which was made 400 or 500 years ago, is not available. But we know from Ex. 9 that at the time of the Inam Settlement in 1865, the village was divided into 30 vrittis and was then under the management of Government, that under the grant half of the revenue went to the shrotriemdars and the other half to Government, that the vrittidars were in possession of their vrittis and shares and that there was then no cultivable waste land but that much of the land had been encroached upon by the river and covered with tombs of Muhammadans. The plaint speaks of "cultivating tenants" and the written statement alleges that the shrotriemdars sold away their lands long ago and gave possession to the *raiya*s. Exhibits D, BB, CC, and DD are specimens of such sale-deeds. The plaintiff's sale-deed (Ex. C) mentions that the land was in the vendor's possession and enjoyment with independent rights. It may be that at the present time the shrotriemdars have only the melvaram right, but for the purpose of jurisdiction it has to be decided whether at the time of the grant they had not the kudivaram right also. In the words of the Judicial Committee in Suryanarana v. Patanna (3) is it "proved or is there any evidence to suggest that at the time of the grant there were any tenants in the village holding lands with any right of occupancy by custom or otherwise."

The evidence rather suggests that originally the shrotriemaars or vrittidars were themselves in possession with powers of alienation which they were exercising. At any rate it may be confidently said that it has not been shown in this case that the kudivaram interest was at the time of the grant in the hands of someone else than the donees. If the shrotriemdars were originally the kudivaramdars and the melvaram also was granted to them, but they divested themselves of the kudivaram right, the village is not an estate, for on a proper construction of s. 3 (2) (d), the words "to a person not owning the kudivaram thereof" evidently refer to the time when the inam was granted (cf. page 52 of Mr. V. Ramadoss' Commentary on this Act).

The District Munsif, therefore, had jurisdiction to try these suits. The Civil Revision Petitions are dismissed with costs.

V. N. V.

Petition dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS PETITION No. 17 OF 1924.

July 18, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

JAGESHWAR TUKARAM—DEFENDANT
No. 1—APPLICANT

versus

PANDURANG—PLAINTIFF—NON-APPLICANT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 110—Leave to appeal to Privy Council—Substantial question of law—Sufficiency of evidence to prove custom—Difference of opinion.

Although the question whether the evidence produced to establish a custom is sufficient is a question of law, it is not a substantial question of law within the meaning of s. 110 of the C. P. C., i. e., a question of law in respect of which there may be a difference of opinion. [p. 271, col. 2.]

Gokal Chand v. Sanwal Das, 78 Ind. Cas. 417; 5 L. 260; 6 L. L. J. 180; (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 473, Parshotam Saran v. Hargu Lal, 63 Ind. Cas. 837; 19 A. L. J. 462; 43 A. 513, referred to.

Application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against a decree of the (3) 48 Ind. Cas. 689; 41 M. 1012 at p. 1020; 25 M. L. T. 30; (1918) M. W. N. 859; 23 C. W. N. 273; 9 L. W. 126; 29 C. L. J. 153; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 11; 36 M. L. J. 585; 21 Bom. L. R. 547; (1919) M. W. N. 463; 45 I. A. 209 (P. C.).

Judicial Commissioner's Court, Nagpur, in First Appeal No. 88 of 1922, dated 26th November 1923.

Mr. W. H. Dhabe, for the Applicant.

Mr. A. D. Mande, for the Non-Applicant.

ORDER.—This is an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against the judgment and decree of a Bench of this Court, confirming the decree of the lower Court in First Appeal No. 85 of 1922, decided on 26th November 1923.

It is admitted that the value of the property in suit is above Rs. 10,000, but as the decree appealed from affirms the decision of the Court below the appeal must under s. 110 of the C. P. C. involve some substantial question of law.

The application is opposed.

The appeal out of which this application arises was from the decree in a suit in which the non-applicant Pandurang sued his father (the applicant) Jageshwar and others for partition of his share in the property of the joint Hindu family of which they were members.

The plea raised by Jageshwar was a peculiar one. He had been adopted by his mother's father Tukaram, from whom he inherited the property in dispute. He contended that the adoption was invalid, as the adoption of a daughter's son is expressly forbidden by the Mitakshara, and as his first wife belonged to the same gotra, as his natural father, his marriage was not legal and his son the plaintiff is illegitimate.

On behalf of the plaintiff it was contended that in the Maharashtra Brahmin community of Nagpur the prohibition, under the Hindu Law, of the adoption of a daughter's son or sister's son has been abolished by custom. It was held by this Court that the custom had been proved.

It is contended on behalf of the present applicant that the question of whether the evidence is sufficient to prove a custom contrary to the Hindu Law is one of great importance and should be determined by the highest Tribunal.

If this was the only point in the case we are of opinion that it would not amount to a substantial question of law within the meaning of s. 110 of the C. P. C. It was recently held by the Lahore High Court in Gokal Chand v. Sanwal Das (1), where the question was of a custom of pre-emption in the city of Delhi, that although the question whether the evidence produced to establish a custom is sufficient is a question of law, it is not a substantial question of law within the meaning of s. 110 of the C. P. C., i. e., a question of law in respect of which there may be a difference of opinion. This case follows a recent case of the Allahabad High Court, Faisholam Saran v. Hargu Lal (2). If, therefore, the only question in this case were whether the evidence produced to establish the custom of the adoption of a daughter's son in the city of Nagpur amongst the class to which the parties belong was sufficient, we should not be justified in holding that that amounted to a substantial question of law within the meaning of s. 110 of the C. P. C.

(1) 78 Ind. Cas. 417; 5 L. 260; 6 L. L. J. 180; (1924) A. L. R. (L.) 473.

There are, however, other points in the case. It was held by this Court that even supposing the adoption to be invalid, Jageshwar could not claim to have acquired, merely by possession, an interest in the property of his adoptive father different from that which he would have taken if the property had rightly passed to him as the son and heir of the adoptive father. This view, which is based on the English case of Dalton v. Fitzgerald (3) cited by the Madras High Court in Appa Rao v. Gopala Rao (4), was with reference to the appellant's contention that if the adoption was invalid he must be regarded as being in possession of the property of Tukaram, the alleged adoptive father, as a trespasser, and hence he was his property self-acquired by adverse possession.

Another question of adverse possession also arose. It was held that the plaintiff Pandurang at his birth came into actual possession of his father Jageshwar's undivided half share in the whole of the property which was subsequently reduced to a third share on the birth of his half brother, and that even if the property could be regarded as self-acquired property of his father Jageshwar the plaintiff would still be in adverse possession as a tenant-in-common of an undivided third share in the property for more than the statutory period, and he was entitled to claim partition of that share. This view has been attacked in the grounds of appeal to the Privy Council, it being argued that no question of adverse possession arises. This, in our opinion, is a question of law in respect of which there may be a difference of opinion, and it, therefore, fulfils the conditions laid down as to what constitutes a substantial question of law in the cases, above quoted, of the Lahore and Allahabad High Courts.

(2) 63 Ind. Cas. 837; 19 A. L. J. 462; 43 A. 513.

(3) (1897) 2 Ch. 86 at p. 93; 66 L. J. Ch. 604; 76 L. T. 700; 45 W. R. 685.

(4) 18 M. L. J. 409; 4 M. L. T. 5; 31 M. 321.

We are, therefore, of opinion that a certificate should be granted and it is granted accordingly.

G. R. D.

Certificate granted.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 41 OF 1924.

July 22, 1925.

Present:—Nr. Simpson, A. J. C.

DEBI CHARAN—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

Musammatt DEO MUKHI WIFE OF RAM

NARAIN—DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE

PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. IX, r. 13—Ex parte decree—Application by one of several defendants to set aside decree—Decree, whether can be set aside as against all defendants—Revision—Interference by High Court.

The general rule is that an ex parte decree should be set aside only as against the party making an application to set aside the decree. Under the proviso to r. 13 of O. IX of the C. P. C., however, the Court has power in a case in which the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside against the applicant only, to set it aside against all or any of the other defendants also. Where a Court acting under this proviso sets aside an ex parte decree not only against the defendant applying to set it aside but as against all the defendants, the High Court will not interfere with the order in revision. [p. 272, col. 2.]

Where a person alleging himself to be the representative of a mortgagee obtains a decree for foreclosure as against the mortgagor and also against a rival claimant to the mortgagee right, the decree against the latter being ex parte, and the decree is set aside at the instance of the latter, it should also be set aside as against the mortgagor, inasmuch as if the decree is allowed to stand as against the mortgagor but is set aside as against the rival claimant, this might result in the mortgagor being compelled to pay the amount of the mortgage twice over. [p. 273, col. 1.]

Application for revision against the judgment and decree of the Munsif, Safipur at Unao, dated the 25th January 1924.

Mr. Moti Lal Saksena, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. Roy, for the Opposite Party.

ORDER.—This is an application under s. 115 of the C. P. C. for revision. The applicants were plaintiffs in a suit for foreclosure. They sued as heirs of Ram Adhar, the mortgagee. The contesting defendants made it one of their chief pleas that Ram Adhar had left three daughters, who were his heirs, and consequently the plaintiffs had no right to sue. With the consent of the plaintiffs, these three daughters were impleaded as defendants No. 9, 10 and 11. They put in no appearance, and a decree was passed which was ex parte as regards them. A principal issue had been directed to a custom of exclusion of daughters from inheritance, and this was decided against the daughters. Plaintiffs and defendant No. 7, (who was co-plaintiff impleaded as a defendant) obtained a decree for foreclosure against defendants Nos. 1, 2, 3, 9, 10 and 11. The meaning of this decree is that the decree-holders are entitled to foreclose the property now in the possession of the defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3, and that defendants Nos. 9, 10 and 11 are barred from contesting the rights of the decree-holders to be the true representatives of the mortgagee. It will be seen that it is a decree against the defendants Nos. 9, 10 and 11 also, although the decree-holders cannot foreclose any property of theirs. This decree was passed on 28th September 1923. Nearly three months later, on 19th December 1923, the defendant No. 10 put in an application under O. IX, r. 13. She satisfied the Court that the summons had not been duly served on any of the defendants Nos. 9, 10 and 11, and she claimed to have the ex parte decree set aside. The decree-holders were notified. Their Pleader stated: "I oppose the application, but I agree that the decree so far as it affects the rights of the applicant be set aside." This admission is of importance with regard to the present application. I am not prepared to hear these decree-holders in revision upon any point which they gave up in the Court below. Accordingly, their first point that the application was beyond time cannot be raised now. On the face of it the application was within time, for it sets forth that the applicant did not come to know of the decree till 24th November 1923. The second point is that the applicant was not entitled to apply under O. IX, r. 13, because she was only a pro forma defendant, and there was no decree against her. In the face of the admission I refuse to take up this point either. Lastly, it is said that the decree ought not to have been set aside in its entirety. It will be remembered that the decree-holders acquiesced in the decree being set aside, so far as it regarded defendant No. 10 but the Court went further and set the decree aside altogether. Order IX, r. 13, lays down that the decree is to be set aside as against the applicant. That is the general rule. The rule, however, contains a proviso that where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside against such defendant only, it may be set aside against all or any of the other defendants also. The learned Munsif has acted under the proviso. He had power to do so. I should feel reluctant in proceedings in revision to interfere with such an order. But I am further of opinion that his decision was right. It would produce an awkward state of things if the applicants were allowed to hold a decree for foreclosure, valid against the mortgagor, but not valid against a rival claimant of the mortgagee right. The mortgagor might be made to pay twice over. For these reasons, this application in revision is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEALS FROM APPELLATE DECREES Nos.
44 to 49 of 1923.

April 15, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

Lala CHAKAURI LAL—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

DEO CHAND MAHTON AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), ss. 48, 49—Ejectment of under-raiyat—Occupancy rights, acquisition of—Custom, proof of—Long occupation and planting of trees, whether sufficient to prove custom.

A custom must be established independently of and apart from the case in dispute. [p. 274, col. 1.]

The mere fact that an under-raiyat has occupied certain lands for over 40 years and has planted trees upon portions of the land and has been granted printed receipts by the landlord is not sufficient in law to establish a custom whereby the under-raiyat becomes entitled to occupancy rights in the land. [ibid.]

Appeals from a decision of the District Judge, Shahabad, dated the 14th December 1923, reversing that of the Munsif, Arrah, dated the 29th March 1922.

Messrs. Rai G. S. Prasad and Anand Prasad, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Ramanugrah Narain Sinha and N. S. Rai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—These are appeals by the plaintiff and arise out of suits in ejectment upon a declaration that the defendants are under-raiyats of the plaintiff who is an occupancy tenant of the land in dispute. The plaintiff served notice upon the defendants under s. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act asking them to give up possession, but they have failed to vacate the land. The plaintiff, therefore, brought the present suits for recovery of possession. The defence was that the land in dispute was the gujasta kasht of the ancestors of the defendants and that the plaintiff was a tenure-holder and not an occupancy tenant. The defendants assert that they are not sikmidars or under-raiyats of the plaintiff, and, therefore, are not liable to ejectment.

The Munsif found that the plaintiff was an occupancy tenant and the defendants were under-raiyats under him, and that the land in dispute was not the kasht gujasta of the defendants, and that the plaintiff was not the tenure-holder. It was further stated by the defendants in their written statement that even as under-raiyats they had by custom acquired the right of occupancy in the land. The learned Munsif in dealing with this point observed that no evidence had been adduced about such a custom and that the defendants had failed to prove that they had acquired occupancy right in the land in suit. He, therefore, made a decree in the plaintiff's favour and awarded mesne profits to the extent of $\frac{2}{3}$ rds of what the plaintiff claimed.

On appeal by the defendants the learned District Judge has upheld the findings of the Munsif as regards the title of the plaintiff. He is of opinion that the Munsif was right in his finding regarding the status of the parties, namely, the status of the plaintiff being that of an occupancy tenant and that of the defendants being under-raiyats. The learned District Judge, however, has come to the conclusion that as under-raiyats the defendants have acquired a right of occupancy in the land in dispute. With reference to the observation of the Munsif that no evidence had been produced to prove the custom set up by the defendants the learned Judge says that this is so and having regard to the nature of the case made by the defendants, namely, that they were occupancy tenants and not under-raiyats of the land in dispute no such evidence could be expected on their behalf. The learned District Judge has, however, considered the fact that the defendants, who are nine in number, assert that they possess occupancy rights and he says that if the assertion of all these tenants regarding their possession of occupancy rights is accepted, then the usage in question, namely, the usage under which the under-raiyats acquire the right of occupancy is established. He refers to the evidence of the defendants themselves to the effect that occupancy rights have accrued to them by virtue of their long possession and by virtue of the fact that some of them have planted trees upon the holding and by virtue of the fact that the plaintiff has been in the habit of granting them printed receipts. These three facts are, in the opinion of the learned Judge, sufficient to establish a custom under which sikmi tenants or under-raiyats acquire the right of occupancy in a land. He refers further to the fact that the defendants and their ancestors have been in possession for periods varying from over 40 to 50 years and that the holding in question had been handed down from father to son. In my opinion the facts found by the learned District Judge are not sufficient in law to establish a custom of under-raiyats acquiring occupancy rights in the village. The nine cases referred to by the District Judge are cases in dispute and they by themselves cannot go to establish a custom. A custom must be established independently of and apart from the cases in dispute. Admittedly there is no other evidence in this case to prove such a custom; and, in my opinion, in the absence of such evidence the mere fact of the defendants having occupied the lands in dispute in the present cases for over 40 years and the fact of their having planted trees upon portions of the land and of their being granted printed receipts would not establish in law a custom as set up by the defendants.

In my opinion the decision of the learned District Judge cannot be supported and must be set aside and the decree of the Munsif restored. These appeals are, therefore, allowed with costs here and in the Court below. Hearing fee in this Court will be assessed in each case at half the usual rate.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.
EXECUTION FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 421 of 1924.

July 1, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and Mr. Justice Sulaiman.

Musammât BEGAM SULTAN—DECREE-HOLDER—APPELLANT

versus

Musammât SARVI BEGAM—
JUDGMENT-DEBTOR—RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 48, application of—Execution of decree—Decree passed before operation of Code—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 182—Decree for sale—Properties situated in different Districts—Transfer certificate, application for—Step-in-aid of execution.

The Law of Limitation applicable to a suit or proceeding is the law in force at the date of the institution of the suit or proceeding, unless there is a distinct provision to the contrary. [p. 275, col. 2.]

Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal, 19 Ind. Cas. 291; 35 A. 227; 13 M. L.T. 437; 17 C. W. 605; 11 A.L.J. 389; (1913) M. W. N. 470; 17 C. L. J. 483; 15 Bom. L.R. 489; 25 M. L. J. 131; 40 I. A. 74 (P. C.), dissented from.

Kosilla v. Ishri Singh, 6 Ind. Cas. 188; 7 A. L. J. 420; 32 A. 499, relied on.

Section 48 of the C. P. C. of 1908 prescribing a period of 12 years for execution of a decree applies to an execution application made after the operation of the said Code, notwithstanding that the decree itself was passed under the old Code of 1882, wherein there was no such bar of 12 years. [ibid.]

In the case of a decree for sale of two sets of properties situated in different districts, an application for grant of a certificate of transfer of the decree from one district to the other cannot operate to save limitation in respect of an application for execution relating to the properties in the other district. [p. 276, col. 1.]

Execution first appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Meerut, dated the 10th May 1924.

Mr. Panna Lal, for the Appellant.

Dr. K. N. Katju, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is a decree-holder's appeal arising out of an execution matter. The respondents took the objection, inter alia, that the application for execution was barred by the three years' rule under Art. 182 of the Limitation Act as well as by the 12 years' rule under s. 48 of the C. P. C.

The objection is based on the following circumstances:—A decree for sale was obtained against two sets of properties situated in Bulandshahr and Meerut in the year 1907. Before the final decree was passed part of the property situated in the Meerut District was sold at an auction and purchased by Sarvi Begam on the 25th of March 1908. An order absolute under the old Code was passed on the 10th of August 1908. Sarvi Begam, the purchaser, was, however, not impleaded till then. Subsequently Sarvi Begam made a gift of a portion of her interest in favour of Taimur Ali Shah sometime in the year 1325 Fasli corresponding to 1918.

The decree-holder first proceeded to execute his decree in respect of the properties situated in Bulandshahr. These execution proceedings went on for several years and part of the decretal amount was realized by sale of the properties situated in that district. Ultimately on the 13th of October 1922 the decree-holder put in an application, which, however, is not on the record of this case, for execution, or rather for grant of a certificate of transfer of the decree to the District of Meerut. On the 22nd of December 1922 a certificate was granted and the decree was ordered to be transferred to the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Meerut. When the case went to the Meerut Court the present application for execution was made on the 10th of January 1923. Objection was raised by Sarvi Begam that, the present application, not having been made within three years of the last application for execution or any step-in-aid of execution as against her, was barred, and further that the decree being more than 12 years old the application was not maintainable.

The learned Subordinate Judge has disallowed the objection so far as the bar of the 12 years' rule is concerned, but has entertained the other objection and dismissed the application.

The decree-holder comes in appeal and on her behalf it is contended that there can be no bar of three years' rule inasmuch as execution proceedings were going on against persons interested in the other part of the mortgaged properties which were jointly liable for the mortgage-debt. In the view which we have taken of the other point it is not necessary to go into this matter.

It is clear to us that the present application is barred under the provisions of s. 48 of the C. P. C. The learned Subordinate Judge, who disallowed the objection relied on the case of Konsilla v. Ishri Singh (1). That case was certainly in favour of the view which he took but for reasons which we proceed to mention that authority is now no longer binding on us.

It cannot be doubted that although the decree was passed at a time when the old C. P. C. was in force the application for execution of it is made at a time when the new Code is in force. The law of procedure and limitation applicable to an application for execution would be the law actually in force at the time when the application is made. This application is undoubtedly under O. XXI, r. 11 of the new Code and there seems to be no good ground for holding that s. 48, which is a part of that very Code, is inapplicable to this application.

The argument on behalf of the appellant is that as the decree was passed under the old Code, the decree-holder acquired a vested right to apply for execution and that inasmuch as under the old Code there was no such bar of 12 years his right is in no way affected by the coming into force of the new Code. This contention cannot be accepted. The new Code did not in any way affect his right to execute the decree which he had obtained. It has in no way curtailed his right; it has merely placed a bar of limitation as to the period of time during which he can apply. There was no vested right in the decree-holder to wait for an indefinite period of time in order to apply for execution. The learned Judges, who decided the case above mentioned were led away by the supposition that the decree-holder acquires a vested right not only to apply for execution but also in the period within which he can apply. Their attention was not drawn to an earlier case of this Court reported in the same volume at page 33 * [Shah Shankar Lal v. Soni Ram (2)] where a Bench of this Court pointed out at page 43*, that the Law of Limitation applicable to a suit or proceeding is the law in force at the date of the institution of the suit or proceeding unless there is a distinct provision to the contrary. This view was affirmed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in a case between the same parties reported as Soni Ram v. Kanhaiya Lal (3). Their Lordships accepted the view expressed by this Court and held that the law of limitation applicable to a suit or proceedings is the law in force at the date of the institution of the suit or proceedings unless there is a distinct provision to the contrary. In view of this authoritative pronouncement we are no longer bound by

(2) 3 Ind. Cas. 725; 32 A. 33; 6 A. L. J. 931; 6 M. L. T. 348.

(3) 19 Ind. Cas. 291; 35 A. 227; 13 M. L. T. 437; 17 C. W. N. 605; 11 A. L. J. 349; (1913) M. W. N. 470; 17 C. L. J. 488; 15 Bom. L. R. 489; 25 M. L. J. 131; 40 I. A. 74 (P. C.).

*Pages of 32 A. 33,--[Ed.]

(1) 6 Ind. Cas. 188; 32 A. 499; 7 A. L. J. 420.

the views expressed in the case of Konsilla v. Ishri Singh (1). We may further point out that this view has been accepted by the High Courts at Calcutta, Bombay and Patna; vide Bisseshur Sonamat v. Jasoda Lal (4), Gopaldas Ganpatdas v. Tribhoran Jethiram (5) and Krishna Dayal v. Gir Sakina Bibi (6).

The next argument advanced on behalf of the appellant is that the present application is not a fresh application for execution at all but that it is really a continuation of the execution proceedings which had been started by the application of the 13th of October 1922, and inasmuch as that application was within 12 years the present application being a mere continuation of it is not barred. This argument also has no force. The previous application for grant of a certificate was not an application in the nature of an execution and, therefore, the present application for execution cannot be deemed to be a continuation of it. The execution proceedings pending in the Bulandshahr District related to property situated in that District and could not relate to the property in the Meerut District. The prayer in the present application is for sale of other properties situated in Meerut. That such an application for execution is not a continuation of the original application for grant of certificate of transfer is well settled by the authorities of this Court. We may refer in this connection to the cases of Sundar Singh v. Doru Shankar (7) and Khetpal v. Tikam Singh (8).

We accordingly affirm the decree of the Court below and dismiss this appeal with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

N. H. Appeal dismissed.

(4) 19 Ind. Cas. 391; 40 C. 704; 17 C. W. N. 622.

(5) 59 Ind. Cas. 790; 45 B. 365; 22 Bom. L. R. 1420.

(6) 34 Ind. Cas. 27; 1 P. L. J. 214; 20 C. W. N. 952; 2 P. L. W. 370.

(7) 20 A. 78; A. W. N. (1897) 168; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 409.

(8) 14 Ind. Cas. 172; 34 A. 396; 9 A. L. J. 335.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL ORDER No. 75 OF 1924.

April 6, 1925.

Present :—Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Ross.

Tikait GAYAN NATH SAHI AND ANOTHER—APPELLANTS

versus

Pandit MALHIJI VAIDYA AND OTHERS—
RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Son's liability to pay father's debt—
Antecedent debt—Res judicata in execution proceedings.

Under Hindu Law a son is bound to satisfy the debts of his father out of the ancestral property provided they are neither illegal nor immoral and a son cannot avoid this liability on the ground that there was no necessity for borrowing or that the transactions were reckless and extravagant in that the money could have been borrowed at a cheaper rate of interest. [p. 277, col. 2.]

Case-law referred to.

The sons are liable not only to pay their fathers' debt upon a mortgage but also the interest due thereon. [p. 278, col. 1.]

Lachman Das v. Khunnu Lal, 19 A. 26; A. W. N. (1896) 183; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 17, followed.

A person who holds a mortgage decree against a deceased Hindu has two remedies open to him. He may either bring a fresh suit for enforcement of his charge against the interest of the sons in the property or he may seek out execution against the property of the deceased in the hand of the sons and leave it to them to take whatever objections they choose to take. [p. 277, col. 2.]

Case-law referred to.

The principle of res judicata applicable to suits upon a party's failure to raise an issue which he might have raised, is not applicable to execution cases. [p. 278, col. 2.]

Obiter.—The doctrine of "antecedent debt" is a compromise between the rule that the father cannot alienate ancestral property for his own purposes and the rule that the son is under a pious obligation to discharge his father's debts. [p. 277, col. 2; p. 278, col. 1.]

Appeal from an order of the Subordinate Judge, Daltonganj, dated the 24th March 1924.

Messrs. R. C. Bhaduri and C. S. Banerji,
for the Appellants.

Mr. S. Saran, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Mullick, J.—The facts out of which this appeal arises seem to be as follows. In or about 1314 F.s. Tikait Koshalesh Nath Sahi Deo, the father of the appellants Tikait Gyan Nath Sahi and Pertap Nath Sahi became liable for a sum of Rs. 15,000 to one Hiramba Nath Banerji of Benares under a decree with the result that his ancestral properties were brought to sale in execution. The debtor thereupon on the 8th November 1913 borrowed Rs. 20,000 from the respondent Pandit Malhiji Vaidya by a mortgage of the ancestral joint family property and got the sale set aside. The appellants who were born after the mortgage were not parties to the transaction, although it appears that they were at that time members of the joint family. Whether the debtor's brother Dina Nath Sahi was also a member of the joint family is not clear.

Thereafter the debtor borrowed more money from the respondent and having defaulted in the payment of the same as well as the interest for two years upon the mortgage, a suit was brought against him by the mortgagee in 1915 and on the 29th January 1917 a decree was obtained for a sum of Rs. 9,162-4-0. Neither the brother Dina Nath Sahi nor the two sons of the debtor were parties to this decree. Execution was taken out against the debtor in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Daltonganj; but the case, which was registered as No. 45 of 1917, was struck off on the 8th March 1918 without any realisation being made. The second execution case was registered as Case No. 7 of 1919 and the debtor having died Dina Nath Sahi, Pertap Nath Sahi and Gyan Nath Sahi were impleaded in it as his representatives. That case was dismissed on the 30th March 1920.

An appeal was taken against the order to the High Court and on the 28th May, 1923 it was ordered by that Court that the name of Dina Nath Sahi should be struck off the record as a party to the execution and that the execution should proceed against the mortgagor's two sons who had raised no objection to the execution proceedings.

The present execution case, which has been registered as No. 106 of 1923, was filed on the 4th August 1923 against the two minor sons, who preferred an objection on the 22nd December 1923 denying their liability for the decretal amount and objecting to the valuation put upon the properties. That objection was disposed of on the 24th March, 1924, it being held by the Deputy Magistrate Subordinate Judge that as the debts were neither illegal nor immoral the objectors were under a pious obligation to pay them.

Against this decision the present appeal was filed on the 24th April 1924.

In the meantime the execution proceedings continued. On the 24th March 1924 an order was made for the issue of sale proclamations fixing the 15th May 1924. On the 14th May 1924 an objection was filed contesting the valuation of the properties. The Court held that the objection was made too late and on the 21st May the sale was completed and the decree-holder with the permission of the Court was declared to be the purchaser for a total sum of Rs. 7,610. In consequence of the present appeal it does not appear that the sale has yet been confirmed.

It is to be noticed at the outset that Dina Nath Sahi is not a party to the present execution proceeding and we are not concerned to inquire what will be the rights of the auction-purchaser against him. All that we are concerned with in the present appeal is to see whether the appellants by reason of their not having been parties to the mortgage-decree of the 29th January 1917, are entitled in the execution proceedings to deny liability.

If their father was sued in a representative capacity, then they are certainly bound. If he was not sued in a representative capacity, then by reason of the doctrine of pious obligation they are bound to satisfy the decree provided it was not for an illegal or immoral debt. The creditor might have brought a fresh suit for the enforcement of his charge against their interest in the property or he might have, as he has done in the present case, left it to them to take whatever objections they chose in the execution proceedings. This has been settled by a long series of cases of which it is necessary only to cite the following: Suraj Bansi Koer v. Sheo Persad Singh (1), Luchman Das v. Giridhur Chowdhry (2), Hira Lal Sahu v. Parmeshar Rai (3), Lal Singh v. Pulandar Singh (4), Chander Pershad v. Sham Koer (5), Ran Singh v. Sobha Ram (6), Amar Chandra Kundu v. Sebak Chand Chowdhury (7), Kishun Pershad Chowdhry v. Tipan Pershad Singh (8), Indar Pal v. Imperial Bank (9), Kuldip Sahay v. Rambhujhawan Mahto (10). This last named authority which is a recent judgment of this Court clearly lays down that if the sons and the grandsons of the mortgagor cannot show the debt to be illegal or immoral they are bound to satisfy the claim out of the ancestral properties in their hands. It further decides that it is not sufficient to show that the transaction was extravagant or reckless or that the money might have been got at a cheaper rate of interest. Indeed as the doctrine of antecedent debt

(1) 5 C. 148; 6 I. A. 88; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 1; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 589; 4 C. L. R. 226; 2 Shome L. R. 242; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 705 (P. C.).

(2) 5 C. 856; 6 C. L. R. 473; 3 Shome L. R. 143; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1152 (P. C.).

(3) 21 A. 356; A. W. N. (1899) 100; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 936.

(4) 28 A. 182; 2 A. L. J. 647; A. W. N. (1905) 248.

(5) 33 C. 676; 3 C. L. J. 131.

(6) 29 A. 544; A. W. N. (1907) 159; 4 A. L. J. 424.

(7) 31 C. 642; 11 O. W. N. 593; 5 C. L. J. 491; 2 M. L. T. 207.

(8) 34 C. 735; 11 O. W. N. 613; 5 C. L. J. 569.

(9) 28 Ind. Cas. 593; 37 A. 214; 13 A. L. J. 211.

(10) 83 Ind. Cas. 385; 5 P. L. T. 115; 3 Pat. 425; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 454.

is a compromise between the rule that the father cannot alienate ancestral property for his own purposes and the rule that the son is under a pious obligation to discharge his father's debts, it is difficult to see how any objection could be taken by the sons on the ground that the interest was excessive. He might perhaps take an objection that the stipulation for interest was in the nature of a penalty ; but that is not the case before us here.

It is contended before us now that the appellant should have been permitted to show that there was no necessity for the debt covered by the decree of 1917. It appears that this debt was composed of a sum of Rs. 5,348 on account of interest for two years and Rs. 3,204-10-7 for a loan taken to pay mukarrari rent on certain properties and the interest thereupon. How a mortgage decree was passed with regard to the latter loan is not known ; but we have to take the decree under execution as it stands and it is clearly a mortgage decree and as no appeal was made against it, the decree must be executed as a mortgage decree.

It is open to the appellants to show that Heramba Nath's debt was for an immoral consideration but this they did not do. They have confined their attack to the sum of Rs. 5,000 left over out of the Rs. 20,000 borrowed from the respondent after Heramba had been paid off.

Secondly, it is open to the appellants to take the ground that the sum of Rs. 3,000 odd borrowed for paying mukarrari rent was not in fact borrowed ; but it is not open to them to show that there was no necessity for the borrowing.

Thirdly, it is open to them to contend that the sum of Rs. 5,348 on account of interest on the respondents' bond was not in fact due ; but it is not open to them to contend that the rate of interest was too high and that it was not necessary to borrow at this rate from the respondents in order to pay off Heramba Nath Banerji's decretal amount.

The appellants have failed to give any evidence in support of the last two grounds. But it is contended before us that the sons are liable to pay the father's debt upon the mortgage but not the interest thereupon. This position cannot be maintained in view of the Full Bench decision in the Allahabad High Court in Lachman Das v. Khunnu Lal (11).

Turning now to the evidence adduced in the case, I can find nothing to indicate that the debt incurred to Hiramamba Nath Banerji was illegal or immoral ; therefore, in regard to the respondent's mortgage the sum of Rs. 15,000 which went to pay off Hiramamba Nath Banerji, cannot be challenged. There remains a sum of Rs. 5,000 which is said to have been spent by Koshalesh Nath Sahi, on liquor and women. Three witnesses were called to prove this ; but I agree with the Subordinate Judge that their evidence cannot be accepted because they are all interested persons and their statements are of the vaguest kind. They cannot give any details showing what particular sums were spent by Koshalesh Nath Sahi on dancing girls nor can they fix the times and the places for this expenditure.

The result, therefore, is that the objection that the appellants are not liable for the judgment-debt has been rightly dismissed.

With regard to the objection made on the day before the sale repeating in part the objection taken on the 22nd December 1923 as regards the valuation of the properties, no appeal lies against the order of the Subordinate Judge declining to re-open the valuation. If the appellants have any grievance, it may be open to them to have the sale set aside on the ground of material irregularity in publishing the sale notifications and consequent inadequacy of price.

A point has been taken as to res judicata. It was argued that as in the last execution the appellants did not take the point that they were not liable for the debt they cannot take it in the present execution. The answer to this is that the former execution was dismissed for default. There was no adjudication which could even by implication be held to constitute a decision adverse to the appellants. In my opinion the principle, which is applicable to suits upon a party's failure to raise an issue, which he might have raised, is not applicable to execution cases ; but even if it were, the final order in the last execution case was made not in consequence of the conduct of the appellants but in spite of it. The doctrine of res judicata does not apply.

The result, therefore, is that the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Ross, J.—I agree.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 133 OF 1923.

March 25, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Baker, J. C.

Seth GANESHDAS—PLAINTIFF—
APPELLANT

versus

HARILAL—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

C. P. Tenancy Act (I of 1920), s. 106—Suit for arrears of rent against trespasser—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Plaintiff, admission of, that defendant is tenant, effect of—Interpretation of Statutes.

An Act by which the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts of Judicature is taken away must be construed strictly. [p. 280, col. 2.]

Ganpat v. Trimbak, 19 Ind. Cas. 759; 9 N. L. R. 54 and Prosunno Coomar Paul Chowdhury v. Koylash Chunder Paul Chaudhury, 8 W. R. 428; B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 759; 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 827, relied on.

The jurisdiction of Additional Munsifs or Subordinate Judges who are Revenue Officers should be strictly confined to suits for arrears of rent under s. 106 of the C. P. Tenancy Act. Such an officer has no jurisdiction to try a suit for rent brought against a defendant who is described as a trespasser. [p. 281, col. 1.]

Where, however, during the pendency of such a suit, the plaintiff admits that the defendant is a tenant the admission converts the suit into one for arrears of rent under s. 106 of the C. P. Tenancy Act and gives a Revenue Officer jurisdiction to try it. The suit must be deemed to have been properly instituted against the defendant on the date of such admission and if this date happens to be after the coming into force of the C. P. Tenancy Act, the arrears can only be recovered for a period of three years. [ibid.]

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Nimar, dated the 22nd January 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 184 of 1922.

Mr. G. L. Subhedar, for the Appellant.

Mr. J. Sen, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The facts of this case are simple but raise a difficult point of law. The plaintiff, who is the mortgagee in possession of certain absolute occupancy lands and may be considered as a landlord for the purposes of this case, sued two persons, one alleged to be a tenant and the other a trespasser, for 10 years arrears of rent, under s. 132, Limitation Act.

The suit was brought within one year from the coming into force of the new Tenancy Act and was thus within the exception given by s. 104, cl. (2) of that Act.

The original defendant No. 1 was the absolute occupancy tenant, and defendant No. 2 was joined as his name appeared in the jamabandis though plaintiff did not recognize him as tenant. Defendant No. 2, who was nephew of defendant No. 1, claimed to have been a tenant since 1910 under a transfer from her and tendered the rent from that year, which was refused by plaintiff. Defendant No. 1 claimed to have surrendered her interests to defendant No. 2 and pleaded that she was not liable. The suit was brought in the Court of the Additional Munsif, the Tahsildar, being a suit for rent. That Court held that defendant No. 2 was a tenant from 1968 Sambat and that the rent had been rightly tendered by him. Hence interest was disallowed but the rest of the plaintiff's claim was awarded. On appeal the District Judge, Nimar, held that the suit was bad because defendant No. 2 was not described as a tenant, and no suit would lie against him and so the suit was remanded.

After remand the defendant No. 2 again pleaded that he was a tenant. Defendant No. 1 died three months after the suit was instituted and to save further dispute on 11th April 1922, the plaintiff after remand admitted that the defendant No. 2 was a tenant. The same decree was passed as before but on appeal the District Judge held that the suit was time-barred as regards the arrears of 1968-74, as the suit against defendant No. 2 as tenant must be taken to have been instituted when his tenancy was admitted.

The plaintiff makes a second appeal against this finding.

The period of grace given by s. 104 (2) of the new Tenancy Act had expired by the date the suit was instituted against the present defendant as a tenant; which must be taken to be the date on which plaintiff admitted him to be a tenant. (11th April 1922).

It is contended on behalf of the appellant that the District Judge has overlooked the fact that the plaintiff claimed a charge on the land. The suit was a combined suit against defendant No. 1 for a personal decree and against defendant No. 2 for a charge. No personal decree was claimed against defendant No. 2. As defendant No. 1 was out of possession no decree for sale of the holding would lie against her. The learned Counsel for appellant relies on Singai Murlidhar v. Lala Premnarin (1) in which it was held that under the Tenancy Act of 1898 a landlord has two distinct forms of relief for the purposes of recovering rent, viz., (1) a personal remedy against the tenant, based on contract, and enforceable by a suit for rent as such, which can only be maintained against the tenant and is governed by Art. 110, Limitation Act; and (2) a real remedy in form of a charge, based on the Statute, and enforceable by a suit for sale under the Transfer of Property Act. Such a suit lies against any person who for the time being may have an interest in such land irrespective of any representation of the defaulting tenant. Such a suit is governed by Art. 132 of the Limitation Act.

It is further contended that the learned District Judge has overlooked the fact that the suit was brought in the Court of the Tahsildar, who was Additional Munsif. Although the Civil Courts who are not also Revenue Courts cannot try rent suits, there is no decision that Revenue Officers who are Additional Munsifs have limited jurisdiction.

Plaintiff could only bring the suit in the Court of the Revenue Officer because it was a suit for arrears of rent. If the view of the District Judge was correct the suit against defendant No. 2 was bad and the suit ought not to have been tried by the Tahsildar and the plaint returned for presentation to the proper Court. The defendant No. 2 claimed throughout that he was a tenant and the Court found so.

For the respondent it is contended that both under the old and the new Tenancy Acts the period of limitation for arrears of rent was 3 years and in Gourishankar v. Laxmanprasad (2) it was held that a suit to enforce the charge created by s. 43 of the old Tenancy Act is governed by Art. 110 of the Limitation Act. That decision was dissented from in Singai Murlidhar v. Lala Premnarain (1) quoted above, but assuming that the limitation applicable was 12 years, defendant No. 2 was treated by the plaintiff as a pure trespasser and so the suit was not one against a tenant. The suit against him should have been dismissed. It was open to the landlord to ratify the transfer and accept defendant No. 2 as a tenant, or refuse to accept him and treat him as a trespasser. Reference is made to Bijoy Gopal Mukerji v. Krishna Maheshi Debi (3) quoted in Bapu v. Temsa (4).

As the landlord elected to treat defendant

No. 2 as a trespasser, the suit did not lie in the Tahsildar's Court as originally brought and must be deemed to have been brought on the day when the plaintiff admitted that the defendant No. 2 was a tenant.

There was no prayer in the memorandum of appeal that the plaint should be returned for presentation to the proper Court and there are no equities in favour of such a course.

I have given the substance of the arguments at some length, as the case is not without difficulty.

It is necessary to consider the question of the Article of the Limitation Act applicable to a suit for a charge, as to which there are two conflicting decisions of this Court referred to above.

This suit was brought under the new Tenancy Act and under s. 106 of that Act suits for arrears are to be heard by a Judge who is also a Revenue Officer. The suit against defendant No. 2 as originally brought was not a suit for an arrear, as it was expressly denied that he was a tenant. It was held in Singai Murlidhar v. Lala Premnarain (1) that a suit for money charged on land is not a suit for arrears of rent. In a properly framed suit the landlord may claim both reliefs in the alternative or as a supplement. Thus a suit against the tenant for arrears of rent may be one, subject to the law of limitation, to obtain a personal decree as well as one for sale of the holding. That decision is under the old law, under which all suits between landlords and tenants had to be tried by Revenue Officers, while under the new Act only suits for arrears are triable. The suit as originally framed against defendant No. 2 not being a suit for arrears was not triable by a Revenue Officer.

In Ganpat v. Trimbak (5) it was held that the venue in a case is determined by the nature of the claim as brought. That it is a well known rule of construction that an Act by which the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts of Judicature is taken away must be construed strictly [Prosunno Coomar Paul Chowdhury v. Kolash Chunder Paul Chowdhury (6)] and it is exceedingly doubtful whether when a landlord is sued as an alienee the Legislature intended his

(2) 3 N. L. R. 81.

(3) 34 C. 329; 11 C. W. N. 424; 5 C. L. J. 334; 9 Bom. L. R. 402; 2 M. L. T. 133; 17 M. L. J. 154; 4 A. L. J. 329; 31 I. A. 87 (P. C.).

(4) 13 Ind. Cas. 982; 8 N. L. R. 29 at p. 33.

(5) 19 Ind. Cas. 759; 9 N. L. R. 54.

(6) 8 W. R. 428; B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 759; 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 827.

special position to affect the jurisdiction. It will appear, therefore, that the jurisdiction of Additional Munsifs or Subordinate Judges, who are Revenue Officers should be strictly confined to suits for arrears under s. 106 of the new Tenancy Act. The Tahsildar, therefore, had no jurisdiction to try the suit as originally brought against defendant No. 2.

The plaintiff, however, by admitting that the defendant No. 2 was a tenant converted the suit into one for arrears of rent which gave the Tahsildar jurisdiction. The suit must be deemed to have been properly instituted against defendant No. 2 on the date of that admission which is more than a year after the coming into force of the new Tenancy Act, and, therefore, under the limitation under that Act only 3 years' arrears of rent can be claimed. The question of returning the plaint for presentation to the proper Court does not arise, as the plaint must be considered to have been amended by converting the suit into one for arrears of rent against a tenant.

The view of the lower Appellate Court is, therefore, correct. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORIGINAL DECREE No. 95
OF 1924.

May 15, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Ewart Greaves, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Mukerji.

NAGENDRA NATH AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

JUGAL KISHORE ROY AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 69, 70—Contribution, suit for—Bona fide claim to property—Person depositing money, if entitled to recover—"Interested in payment of money," meaning of—Implied request, origin of—"Lawful payment," meaning of.

Where payment is made by a person who puts forward a bona fide claim to the property in dispute, he is entitled to the protection afforded under s. 69 of the Contract Act, even though it ultimately transpires, as a result of litigation, that he had no interest for the protection whereof the payment was made. [p. 283, col. 1.]

Bindubashini Dassi v. Harendra Lal Roy, 25 C. 305; 2 C. W. N. 159; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 205, Radha Madhub Samanta v. Sasti Ram Sen, 26 C. 826; 13 Ind. Dec.

(N. S.) 1129, Sarafat Ali v. Issar Ali, 12 Ind. Cas. 30; 45 C. 691 at p. 695; 22 C. W. N. 347; 27 C. L. J. 607. Nobin Krishna Bose v. Mon Mohun Bose, 7 C. 573; 9 C. L. R. 183; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 917, Smith v. Dinonath Mookerjee, 12 C. 213; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 145, Upendra Chandra Mitter v. Tara Prosanna Mukerjee, 30 C. 794; 7 C. W. N. 609 and Chandra Sekhar Kar v. Nafar Chandra Kundu, 4 C. L. J. 555, referred to.

The expression "interested in the payment of the money" in s. 69, Contract Act, is comprehensive enough to include cases of apprehension of any kind of loss or inconvenience, and is not restricted to cases of individuals who are sure to suffer actual detriment assessable in money value. [ibid.]

Tulsha Kunwar v. Jageshwar Prasad, 28 A. 563; A. W. N. (1906) 114; 3 A. L. J. 372, Subramania Iyer v. Vengappa Reddi, 4 Ind. Cas. 1083; 33 M. 232; 19 M. L. J. 750 and Pankhabati Chaudhurani v. Nonihal Singh, 21 Ind. Cas. 207; 18 C. W. N. 778; 19 C. L. J. 72, referred to.

In a suit under s. 69 of the Contract Act it is essential that there should be, firstly, a person who is bound by law to make a certain payment, secondly, another person who is interested in such payment being made, and thirdly, a payment by such last mentioned person. [ibid.]

A debt for money paid arises where a person has paid money for another under circumstances and upon occasions which make it just and equitable that it should be re-paid; a debt or promise to pay is then implied in law without any actual agreement to that effect. [ibid.]

Section 70 of the Contract Act is not limited to persons standing in particular relations to one another and except in the requirement that the act shall be lawful, no condition is prescribed as to the circumstances under which it shall be done. The section does not justify the officious interference of one man with the affairs or property of another or to impose obligations in respect of services which the person sought to be charged did not wish to have rendered. [p. 284, cols. 1 & 2.]

Damodara Mudaliar v. Secretary of State for India, 18 M. 88; 4 M. L. J. 205; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 410 and Chedi Lal v. Bhagwan Das, 11 A. 234; A. W. N. (1889) 67; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 577, referred to.

The word "lawfully" in s. 70 is not a mere surplusage and it must be considered in each individual case whether the person who made the payment had any interest in making it, and if not, the payment cannot be said to have been made lawfully. [p. 284, col. 2; p. 285, col. 1.]

Raja Baikunto Nath Dey Bahadur v. Uday Chand Maiti, 2 C. L. J. 311, Panchkori Ghosh v. Hari Das Jati, 31 Ind. Cas. 311; 25 C. L. J. 325; 21 C. W. N. 394, Ram Tuhul Singh v. Biseswar Lal, 2 I. A. 131; 23 W. R. 305; 15 B. L. R. 208; 3 Sar. P. C. J. 477; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 136 P. C.) and Mohendra Ghoshal v. Bhuvan Mardana, 6 Ind. Cas. 810; 38 C. 1; 14 C. W. N. 945; 12 C. L. J. 566, referred to.

The existence of an interest is generally a test as to the lawful character of a payment, but even if an interest were not shown to exist, payments on account of another, if lawfully made, would generally be provided for by s. 70 of the Contract Act. [p. 285, col. 1.]

Appeal against a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Asansole, Burdwan, dated the 15th January 1924.

Mr. Bankim Chandra Mukherji and Babu Charu Chandra Ganguli, for the Appellants.

Babus Surendra Nath Ghosal and Krishna Kishore Basak, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Mukerji, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for contribution instituted on the allegation that the plaintiff and the defendants who are governed by the Mitakshara Law were the lessees of a colliery named the Palashdiha Colliery that the landlords obtained a decree for arrears of rent in respect of the said colliery and brought to sale another colliery named the Lachipur Colliery belonging to them in execution of the said decree, that the father of the appellants, that is to say, the defendant No. 1 Asutosh Roy, purchased the same in the name of his son Nagendra Nath Roy, the first appellant; that the plaintiff's mother, as guardian of the plaintiff in order to save the property deposited Rs. 3,771-0 6 with the permission of the Court and had the sale set aside, and that, therefore, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the said amount, together with costs of the deposit and interest amounting in all to Rs. 6,081 8 6.

The defendants Nos. 2 and 3 who are the father and the uncle of the plaintiff admitted the plaintiff's claim and the defendants Nos. 4 to 6 compromised the case with him. The only contesting defendant was the defendant No. 1, the father of the present appellants. The defence of this defendant was that the parties were not governed by the Mitakshara Law, that the plaintiff had no share in the property and so was not interested in making the payment, that the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 really made the payment in the name of the plaintiff and that the payment was a voluntary one, and consequently the plaintiff was not entitled to be re-imbursed.

The learned Subordinate Judge has granted the plaintiff a decree as against the appellants for a half of the amount of Rs. 3,571-0 6 and also of Rs. 50, together with interest and costs, the said half representing the appellants' 8 annas share in the property. He has also passed a decree against the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on their own admission for an amount proportionate to their share. Against this decree the present appeal has been preferred.

The first objection urged on behalf of the appellants is to the effect that the learned Subordinate Judge was wrong in holding that the parties are governed by the Mitakshara Law. On this point the evidence is very scanty on either side and what is there on the record is exceedingly conflicting. All that is proved in the case is that the parties are Chhatris by caste; and it follows from this fact that at some time or other they must have migrated from outside Bengal. When this migration took place or where the ancestors of the parties came from, it is not possible to ascertain. It is proved that the parties are related to the Roys of Palashdighi and it is said that the latter claimed to be governed by the Mitakshara Law, but it has been shown on the other hand that they failed to establish the claim. An up-country Misra Brahmin is said to be the priest of the family, but his services are availed of only on more important occasions and on other occasions Bengali priests officiate. This is all the evidence and, in my opinion, it is wholly insufficient for discharging the burden which undoubtedly lies on the plaintiff, who as well as the defendants are inhabitants of Bengal, to prove that they are governed by the Mitakshara Law. The respondent urges that the appellants are not entitled to re-open and re-agitate the question in view of the fact that when the respondent put in the money, the pleader for the auction-purchaser Nagendra Nath Roy, who is the appellant No. 1, stated that he had no instruction to oppose the making of the deposit. To this, however, the answer is that the appellant Nagendra Nath Roy has been brought on the record of this case, not in his capacity as auction-purchaser but as one of the heirs of Asutosh Roy who was one of the judgment-debtors in the decree in execution of which the sale took place, and Nagendra Nath Roy was not present in those proceedings in his present capacity as representative of the deceased judgment-debtor and moreover it does not appear that any of the judgment-debtors under the said decree had notice of the deposit that was about to be made. Under the circumstances I am of opinion that the appellants are not precluded from urging that the parties are not governed by the Mitakshara Law. In my judgment the plaintiff has failed to prove that he had in fact any interest in the property. The learned Subordinate Judge has allowed the plaintiff's claim under s. 69 of the Contract Act on the ground that he had an interest in the payment of the money as he had a share in the property that had been sold, but in this finding of fact I am unable to agree. This, however, does not dispose of the question as to the applicability of s. 69 for it has been laid down in a series of cases that where payment is made by a person who puts forward a bona fide claim to the property in dispute he is entitled to the protection afforded by s. 69 of the Contract Act even though it ultimately transpires, as a result of litigation, that he had not in fact or in law the interest for the protection whereof the payment was made [Bindubashini Dassi v. Harendra Lal Roy (1) and Radha Madhub Samanta v. Sasti Ram Sen (2).] This extended view of the expression "interested in the payment of the money" has been adopted in consonance with the exposition of the law embodied in s. 69 of the Contract Act to the effect that the expression is comprehensive enough to include cases of apprehension of any kind of loss or inconvenience and is not restricted to cases of individuals, who are sure to suffer actual detriment assessable in money value. Section 69 of the Indian Contract Act lays down that "A person who is interested in the payment of money which another is bound by law to pay, and who, therefore, pays it, is entitled to be re-imbursed by the other." In a suit under this section it is essential that there should be, firstly, a person who is bound by law to make a certain payment, secondly, another person who is interested in such payment being made, and, thirdly, a payment by such last mentioned person. If these circumstances exist, the fiction of an implied request from the defendant to the plaintiff to make the payment may be properly imported into the case so as to bring it within the section and thus the right to re-imbursement is created. A debt for money paid arises where a person has paid money for another under circumstances and upon occasions which make it just and equitable that it should be repaid; a debt or promise to pay is then implied in law, without any actual agreement to that effect. Sir Frederick Pollock in his book on the Indian Contract Act expressed an opinion that s. 69 of the Act lays down in one respect a wider rule than appears to be supported by an English Authority, and that the words "interested in the payment of money which another is bound by law to pay" might include the apprehension of any kind of loss or inconvenience or at any rate of any detriment capable of being assessed in money, while that was not enough in the common law, to found a claim to re-imbursement by the person interested, if he makes the payment himself. This view has been judicially adopted by Stanley, C. J., in the case of Tulsha Kunwar v. Jogeshwar Prasad (3) and by the Madras High Court in the case of Subramania Iyer v. Vengappa Reddi (4) and by this Court in the case of Pankhabati Chaudhurani v. Nonihal Singh (5).

[90 I. C. 1925]

Now what are the facts in the present case? The plaintiff claiming to have a share in the properties sold under the decree of the landlords applied for permission to deposit the decretal dues and compensation for setting aside the sale. There is nothing to indicate that he did not bona fide believe at the time that he had such a share. The pleader for the auction-purchaser intimated to the Court that he had no instructions in the matter. The plaintiff adduced evidence and proved to the satisfaction of the Court that he had the interest he claimed and that he was entitled to have the sale set aside on deposit of the decretal amount and compensation. The Court granted the permission and the plaintiff thereupon made the deposit and it does not appear that any objection was taken at any subsequent stage to the plaintiff's assertion of the right that he claimed. Under these circumstances it may fairly be held that the plaintiff should succeed on the provisions contained in s. 69 of the Contract Act. This view is in accord with what was said with regard to that section in the case of Sarafat Ali v. Issar Ali (6).

Assuming, however, that s. 69 is not applicable, the question arises as to whether the claim can be supported on the principles contained in s. 70 of the Contract Act. This section lays down three circumstances as necessary to found the right of demand, viz., first that the act should be lawfully

(3) 28 A. 563; A. W. N. (1906) 114; 3 A. L. J. 372.

(4) 4 Ind. Cas. 1083; 33 M. 232; 19 M. L. J. 750.

(5) 21 Ind. Cas. 207; 18 C. W. N. 778; 19 O. L. J. 72.

(6) 42 Ind. Cas. 30; 45 O. 691 at p. 695; 22 O. W. N. 347; 27 O. L. J. 607.

(1) 25 C. 305; 2 C. W. N. 150; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 205.

(2) 26 C. 826; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1129.

done for another, second, that it should not be the doer's intention to do it gratuitously, and, third, that the other party should enjoy the benefit of it.

Now as regards the first of the above-mentioned three circumstances, the word 'lawfully' has been the subject of judicial interpretation in several cases in which some points of diversity are noticeable. In the case of Damodara Mudaliar v. Secretary of State for India (7) the Government had repaired a tank from which were irrigated lands in the zemindari of the defendants and also raiayatwari villages held under the Government which had been severed from the zemindari and it was not found that there was any request either express or implied on the part of the defendants to the Government to execute the repairs, but it was found that the defendants knew that the repairs which were necessary for the preservation of the tank were being carried out and did not wish to execute them themselves except as contractors and that they had enjoyed the benefit of the work done. Sir Arthur Collins, C. J., and Shephard, J., pointed out that the statement of the law as contained in this section is derived from the notes to Lampleigh v. Braithwait (8) and perhaps indirectly from the Roman Law and goes further than what is justified by the English cases. They held in that case that there certainly may be difficulties in applying a rule stated in such wide terms as is expressed in s. 70, that according to the section it was not essential that the act should have been necessary in the sense that it was done under circumstances of pressing emergency or even that it should have been necessary to be done for the preservation of property, and that the section could, therefore, be extended to cases in which no question of salvage arises, and, further observed thus: "It is not limited to persons standing in particular relations to one another, and except in the requirement that the act shall be lawful, no condition is prescribed as to the circumstances under which it shall be done;" and also "It is plain that the section ought not to be read so as to justify the officious interference of one man with the affairs or property of another, or to impose obligations in respect of services which the person sought to be charged did not wish to have rendered. In the present case there can be no doubt that the Government acted lawfully in repairing the tank. The act was lawful whether done with a view of benefiting all the villages under the tank or the Government villages only, and whether or not done with the intention of charging the zemindars. Having regard to the fact that the zemindars knew of the intention to execute the repairs and did not disapprove, we think that if the repairs were done for the zemindars, they were done lawfully for them". This decision has been considered in several later decisions of the same Court, but its authority in so far as the aforesaid propositions are concerned has remained unchallenged. In the case of Chedi Lal v. Bhagwan Das (9) which was a case of satisfaction of a mortgage-decree by a person not subject to any legal obligation thereunder, Straight, J., observed. "But I presume that the Legislature intended something when it used the word 'lawful' and that it had in contemplation cases in which a person held such a relation to another as either...to justify an inference that by some act done for another person the party doing the act was entitled to look for compensation for it to the person for whom it was done. Here there was in my opinion no such relation between the parties as would create any such right or from which it could be reasonably inferred. If the plaintiffs, as mere volunteers, chose to put their hands into their pockets and to pay a sum of money not for the defendants but for themselves, that was their own look out and they cannot now claim the benefit of s. 70." In the same case Mahmud, J., remarked "I need only add that any other view of the law would amount to saying that the effect of s. 70 of the Contract Act is to enable a total stranger, without any express or implied request on behalf of a debtor to put himself into the shoes of the creditor by the simple fact of paying the debts due by such debtor. I do not think that the section could have been intended to involve such results". In the case of Raja Baikunto Nath Dey Bahadur v. Uday Chand Maiti (10) Mookerjee, J., observed that the word 'lawfully' in s. 70 is not a mere surplusage, and it must be considered in each individual case whether the person who made the payment had any interest in

(7) 18 M. 88; 4 M. L. J. 205; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 410.

(8) (1724) 1 Sm. L. C. 135 (11th Ed. p. 141); Hobart 105; 80 E. R. 255.

(9) 11 A. 234; A. W. N. (1889) 67; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 577.

(10) 2 C. L. J. 311.

making it, and if not, the payment cannot be said to have been made lawfully. In the case of Panchkori Ghose v. Hari Das Jati (11) Lancelot Sanderson, C. J., with the concurrence of Mookerjee, J., qualified the above proposition by stating that "any interest" must be a "lawful interest", and held that deposit of money by a person as a mortgagee on the strength of a forged mortgage bond with an ulterior object of subsequently getting hold of the land of the person for whom the payment was made was not a lawful payment within the meaning of s. 70. In a later case, viz., that of Sarafat Ali v. Issar Ali (6) Mookerjee and Walmsley, JJ., held that s. 73 was applicable to the case of a person who is wrongly made a party to a mortgage suit, as one of the representatives of a mortgagor, and a decree being obtained therein, satisfies the decree in full, and in the suit for contribution which he institutes it is found that he had no interest in the property, and observed that the exposition of the law as laid down in the cases of Rajah Baikunto Nath Dey Bahadur v. Uday Chand Maiti (10), Panchkori Ghosh v. Hari Das Jati (11) was not in conflict with the view that was now taken. In the case of Gopeswar Banerjee v. Braja Sundari Debi (12) where a Hindu reversioner made a payment to stop a sale under the Public Demands Recovery Act of property then in possession of a Hindu widow to whom he was reversioner, it was held that the payee had no such interest as might make the payment a lawful payment within the meaning of s. 70. It may perhaps be doubted as to whether in the last mentioned case too limited a meaning has not been given to the word 'lawful'. In some of these cases stress has been laid upon the dictum of the Judicial Committee in the case of Ram Tuhul Singh v. Biseswar Lal Sahoo (13) which runs in these words "It is not in every case in which a man has benefited by the money of another that an obligation to re-pay that money arises. The question is not to be determined by nice considerations of what may be fair or proper according to the highest morality. To support such a suit there must be an obligation, express or implied, to re-pay". This dictum it should be remembered was pronounced in a very special case in which the facts were very peculiar, and in connection with a suit which came into existence before the law was codified in the Indian Contract Act.

In the case of Mohendra Ghoshal v. Bhuban Mardana (14), where a tenant whose interest in a holding had not been affected by certain sales, he not having been a party to the decrees, deposited money to set aside the sales, without protest from any party or the Court, Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., observed that as the plaintiff in making the deposits acted with the approval of the Court, what he did was done lawfully and further observed thus:—"The terms of s. 70 are unquestionably wide, but applied with discretion they enable the Courts to do substantial justice in cases where it would be difficult to impute to the persons concerned relations actually created by contract. It is, however, especially incumbent on final Courts of fact to be guarded and circumspect in their conclusions and not to countenance acts or payments that are really officious."

In the present suit, of course, we are not satisfied that the plaintiff has been able to prove that parties are governed by the Mitakshara Law. That, however, does not matter, for his right to make the deposit was expressly gone into and found in his favour by the Court and he made the deposit under the permission of the Court. The payment made was thus a lawful payment according to the dictum of Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., in the case of Mohendra Ghoshal v. Bhuban Mardana (14), quoted above. It is not a case in which the deposit was allowed to be made without an adjudication of the plaintiff's right as was the case in Panchkori Ghosh v. Hari Das Jati (11), (see the observations of Coxe, J., at the bottom of page 327*). The position of the plaintiff in this case is very much like that of a person who obtains a decree declaring his right to deposit the money and then makes the deposit and subsequently the decree is found to be unfounded or wrongly passed as was the case in Bindubashini Dassi v. Harendra Lal Roy (1), and is entirely different from that of a person who has merely a claim which is subsequently found to be without foundation.

It was not a payment made by a wrongdoer simply for his own purposes as in

(11) 34 Ind. Cas. 341; 25 C. L. J. 325; 21 C. W. N. 394.

(12) 67 Ind. Cas. 40; 49 C. 470; 25 C. W. N. 1029; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 353.

(13) 2 I. A. 131; 23 W. R. 305; 15 B. L. R. 208; 3 Sar. P. O. J. 477; 3 Suth. P. O. J. 136 (P. C.).

(14) 6 Ind. Cas. 810; 38 C. 1; 14 C. W. N. 945; 12 C. L. J. 566.

*Page of 25 C. L. J.—[Ed.]

the case of Binda Kuar v. Bhonda Das (15), nor made fraudulently or for the purpose of manufacturing evidence of title to the land as in the case of Jinnat Ali v. Fateh Ali (16), Desai Himatsingji Joravarsingji v. Bhavabhai Kayabhai (17) and Bama Sundari Dasi v. Adhar Chundar Sarkar (18), nor a mere voluntary or officious payment as was the case in Yoyambal Boyee Ammani Ammal v. Naina Pillai Markayar (19) and Gordhanlal v. Darbar Shri Surajmalji (20), nor are there any materials on the record upon which it can be said that the payment was made with a sinister object such as was the case in Janki Prasad Singh v. Baldev Prasad (21).

In my opinion the existence of an interest is generally a test as to the lawful character of a payment, but even if an interest were not shown to exist payments on account of another, if lawfully made, would generally be provided for by s. 70 of the Act.

As regards the other two requisites of the section it is sufficient to state that there is nothing to indicate that the plaintiff intended to make the payment gratuitously, but all the circumstances point to his having made the deposit in order to save the property and to his having intended to look to the defendants for contribution proportionate to their interest. It has been urged that the plaintiff has not been able to prove that he had any separate funds. There is, however, some evidence that he has his own funds and what is more important is the undisputed fact that the payment was made by the plaintiff. It has not been contended, and on the authorities it cannot be contended, that the word 'does' in the s. 70 does not include payment of money. As regards the appellants having enjoyed the benefits of this payment, there can hardly be any question for there is the fact that Asutosh Roy in his capacity as judgment-debtor did, in fact, get back his share in the properties which had been lost to him by the sale. Beyond the fact that at the sale the property was purchased in the name of the appellant No. 1 there is nothing upon which it may be held that the deposit was made against the wishes of the judgment-debtors or that they ever repudiated it as having been made against their interest.

This, in my opinion, is a case in which it may very well be said that the payment was a lawful one; that it was not gratuitous or the result of an officious interference of a person who had no reason to think that he had an interest in making it, and that the appellants have admittedly enjoyed the benefits of the payment, that it was lawfully made at the time he made it, that he did so in good faith in the belief that he had an interest and not only that, he was also able to satisfy the Court under whose permission he was to act that he had such an interest. The case comes well within the principles laid down in a series of cases in which the right to be reimbursed in similar circumstances has been recognised; of which reference may be made to those of Nobin Krishna Bose v. Monmohun Bose (22), Smith v. Dinonath Mookerjee (23), Upendra Chandra Mitter v. Tara Prosanna Mukerjee (24) and Chandra Sekhar Kar v. Nafar Chandra Kundu (25). Some of these cases were decided without reference to s. 70 of the Contract Act; and in the last mentioned case it was observed that it is consistent with general principles of equity that those whose funds are used to meet the legitimate demands of others, when the latter have the benefit of such payments, are entitled to ask the latter to pay to the extent of the benefit, that they cannot retain the benefits and plead non-liability, and that where the codified law does not cover the case, the Court should apply the general law, legal and equitable. It is no doubt necessary to be very circumspect in the application of this general principle of justice, equity and good conscience, but the terms of s. 70 are wide enough to afford ample room for the application of this principle in a fit case. Upon the facts, to which I have already referred, the present case seems to me to be one in which it will be just to apply the provisions of that section.

One other argument deserves notice. It has been said that there are suits pending

(15) 7 A. 660; A. W. N. (1885) 176; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 850.

(16) 9 Ind. Cas. 219; 15 C. W. N. 332; 13 C. L. J. 616.

(17) 1 B. 613 at p. 653; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 935.

(18) 22 C. 28; 11 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 20.

(19) 3 Ind. Cas. 110; 33 M. 15; 6 M. L. T. 162; 19 M. L. J. 489.

(20) 26 B. 504; 4 Bom. L. R. 299.

(21) 30 A. 167; A. W. N. (1908) 58; 5 A. L. J. 163.

(22) 7 C. 573; 9 C. L. R. 182; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 917.

(23) 12 C. 213; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 145.

(24) 30 C. 794; 7 C. W. N. 609.

(25) 4 C. L. J. 555.

between the plaintiff's father and uncle, viz., the defendants Nos. 2 and 3 on the one hand and the appellants on the other, as to the liabilities of the former in respect of joint family funds in their hands and as the money which the plaintiff advanced was not his own money, plaintiff should not be allowed a decree, but that all the liabilities should be adjusted in the said suits. I do not, however, see any reason why the plaintiff should not be given a decree in the present case on the strength of the findings at which I have arrived. This decree will not stand in the way of the appellants showing, if they may, in these suits that the money which the plaintiff advanced as being his own, really belonged to the joint family, and getting credits therefor in the usual way if they succeed in showing the same.

The result is that while I do not agree in the reasons given by the learned Subordinate Judge I hold that the decree passed by him is substantially correct. The appeal therefore, fails and is accordingly dismissed with costs (one set). The hearing fee is assessed at 5 gold mohurs.

Greaves, J.—I agree.

M. B.

Appeal dismissed.

N. H.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1138 OF 1925.

July 10, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and
Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal.

JAGAT NARAIN LAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

Sheik HAWALDAR AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XX, r. 14—Pre-emption decree, form of—Date of payment, specification of.

The proper form of a decree for pre-emption is laid down in O. XX, r. 14 of the C. P. C. The date by which the purchase-money should be paid must be specified in the decree. It is not a compliance with this direction of the law to say that the money is to be paid within a certain period from the date on which the decree becomes final.

Second appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Gorakhpur, dated the 6th March 1925.

Mr. K. Verma, for the Appellants.

JUDGMENT.—We have heard the learned Counsel in this appeal. We think it must fail. The dispute between the parties was as to the amount of consideration, the vendee pleading that it was Rs. 3,493 and the plaintiffs asserting that the price was only Rs. 1,500. The Court of first instance found in favour of the plaintiffs, but the lower Appellate Court has directed the pre-emptors to pay the full purchase money of Rs. 3,493. The finding of the Court below regarding the amount of consideration is final. There is only one point to be noticed. The decree of the Court of first instance which the lower Appellate Court has affirmed was not a proper decree in a pre-emption suit. The Munsif directed the pre-emptors to pay the pre-emption money within 60 days of the date of the decree becoming final. The proper form of a decree for pre-emption is laid down in O. XX, r. 14 and the date by which the purchase money should be paid must be specified. It is not a compliance with this direction of the law to say that the money is to be paid within 60 days of the date on which the decree becomes final.

In the circumstances, while dismissing this appeal we think it right to say that the plaintiffs are entitled to deposit the pre-emption money of Rs. 3,493 odd within 60 days from to-day's date.

A point has been taken here before us on behalf of the appellants. It is said that the appeal to the lower Appellate Court was valued at Rs. 1,693 whereas under the lower Court's decree the plaintiffs pre-emptors have now to pay Rs. 1,993 more than the sum directed to be paid by the First Court. We think that this is an error for in the original memorandum of appeal the appeal is valued not at Rs. 1,693 but Rs. 1,993. Obviously the error is due to a misprint in the copy of the lower Appellate Court's judgment.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 7 of 1925.

June 25, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Mukerji and Mr. Justice Boys.

A. S. DE MELLO AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS
—PETITIONERS

THE NEW VICTORIA MILLS CO., LD.—
DEFENDANT—OPPOSITE-PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), ss. 24,

115—Transfer of case—Notice to other side, absence of—Illegality—Revision.

A District Judge has no jurisdiction to make an order transferring a pending suit from one Court to another at the instance of a party without giving notice to the other side.

Lachmi Narayan v. Balmakund, 81 Ind. Cas. 747; (1924) A. I. R. (P. C.) 198; 35 M. L. T. 143; 47 M. L. J. 441; 20 L. W. 491; (1924) M. W. N. 707; 10 O. & A. L. R. 1033; 5 P. L. T. 623; 40 C. L. J. 439; 26 Bom. L. R. 1129; 22 A. L. J. 990; 51 I. A. 321; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 171; 29 C. W. N. 391; 1 O. W. N. 629; 4 Pat. 61 (P. C.), followed.

A revision is competent against an order of a District Judge transferring a pending suit from one Court to another at the instance of a party without giving notice to the other side.

Fatima Begam v. Imdad Ali, 58 Ind. Cas. 560, 18 A. L. J. 351; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 83, followed.

Farid Ahmed v. Dulari Bibi, 6 A. 233; A. W. N. (1884) 45; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 842, dissented from.

Buddhoo Lal v. Mewa Ram, 63 Ind. Cas. 15; 19 A. L. J. 558; 43 A. 564 (F. B.), distinguished.

Civil revision from an order of the District Judge, Cawnpore, dated the 22nd December 1924.

Mr. N. P. Ashthana, for the Applicants.

Mr. J. M. Banerji, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is a petition in revision against an order of the learned District Judge of Cawnpore transferring a certain suit pending in the Court of one Subordinate Judge of Cawnpore to the Court of another Subordinate Judge at the same place. The complaint is that this order was passed at the instance of one of the parties without issuing a notice to the other.

A preliminary objection has been taken to the effect that no revision lay and the case of Farid Ahmed v. Dulari Bibi (1) has been cited as an authority. On behalf of the applicants the case of Fatima Begam v. Imdad Ali (2), has been cited. For the respondents it has been urged that the earlier case is a two Judges case and the later case is a single Judge case and, therefore, the earlier case is of greater weight than the later case. We have examined the case in Farid Ahmad v. Dulari Bibi (1) but have been unfortunately (with respect) unable to appreciate the grounds of the decision. The learned Judges appear to say that the ultimate decree was an appealable one and, therefore, no revision lay. But the decree that could be passed by the second Court would practically have nothing to do with the question of transfer. It is true that a question of jurisdiction might be raised after the transfer in the Second Court. But if that be so, the anomalous position would arise, viz: the subordinate Court would be sitting to decide whether the superior Court which made the order of transfer was right or not in making it. We prefer to follow the later case, we being also in agreement with it. The Full Bench case of Buddhoo Lal v. Mewa Ram (3) was also cited on behalf of the respondents, but that case is clearly distinguishable. Here the District Judge so far as the "case" was before him decided it altogether. This distinguishes the present case before us from the case before the Full Bench.

We are of opinion that a revision does lie on account of the provisions to be found in cl. (c) of s. 115 of the C. P. C. The learned Judge having acted illegally or with material irregularity in the exercise of his jurisdiction. We may also say that the learned Judge could not acquire jurisdiction to make the order of transfer at the instance of a party without giving notice to the other side; [see Lachmi Narayan v. Balmakund (4)].

The preliminary objection fails and the application succeeds. We set aside the order of the learned District Judge and remand the petition of the respondents for transfer to him for disposal after issuing notice to the opposite party, viz: the petitioners in this Court. Costs in this Court to abide the result, and will include Counsel's fees on the higher scale.

N. H.

Application accepted.

(3) 63 Ind. Cas. 15; 19 A. L. J. 558; 43 A. 564 (F. B.).

(4) 81 Ind. Cas. 747; (1924) A. I. R. (P. C.) 198; 35 M. L. T. 143; 47 M. L. J. 441; 20 L. W. 491; (1924) M. W. N. 707; 10 O. & A. L. R. 1033; 5 P. L. T. 623; 40 C. L. J. 439; 26 Bom. L. R. 1129; 22 A. L. J. 990; 51 I. A. 321; L. R. 5 A. (P. C.) 171; 29 C. W. N. 391; 1 O. W. N. 629; 4 Pat. 61 (P. C.).

(1) 6 A. 233; A. W. N. (1884) 45; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 842.

(2) 58 Ind. Cas. 560; 18 A. L. J. 351; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 83.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 353 OF 1925.

July 10, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy and Mr. Justice Panton.E. J. JUDAH AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—
PETITIONERS*versusEMPEROR—OPPOSITE-PARTY.Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 23, 24, 378, ill. (j), 380—Article given for repairs—Repairs not finished within fixed or reasonable time—Owner's right to take back article before completion of repairs—Workman's lien for repairs done in part—Removal of article by owner without paying for incomplete repairs—Theft—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 55, 170.*

Where a certain sum is fixed for the repair of an article and there is nothing to indicate that the repairer would be entitled to receive remuneration for a part of the repair, he has no right to retain the article until he receives his remuneration for the amount of work done. [p. 290, col. 1.]

A person who is entrusted to repair a certain article is not entitled to claim lien or to refuse to part with it after doing a certain amount of work which makes no improvement thereupon, and the owner is entitled to recover it from him without paying for such work. [ibid.]

The owner of a kettle gave it to a workman for repairing it within 6 or 7 days for Rs. 6. After 11 or 12 days when the owner demanded return of the kettle the workman said that he had not completed repairs but that he would return the kettle if he was paid Rs. 5 for the part of the work he had already done. The owner refused to pay the amount, took away the kettle from the almirah and walked out of the shop:

Held, (1) that s. 170 of the Contract Act had no application to the case and that the workman had no lien over the kettle; [ibid.]

(2) that even if the owner acted improperly in demanding and taking back the kettle, he was not guilty of an offence under s. 380, Penal Code, as his object was not to cause wrongful loss to the workman or wrongful gain to himself but to recover his kettle after the lapse of reasonable time. [p. 290, col. 2.]

Rule against an order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, dated the 27th April 1925.

Mr. Pugh and Babu Promode Kumar Ghose, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Khundkar, Deputy Legal Remembrancer, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Suhrawardy, J.—The three accused in this case have been convicted under s. 380, Indian Penal Code and sentenced to imprisonment till the rising of the Court and to pay a fine of Rs. 75 each or in default to one month's rigorous imprisonment. The case for the prosecution is that the accused No. 1 gave a kettle for repairs to the complainant who has an electric repair-shop at 7/1, Middleton Street, 11 or 12 days before the occurrence (as stated by the complainant) or on the 28th March as stated by the accused in the petition filed in this Court. The complainant promised to finish the repairs within 6 or 7 days. On the 18th April the accused went to the shop and demanded return of the kettle. The complainant refused to part with it as the repairs were not complete and ultimately agreed to return it to the accused if he was paid Rs. 5 for the repairs already done. I may mention here that the amount fixed for the repair of the kettle was Rs. 6. The accused refused to pay the amount, took away the kettle from the almirah and walked out with it. He was accompanied by the other accused and all of them were tried and found guilty as stated above. In order to sustain a conviction under s. 380, Indian Penal Code, it must be found that the accused dishonestly took the property out of the possession of the complainant, and "dishonestly" has been defined as meaning "with intent to cause wrongful gain to one person and wrongful loss to another person." It is necessary, therefore, to prove in this case, all the other facts being admitted, that the accused took away the article from the possession of the complainant with the intention of causing wrongful gain to himself or wrongful loss to the complainant. The matter stands thus: The complainant took the article for repairs on promise to finish them within 6 or 7 days. Not having done the work within the time stipulated, the accused went to his shop and took, admitting for argument's sake, forcible possession of the article. Did he, in these circumstances, commit the offence of theft? My answer to the question is in the negative. It is argued on behalf of the prosecution that the complainant had a lien on the kettle and the accused having removed it from his possession has committed an offence as defined in s. 378, Indian Penal Code, and illustrated in illustration (j) to that section. The learned Trial Magistrate also relied upon illustration (j) to find dishonest intention of the accused. Illustration (j) runs thus:—"If A owes money to Z for repairing the watch, and if Z retains the watch lawfully as a security for the debt, and A takes the watch out of Z's possession with the intention of depriving Z of the property as a security for his debt, he commits theft, inasmuch as he takes it dishonestly." Apparently the framers of the Code had in their mind the provisions of the law of contract as embodied in s. 170 of the present Contract Act, which creates a lien in favour of the bailee over goods on which he has spent labour or skill and for which he is entitled to remuneration. The learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer in support of the conviction argues that the complainant had a lien of Rs. 5 on the kettle for the amount of work done. This raises the intricate question of civil law relating to "quantum meruit." In the first place who has to determine that the complainant is entitled to Rs. 5? In the second place, as has been held in the case of Skinner v. Jager (1), where a certain sum is fixed for the repair of an article and there is nothing to indicate that the repairer would be entitled to receive remuneration for a part of the repair, he has no right to retain the article until he receives his remuneration for the amount of work done. There is no evidence in this case that there was any agreement or understanding, implied or express, between the parties, that if the kettle is repaired even in such a way as to be useless (the complainant admits it is useless in its present state), the complainant will be entitled to remuneration for the amount of work done. I am of opinion that complainant had no lien over the kettle and s. 170, Contract Act, does not apply.

We have been referred to the case of Queen-Empress v. Gangaram Santram (2), and upon the authority of that case it is argued that in order to constitute theft it is enough if the property is removed from the possession of a person who has an apparent title or colour of a right to it. On the facts of that case, though scantily reported in the report, the decision may be justifiable. But on the plain reading of the section of the Indian Penal Code, I think it must be clearly established that the accused did not commit the act with the intention as defined in s. 24, Indian Penal Code. It will be preposterous to lay down as a general rule of law that a person who is entrusted to repair a certain article is entitled to claim lien or to refuse to part with it after doing a certain amount of work which makes no improvement thereupon and the owner is not entitled to recover it from him without paying for such work as has been done. If I give a piece of cloth to a tailor to make a coat and he sends only a sleeve but does not do the rest of the work within the time stipulated or within a reasonable time, I have no right, according to the view urged on behalf of the Crown, to take back the cloth until I have paid for the work done. In the present case the complainant failed to perform his part of the contract, namely, to do the work within 6 or 7 days and the accused was justified in asking for a return of the article if the work was not done within a reasonable time. The learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer refers to certain sections of the Contract Act which deal with certain circumstances where time is of the essence of the contract. In a case where time is not of the essence of the contract, it must be performed within a reasonable time. In simple every day transaction like the present it is not inconsistent with law to look to the common sense side of the matter. Kettle is an article of every day use. A man may require to have this household article repaired with as little delay as possible. According to the accused it was retained by the complainant for 20 days and according to the complainant for 11 or 12 days. Conceding that the accused acted improperly in demanding and taking back the article, they have not certainly acted dishonestly. Their intention was not to cause wrongful loss to complainant or wrongful gain to themselves but to recover their thing after lapse of reasonable time. In my opinion the conviction cannot stand. I hold that the conviction of the petitioners under s. 380 is bad in law. I must express, however, my strong disapproval of the conduct attributed to the petitioners—conduct unworthy of gentlemen which they claim to be. The conviction of the petitioners and the sentences passed upon them are set aside. The fines, if paid, will be refunded.

Panton, J.—I agree.

S. D.

Rule made absolute.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 84 of 1925.

July 22, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Daniels.

Babu DWARKA PRASAD—APPLICANT
—APPELLANT

versus

MAKUND SARUP—OPPOSITE PARTY
—RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 195,

(1) 6 A. 139; A. W. N. (1883) 263; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 746.

(2) 9 B. 135; 9 Ind. Jur. 313; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 90.

476—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 193, 471—Perjury—Using forged document as genuine—Complaint by Court—Preliminary enquiry, whether necessary—Complaint, whether must specify false statement.

Section 195 of the Cr. P. C. is a restrictive section and there is nothing in that section or in s. 476 of the Code to prevent a Court from making a complaint under the ordinary law in respect of an offence under s. 471 of the Penal Code which it finds to have been committed before it. [p. 292, col. 1.]

The finding of a competent Court that a document produced before it is a forgery or that a witness has committed perjury before it, is sufficient prima facie ground for a complaint under s. 476 of the Cr. P. C., and no preliminary enquiry is necessary in such a case before making a complaint. [ibid.]

In making a complaint of an offence under s. 193 of the Penal Code, a Court should quote the passages in the statement of the accused in respect of which the complaint is made. Where, however, there is no doubt as to what is the statement complained of the complaint is not rendered invalid by the mere omission to specify therein the statement complained of. [ibid.]

Revision from an order of the District Judge, Bulandshahr, dated the 13th February 1925.

Mr. Kumuda Prasad, for the Appellant.

Mr. U. S. Bajpai, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application for revision of an order of the learned District Judge of Bulandshahr upholding a complaint of an offence under s. 471, Indian Penal Code, made by the Munsif of Ghaziabad against the applicant Dwarka Prasad. The learned District Judge in upholding the Munsif's order also added a charge under s. 193, and the applicant asks that his application be treated as an appeal.

Three points have been urged:—

(1) That s. 476, Cr. P. C., is inapplicable to the offence under s. 471, Indian Penal Code, because the alleged offence was not committed by a party to the suit but by a witness;

(2) that the order should not have been passed without a preliminary enquiry; and

(3) that the order under s. 193 is bad because the passages in the applicant's evidence alleged to be false are not quoted in the judgment.

The first point is one on which there was a difference of opinion between the different High Courts prior to the amendment of the Code in the year 1923. The Madras High Court in Govinda Iyer v. Rex (1) took the view that s. 476 in speaking of "any offence referred to in s. 195" incorporated the condition laid down in s. 195. As regards the offences enumerated in cl.

(c) of s. 195, namely forgery, and knowingly producing a forged document, this section was only applicable where the offence was committed by a party to any proceeding. These words were not repeated in s. 476, but the Madras view was that they were implied, and the Calcutta High Court took the same view. On the other hand the Bombay High Court in Waman Dinkar Kelkar v. Emperor (2), the Oudh Court in Ejaz Ali Khan v. Emperor (3) and this Court in Ganga Ram v. Emperor (4) took the view that the conditions of s. 195 were not incorporated in s. 476, and that the latter section applied to any of the offences enumerated in s. 195 whether committed by a party to a proceeding or not. The question is whether the position is affected by the extensive amendment of these two sections made by the Amending Act of 1923. Prior to the amendments s. 195 and s. 476 referred to two different things. Section 195 required a sanction or complaint by the Court for the prosecution of certain offences; s. 476 gave the Court a quite independent power to direct a prosecution of its own authority and send the case for trial on the merits to a First Class Magistrate. As the Code now stands, both the sanction by a Court and the direct order by a Court directing a prosecution are done away with, and the procedure in all cases is one of complaint by the Court. Section 195 describes the offences in respect of which a complaint is necessary, and s. 476 prescribes the procedure under which a complaint is to be made. It seems to me that this has modified the situation very materially, and that there is now strong ground for holding that the Legislature intended s. 476 to be co-extensive in its scope with cls. (b) and (c) of s. 195 (1). (Clause (a) of s. 195 is not concerned with Courts, and s. 476 does not refer to it). This, however, does not conclude the matter. The case is almost precisely parallel to Ganga Ram v. Emperor (4) and as Mr. Justice Piggott pointed out in that case, the question so far as the proceeding before him was concerned was

(1) 50 Ind. Cas. 824; 42 M. 540; 36 M. L. J. 448; 9 L. W. 422; 20 Cr. L. J. 344; (1919) M. W. N. 459; 26 M. L. T. 92 (F. B.).

(2) 51 Ind. Cas. 257; 43 B. 300; 20 Bom. L. R. 998; 20 Cr. L. J. 433.

(3) 66 Ind. Cas. 68; 24 O. C. 367; 23 Cr. L. J. 228; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 220.

(4) 42 Ind. Cas. 927; 40 A. 24; 15 A. L. J. 817; 19 Cr. L. J. 15.

mainly academical. Section 195 is a restrictive section, and there is nothing in that section and s. 476 to prevent the Munsif from making a complaint under the ordinary law in respect of the offence under s. 471, Indian Penal Code, which he found to have been committed before him.

As regards the second ground argued before me, this was not a case in which a preliminary enquiry was absolutely essential before a complaint could be filed. The charge against the applicant is that he filed a forged receipt in a suit in the Munsif's Court brought by Mukand Sarup against Musammatt Parbati and others to support the defence taken by the defendants, and asserted that he had paid to the plaintiff a sum of Rs. 1,035 on behalf of the defendants which, in fact, he had not paid. The finding of a competent Court that a document is a forgery, or that a witness has committed perjury before it, has always been considered sufficient prima facie ground for an order under s. 195 or s. 476. It is urged that the applicant being a witness in the case had no opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses on the other side. This is no doubt true, but the witnesses were cross-examined on behalf of the defendants in the case who had exactly the same interest as the applicant in upholding the genuineness of the receipt.

As regards the third ground, I think it would have been better if the learned Judge had quoted the passages in respect of which he made a complaint in his judgment instead of merely saying that they were evident on an examination of the applicant's evidence. There is, however, no doubt as to what those statements were. They are in the first place the statement that the applicant paid Rs. 1,035 to Mukand Sarup at various times, and, secondly, the statement that in the end after all these payments Mukand Sarup gave the applicant a receipt, and that this was the receipt which he produced in Court in Suit No. 13-5 of 1923.

There is, therefore, no ground for interfering with the order of the Court below, and the present application is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

LAHORE HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 182 OF 1925.

March 13, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Scott-Smith.
GOPAL DASS—ACCUSED—PETITIONER
versus
MAGHI RAM—COMPLAINANT—
RESPONDENT.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 436, 439—Discharge of accused—Subsequent trial on same facts, legality of—Pending proceedings—Interference by High Court—Revision, powers of.

The High Court has jurisdiction to interfere in a proceeding pending before a Magistrate in the exercise of its revisional powers and to pass an order of discharge in favour of the accused person if it considers such an order to be in the interests of justice. [p. 293, col. 2.]

When a Magistrate has passed an order discharging an accused person it is competent to the same Magistrate or to another Magistrate of co-ordinate jurisdiction to take fresh proceedings against the accused upon the same facts, although the order of discharge has not been set aside by a higher authority. Such a re-trial, however, should only be allowed under very special circumstances, and where such circumstances do not exist it is improper to allow the accused to be re-tried on the same charge. [ibid.]

Criminal revision from an order of the Additional District Magistrate, Amritsar, dated the 9th December 1924.

Lala Fakir Chand, for the Petitioner.

Lala Gobind Ram Khanna, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—On the 9th July 1923 Maghi Ram lodged a complaint against Gopal Das, petitioner, under s. 458, Indian Penal Code, in the Court of Sardar Sundar Singh, Honorary Magistrate. The Magistrate took cognizance of the complaint and issued summons to the accused under s. 448. Several adjournments were granted to the complainant in order to enable him to produce evidence and he finally closed his case after examining various witnesses on the 15th November 1923, and on the 20th November the Magistrate passed orders discharging the accused. From this order the complainant applied to the District Magistrate on the revision side asking that further enquiry should be ordered. The Additional District Magistrate passed the following order: 'The lower Court has thoroughly sifted the evidence produced by the complainant in this case and has discharged the accused for want of sufficient proof. With this finding I have no reason to differ and I, therefore, reject the petition for revision.'

This order is dated the 13th February

1924, and on the 16th February the complainant filed a fresh complaint against the accused on the same facts which was made over for disposal to the Bench of Honorary Magistrates. Objection was there taken that having regard to s. 403, Cr. P. C., the case could not be re-tried. The Bench decided, however, that there could be a re-trial and directed the complainant to produce his proof. An application for revision of this order was made to the Additional District Magistrate who declined to interfere. Gopal Das has come up to this Court on the revision side and it is contended on his behalf that, having regard to the previous order of discharge and refusal of the District Magistrate to set aside that order, it is improper if not illegal to try him de novo on the same facts. Lala Gobind Ram Khanna for the respondent raised a preliminary objection that this Court has no power to interfere on the revision side in exercise of the powers conferred upon it by s. 439 of the Cr. P. C. He referred in support of his argument to Azim Khan v. Empress (1), where it was held that the revisional powers conferred on the Chief Court by s. 439 of the Cr. P. C. do not include the power of setting aside, while the trial of the accused is still pending, interlocutory orders by which no penalty is imposed on the accused, e. g., an order overruling an objection taken on behalf of the accused to the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to entertain the charge, on the ground that a similar complaint had been previously made against the accused and dismissed.

This authority, no doubt, supports the contention of Mr. Gobind Ram Khanna but it has not been followed in later years certainly by the Chief Court or by this Court. In a recent case reported as Khairati Ram v. Malawa Ram (2), this Court interfered on the revision side and held that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to start certain proceedings against a certain person for an offence under s. 465 of the Indian Penal Code, except on the complaint in writing of the Court in which the forged document was produced in evidence and quashed the proceedings taken by the Magistrate as having been taken without jurisdiction. Similarly in other cases this Court has on the revision side set aside charges framed in the course of a trial under the Cr. P. C.

(1) 45 P. R. 1885 Cr.

(2) 85 Ind. Cas. 377; 5 L. 550; 26 Cr. L. J. 537; (1925) A. I. R. (L.) 266.

Moreover the new s. 561 (a), Cr. P. C., lays down that "Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent power of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice." Section 439 of the Cr. P. C., gives this Court the power to exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by ss. 195, 423, 425, 427 and 428 of the Code. Section 423 empowers an Appellate Court to pass an order of discharge and, therefore, I can see no reason why this Court should not in exercise of its revisional jurisdiction pass an order of discharge if it considers such an order to be in the interest of justice.

In Emperor v. Kiru (3), it was held that when a Magistrate has passed an order discharging an accused person it is competent to the same Magistrate or to another Magistrate of co-ordinate jurisdiction to take fresh proceedings against the accused upon the same facts although the order of discharge has not been set aside by higher authority. It must, therefore, be held in accordance with this ruling that there is nothing absolutely illegal in the present proceedings. It was, however, further held by the same Full Bench that "Generally speaking further enquiry after discharge is improper unless the order of discharge was manifestly perverse or foolish; or was based upon a record of evidence which was obviously incomplete." Now in the first case against the petitioner the complainant produced all the evidence which he had to produce and finally closed his case. The order of discharge was, therefore, passed after full enquiry and the Additional District Magistrate when application was made to him refused to set that order of discharge aside. Under these circumstances I consider that it would be manifestly improper to allow the accused to be re-tried. I think that such a re-trial should only be allowed under very special circumstances and no such circumstances have been alleged in the present case. I, therefore, quash the proceedings before the Bench of Honorary Magistrates and direct that the petitioner be discharged.

Z. K.

Proceedings quashed.

(3) 11 Ind. Cas. 132; 10 P. R. 1911 Cr.; 24 P. W. R. 1911 Cr.; 12 Cr. L. J. 361; 205 P. L. R. 1911 (F. B.).

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 237 of 1924.

June 24, 1924.

Present:—Justice Sir Babington Newbould, Kt., and Mr. Justice Chakravarti.REZ MUHAMMAD AND OTHERS—APPLICANTS

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 342—Examination of accused, nature of.

What is necessary for the purpose of s. 342, Cr. P. C., is that the accused should be brought face to face solemnly with an opportunity given to him to make a statement from his place in the dock in order that the Court may have the advantage of hearing his defence of he is willing to make one with his own lips. The section must not be interpreted so as to give the Court the power to cross-examine the accused. [p. 294, col. 2.]

Where a Court asks an accused, "What is your defence", and he replies, "I am innocent", it is sufficient compliance with s. 342, Cr. P. C. [p. 294, col. 1.]

Mr. Narendra Kumar Bose (for Sir Provas Chandra Mitter), Messrs. Debendra Narain Bhattacharjee and Nisitha Nath Ghattak, for the Applicants.

Mr. Khondkar, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—This Rule has been granted on two grounds. The first is that the Magistrate who tried the case did not comply with the mandatory provisions of s. 342 of the Cr. P. C. In this case the Trial Magistrate did in fact question the accused after the witnesses for the prosecution had been examined and cross-examined and before they were called on for their defence. It is, however, contended that the questions put to the accused at this time were not such as required by s. 342, Cr. P. C. Five accused were tried and one was acquitted. To all the accused the same question was put, "what is your defence." Two of them replied, "I am innocent. I will file a written statement." The other two replied, "I am innocent." It is argued that the questions put to these accused were not of the nature contemplated by the section, that is to say, the Court did not question the accused generally on the case for the purpose of enabling them to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against them. In support of this contention reliance is placed on the decision of a Bench of this Court in the case of Sailendra Chandra Singh v. Emperor (1). In that case the record of the examination of the accused after examination of all the prosecution witnesses was in the following words only, "Plea?—Not guilty." The learned Judges who decided that case were not prepared to say that there had been in that case substantial compliance with the provisions of s. 342. But we do not think that that case is sufficient to support the point that is urged before us now. There is a great difference between asking an accused person, what is his plea and asking him, what is his defence. It has been for many years the more usual practice to interpret the s. 342 as requiring the Court to give the accused an opportunity of stating his defence, if he wishes to do so. It has been repeatedly held that this section must not be interpreted so as to give the Court the power to cross-examine the accused. The result is that in the majority of criminal cases that come to this Court in fact in nearly all of them we find that the questions put to the accused under this section are of a formal nature in words similar to those which have been used in the present case. The only reported case in which the plea now urged has been decided in the petitioners' favour is the decision of a single Judge of the Patna High Court in the case of Bhokhari Singh v. Emperor (2) from the view expressed in that judgment we must respectfully differ. The maxim of optimus legis interpretes consuetudo is applicable to the point we have to decide and there can be no doubt that the usual practice has been followed in the present case. The object of the section has been pointed out by Mr. Justice Rankin in Promotha Nath Mukhopadhyaya v. Emperor (3). We are in agreement with the view there expressed that what is necessary is that the accused should be brought face to face solemnly with an opportunity given to him to make a statement from his place in the dock in order that the Court may have the advantage of hearing his defence, if he is willing to make one with his own lips. In the present case the accused were given an opportunity of making their defence with their own lips if they wished to do so, and they clearly showed that they did not wish to do so. For the above reasons we hold that this ground on which the Rule has been issued must fail.

(1) 77 Ind. Cas. 812; 38 C. L. J. 175; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 153; 25 Cr. L. J. 460.

(2) 81 Ind. Cas. 199; (1924) Pat. 198; 5 P. L. T. 445; 25 Cr. L. J. 711; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 791.

(3) 71 Ind. Cas. 792; 27 C. W. N. 389 at p. 406; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 470; 24 Cr. L. J. 248; 50 C. 518.

As regards the second ground we think the petitioners have a good case. The learned Sessions Judge who heard the appeal thought it necessary to have a map of the locality prepared by a competent surveyor. This map was prepared and forwarded to him. Though no reference is made to the map in the judgment it seems incredible that after the map had been prepared it should not have been used by the Court of Appeal; nor can we accept the contention raised on behalf of the Crown that it was not used as evidence. If it was used it must have been used as showing the relative position of certain plots, that is to say as evidence of the positions of these plots.

We accordingly make this Rule absolute on this ground only. We set aside the judgment of the Appellate Court and direct that the appeal be re-heard. If in the view of the Appellate Court it is necessary to make use of the map evidence, it should be taken under the provisions of s. 428, Cr. P. C. to prove it properly.

s. D.

Application allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 108 OF 1925.

May 6, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Macpherson.

Babu HARBANS NARAIN SINGH AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

MOHAMMAD SAYEED AND OTHERS—

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 107, 144, 145, 439—Dispute regarding land—Order confirming possession of one party without following procedure laid down in s. 145, legality of—Revision.

The Police submitted a report to a Magistrate recommending action under s. 144 followed by proceedings under s. 145 of the Cr. P. C. in respect of a plot of land against certain parties. On this report the Magistrate passed an order directing that the parties should appear before him on a certain date and that in the meantime they should not commit a breach of the peace by going to the land in dispute. On the parties appearing before him the Magistrate heard the lawyers and passed an order to the effect that one of the parties was in possession of the land and that the others were forbidden to interfere with the former's possession. The order wound up by saying that in case of interference with such possession the parties guilty of interference would be proceeded against under s. 107 of the Cr. P. C., and that if they had any right they had better go to the Civil Court. On revision:

Held, that the order passed by the Magistrate was, in substance though not in form, an order under s. 145 of the Cr. P. C., and that having been passed without observing the formalities indispensable under that section was passed without jurisdiction and must be set aside. [p. 236, col. 2.]

Criminal revision from a decision of the District Magistrate, Monghyr, dated the 14th February 1925, affirming that of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Monghyr, dated the 14th January 1925.

Messrs. K. B. Dutt and P. C. Rai, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Neyamatullah, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This is an application against an order dated the 14th January 1925 of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Monghyr.

On 19th November 1923 an order under s. 144 of the Cr. P. C. was made absolute by a Deputy Magistrate of Monghyr against the petitioner Harbans Narain Singh and also the opposite party Rita Singh with the result that the opposite party Muhammad Ishaq was directed to be retained in possession of an area of 30 bighas which was the land in dispute between the parties or a part of it. The Magistrate added that if the parties to the proceeding created trouble after the expiry of two months, action under s. 107 or s. 145 of the Cr. P. C. would be taken. Harbans Narain moved the High Court and on 1st February 1924 this Court set aside the order on the view that it was not one which could be properly made under s. 144. The learned Judge further directed as follows:

"If there is any apprehension of a breach of the peace it will be open to the Magistrate to take proper proceedings according to law."

On the 2nd December 1924 the Police submitted a report recommending action under s. 144 followed by proceedings under s. 145 in respect of a plot of 40 bighas (out of a large area of about 163 bighas) which apparently includes the area of 30 bighas already mentioned, and showing the petitioners as first party, Muhammad Saiyid and others as second party, Fazal Karim and Ishaq, already mentioned, as third party and Rita Singh as fourth party. On that report the Sub-Divisional Magistrate passed the following order on 9th December.

"All parties should appear before me with their documentary evidence on 20th December. Meantime they should not commit a breach of the peace by going to the lands in dispute."

On 12th January he "heard the lawyers for the first three parties" and two days later passed the order of which revision is sought. It runs as follows:—

"The first party claim the land as bakast, but there is no documentary evidence in support of their claim that this particular land is bakast. The second party claimed settlement of 40 bighas of the disputed land from the previous maliks and produced rent receipts in support of their claim. He was also sued by the late maliks of 12-annas, etc., share for arrears of rent. The third party claims 30 bighas out of the disputed land as his rai-yati but the rent receipts filed do not seem to be reliable. The fourth party claim to be sub-tenants of the second.

I consider that the second party are in possession 40 bighas of the disputed land. The others are forbidden not (sic) to interfere with their possession. If they do, they will be proceeded against under s. 107, Cr.P. C. They had better go to the Civil Court if they have any rights."

Mr. K.B. Dutt on behalf of the petitioners contends that the order is a judicial one and that this Court has jurisdiction to set it aside. On behalf of the opposite party it is suggested that the order is a judicial one under s. 144 which should not be set aside as it has spent its force.

In his explanation the Sub-Divisional Magistrate claims that his order was an executive one, and states that he thought it necessary before taking action under the Cr. P. C. to hear the parties but that after hearing them he did not consider that any action under the Code was necessary. Some support for the view that the order is an executive one might be derived from the fact that in the copy of the order filed with the petition the designation "S. D. O." is appended to the initials of the Magistrate but those letters do not appear in the original.

If the order was passed by him as a Court, the Magistrate manifestly could not avoid responsibility now by saying that he passed the order in an executive capacity. It is, however, difficult to say what the order really is. It does not indeed purport to be passed under s. 144 or s. 145 and the Sub-Divisional Magistrate apparently desired to avoid issuing orders under s. 144 because this Court had set aside a similar order, and also to avoid taking proceedings under s. 145 to which the order of this Court pointed but which besides being troublesome too often lead to nothing, as they have to be set aside on technical grounds. But actually the order passed differs little from the previous order which was set aside by this Court (except in the fact that it does not purport to be made under s. 144) and that order was set aside on the ground that though passed under s. 144 it was actually one contemplated by s. 145 which was passed without observing the formalities indispensable under the provision. It is difficult to see that the order now challenged is anything else than a thinly disguised order under s. 145. In substance though not in form the Sub-Divisional Magistrate took action under the Cr.P.C. and once again passed an order under s. 145. He decided a question of disputed possession and forbade interference with the possession of the party in whose favour he decided, directing the opposite parties to the Civil Court. He could not do this executively. The mere fact that he proposed to enforce his order by action under s. 107 of the Cr. P. C. instead of by a prosecution under s. 188 of the Penal Code hardly affects the matter. A similar reference to s. 107 had been made in the illegal order under s. 144 which this Court had set aside. I am constrained to the conclusion that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate acted judicially and passed without jurisdiction an order which he could only pass under s. 145.

The Rule is made absolute and the order of the 14th January is set aside. It is of course open to the Magistrate to take any proceedings to keep the peace which are warranted by law, but he must face the position squarely and realise that an order contemplated by s. 145 cannot be passed by a short cut such as was taken in the present instance.

Z. K.

Rule made absolute.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

REFERRED TRIAL No. 47 OF 1924

AND CRIMINAL APPEALS NOS. 297 AND 337

OF 1924.

October 23, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Krishnan.

[On a difference of opinion between
Mr. Charles Gordon Spencer, Officiating
Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Reilly.]In re GAM MALLU DORA alias MALLAYA AND OTHERS—ACCUSED—
APPELLANTS.Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 235, 239—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 121—Waging war against King—Various incidents on various dates —Continuing offence—"Same transaction"—Joint trial of persons accused of various acts, legality of.

Six persons were jointly tried for the offence of waging war against the King, by attacking and looting a number of Police Stations on various dates and by attacking the forces of the Crown at various places on different occasions. It was shown that one of the accused joined the party waging war only long after some of the other accused had ceased to be members of that party. But all the accused were found to be followers of one leader animated throughout with the same motive of overthrowing the British Government:

Held, Per Spencer, Offg. C. J. and Krishnan, J., (Reilly, J., dissenting) that the various incidents which constituted the waging of war were parts of the same transaction and that the joint trial of the accused was justified under s. 239 (1) of the Cr. P. C. [p. 307, col. 2.]

Per Krishnan, J.—The question of the legality of a joint trial really depends upon the accusation made and not upon the result of the trial; provided that the accusation is a real one and not a mere excuse for a joinder of charges which cannot be otherwise joined. [p. 306, col. 2.]

Abdul Salim v. Emperor, 69 Ind. Cas. 145; 49 C. 573; 35 C. L. J. 279; 26 C. W. N. 680; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 107; 23 Cr. L. J. 656, followed.

The waging of war is a continuing offence beginning with the first act of war and going on till the war is ended in some manner. [ibid.]

The various incidents in a war may be so disconnected as to form different transactions. But the question whether they form parts of the same transaction or must necessarily be held to be different transactions has to be judged on the facts of each case. [ibid.]

The usual tests applied to decide whether different acts are parts of the same transaction are proximity of time, unity of place, unity of purpose or design and continuity of action. It is not necessary that all of them should be present to make the several incidents parts of the same transaction. Unity of place and proximity of time are not important tests at all; but the main test is unity of purpose. If the various acts are done in pursuance of a particular end in view and as accessory thereto, they may be treated as parts of the same transaction. [p. 307, col. 1.]

Per Spencer, Offg. C. J.—When a series of acts are so connected by community of purpose and continuity of action as to form not only one transaction but a single offence, proximity of time between the performance of the various acts composing that offence not being the sole test of the unity of the transaction, s. 235 of the Cr. P. C. authorizes persons accused of doing those acts to be charged and tried at one trial for them all. Section 239 (d) of the Cr. P. C. authorizes the trial of more persons than one on one charge and at one trial if they are accused of different offences committed in the course of the same transaction. [p. 299, cols. 1 & 2.]

Intervals of time between the commission of a series of acts do not necessarily import want of continuity when the aims of those jointly tried have throughout been directed to one and the same objective. [p. 299, col. 2.]

The waging of war is essentially a continuing offence, in which several incidents, which may in themselves be separate offences, may be comprised. [p. 299, col. 1.]

Rebellion implies a state of being rather than the doing of any act, although for a conviction it is necessary to prove that some overt act was committed by the offender. Rebellions and wars continue until they are suppressed by capture or destruction of the rebel forces or by the rebels laying down their arms and making their submission as subjects to their Sovereign and receiving his pardon. [ibid.]

Per Reilly, J. (dissentiente.)—The charge in a Sessions trial must be based on evidence given before the Committing Magistrate. A misjoinder of persons cannot be escaped by deliberately making the charge wider than the evidence produced to support it, in order to represent all the persons tried as accused of all the offences or incidents included, though there is no prospect nor intention of proving more than that each is guilty of some of them. [p. 303, col. 1.]

A non-continuing offence is necessarily one transaction: a continuing offence may or may not be so; persons accused of the same continuing offence may be tried together so far as their offence is confined to one transaction. [p. 304, col. 1.]

An offence cannot be treated as necessarily one transaction—merely because it is a continuing offence. On the contrary s. 239 of the Cr. P. C. implies that a continuing offence may embrace more than one transaction, but only so far as it is concerned with one transaction, can more persons than one be tried together for it. The section allows the Court to try several persons together for the same continuing offence of waging war within the limits of one transaction but not if the offence alleged covers more than one transaction. Under s. 239 (d) several persons may be charged and tried together when accused of different offences committed in the course of the same transaction; but "transaction" there must have the same meaning as in s. 239 (a). [ibid.]

The provisions of the Cr. P. C. regarding charges are designed to simplify and define within reasonable limits the charges that may be tried at one and the same time and so avoid the embarrassment of the accused. [p. 304, col. 2; p. 305, col. 1.]

It is very desirable that Public Prosecutors and the Courts should give full effect to the spirit of the provisions of the Cr. P. C. instead of straining them to cover doubtful cases. [p. 305, col. 1.]

The general rule is laid down in s. 233 of the Cr. P. C. that for every distinct offence there shall be a separate charge separately tried. The principle is that the accused person shall have a simple allegation to meet and the Court a clear issue to try. But to the general rule certain exceptions are made in ss. 234, 239. All these exceptions can, however, be interpreted so as not to conflict with the general principle that the accused should not be perplexed and the Court should not be confused by complicated or numerous or disconnected allegations. In interpreting these exceptions it must never be forgotten that they are exceptions to the general rule and, therefore, to be interpreted with strictness and, so far as they affect the defence of accused persons, with the utmost strictness. [p. 304, col. 2.]

It is entirely wrong to approach the interpretation of the word "transaction" in s. 235 or s. 239 of the Cr. P. C. with the idea of ascertaining how far etymologically it will extend, how far the thread of continuity implied in it can be stretched, how far its meaning can be strained without an obvious break down. [ibid.]

The word "transaction" in ss. 235 and 239 of the Code must not be interpreted in any special or artificial or conventional or technical way but as it is ordinarily used by men of education and common-sense. If you cannot speak of a series of events as a transaction in the ordinary sense in which that word is used, you cannot try a number of persons together in respect of those events by attributing a special and unusual meaning to the word in s. 239 of the Code. [p. 305, col. 1.]

The ordinary meaning of the word "transaction" cannot be stretched so as to make it embrace all the incidents of a long continued rebellion spread over a wide area and extending over many months. [ibid.]

IN REFERRED TRIAL NO. 47 OF 1924.

Trial referred by the Court of the Agency Additional Sessions Judge, Waltair, for confirmation of the sentence of death passed upon the said 1st Accused in Case No. 10 of the Calender for 1924.

IN CRIMINAL APPEALS NOS. 297 AND 337 OF 1924.

Appeal by accused Nos. 2 to 6 against an order of the Court of the Agency Additional Sessions Judge, Waltair, in Case No. 10 of the Calendar for 1924.

These cases coming on for hearing on the 8th and 9th September 1924, respectively, after service of notice on all the accused, upon perusing the petitions of appeals and the record of the evidence and proceedings before the said Court of Session and upon hearing the arguments of Mr. P. Markandeyulu, engaged for the defence of the 1st Accused under Government order, dated the 17th December 1884, No. 3273, Judicial, and of the Public Prosecutor on behalf of the Crown, and Counsel not appearing on behalf of the appellants in Criminal Appeal No. 337 of 1924, and the cases having stood over for consideration till the 23rd of September 1924, the Court (Mr. Charles Gordon Spencer Officiating Chief Justice, and Reilly, J.) delivered the following

JUDGMENT.

Spencer, Offg. C. J.—The six appellants before us form the third batch of persons tried for complicity in the Vizagapatam-Godavari rebellion which broke out in August 1922. The Agency Additional Sessions Judge has convicted them all of offences punishable under ss. 121, 121-A, 122, 143, 147 and 148, Indian Penal Code, and he has convicted only the first and third appellants of an offence under s. 397, and the rest of offences under s. 395, Indian Penal Code, and has sentenced the 1st accused to death and the other five to transportation for life.

The first thing to be considered is whether the charge is in order both as regards the unrepresented appellants, accused Nos. 2 to 6, and as regards the first appellant, although his Vakil has not raised the defence that the conviction of his client is bad for misjoinder; nor does it appear that misjoinder of charges was made the ground of any objection when the appeals of the batches already disposed of were heard. There are eight counts in the charge. Of the first two counts one consists of a charge for waging war and another of a charge for attempting to wage war, which all form parts of s. 121 by the definition in the Code. It was unnecessary to have two counts for the same offence seeing that the dates and places are the same. Then the third count is that the accused conspired to wage war—an offence under s. 121-A—and the fourth is that they collected arms and ammunition—an offence under s. 122. It was unnecessary to have these counts in the charge as there was clear evidence that these men did much more than merely conspire and make preparations for war. The fifth charge relates to the murder of eight Police Officers. The accused have all been acquitted of this charge and it is unnecessary to consider it further. "The sixth count that 'you and others did loot the Police Stations above-mentioned'—(of which there are eight) on dates not specified—and that you 'did extract supplies of food and other articles by force or threats from the villagers of various villages' on dates not specified, is too vague. Each looting of a village or Police Station should have been treated as a separate offence if it was intended to try any or all of the accused for dacoity apart from waging war. The convictions of the 1st and 3rd accused under s. 397—dacoity armed with a dangerous weapon—and of accused Nos. 2, 4, 5 and 6 under s. 395 of dacoity, must be quashed, as the charges did not give them sufficient notice and particulars of what they had to meet: but the validity of the conviction under s. 121 is not affected by the striking off the convictions for other offences forming component parts of the offence of waging war, and the accused cannot be said to have been prejudiced in their defence on the charge for waging war, as the acts of dacoity were all merely some of a series of incidents which went to make up the continuing offence of waging war within the meaning of s. 235 (3), Cr. P. C.

The Judge has not passed separate sentences for each offence. The combined sentence of transportation for life imposed for the offence under s. 121 cannot be reduced in the case of those accused against whom there is evidence of participation in that crime, as that sentence is the minimum prescribed by law under s. 121.

It was decided by Oldfield and Ramesam, JJ., in one of the appeals arising out of the Malabar rebellion, Referred Trial No. 80 of 1922, that the waging of war (or "adhering to the King's enemies" as treason is sometimes described in England) is essentially a continuing offence, in which several incidents, which may in themselves be separate offences, may be comprised. I see no reason to think it is otherwise. Rebellion implies a state of being rather than the doing of any act, although for a conviction it is necessary to prove that some overt act was committed by the offender. Rebellions and wars continue until they are suppressed by capture or destruction of the rebel forces or by the rebels laying down their arms and making their submission as subjects to their Sovereign and receiving his pardon. What was held by the Privy Council in Subrahmanya Ayyar v. King-Emperor (1) to vitiate a trial was the joinder of more than three offences of bribery and extortion extending over 2½ years at one trial without separate charges for each offence as that was a direct contravention of ss. 233 and 234, Cr. P. C. When a series of acts are so connected by community of purpose and continuity of action as to form not only one transaction but a single offence, proximity of time between the performance of the various acts composing that offence not being the sole test of the unity of the transaction, s. 235 authorizes persons accused of doing those acts to be charged and tried at one trial for them all—vide Emperor v. Sherufalli (2) and Emperor v. Datto Hanmant Shahapurkar (3) which lay down the principle that intervals of time between the commission of a series of acts do not necessarily import want of continuity when the aims of those jointly tried have throughout been directed to one and the same objective, and Choragudi Venkatadri v. Emperor (4). Subrahmanya Ayyar v. King-Emperor (1) was not a case of misjoinder of persons. Section 239, Cr. P. C. (as amended), cl. (d), authorizes the trial of more persons than one on one charge and at one trial if they are accused of different offences committed in the course of the same transaction. If an offence is a continuing one, I do not find any real difficulty in regarding it as a continuous transaction. In the course of committing a continuing offence like waging war there may be many minor incidents which of themselves constitute different offences. To take the example of another offence of a continuing nature, the offence of being a member of an unlawful assembly (s. 143, Indian Penal Code), the members of it may commit several acts which amount of themselves to separate offences, and while s. 149 provides that they are not responsible for offences committed by the general body before those individual persons join or after they leave the body, I have never heard it suggested that all the members cannot be tried at one trial for the main offence under s. 143 as well as for those other offences which have been committed by any member in pursuance of the common object during the time when they were present in the assembly. To take another instance of a continuing offence—culpable homicide by starving a child to death by persons legally bound to maintain it illegally omitting to feed it—the acts or rather omissions might extend over a long period with occasional interruptions during which food might be given, closed by the culminating event of the child's death, and yet the whole would be one transaction with a single objective. It would be absurd to charge the guardians for withholding food from the child only on the day of its death when the cause of death was continuous and systematic starving.

(1) 25 M. 61; 28 I. A. 257; 11 M. L. J. 233; 3 Bom. L. R. 510; 5 O. W. N. 866; 2 Weir 271; 8 Sar. P. C. J. 160 (P. O.).

(2) 27 B. 135; 4 Bom. L. R. 930.

(3) 30 B. 49; 7 Bom. L. R. 633; 2 Cr. L. J. 578.

(4) 5 Ind. Cas. 847; 33 M. 502; (1910) M. W. N. 65; 7 M. L. T. 299; 20 M. L. J. 220; 11 Cr. L. J. 258.

In the present case the matter is simplified by the fact that the accused are charged not merely for committing several offences in one transaction, but for the same offence, in which several other offences are combined, thus bringing the case within the scope of s. 235 (3). Accused Nos. 4 and 6, according to the evidence, only took part in the second campaign; the first incident of which was the looting of Anantagiri village on 10th March 1923 and the last the attack on Poderu Police Station on 22nd September 1923. There is no evidence that accused Nos. 4 and 6 took part in the first campaign which lasted from August 1922 to November 1922. There was an interval between November 1922 and March 1923 during which no overt acts on the part of the rebels were reported. These two accused were only seen in the company of other rebels after the 1st May 1923. The fifth accused was first seen by P. Ws. Nos. 61 and 62 at Chintalapooty on the 30th October 1922 upon which occasion constables were captured by the gang and Government rations looted. As the rebel gang led by Srirama Raju did not cease their operations or make their submission during the period in which these accused are charged with committing acts of waging war, I do not think that it was illegal to charge and try them simultaneously for the same offence of waging war under s. 121, Indian Penal Code, with other members of the gang who were inspired by a common object of subverting the Government and destroying its forces, "offence" being defined in s. 4 (1) (o), Cr. P. C., as an act made punishable by law, and, "act" being defined in s. 3 (2) of the General Clauses Act, as including a series of acts, so that an offence is really an act or series of acts made punishable by law. The charging of accused Nos. 1 and 2 with the attack on the Police Station at Paderu, which took place after these two accused had been arrested and kept in custody, and the charging of accused Nos. 4 to 6 with attacking Chintapalli and other Police Stations, which were looted before these men joined the rebel gang, were pieces of carelessness which should have been avoided; but I cannot hold that it vitiated their trial for waging war so long as there was evidence to prove that they took part in attacking other Police Stations and villages which were properly mentioned in the charges acts of waging war. I think, however, that accused Nos. 4 and 5, who looted no Police Stations and fought in no engagements with the forces of the Crown, must have been prejudiced by not being informed in the charge what acts of theirs constituted waging war specifically, and what charges they had to meet, and I consider that the conviction of these two accused should be quashed and that they should be re-tried by the Additional Sessions Judge upon properly drawn up charges, having reference to the part they took in specified incidents within the dates mentioned in the charge under s. 121.

The accused were all acquitted on the 8th count in the charge of mischief by fire by burning the Government rest-house at Koyyur and the sheds at Gudem. It is unnecessary to say more about that offence.

As regards the sixth accused the earliest incident about which there is any evidence of his participation in the rebellion is the attack on Paderu Police Station on the 22nd of September 1923, which occurred after the arrest of the first accused on the 18th September and the second accused on the 14th of September. As the continuance of the offence of waging war does not depend on the presence of particular rebels in the rebel band and as there is evidence that the gang continued under the leadership of Srirama Raju even after some of his adherents were killed and captured, I do not find the charge and trial of this accused along with other participators in the offence under s. 121 to be illegal—vide s. 239, cls. (a) and (d). If the leader, Srirama Raju, who was present throughout both campaigns, had been on his trial along with these accused, could it be said that any of those who joined his following at a later stage of the rebellion, could not be tried along with those who deserted him at an earlier stage, seeing that all were charged with having committed the same main offence of waging war under his leadership at one time or another? I think not. Then on what principle, it may be asked, does Srirama Raju's absence from the dock alter the position of those who are present? I do not understand cl. (a) of s. 239 as applying only to offences of a continuing nature. Supposing two murders were committed in the course of one transaction and that A took part in both but B in the first only, A and B could be tried jointly for the same offence, viz., murder, but the charge would contain two counts against A and only one against B.

As regards the merits of the conviction, there is overwhelming evidence against the first accused that he took part in the attacks on the Police Stations of Chintapalli, Krishnadevipeta, Rajavommangi, Adatigala, Chodavaram, Annavaram and Malkanagiri in the depositions of P. Ws. Nos. 6, 7, 9, 11, 36, 13, 43, 44, 49, 53, 54, 56, 71, 86 and of other acts of violence which are spoken to by P. Ws. Nos. 90, 91, 39, 41, 40, 48, 117, 59, 60, 72, 64, 82, 96, 100 and 65 and other witnesses. His name is mentioned in Exs. S, XX, ZZ, GGG, UUU (2), TT (1), BBB (1), T (12), VVV, XXX, but not in Exs. T, VV (1), SS (2), CCC and AAA. Of these witnesses some speak to the same occasion but most of them to different occasions. The cumulative effect of this evidence is very great and leaves no room for doubt that the first accused committed the offence of waging war. P. Ws. Nos. 6, 7, 9, 36, 49, 56, 62, 63, 39 and others say that the first accused was a leader or sirdar under Srirama Raju and carried a gun (some say a 303 rifle) and posted guards. P. Ws. Nos. 23 and 24 say that he was among those who fired at the Police at Onjeri ghat where a constable was killed. The school-master of Gudem, P. W. No. 8, says that he was one of the leaders who persuaded people to join the rebels. There is not much evidence that he organized the rebellion, but there is a large amount of evidence that he took a leading part in it including the cutting of P. W. No. 90's ear. In his appeal petition and his statement to the lower Court he pleaded that he remained with Srirama Raju under compulsion and that guards were set to prevent him from running away. Several of the accused in this case have excused themselves on the plea that they were made to help the rebels. If all these pleas were true the band could not have held together for one day. As observed in the judgments disposing of the appeals of those previously convicted, the nature of the country made escape easy. It is impossible to believe that the leader of the rebellion had enough staunch followers to spare to guard those in his band who were unwilling to remain with him if so many wished to desert.

There can be no doubt of the guilt of the first accused. His conviction should, in my opinion, be confirmed and seeing that he was a ringleader among the rebels and probably was one of those who took life at Onjeri, if not at other places, the sentence of death imposed on him, I think, should also stand.

As regards accused Nos. 2, 3 and 6, we have been referred to the evidence connecting them with the offence which is tabulated at the end of the judgment. The 2nd accused was seen by P. W. No. 9 and another witness carrying an ammunition box but he was also seen by P. W. No. 11 patrolling with a gun and a sword; so it appears that he was found competent and willing and so was promoted to a post of greater trust under the leader of the band. I find that there is ample evidence to convict all these accused of the offence of waging war. The sentence imposed on them is the minimum allowed by the Code. Their appeal should, in my opinion, be dismissed, but as my learned brother is of opinion that the conviction of accused Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 is bad, the case will be laid before a Third Judge under s. 429, Cr. P. C.

Reilly, J.—With great respect I find myself unable to agree with my Lord in this matter. I regret this extremely, not only because I recognize that my Lord's opinion is likely to be of much more value than my own, but also because, if my view is adopted, it will involve throwing away the time and labour spent on this case in the Sessions Court for reasons not directly connected with the guilt or innocence of the accused.

Eight charges were framed against the six accused who are the appellants before us. On two of these charges all of them were acquitted. On the remaining six charges all of them were convicted, on charge No. 6 accused No. 1 and 3 being convicted of using deadly weapons in dacoity, punishable under s. 397, Indian Penal Code, and the rest being convicted of dacoity punishable under s. 395, Indian Penal Code.

Charge No. 1 is that all the six accused waged war against the King Emperor, an offence punishable under s. 121, Indian Penal Code. Seventeen separate incidents, said to have occurred within dates more than 15 months apart, are mentioned in the charge, and at first sight it might appear that the Sessions Judge intended to charge the accused with that number of successive offences of waging war, which would offend against the rule that no one can be tried at one trial for more than three separate offences of the same kind nor even for three such offences if not committed within a year. But it was decided in Referred Trial No. 80 of 1922 that the offence of waging war, punishable under s. 121, Indian Penal Code, is a continuing offence, and I am content to follow that decision. I agree that charge No. 1 is not illegal by reason of contravening s. 234, Cr. P. C., by mentioning more than three offences spread over a period longer than a year.

But, in my opinion, there are other fatal defects in charge No. 1. The charge is to the effect that all the six accused between 22nd August 1922 and 18th December 1923 attacked and looted and attempted to loot eight specified Police Stations and attacked the forces of the Crown at nine specified places "and did thereby wage war against the King-Emperor, committing offences punishable under s. 121, Indian Penal Code." No date is given for any of the 17 incidents mentioned. It is clear from the wording of the charge that the waging of war with which the accused are charged is in respect of the 17 incidents specified. Mr. Adam urges that, as waging war is a continuing offence, it would have been quite legal to charge the accused with waging war within certain dates and in a certain area without mentioning any particular incident. That may be so. But in this case particular incidents have been specified, and the accused have been informed by the charge that is the accusation that they took part in those incidents which they have to meet. The incidents have not been mentioned in the charge as instances of their waging war or as illustrations of the way they did it: it is alleged against them that they took part in those incidents and thereby urged war. The prosecution have, therefore, to prove that the accused took part in those particular incidents or in some of them. If they fail to prove against any particular accused that he took part in any of those incidents, that accused must be acquitted on this charge. Evidence that he took part in other incidents of the rebellion might be used to corroborate evidence that he took part in these incidents or some of them but by itself cannot prove him guilty on the charge as framed. No evidence has been produced that accused No. 4 or accused No. 5 had anything to do with any of the 17 incidents mentioned in this charge. In my opinion, accused Nos. 4 and 5 must, therefore, be acquitted on this charge. It may be possible to try them again for waging war by taking part in other incidents of which evidence has been given but which are not included in this charge; but with that we are not now concerned.

A less simple question is whether it was legal to try accused No. 6 with accused Nos. 1, 2 and 3 on charge No. 1. The evidence against accused No. 1 on this charge is that he took part in attacks on six Police Stations, the earliest being the attack on the Chintapalli Station on 22nd August 1922 and the latest that on the Malkannagiri Station on the 11th June 1923, and that he also took part in the attacks on the forces of the Crown at Onjeri and Damapalli on 3rd September 1922 and 24th September 1922, respectively. The evidence against accused No. 2 is that he took part in the attacks on two Police Stations on 23rd August 1922 and 10th October 1922 respectively and in the two attacks on the forces of the Crown at Onjeri and Damapalli in September 1922. The evidence against accused No. 3 is that he took part in the attacks on three Police Stations between 23rd August 1922 and 11th June 1923 and in the attacks at Onjeri and Damapalli in September 1922. There is also evidence that accused No. 1 was arrested on 18th September 1923 and accused No. 2 on 14th September 1923. The earliest and only incident mentioned in charge No. 1 in respect of which there is any evidence against accused No. 6 is the attack on Paderu Police Station on 22nd September 1923. That attack was more than three months after the latest of the 17 incidents mentioned in the charge in which according to the evidence accused No. 1 or accused No. 3 took part and 11 months after the latest of the incidents in which accused No. 2 took part. It was also after the dates on which accused Nos. 1 and 2 had been arrested and had disappeared from the scene. The finding of the Sessions Judge is that accused No. 6 only joined the rebels about 29th August 1923. One witness, P. W. No. 112, mentions that accused No. 6 was present when rice was extorted by some rebels at Bodatharampalem in April 1923. But apparently neither the prosecution nor the Judge relies on that evidence. There is no suggestion that the prosecution at any stage had evidence, which failed for any reason, that accused Nos. 1, 2, 3 or 6 took part in any of the 17 incidents other than those I have mentioned in respect of them. We must take it that the prosecution case was that they took part only in those of the 17 incidents respectively. The question is could accused No. 6 be tried legally for waging war at Paderu on 22nd September 1923 with accused Nos. 1 and 2, who by that date had been arrested and had disappeared from the scene, with accused Nos. 1 and 3, who were charged with committing other acts of war but none later than June 1923, and with accused No. 2, who was charged with none later than October 1922. I speak of accused Nos. 1 and 3 not being charged with any act later than June 1923, and accused 2 with none later than October 1922 because the mere inclusion in the charge framed by the Sessions Judge of allegations that accused Nos. 1, 2 and 3 took part in the attacks on Paderu and other Stations, etc., which the prosecution had no intention of proving and knew in respect of Paderu Station to be untrue so far as accused Nos. 1 and 2 are concerned, or of allegations that accused No. 6 took part in incidents earlier than the date when according to their case he joined the rebels cannot help the prosecution. If the prosecution has evidence and sets out to prove that A, B and C has each committed a separate murder, their joint trial cannot be made legal by framing a charge that all of them committed all three murders. The charge in a Sessions trial must be based on evidence given before the Committing Magistrate. A misjoinder of persons cannot be escaped by deliberately making the charge wider than the evidence produced to support it in order to represent all the persons tried as accused of all the offences or incidents included, though there is no prospect nor intention of proving more than that each is guilty of some of them. It may be noticed in passing that apart from any legal defect in it charge No. 1 has been framed with so little care that it includes one attack on a Police Station and 7 attacks on the forces of the Crown with which there is no evidence to connect any of the accused in this case. Remembering that waging war has been held to be a continuing offence, the utmost that charge No. 1 can be taken legally and effectively to allege against accused Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 6 is that accused No. 1 waged war from 22nd August 1922 to 11th June 1923, that accused No. 2 waged war from 23rd August 1922 to 19th October 1922, accused No. 3 from 23rd August 1922 to 11th June 1923, and accused No. 6 only on 22nd September 1923. When the dates are set out like that, it is certainly a very surprising charge.

I think it is clear—and I understand that to be also my Lord's view—that the trial of accused No. 6 on charge No. 1 with accused Nos. 1, 2 and 3 can be legal only if the attack on the Police Station at Paderu on 22nd September 1923 can be treated as part of the same transaction as that in which accused Nos. 1 and 3 were engaged in June 1923 and earlier and accused No. 2 on and before 19th October 1922, the date of the attack on the Rampa Chodavaram Station, the last of the 17 incidents in which accused No. 2 is shown to have taken part—an incident which occurred 10 months before accused No. 6 is shown to have joined the rebellion. These widely separated incidents can only be treated as parts of one transaction within the meaning of s. 239, Cr. P. C., if the whole insurrection can be treated as one transaction in that sense. Is that a fair or reasonable interpretation of the word "transaction" as used in that section? If that interpretation is to be adopted, then 10 rebels might be tried together for 10 separate acts committed by them respectively at separate times and places over a period of many years if only they were all committed in furtherance of the same rebellion. In my opinion "transaction" as used in s. 239, Cr. P. C., must mean something less wide than that. It has been suggested that, if waging war is a continuing offence and that offence may continue for a long period, then, so long as it continues and, however, many incidents it embraces, it must be one transaction within the meaning of the section. I must admit that at first sight that argument attracted me. But, with respect, an examination of the section, I think, shows that it is unsound. The first class of persons whom the section allows to be charged and tried together are "persons accused of the same offence committed in the course of the same transaction." There is something rather curious about those words. What is the meaning there of the words "in the course of the same transaction"? The provision relates, not to persons accused of the same kind of offence, but to persons accused of the same offence. Would it not have been enough to provide that persons accused of the same offence may be charged and tried together? What is the meaning of adding the qualification "committed in the course of the same transaction"? We cannot treat those words as meaningless or redundant—at least we are not at liberty to do so until we are satisfied that it is impossible to attach any significance to them. Now, if we apply this provision to non-continuing offences, that is, offences embracing only one incident, such as murder, we cannot reasonably speak of two persons being accused of the same murder committed in the course of the same transaction. If we do so, the words "committed in the course of the same transaction" are clearly redundant and add nothing to the meaning. But, if we apply the provision to a continuing offence, it is possible to give a meaning to those words. Applied to a continuing offence they will have a meaning if we read "committed in the course of the same transaction" as having a restrictive effect. A non-continuing offence is necessarily one transaction: a continuing offence may or may not be so. Persons accused of the same continuing offence may be tried together so far as their offence is confined to one transaction. If the provision is interpreted in that way, it has an intelligible and practicable meaning. In my opinion it must be so interpreted. If that interpretation is correct, an offence cannot be treated as necessarily one transaction—merely because it is a continuing offence. On the contrary the section implies that a continuing offence may embrace more than one transaction, but, only so far as it is concerned with one transaction, can more persons than one be tried together for it. If we apply this to waging war, the section allows us to try several persons together for the same continuing offence of waging war within the limits of one transaction but not if the offence alleged covers more than one transaction. Under s. 239 (d) several persons may be charged and tried together when accused of different offences committed in the course of the same transaction; but "transaction" there must have the same meaning as in s. 239 (a).

We must return to the question whether an insurrection including many different incidents and extending over a long period can be regarded as one transaction within the meaning of s. 239, Cr. P. C. I can find no reported case in which "transaction" has been given so wide a meaning. It can hardly be denied that in ordinary parlance no one would think of speaking of a long-continued insurrection as a transaction. Is there anything in the section or the connected sections or the Code to justify us in giving the word so extended a meaning? The general rule is laid down in s. 233 of the Code—for every distinct offence there shall be a separate charge separately tried. The principle obviously is that the accused person shall have a simple allegation to meet and the Court a clear issue to try. But to the general rule certain exceptions are made. One person may be tried at one trial for three offences of the same kind committed within a year (s. 234); one person may be tried at one trial for several offences forming parts of the same transaction (s. 235); one person may be tried at one trial for several offences or for alternative offences if it is doubtful which of those offences the facts which can be proved will constitute (s. 236); and lastly more persons than one may be tried together at the same trial for the same offence committed in the course of the same transaction, for three offences of the same kind committed by them jointly within a year, for different offences committed in the course of the same transaction, etc., (s. 239). The object of introducing these exceptions to the general rule is to prevent unnecessary duplication of proceedings. On examination it will be seen that all these exceptions can be interpreted so as not to conflict with the general principle that the accused person should not be perplexed and the Court should not be confused by complicated or numerous or disconnected allegations. In interpreting these exceptions it must never be forgotten that they are exceptions to the general rule and, therefore, to be interpreted with strictness and, so far as they affect the defence of accused persons, with the utmost strictness. To my mind it is entirely wrong to approach the interpretation of the word transaction in s. 235 or 239 with the idea of "ascertaining how far etymologically it will extend, how far the thread of continuity implied in it can be stretched, how far we can strain its meaning without an obvious break down. In Choragudi Venkata-driv. Emperor (1944), Benson, J., remarked that the provisions of the Code regarding charges "are designed to simplify and define within reasonable limits the charges that may be tried at one and the same time and so avoid the embarrassment of the accused * * *

* * It is very desirable that Public Prosecutors and the Courts should give full effect to the spirit of the provisions of the Code instead of straining them to cover doubtful cases." With those observations I respectfully agree. Can we consistently with the spirit of the Code stretch the ordinary meaning of the word "transaction" so as to make it embrace all the incidents of a long continued rebellion spread over a wide area and extending over many months? This case itself I think illustrates the mischief of such an interpretation. At the trial accused No. 6, an ignorant hillman, had to stand in the dock for more than a fortnight and listen to the examination of 96 witnesses before a word of evidence was given against him. Is it unlikely that at the end of that time he was bewildered and befogged about the case? It is clear that the Sessions Judge himself was confused by the complexity of the proceedings, as he fell into the remarkable error of convicting accused No. 4 and accused No. 5 on Charge No. 1, though there is no evidence at all that they had anything to do with any of the incidents included in that charge. I am now concerned, however, not directly with any prejudice which the form of the charge may have caused to the accused, but with its legality. In my opinion, the word "transaction" in ss. 235 and 239 of the Code must not be interpreted in any special or artificial or conventional or technical way but as it is ordinarily used by men of education and common-sense. If you cannot speak of a series of events as a transaction in the ordinary sense in which that word is used, you cannot try a number of persons together in respect of these events by attributing a special and unusual meaning to the word in s. 239 of the Code. Can we in any ordinary sense of word say that accused No. 2, when he attacked the Rampa Chodavaram Police Station in October 1922, was engaged in the same transaction as accused No. 6 when he attacked the Padern Police Station in September of the following year? To my mind it is impossible to do so. If that view is correct, the joint trial of accused No. 2 and accused No. 6 was illegal and void. Similarly the trial of accused No. 1 and accused No. 3 with accused No. 6 was illegal. There are somewhat similar difficulties about the trial of accused Nos. 1, 2 and 3 together; but it is unnecessary to discuss them. If the trial of accused Nos. 1, 2 and 3 with accused No. 6 was illegal, we cannot exclude accused No. 6 from consideration and leave the trial of accused Nos. 1, 2 and 3 to stand good.

In my opinion the convictions of accused Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 6 on charge No. 1 of waging war must be set aside and an order should be made for them to be re-tried for that offence either separately or, so far as there is evidence that they or any of them were jointly concerned in incidents of waging war which were parts of one transaction, together.

Of the other charges on which the appellants have been convicted charge No. 2 falls with charge No. 1. Charges Nos. 3, 4, 6, and 7 without any specification of times and places are too vague to stand. In my opinion the convictions of all the accused on charges Nos. 2, 3, 4, 6 and 7 should be set aside and they should be acquitted on those charges, as it does not appear to be necessary to try them again for those offences.

These cases coming on for final hearing under s. 429 of the Cr.P.C., upon perusing the Petition of Appeal, the record of the evidence and proceedings of the said Court of Sessions and the judgment of this Court and upon hearing the arguments of Mr. P. Markandeyalu, engaged for the defence under G. O., dated 17th December 1884, No. 3273, Judicial, and of the Public Prosecutor on behalf of the Crown, and Counsel not appearing on behalf of the appellants in Criminal Appeal No. 337 of 1924, the Court (Krishnan, J.) delivered the following JUDGMENT.—This case has been referred to me under s. 429, Cr. P. C., because of a difference of opinion between the learned Judges who heard the appeals in the first instance. The learned Officiating Chief Justice was of opinion that the convictions and sentences of accused Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 6 should be confirmed and that the case against accused Nos. 4 and 5 should be re-tried; whereas my learned brother Reilly, J., who sat with him, was of opinion that the whole trial was vitiated as illegal and should be set aside; he directed that the 4th and 5th accused should be acquitted, and that accused Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 6 should be re-tried separately.

Both the learned Judges were agreed about certain minor charges framed against the accused. The main point on which they differed is on the question of the legality of the joint trial of all the accused chiefly on the first count in the charge. Under that count the accused were charged with the offence of waging war against the King-Emperor under s. 121, Indian Penal Code. The charge says, "That you, the above accused (naming all six of them) did with others, at eight places (named) attack and loot or attempt to loot the Police Stations there and did at other places (named) attack the forces of the Crown and did thereby wage war against the King-Emperor." The learned Vakil for the 1st appellant (1st Accused) urges that as it has been shown by the evidence in the case that the 6th accused joined the party waging war only long after the 1st and 2nd accused had ceased to be members of that party as they had already been arrested, the trial of the 6th accused with the 1st and 2nd accused and others jointly was not justifiable by anything in the Cr. P. C. This argument was rejected by the Officiating Chief Justice but has been accepted by my learned brother Reilly, J.

No doubt, as Reilly, J., points out, the fundamental rule under the Cr. P. C. is what is stated in s. 233 that "for every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately;" but the section itself mentions the exceptions to it and refers to ss. 234, 235, 236 and 239. The learned Public Prosecutor contends that the joint trial of the six persons under s. 121, Indian Penal Code, is justified by s. 239 (a).

There can be no doubt that there was a war being waged in the Rampa District and this case has arisen with reference to that war; it was started by one Srirama Raju who was the ringleader of the rebels from August 1922 when the first attack on the Chintalapudi Police Station was made and continued for a long time thereafter. The question I have to decide is whether the six persons who have been tried together under the first count are not persons accused of the same offence committed in the course of the same transaction within the meaning of s. 239 (a). There can be no doubt whatsoever that they are persons accused of the same offence because they were all charged under s. 121, Indian Penal Code, with waging the same war. Then the question is whether we can say that the offence was committed in the course of the same transaction so as to fall under s. 239 (a).

The question of the legality of a joint trial, in my opinion, really depends upon the accusation made and not upon the result of the trial; provided, of course, that the accusation is a real one and not a mere excuse for a joinder of charges which cannot be otherwise charged. It was so held in Abdul Salim v. Emperor (5) and I am prepared to follow it. It is not pretended here that there was any conscious attempt to join charges which could not otherwise be joined or that the charge as framed under count (1) was so framed for that purpose. The legality of the joint trial in this case has to be judged on the accusation and not on what was subsequently proved. The charge certainly as worded in count (1) puts all the six accused on the same footing as having committed all the various crimes mentioned in it in the course of the rebellion. The fact that it was afterwards shown that some two people among the six had by reason of their arrest ceased to be members of the party before a third man joined it, I do not think, will really affect the question at all.

The only question we have really to decide in the case is whether the various incidents mentioned in the charge were or were not parts of the same transaction. That the offence under s. 121 of waging war is a continuing offence has been laid down in this Court in Referred Trial No. 80 of 1922. It was followed by another Bench of this Court in Criminal Appeal No. 1891 of 1922 and I am prepared to follow that view. The waging of a war is clearly a continuing offence, it begins with the first act of war and goes on till the war is ended in some manner as pointed out by the learned Officiating Chief Justice. It may be, as Reilly, J., remarks, that the various incidents in a war may be so disconnected as to form different transactions. The question whether they form parts of the same transaction or must necessarily be held to be different transactions has to be judged in my view on the facts of each case.

In the present case there is no reason to suppose that the rebellion which was started by Srirama Raju and continuously carried on by him and his followers for a considerable time was anything but a single transaction. It was carried on throughout under his leadership and he and his followers were animated throughout with the same motive of overthrowing the British Government. There was both continuity of action and unity of purpose regarding the various acts charged against the accused. No doubt several places were attacked and looted and more than one engagement were fought in which some deaths took place; but I consider that we are justified in holding on the facts that the whole thing was one and the same transaction. The point was not taken in the lower Court and has, therefore, not been fully thrashed out. But I agree with the learned Officiating Chief Justice that the joint trial of the accused for the offence under s. 121, Indian Penal Code, is not illegal.

(5) 69 Ind. Cas. 145; 49 C. 573; 35 C. L. J. 279; 26 C. W. N. 680; (1922) A. I. R. (O.) 107; 23 Cr. L. J. 657.

The expression "the same transaction" has been tried to be explained in several cases which have been brought to my notice. After all it cannot be said that any very satisfactory definition of the words has been given. Each case must be judged, in my opinion, on the facts of that particular case. Generally speaking I am prepared to follow the observations of the learned Judges in Choragudi Venkatadri v. Emperor (4) in which the effect of the previous decisions has also been considered, as to the meaning of the expression. Abdur Rahim, J., says that the usual tests applied to decide whether different acts are parts of the same transaction are proximity of time, unity of place, unity of purpose or design and continuity of action. It is not necessary that all of them should be present to make the several incidents parts of the same transaction. Unity of place and proximity of time are not important tests at all; but the main test, so far as I can see, is the unity of purpose. Continuity of action goes with unity of purpose. If the various acts are done in pursuance of a particular end in view and as accessory thereto, they may, as Abdur Rahim, J., observes, well be treated as parts of the same transaction. In this case there was clear unity of purpose and continuity of action in starting and carrying on the war. All the accused were throughout acting with the same purpose of subverting the Government in joining the rebellion. In this connection it was urged that as there was a lull in the operations for three months, as stated by the learned Sessions Judge in para. 8 of his judgment, it broke up the war into two campaigns and there were, therefore, at least two transactions. I do not think the argument is right as in this case it cannot be said that at the time of the lull the rebels had abandoned their idea of fighting against the Government. They were only waiting for a more favourable opportunity of attacking the Government forces. I am, therefore, of opinion that as a question of fact, various incidents mentioned in count (1) of the charge were parts of the same transaction and that the trial of these accused together was justified under s. 239 (a).

It was next contended that a single trial under the sixth count of the charge also rendered it illegal even if the trial under the first count was proper. It was urged by the learned Vakil for the 1st appellant that the charge included more than three offences of the accused committed in the course of a year with eight charges the accused tried; and, therefore, A. Cr. P. C., justifies only a joint trial. There were eight separate and independent charges of dacoity against the six accused, no doubt the objection would be a strong one; but the learned Public Prosecutor points out that these charges are not separate but are made for offences which had been committed in the course of one and the same transaction, namely, the waging of the war. That seems to be so as the various dacoities were only incidents in the course of the war; if the count of waging war failed, count No. 6 also would fail. Count No. 6 begins by saying "That you and others in your attacks on the Police Stations above-mentioned did loot the stations of arms," etc., the words above-mentioned referring to the first count. I think it is not straining its language too much to hold that the charge meant to accuse six persons of dacoity as having been committed in the course of the war and, therefore, the joinder of more than three charges would be justified under s. 239 (d). It may be mentioned that the accused admitted that they did take part in the Futuri rebellion and merely pleaded compulsion as their excuse. They were represented by a Vakil, and no objection was taken to the frame of any of the charges or to the joint trial in the lower Court. There is really no foundation for the suggestion that the accused were embarrassed or in any way prejudiced in their defence. They themselves never said so. However, if the trial was illegal, no doubt, the question of prejudice will not arise. I, however, agree with the learned Officiating Chief Justice for the reasons above given in holding that the conviction cannot be set aside on the ground that the trial was illegal.

On the merits the case of accused Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 6 has been hardly argued before me, for it is clearly proved against them on the evidence. In fact, as I have stated already, it is not denied that these accused took part in the war. I confirm the conviction of accused Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 6 under s. 121, Indian Penal Code. As regards the sentence on the 1st accused, I shall deal with it presently. In the view I take it is unnecessary to consider their convictions under the other sections charged.

As regards the 4th and 5th accused, they are not shown to have looted any of the Police Stations mentioned, nor committed any of the dacoity or to have fought in any engagement with the forces of the Crown. It is on the evidence that Reilly, J., has directed their acquittal. However, shown by the learned Public Prosecutor that there is a considerable body of evidence against them as set out by the learned Sessions Judge in the Schedule to his judgment to show that they did take part in waging war though not exactly in the manner set out in count No. 1. In these circumstances, the proper order is, in my opinion, to quash the conviction of these two accused, because they would certainly have been prejudiced by the way in which the charge was framed under count No. 1, and to direct them to be re-tried by the Agency Additional Sessions Judge upon properly drawn up charges under s. 121, Indian Penal Code.

As regards the sentence on the 1st accused, I am not satisfied that a differentiation should be made between him and the other accused who took part in the rebellion who are before me. The learned Chief Justice confirms the sentence of death passed on him on the ground that he was probably one of those "who took life at Onjeri," but there does not seem to be clear evidence of it; he was acquitted of the charge of murder of the Police Officers. I would, therefore, alter his sentence and impose upon him the same sentence as the other accused have received, viz., transportation for life. With the alterations above-mentioned, the appeals are dismissed.

V. N. V.

Z. K.

Appeals dismissed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE CASE No. 36 OF 1925.

May 13, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Hugh Walmsley, Kt., and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

W. R. T. FORBES—1ST PARTY

versus

Moulvi MUHAMMAD ALI HAIDAR KHAN AND ANOTHER—2ND PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 145, 539B—Proceedings under s. 145—Local enquiry—Memorandum not recorded—Proceedings, whether vitiated—Prejudice.

There is no universal rule that disobedience of a mandatory provision in a Statute has the consequence of nullification of all proceedings irrespective of the question of prejudice. [p. 309, col. 2.]

Hriday Govinda Sur v. Emperor, 82 Ind. Cas. 767; 40 C. L. J. 149; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 1035; 25 Cr. L. J. 1375; 52 C. 148, not followed.

Where in a proceeding under s. 145, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate makes a local enquiry in the presence of the Pleaders of the parties, who know where the Magistrate goes and the points to which his attention is drawn, but they do not ask the Magistrate to record a memorandum as required by s. 539B of the Cr. P. C., and are content to go on to judgment without seeing the memorandum, or even ascertaining whether one has been made, it is not open to any of the parties subsequently to say that the proceedings should be set aside for this formal defect unless it is shown that prejudice has been caused. [p. 309, col. 1.]

Reference made by the Sessions Judge, Sylhet, dated the 2nd February 1925.

Sir B. C. Mitter and Babu Preonath Dutt, for the 1st Party.

Mr. B. Chuckerbutty and M. Amiruddin Ahmed, for the 2nd Party.

JUDGMENT.

Walmsley, J.—This case comes before us on a Reference made by the Sessions Judge of Sylhet under the provisions of s. 433, Cr. P. C.

In a proceeding under s. 145, Cr. P. C., the Sub Divisional Magistrate declared the first party to be in possession of the disputed land, by an order dated March 25, 1924. The learned Judge recommends that this order be set aside on the ground that the Magistrate after making a local enquiry did not record a memorandum of the relevant facts which he observed. The rule which requires such a memorandum to be made was enacted by Act XVIII of 1923 and is contained in s. 539-B of the Code as it is after amendment. It does not, however, introduce any new principle, for this Court had often laid down that a memorandum should be prepared so that both sides to an enquiry or trial might know what the Magistrate during his enquiry had noticed or failed to notice.

It is the form of the rule that creates difficulty. It runs "Any Magistrate mayand shall record a memorandum..... Such memorandum shall form part of the record of the case." The learned Judge refers to a decision by a Divisional Bench of this Court in the case of Hriday Govinda Sur v. Emperor (1), where it was held that the rule contained in the second clause of the section, that is the rule which directs that the memorandum shall form part of the record was mandatory, and that failure to comply with it was an illegality and not an irregularity which can be cured. With all deference to the learned Judges I venture to doubt whether that result does follow from applying the epithet mandatory. The decision, however, was in a trial for an offence whereas in the case before us there was no accused person before the Court and the only question was which of two parties was in possession of land, and which should shoulder the burden of instituting a civil suit. In such a proceeding I think that we are entitled to consider what action the petitioners took in regard to the writing of a memorandum. I have already pointed out that the requirement of s. 539-B introduced no new principle. The local enquiry was made in the presence of the petitioners' Pleader; he knew exactly where the Magistrate went and the points to which his attention was drawn. The petitioners through their Pleader must be assumed to be familiar with pronouncements so often made by this Court that a memorandum should be recorded. They did not, however, ask the Magistrate to record a memorandum, or to attach a memorandum to the record or to give them a copy. They were content to go on to judgment without seeing the memorandum, or even ascertaining whether one had been made. I do not think that they can now be allowed to say that for this formal defect the proceedings should be set aside, unless they can show that the Magistrate's omission has caused them prejudice.

As to prejudice, it is quite true that the learned Magistrate referred to what he had seen, and to the conclusions which he drew, but those remarks are redundant for the findings on the evidence adduced by the parties are summed up in these words. "I can say with conviction that I consider the first party's evidence to be true, and I can say with even more conviction that I consider the second party's evidence to be a mass of lies and fictions supported by documents which must have been specially made for the occasion."

(1) 82 Ind. Cas. 767; 40 O. L. J. 119; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 1035; 25 Or. L. J. 1375; 52 O. 148.

In these circumstances I hold that sufficient reason has not been made out for interference, and I reject the Reference.

Ghose, J.—I agree that this Reference should be rejected. I only desire to add that there is no universal rule that disobedience of a mandatory provision in a Statute has the consequence of nullification of all proceedings irrespective of any question of prejudice. Whether a mandatory provision is or only directory depends upon consideration of various circumstances to me that the objection in Hriday Govinda v. Emperor (1) is not applicable.

Reference rejected.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATION No. 415 OF 1925.

July 15, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.
MOHAMMAD YAKUB—ACCUSED—
APPLICANT
versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 526—Transfer of case—District Magistrate, expression of opinion by, whether sufficient ground for transfer.

A District Magistrate in making over a case for disposal to another Magistrate made the remark that the case was quite clear and that the defence was ridiculous. He further directed that the Government Pleader should conduct the case and press for a severe sentence:

Held, that this expression of opinion on the part of the District Magistrate was a sufficient ground for directing that the case should be transferred to some other district.

Application for transfer of a criminal case from the District Magistrate, Gonda.

Mr. K. Yusuf Ali, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—This is an application for transfer. The applicant is an excise peon. An Excise Inspector searched his house and suggested that he should be prosecuted under s. 60 (a) of the Excise Act. The learned District Magistrate asked the Excise Officer to enquire into the matter, and on receiving his report he wrote the following order:—

"Yakub will be prosecuted under s. 60 (a) of the Excise Act. It is quite a clear case and the defence is ridiculous. Case to the Excise Magistrate for disposal. The Government Pleader should conduct this case and press for a severe sentence."

The applicant, therefore, applies for transfer. The District Magistrate was duly notified and does not oppose the transfer. I transfer the case to the Court of the District Magistrate of Bahraich, with power to transfer it to any competent Magistrate subordinate to him.

Z. K.

Case transferred.

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL APPLICATION FOR REVISION

No. 128 OF 1925.

June 18, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fawcett and
Mr. Justice Madgavkar.

JAGARDEO RAMSUMER TEWARI—
APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Foreigners Act (III of 1864), s. 2—Cession of territory—Allegiance, whether affected—Election by subject, what amounts to—Common Law of England, applicability of, to India.

Under s. 2 of the Foreigners Act the burden of proving that a person alleged to be a foreigner is not a foreigner and is not subject to the provisions of the Act, lies upon such person. [p. 311, col. 2.]

Where there is a State, the ordinary idea of Constitutional Law is that there are subjects in that State who are ruled by the Sovereign and when territory is ceded the inhabitants of that territory will ordinarily become subjects of the Sovereign to whom the territory is ceded. [ibid.]

In the absence of an express provision in a treaty of cession regulating the future nationality of the inhabitants of the ceded territory, a relinquishment of the Government of a territory is not only a relinquishment of the right to the soil of the territory but also of the right over the inhabitants of the country. [ibid.]

It is open to a subject of the ceded territory, unless the treaty expressly forbids, to elect to continue his former nationality and to prove such election. The burden of proving such election, however, lies on the person who asserts that he has made such election. It is not enough for him to merely assert, when the question arises, that he has elected to remain within the allegiance of his former Sovereign, there must be conduct on his part such as leaving the ceded territory and going to reside permanently in his former Sovereign's dominions, to indicate his previous election. [p. 312, cols. 1 & 2.]

The Common Law of England which was formerly administered by the Supreme Court is part of the law to be administered by the High Courts unless it is superseded by Statute or otherwise. This Common Law can only be applicable when it is properly applicable to the society and circumstances of India. There is no department of law in which the Common Law of England is more applicable than that part of Constitutional Law which governs the question of nationality and the question of the status of British subjects. [p. 313, col. 2; p. 314, col. 1.]

Kazi Kabiruddin, (with him Mr. Y. V. Bhandarkar), for the Applicant.

Mr. Kanga, Advocate-General, (with him Mr. S. S. Patkar), for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.

Fawcett, J.—This is a rule which has been issued against the Jailor, Yeravda Jail, calling upon him to show cause why the petitioner Jagardeo Ramsumer Tewari should not be brought before this Court to be dealt with according to law and why he should not be set at liberty, etc., in the exercise of this Court's power under s. 491, Cr. P. C.

The main facts of the case are not in dispute. The father of the petitioner was born at the village of Ramdupati, which at that time was in the Mirzapur District of the United Provinces. But some thirty or forty years back he came from there to Bombay, where he kept buffaloes and carried on a milkman's business. He had several sons, the third of whom is the present petitioner, who is stated to be about thirty years old. According to the affidavit which has been filed on petitioner's behalf and which is supported by other affidavits, the eldest son came to Bombay in about 1908. But after staying there for about twelve months he fell ill and went to his village, where he died. After that in 1909 Sahadev, the second son of the father Ramsumer, came to Bombay but only stayed there for about five months. He also fell ill and went to his village, and the father then brought his third son, the present petitioner, to Bombay in 1909. There is a dispute as to whether the petitioner really came to Bombay in 1909. In the affidavit made by Mr. Cauty, the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Bombay, he states that his information is that the petitioner came in or about 1914. But it is, I think, really immaterial whether he came in 1909 or 1914, so far as the main point in dispute in this case is concerned. The father Ramsumer subsequently became ill and returned to his native village where he died. After his death the business appears to have been carried on by the present petitioner with the assistance of some of his brothers. In 1911 there was a cession of territory by the Government of India to the Maharaja of Benares, and the ceded territory contains this particular village of Ramdupati. A copy of the instrument of transfer has been annexed to Mr. Cauty's affidavit, and the preamble of this shows that the cession was made with the approval of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India, with the object that there should be constituted a State under the suzerainty of His Majesty to be granted to the Rajas of Benares, subject to certain restrictions and conditions considered necessary for safeguarding to the residents of the ceded territories the rights and privileges they had enjoyed under the British administration. There are no doubt restrictions on the sovereignty that is conferred upon the Maharaja of Benares and his successors, but it has not been disputed before us that there has been in fact a change in the sovereignty which primarily affects the inhabitants of the ceded territory, i. e.; affects their allegiance in a way that is recognized and I shall deal with later on.

It is contended for the petitioner that he was a British subject at the time of this cession and that he has not ceased to be a British subject. The importance of this is apparent, when reference is made to the definition of "foreigner" which is contained in the Foreigners Act III of 1864, as amended by Act III of 1915. There is no doubt that the petitioner would fall under cl. (a) of this definition as being a 'natural born British subject' at any rate prior to the cession of 1911, and that has not been disputed by the learned Advocate General for the Crown. But the contention that is put forward on behalf of the Crown is that the petitioner has ceased to be a British subject, and, therefore, comes within the proviso to this definition which is as follows:—

"Provided that any British subject who, under any law for the time being in force in British India, ceases to be a British subject shall thereupon be deemed to be a foreigner."

The Government of Bombay, in the exercise of powers conferred upon them by s. 4 of the Foreigners Act, have issued an order to the petitioner to remove himself from British India. It is not necessary to recite what has happened upon that order, except to say that the petitioner did leave Bombay, but was subsequently found in Andheri, a suburb of Bombay, was arrested and eventually sent to the Yeravda Jail. He questions the validity of this order of the Local Government on the ground that he is not a foreigner. Some other points have been mentioned in the petition, but that is the sole point which has been pressed before us.

I do not think it necessary to go exhaustively into all the legal questions of nationality and change of status that arise in different cases of this kind. We have first of all to consider that s. 2 of the Foreigners Act, which reads:—

"Whoever is or is not subject to the provisions of this Act, is a foreigner and to be subject to the provisions of this Act, the onus of proving that such person is not a foreigner, or is not subject to the provisions of this Act, shall lie upon such person."

If the rule that has been laid down in English cases as to the effect of cession on the question of the nationality of persons ordinarily resident in the ceded territory is followed and held applicable, then there can, I think, be no question that the petitioner must be held to have ceased to be a British subject. The main rule in a case of this kind is summarised in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. I, Art. 696, page 317, as follows:—

"Such treaties (that is treaties like the one that was made with the United States of America in 1783) may specifically regulate the future nationality of the inhabitants of the ceded territory, but in the absence of an express provision, a relinquishment of the Government of a territory is not only a relinquishment of the right to the soil or territory, but also of the rights over the inhabitants of the country."

That seems obviously in accordance with common sense, because you cannot well have a Sovereign without subjects; at any rate if there is a State, the ordinary idea of Constitutional Law is that there are subjects in that State who are ruled over by the Sovereign, and naturally when a territory is ceded the inhabitants of that territory will become subjects of the Sovereign to whom the territory has been ceded. Of course a question can arise as to whether a particular person is an inhabitant of the territory, or even if he is not an inhabitant, whether he has such a connection with the territory as to make him subject to this general rule about change of nationality upon cession. This question has been discussed in certain English cases of which the latest one is In re Stepney Election Petition, Isaacson v. Durant (1). In that case at page 60* Lord Coleridge, C. J., very strongly rejected the contention that in all cases where conflicting duties of allegiance arise the subject has by general law, law which has been adopted into English Law, a right of election of which Sovereign he will become the subject. With reference to the case of Am (2) he says that the decision is upon any such right of election, "that the King having inhabitants of the States from which they became aliens." He (page 60*):—

"No doubt, if a man had chosen to leave the States newly recognised as independent, and had gone into England or the English dominions he would have remained what he was before, a British subject and within the allegiance of the British Sovereign. But why? Because he never became a citizen of the newly established and recognised States."

Then discussing the case of Auchmuty v. Mulcaster (3), he held that it does not help the claim to the alleged right of election. At first sight the distinction between such a right of election and the method by which a man can leave a newly ceded territory and remain within the allegiance of his former Sovereign seems somewhat fine; but, as I understand it, the distinction is one between a mere assertion of elected allegiance and actual conduct clearly showing such an election. It is not enough for an inhabitant to assert, when the question arises, that he has elected to remain within the allegiance of his former Sovereign; there must be conduct on his part, such as leaving the ceded territory and going to reside permanently in his former Sovereign's dominions, to indicate his previous election. I think the general principle has been well-expressed in Foote's Private International Jurisprudence, 4th Edition., at pages 8 and 9, where he says, referring to the case of allegiance dissolved by cession, etc.:—

"On such a dissolution, the resident inhabitants of the territory ceded, separated, or conquered lose their former nationality, and become subjects of the new State to which they are assigned or attached. It has been sometimes said that the inhabitants of the separated territory have it at their own election to determine to which Sovereign they shall bear allegiance in the future. There can be no doubt that such an option may be given by the express provisions of the treaty or Statute by which the separation is governed, in which case a definite period is usually named within which the option must be exercised by quitting or remaining inhabitants of the ceded or separated territory. Where no such option is expressly given, the question has been treated by Lord Coleridge, C. J., as one of fact. When a Sovereign by treaty relinquishes his claim to the allegiance of the inhabitants of specified territories, it becomes a question of fact whether a particular individual remained after the cession (or the limited time) an inhabitant of the specified territory and became thereby a citizen of the State into which it passed as an integral part. In no case has it been held that any inhabitant of the ceded or separated territory has the right to remain an inhabitant of it, and at the same time to retain the allegiance and nationality of the State which ceded or permitted the separation."

There is also a passage in Hall's International Law, 7th Edition., which I think may be appropriately cited as helping in the disposal of this particular case. At pages 611 to 613 he says:—

"It has, however, been usual in modern treaties to insert a clause securing liberty to inhabitants of a ceded country to keep their nationality of origin. In the case of persons native of, and established in, the ceded territory, and even in the case of persons who are established in, without being natives of, the ceded territory, this liberty is commonly saddled with the condition that they shall retire within the territory remaining to their state of origin, a certain

(1) (1836) 17 Q. B. D. 54; 55 L. J. Q. B. 331; 51 L. T. 684; 31 W. R. 517.

(2) (1824) 2 B. & C. 779; 4 D. & R. 394; 2 L. J. K. B. (o. s.) 129; 107 E. R. 572; 26 R. R. 551.

(3) (1826) 5 B. & C. 771; 8 D. & R. 593; 4 L. J. K. B. (o. s.) 311; 103 E. R. 288; 29 R. R. 390.

[90 I. C. 1925]

JAGARDEO RAMSUMER TEWARI v. EMPEROR.

time being allowed to them to arrange their affairs and dispose of landed and other property which they may be unable to take with them... Residence in foreign countries being a frequent incident of modern life, withdrawal from a ceded district is not conclusive of the intention of the person withdrawing to reject the nationality of the conquering state. It is, therefore, usual to exact an express declaration of intention, as a condition of preservation of the nationality of birth, from persons against whom there is a presumption of changed nationality—that is to say, from persons born within the territory and living there, and from persons born within the territory but absent at the date of annexation. [This last sentence applies to the petitioner, if, as alleged, he was absent in Bombay at the date of cession in 1911]. There being no such presumption against persons born in another part of the state making the cession, the simple fact of withdrawal is in their case sufficient."

This seems to me to be reasonable and to supply cogent authority for saying that the mere fact of the petitioner and his father having carried on business in Bombay does not suffice to show that he has withdrawn himself from the operation of the general rule under which, as a former and still a periodical occasional inhabitant of this village of Ramdupati, he has since the date of cession become a subject of the Raja of Benares. We have not of course before us such materials as might be available if there had been a civil suit in which this point was in issue. But the admissions before us at any rate supply materials from which, I think, it can be properly concluded that this family has certainly not severed all connection with their village of Ramdupati. Admittedly they have certain ancestral land there, in which the petitioner has a share. I have already mentioned the fact that the father and various sons on falling ill returned to this village. An allegation has been made in Mr. Oauty's affidavit that the family of the petitioner is at present at Ramdupati and I agree with the learned Advocate-General that it is significant that the counter-affidavit contains no direct contradiction of this allegation or any statement that the petitioner's family have in fact been brought to and kept in Bombay. I think that, if that were the case, it would certainly have been put as part of the petitioner's case in the main petition, just as he has put the fact that for a number of years he and his father have carried on business in Bombay. As I have already said, the onus of showing that he has ceased to be a foreigner rests upon the petitioner, and if the ordinary rules of law upon this subject are applicable in this case, then, in my opinion, he has not satisfied that onus.

It was, however, urged by the petitioner's Counsel that the Common Law of England embodying these particular rules on which I have relied is not a "law for the time being in force," in British India within the meaning of the proviso to s. 1 of the Foreigners Act III of 1864, as amended by s. 2 of Act III of 1915. His contention is that a law must be said—which alone can be "in force" in British India. However, it is now—such a contention. I have recognised the Common Law of England in British India in various cases. One of these is Irrawaddy Flotilla Company v. Bugwandas (4), where their Lordships observe (page 625*):

"For the present purpose it is not material to inquire how it was that the Common Law of England came to govern the duties and liabilities of common carriers throughout India. The fact itself is beyond dispute. It is recognised by the Indian Legislature in the Carriers' Act, 1865, an Act framed on the lines of the English Carriers' Act of 1830 (II Geo. IV, and I Wm. IV, c. 68)."

And dealing as we are with this particular case under s. 491, Cr. P. C., that is to say, as a High Court established by the Letters Patent and the successors of the former Supreme Court of Bombay, it is clear that the Common Law which was formerly administered by the Supreme Court is also part of the law to be administered by the present Court, unless it is superseded by Statute or otherwise. Their Lordships of the Privy Council in Maharaja of Jeypore v. Rukmini Pattamahadevi (5), say (page 663†):—

(4) 18 C. 620; 18 I. A. 121; 15 Ind. Jur. 403 & 542; 6 Sar. P. C. J. 40; 9 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 413 (P. O.).

(5) 50 Ind. Cas. 631; 21 Bom. L. R. 655; 36 M. L. J. 543; 17 A. L. J. 552; 29 C. L. J. 528; (1919) M. W. N. 271; 23 C. W. N. 889; 26 M. L. T. 16; 42 M. 589; 10 L. W. 391; 46 I. A. 109 (P. O.).

*Page of 18 C.—[Ed.]

†Page of 21 Bom. L. R.—[Ed.]

"They (the High Courts) are directed by the several charters to proceed where the law is silent, in accordance with justice, equity, and good conscience, and the rules of English Law as to forfeiture of tenancy may be held and have been held to be consonant with these principles and to be applicable to India."

Of course this Common Law can only be applicable when it is properly applicable to the society and circumstances of India. I cannot, however, conceive of any department of law in which the Common Law is more applicable than that part of Constitutional Law, which governs the question of nationality and the question of the status of British subject. It is a law which was brought in when the British obtained power "in 1661 Charles II. the Governor and places belonging to the East Indies, power belonging to the said Governor and Company or that should live under them in all causes, whether Civil or Criminal, according to the laws of the kingdom, and to execute justice accordingly." (See Tagore Law Lectures, 1872: The History and Constitution of the Courts and Legislative Authorities in India by Cowell, page 16). Therefore I reject the contention that the English Common Law cannot be a part of the law for the time being in force in British India. There is no Statute, so far as I am aware, which in any way affects its applicability, in this case, at any rate none such has been cited. In the circumstances of this case I find that the petitioner has failed to show that he has not ceased to be a British subject, in view of the cession of 1911 already mentioned. In my opinion, therefore, is no proper ground for the exercise of our powers under s. 491, Cr. P. C., which is sought by the petitioner. I would, therefore, discharge the Rule. Any question of costs can be considered later.

Madgavkar, J.—On January 10, 1925, an order was passed by the Local Government against the petitioner under s. 3 of the India Act III of 1864, ordering him as a foreigner to remove himself from British India. With this order he complied. But on March 19, he was found to have returned to British India and was arrested at Andhari. He is now in confinement in the Yeravda Jail; and the legality of this confinement is questioned in this application, mainly on the ground that he is not a foreigner but that he continues to be a British subject.

The petitioner was born a British subject at Ramdupati, which along with the adjacent villages, was on April 1, 1911, ceded and constituted as a Native State under the jurisdiction of His Highness the Maharaja of Benares. It is argued for the petitioner that he was a resident of Bombay on the date of the treaty and that apart from stray visits to Ramdupati, he has continued to carry on his father's business in Bombay and that he thus continues to be a British subject. The treaty, it is said, does not confer unrestricted powers such as the power of life and death on the Maharaja of Benares so as to create a new political entity. The words "any law for the time being in force" in s. 2 of the Amending Act III of 1915 apply only to Statutes.

For the Crown it is argued by the learned Advocate-General that the cession of territory under the treaty necessarily includes a change of sovereignty and allegiance and, therefore, the petitioner is a foreigner within the meaning of Act III of 1864 as amended by Act III of 1915.

Under s. 2 of the Act of 1864, the onus of proving that he is not a foreigner is expressly laid on the petitioner. And the substantial question, therefore, under the proviso to s. 2 of Act III of 1915 is whether the petitioner by virtue of the treaty of April 1, 1911, has or has not ceased to be a British subject.

Whatever the difficulties of locating sovereignty in the Austinian sense, the treaty clearly creates a political jurisdiction and a Political Agent previously non-existent. For all practical purposes, the latter appears to be a decisive test, unaffected by the various limitations on the Maharaja's powers such as those in cl. 17 in respect of jurisdiction over servants of the British Government and European British subjects or in cl. 25 in respect of death sentences. Kathiawar, to go no further, illustrates the point that such limitations of varying degrees are perfectly consistent with the existence of foreign political status, in the legal sense, both civil and criminal.

A certain amount of stress has been laid for the petitioner on the words "under any law for the time being in force" to be found in s. 2 of Act III of 1915; and the question was argued whether the word 'law' is restricted to Statute Law or whether it includes Common Law. On general principles of interpretation, it is hardly open to the Courts to limit the word by the implicit addition of 'Statute' before it. And on broader grounds, whatever the case in the days of Machiavelli, it is now too late in the day to raise the question of the binding nature of treaties and the duty, in matters civil and criminal, of enforcing and abiding by the their terms, incumbent on all the contracting powers and their Courts, not less than in the case of laws passed by the Legislature. Our reports are full of such cases, as for instance, from Kathiawar, in matters of succession, domicile and extradition. And it is not necessary to fortify them by recent illustrations of the enforcement by Courts in England of various clauses of the Treaty of Versailles. For the purposes of the present application, this treaty, in my opinion, is as much law binding on the Courts as any Statute Law of the Legislature. And the only point for the petitioner is perhaps that the treaty does not in terms declare that the Indian subjects in the ceded territory have ceased to be British subjects.

But that a treaty of cession has by implication such effect has been amply shown in the judgment of my learned brother. In the case of In re Stepney Election Petition, Isaacson v. Durant (1), it is to be noted that the decision proceeded on the fact that on the death of William IV, the succession to the Kingdom of Hanover, unlike the succession to the Crown of Great Britain, was governed by Salic Law. But whatever the legal aspect in so peculiar a case, not of treaty but of succession, speaking for myself, I should incline to the opinion that where, as in the present instance, the case is one of a treaty and of rights created thereunder, it would be open to a subject of the ceded territory, unless the treaty expressly forbade, to elect to continue his former nationality and to prove such election. And, in this opinion, I am supported by the cases of Doe v. Acklam (2) and of Jephson v. Riera (6), as well as by the argument at page 58* in In re Stepney Election Petition, Isaacson v. Durant (1). Further, in the present treaty, cl. 22, which empowers a British subject to call upon the Maharaja within a year to acquire immoveable properties belonging to such subject, is, in my opinion, a clear indication that the subject here could so elect.

In the present case, therefore, the question reduces itself to whether the petitioner can show that on or after April 1, 1911, he elected to continue his nationality as British subject; or whether he accepted the altered nationality under the treaty. Here again the onus is, in my opinion, clearly on the petitioner not less than it would be in the case of domicile: "The abandonment or change of domicile is a proceeding of a voluntary nature, and an intention to abandon must be proved by clear and convincing evidence": Gaskell (7). In the present case, it would appear that the family of the petitioner and his brothers like their father's has continued to be Ramdupati, the lands are retained and the residence of the petitioner and his brothers and their family in Bombay was solely for the purpose of business. The case is one of very common occurrence in the city of Bombay, and I agree with my learned brother that such residence of itself or a continuance of it, is not sufficient evidence of election or of continuance of the petitioner's former status as British subject.

Into the alleged hardship of the present case we are not competent to enter.

I agree, therefore, that the petitioner has not discharged the onus laid on him by law to show that he is not a foreigner; and the Rule must be discharged.

Per Curiam.—The Rule is accordingly discharged.

The learned Advocate-General asks that under cl. (5) of r. 7 of the High Court Rules, Appellate Side of 1920, the Court should allow costs against the petitioner on the Appellate Side scale. We think, however, that the petitioner had legitimate ground for seeking the Court's decision on the question whether he was or was not a foreigner, and in the circumstances we are not disposed to grant costs against him. The Rule is, therefore, discharged without costs.

(7) (1906) A. C. 56; 75 L. J. P. C. 1; 91 L. T. 33; 22 T. L. R. 144.

*Page of (1886) 17 Q. B. D.—[Ed.]

(6) (1835) 3 Knapp 130; 12 E. R. 598.

Z. K.

Rule discharged.

RANGOON HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 836-B OF 1925.

September 17, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Maung Ba.

SULTAN—APPLICANT

versus

MAJOR C. DE M. WELLBOURNE—

RESPONDENT

Criminal Procedure Code (1929), ss. 154, 161—Statement of witness in the course of investigation, whether given voluntarily or otherwise, means "volunteer."

A statement made by a witness in the course of an investigation under the Cr. P. C., and recorded under s. 161 of the Code, is information given to the Police under s. 154 of the Code, and, therefore, if false, is not punishable under s. 182 of the Penal Code. [p. 317, col. 1.]

Obiter.—The word "give" in s. 182, Penal Code, does not bear the restricted meaning of the word "volunteer." [ibid.]

Mangu v. Emperor, 25 Ind. Cas. 978; 35 P. W. R. 1914 Cr.; 227 P. L. R. 1914; 15 Cr. L. J. 650, and Emperor v. Nga Aung Po, U. B. R. (1905) Penal Code, 13; 2 Cr. L. J. 474, not followed.

Queen-Empress v. Bhikaji, Rat. Un. Cr. C. 124 and Queen-Empress v. Ramji Sajaba Rao, 10 B. 124; 10 Ind. Jur. 300; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 468, referred to.

Criminal revision against an order of the District Magistrate, Insein.

Mr. S. M. Bose, for the Applicant.

Mr. Gaunt, Assistant Government Advocate, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Applicant Sultan was being prosecuted before the District Magistrate of Insein under s. 182 of the Indian Penal Code. The particulars of the offence are as follows:—

"That you on or about the 26th day of June 1925 at Insein gave to U Aung Din, a public servant, information to the effect that E A. Bharoocha, Mahomed Yusoof and Gur Khan were driven by you in your tari to the Insein Municipal Office on the night of the 5th and 6th June 1925 which information you knew or believed to be false and knew to be likely to cause such public servant to do an act which he should not have done or to cause him to use his lawful power to the injury or annoyance of any person."

It is now contended that he did not give information but only made a statement to a Police Officer who was making an investigation under Chapter XIV of the Cr. P. C. and that for that reason he has committed no offence punishable under s. 182 of the Penal Code.

This case is a sequel to the famous arson case under s. 436 of the Penal Code in connection with the destruction by fire of the Insein Municipal Office. The offence under s. 436 is a cognizable one. A reference to the Criminal Regular Trial No. 47 of 1925 of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Insein shows that the First Information Report was lodged by Mr. Yusoof Secretary of the Insein Municipality.

The principal point for decision is whether the statement made by Sultan to U Aung Tun, Inspector, C. I. D. can be considered as information, relating to the commission of a cognizable offence given to the Police within the meaning of s. 154 of the Cr. P. C., or whether it should be considered simply as a statement made to an Investigating Officer under s. 161 of that Code.

An information could be given either orally or in writing. If given orally, the Police Officer is required to record it, and every such information whether given in writing or reduced to writing requires to be signed by the person giving it. Such information forms the basis upon which an investigation under Chapter XIV commences. A Police Officer making an investigation has power under s. 160 to require the attendance of witnesses who appear to be acquainted with the circumstances of the case, and examine them. Such persons are bound to attend, and are also bound to answer all questions relating to the case other than questions the answers to which would incriminate them. Section 162 lays down that no statement made by a person to a Police Officer in the course of such an investigation shall if reduced to writing be signed by that person.

In the present case Sultan's statement (Ex. A) was recorded by the Inspector, but it does not appear to have been signed by Sultan. It was recorded on 26th June 1925, and from the evidence of U Aung Tun it would appear that the fire occurred on 6th June that he took up the investigation from the 15th June, and that a First Information Report had been opened previously

U Aung Tun further stated that one Gur Khan offered to give information and so he recorded Gur Khan's statement on the 20th June, that Gur Khan then made a confession before the Sub Divisional Magistrate, that Gur Khan mentioned a taxi, that later at an identification parade Sultan was identified as the taxi-cab driver, that after that identification Sultan was brought to him, and that on his asking him what he knew about this case Sultan made the statement (Ex. A), U Aung Tun admitted that before he recorded Sultan's statement he had examined two other witnesses whose statements afforded no corroboration of Gur Khan's statement.

In the above circumstances one is driven to the conclusion that the statement of Sultan was recorded under the provisions of s. 161. By no stretch of imagination can that statement be treated as information given to the Police under s. 154. There has been a conflict of judicial opinion as regards the word "give" used in s. 182 of the Penal Code. That word has been interpreted to mean "volunteer" in Mangu v. Emperor (1) and a similar view has been taken by Irwin, J. C., in Emperor v. Nga Aung Po (2). In that case it was held that giving false answers to questions put by a Police Officer in the course of investigation of a cognizable offence is not punishable under s. 182 of the Penal Code. A contrary view was held in the very old case of Queen-Empress v. Bhikaji (3).

I am not inclined to give that restricted meaning of "volunteer" to the word "give." For instance if a Police Officer, has reason to suspect the commission of a cognizable offence, he can investigate the case, under s. 157 for the discovery and arrest of the offender. During such investigation he may find a person who gives him the required information in answer to questions put by him.

There is nothing, in my opinion, to prevent that Officer from recording that information under the provisions of s. 154. In that view I am fortified by the opinion of the learned Judges of the Bombay High Court in the case of Queen-Empress v. Ramji Sajaba Rao (4). In that case the information from the accused was elicited by a Forest Officer in the course of his enquiry. It was there held "that any false information given to that Forest Officer with the intent mentioned in s. 182 of the Penal Code is punishable under that section whether that information is volunteered by the informant or given in answer to questions put to him by that Officer."

Having held that the statement of Sultan did not amount to information given to a Police Officer but amounted to a statement made as a witness to an Investigation Officer under s. 161 of the Cr. P. C., it follows that his prosecution under s. 182 is unjustifiable, because he has not committed that offence.

Accusation is allowed and answers against him are allowed.

Application allowed.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 235 OF 1925.

May 20, 1925.

Present :—Sir Lancelot Sanderson, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Panton.

RAM GOPAL GOENKA—PETITIONER

versus

THE CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA—
OPPOSITE PARTY.

Calcutta Municipal Act (111 of 1923), ss. 363, 364—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 6—Unauthorized building—Proceedings by Corporation—Owner, if must be heard—Municipal Magistrate, order of—High Court, whether can interfere.

Failure to give the owner of an unauthorised building an opportunity of being heard, which he is entitled to under s. 364 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, before he is proceeded against, is a material irregularity vitiating the trial of the owner before the Municipal Magistrate. [p 318, col. 2.]

A Magistrate appointed for trial of offences against the Calcutta Municipal Act is a Criminal Court within the meaning of s. 6 of the Cr. P. C. [p. 319, col. 1.]

An order passed by the Municipal Magistrate is a judicial order, and the High Court has jurisdiction to interfere by way of revision. [p. 319, col. 2.]

Annie Besant v. Advocate-General of Madras, 52 Ind. Cas. 209; 43 M. 146; 37 M. L. J. 139; 17 A. L. J. 925; 23 C. W. N. 986; 21 Bom. L. R. 867; (1919) M. W. N. 555; 10 L. W. 451; 20 Cr. L. J. 593; 36 M. L. T. 408; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 74; (1919) 35 T. L. R. 500; 46 I. A. 176 (P. C.), followed.

Rule against an order of the Municipal Magistrate, Calcutta, dated the 28th February 1925.

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 978; 35 P. W. R. 1914 Cr.; 227 P. L. R. 1914; 15 Cr. L. J. 650.

(2) U. B. R. (1905) Penal Code 13; 2 Cr. L. J. 474.

(3) Rat. Un. Cr. C. 124.

(4) 10 B. 124; 10 Ind. Jur. 300; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 468.

Mr. Langford James, Babus Probodh Chander Chatterjee, Sures Chunder Taluqdar and Mohendra Kumar Ghose, for the Petitioner.

The Advocate-General and Babu Satindra Nath Mukherjee, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Sanderson, C. J.—This was a Rule issued by my learned brothers Mr. Justice Newbould and Mr. Justice Bepin Behary Ghose calling upon the Municipal Magistrate and on the Chief Executive Officer of the Corporation of Calcutta to show cause why the order complained of should not be set aside or such other order made as to this Court might seem fit and proper.

The order complained of was an order made by the Municipal Magistrate of Calcutta dated the 1st of April 1924, by which the Magistrate directed the demolition of certain alterations by the Corporation at the expense of the owner.

The proceedings in this matter were at some peculiarities. The alleged unauthorised structures were made before the 1st of April 1924. The notice which was served upon petitioner was headed "s. 364, Act III (B. C.) of 1923" (i. e. The Calcutta Municipal Act of 1923 which came into force on the 1st of April 1924). The notice was to the effect that the petitioner was directed to appear to show cause before the Municipal Magistrate of Calcutta why an order should not be made under s. 364 of Act III (B. C.) of 1923, directing that so much of the building as had been unlawfully executed be demolished or altered by the Chairman at the owner's expense.

Although the notice, as I have already said, purported to be under s. 364, the decision of the Magistrate was headed "under s. 363 of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1923", and when the Magistrate gave his decision, he proceeded under s. 449 of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1899, which he said corresponded to s. 363 of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1923. The Act of 1899 was repealed by the Act of 1923.

In my judgment, it must be taken that these proceedings were, in fact, instituted under the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1923. If that be so, then whether the proceedings were taken under s. 363 or s. 364, the proceedings would have to be initiated by the Corporation, which came into being in consequence of the passing of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1923. The proceedings were in fact headed "Corporation of Calcutta versus Ram Gopal Goenka". Section 363 provides: "If the Corporation are satisfied that the erection of any new building has been commenced without obtaining the written permission of the Corporation they may, after giving the owner of such building an opportunity of being heard, apply to a Magistrate, and such Magistrate may make an order directing that such erection, alteration, addition or other work shall be demolished by the owner thereof; or by the Corporation at the expense of the said owner."

Section 364 provides: "In any of the following cases" (The various matters are set out) "the Corporation may apply to a Magistrate, and such Magistrate may make an order directing that the building, fixture, additions, etc., be demolished, provided that before making such application, the Corporation shall give the owner an opportunity of being heard." It is, therefore, clear that, whether the proceedings were under s. 363 or s. 364, the Corporation instituted the proceedings, and before making an application to the Magistrate the Corporation was bound to give the person, who was to be proceeded against, an opportunity of being heard. It may be said that the petitioner was given an opportunity of being heard by the authorities which existed under the Act of 1890, but there is no doubt that the Corporation, constituted by the Act of 1923, did not give the petitioner an opportunity of being heard before the application by or on behalf of the Corporation was made before the Magistrate:

Consequently, in my judgment, there was a material irregularity in the proceedings in respect of this matter.

But the learned Advocate-General, who appeared for the Corporation, argued that the liability of the petitioner in respect of the unauthorised structures existed after the repeal of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1899 by reason of s. 8 of the Bengal General Clauses Act. That section provides: "Where this Act, or any Bengal Act made after the commencement of this Act, repeals any enactment hitherto made or hereafter to be made, then, unless a different intention appears, the repeal shall not affect any right, privilege, obligation or liability acquired, accrued or incurred under any enactment so repealed."

It might be that the liability of the petitioner in respect of the alleged unauthorized structures still remained after the repeal of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1899 but a difficulty arises in this way, that even if the present proceedings could be regarded as having been instituted under the repealed Act of 1899, (which I think is not the case) then such proceedings would have to be initiated by the General Committee because s. 449 provides that "if the General Committee are satisfied" as to certain matters therein stated "the General Committee may apply to a Magistrate." The learned Advocate-General informed the Court that the General Committee under the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1899 no longer exists: and, therefore, there is no body competent to take proceedings under s. 449 of the 1899 Act.

Therefore, whichever way this matter is looked at, in my judgment, there was a material irregularity in the proceedings and the order which was made by the Municipal Magistrate, cannot be allowed to stand.

Before leaving this case, it is necessary for me to say one or two words about the preliminary point which was raised by the learned Advocate-General. He argued that this Rule was issued under s. 435, Cr. P. C., and this Court had no jurisdiction to issue a Rule under s. 435 or to make it absolute under s. 439 of the Cr. P. C., on the ground that the Municipal Magistrate, when dealing with this matter, was not acting under the Cr. P. C., and that consequently the provisions of the Cr. P. C. could not be applied by this Court for the purpose of revising the proceedings before the Magistrate.

I am not prepared to accept that argument.

Section 531 of the Calcutta Municipal Act of 1923 provides: "The Local Government may appoint one or more Magistrates for the trial of offences against this Act, and the rules or by-laws made thereunder."

Prima facie, therefore, a Magistrate appointed under that power for the trial of offences against the Calcutta Municipal Act would be a Criminal Court within the meaning of s. 6 of the Cr. P. C.

As a matter of fact, we were informed that the Municipal Magistrate, who acted in this case, was a Presidency Magistrate, and I have no doubt that he would be a Criminal Court within the meaning of s. 6, which provides as follows: "Besides the High Courts and the Courts constituted under any law other than this Code for the time being in force, there shall be five classes of Criminal Courts in British India. I. Court of Sessions, II. Presidency Magistrate, etc." I think it may be said that the Municipal Magistrate appointed to deal with offences against the Calcutta Municipal Act is a Court constituted under a law other than the Code for the time being in force and comes within s. 6. Consequently, I am not prepared to hold that s. 435 and s. 439, Cr. P. C., do not apply to these proceedings.

This is not of any real importance to the order of the Court. It was a judicial order made by him either in his civil jurisdiction or in his criminal jurisdiction, and this Court has jurisdiction to interfere by way of revision under one Code or the other. See Annie Besant v. Advocate-General of Madras (1). In that case Lord Phillimore, after referring to the fact that the High Courts of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay possessed the power of issuing a writ of certiorari, is reported at page 160* to have said "If the order of the Magistrate were a judicial order, it would have been made in the exercise of his civil or of his criminal jurisdiction, and procedure by way of revision would have been open." That is exactly the point, which was put by the Court to the learned Advocate-General in the course of the argument.

In my judgment, this Court has jurisdiction to revise the order of the Municipal Magistrate, and for the reasons already stated I am of opinion that the Rule should be made absolute and the order of the Municipal Magistrate should be set aside.

Panton, J.—I agree.

N. H.

Rule made absolute.

(1) 52 Ind. Cas. 209; 43 M. 146; 37 M. L. J. 139; 17 A. L. J. 925; 23 C. W. N. 986; 21 Bom. L. R. 867; (1919) M. W. N. 555; 10 L. W. 451; 20 Cr. L. J. 593; 26 M. L. T. 408; 1 U. P. L. R. (P. C.) 74; (1919) 35 T. L. R. 500; 46 I. A. 176 (P. C.).

*Page of 43 M.—[Ed.]

BOMBAY HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE No. 31 OF 1925.

July 1, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Fawcett and
Mr. Justice Madgavkar.

BASAPPA RACHAPA HUNDEKAR—

ACCUSED

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Motor Vehicles Act (VIII of 1914), ss. 5, 18 (2)— Conviction for dangerous driving—Fine, amount of —Cancellation or suspension of license.

A fine inflicted on an accused person should not be excessive, having regard to his pecuniary means.

The best way to stop dangerous driving of motors is for the Court, on a conviction of the offender under s. 5 of the Motor Vehicles Act, instead of imposing a fine discommensurate with the pecuniary means of the latter, to exercise its powers under sub-s. (2) of s. 18 of the Act, by directing the conviction to be endorsed on the license of the offender and to cancel or suspend that license, or even to declare the offender disqualified for obtaining a license either permanently or for such period as it thinks fit.

Reference made by the District Magistrate, Bijapur.

Mr. Ankalikar (with him Mr. H. B. Gumaste), for the Accused.

Mr. S. S. Patkar, Government Pleader, for the Crown.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the District Magistrate has moved this Court to enhance the sentence of fine passed on four accused persons who were motor-drivers and were convicted of the offence of dangerous driving under s. 5 of the Indian Motor Vehicles Act VIII of 1914. Each of them was sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 25. This Court, however, has only issued notice for enhancement of sentence in the case of accused No. 1 Basappa Rachappa.

The main facts are these:—Basappa was driving a motor-car which takes passengers between Bagalkot and Hongal and the other accused were driving similar motor vehicles. The Magistrate held that they were in fact racing, while they were driving along the road; and the car driven by accused No. 1 Basappa knocked down a man who sustained injuries to his legs and had to be treated in hospital for some time in consequence. There seems no doubt upon the evidence that the convictions of the four accused or at any rate that of accused No. 1, with whom alone we are concerned, is justified. But the maximum penalty provided for the offence is a fine of Rs. 500 and the general rule is that the fine imposed on an accused person should not be excessive, having regard to his pecuniary means. In the present case there is nothing to suggest that accused No. 1 was a person of such means, as would make it appropriate to impose fine of say) Rs. 100, such as was suggested by the Government Pleader. In my opinion the best way to stop dangerous driving of the kind in question is for the Court, on conviction of the offender, to exercise its powers under sub-s. (2) of s. 18, under which such Court "shall cause particulars of the conviction to be endorsed" on any license held by the accused and may (1) cancel or suspend that license, or even (2) declare the accused disqualified for obtaining a license either permanently or for such period as it thinks fit. That is a very substantial power the exercise of which will have a very deterrent effect, especially in the case of persons like the accused who earn their livelihood by driving motor vehicles. In the present case the learned Magistrate has not complied with the direction contained in this subsection that he should endorse particulars of the conviction upon the accused's license. At any rate there is nothing in the record which shows that that was done or directed to be done. We think that the accused, who is said to be still driving motor-cars, should be ordered to surrender his license to the Magistrate in order that the necessary particulars may be endorsed thereon. It would have been, I think, appropriate if the Magistrate had suspended the accused's license for, say, six months, having regard to the fact that he was driving the car which knocked over the injured man. But as the offence took place in July 1924 and the period for which the accused's license was then in force has probably expired, we do not think that we can appropriately pass an order of suspension or cancellation. The order of endorsement will, we think, be a sufficient enhancement of sentence in the circumstances of the case.

Z. K.

Sentence enhanced.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 76 OF 1925.

August 10, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

BAIJNATH—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

RAMDAS SAHU—PLAINTIFF—

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 25—Revision—Discretion of High Court—Limitation, nice question of—Interference.

The High Court has a discretion under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act and it will not under that section upset a decree passed by a Small Cause Court on the mere possibility that the Court may have gone wrong by a few days on a question of some nicety relating to limitation.

Revision against the judgment and decree of the Judge, Small Cause Court, Akbarpur, dated the 30th March 1925.

Mr. Muhammad Ayub, for the Appellant.

Mr. Naimullah, for the Opposite Party.

ORDER.—This is an application in revision under s. 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act. The suit was one on the basis of a promissory-note. The defence raised two points only.

1. That the money had been re-paid, and

2. That the suit was time barred.

Both issues were decided in favour of the plaintiff and the suit was decreed. The defendant comes here in revision. He cannot, of course, attack the finding of fact that the money has not been re-paid. His point is that the suit was time barred. It is a difficult question to decide whether it was time barred or not, because the promissory-note gives two dates for re-payment. It says three months from execution, and it says the meti Magh puran mashi 1978. Now the date of execution was the 23rd November 1921, so three months, calculated according to s. 25 of the Limitation Act, gives the 23rd of February, 1922. But the other date, meti Magh puran mashi 1978, corresponds to the 12th of February, 1922. The suit was brought on the 16th February, 1925, so it is within time from the 23rd of February 1922, but beyond time, reckoning from the 12th of February 1922. Several rulings have been cited at Bar, and I have considered them. But I do not propose to decide the point. I dismiss the application in revision on the ground that I have a discretion under s. 25, and, I am not prepared to upset the decision of the Court below, because it might plausibly be argued that the claim was beyond time. In certain cases no doubt it might be proper to proceed on a ground of limitation, but the possibility that a Small Cause Court may have gone wrong by a few days on a question of some nicety relating to limitation, is not a ground for setting aside the decree. The application is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION

15 AND 516 OF 1924.

25.

P.

K. Mullick, Kt.,

de Ross.

MUM—PETITIONER

alias alias PAHLAD DAS

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Jurisdiction—Appeal—Appellate Court's power to determine value of appeal—Revision.

It is the duty of a Court of Appeal, when an appeal is presented to it, to determine the jurisdictional value of the appeal and if it comes to the conclusion that the value exceeds its jurisdiction to return the appeal for presentation to the proper Court; and as in doing so the Court does not act without jurisdiction, its order is not open to revision. [p. 332, col. 1.]

Raghunath Charan Singh v. Shamo Koeri, 31 C. 344 and Peari Shah v. Suraja Mal Marwari, 16 Ind. Cas. 575; 16 C. L. J. 371; 17 C. W. N. 503, referred to.

Revision from an order of the District Judge of Muzafferpur, dated the 27th August 1924.

Mr. Muhammad Hasan Jan, for the Petitioner.

Mr. Siveshwar Dayal, Syed Noorul Hasan and Mr. A. H. Fakhruddin, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.

Mullick, J.—These two applications in revision arise out of Suits Nos. 20 and 21 of 1922 before the Subordinate Judge of Muzafferpur. The plaintiff, a mutwali, asks for a declaration that the properties in suit are increments of a wakf created by Musammamat Nurjahan Begum and for recovery of possession from the defendants who in one case claim title under a Court sale of the 16th February 1914 and in the other under a kobala executed by Musammamat Nurjahan on the 9th August 1914. One of the issues raised at the trial was whether the Court-fee paid was sufficient. The issue was decided in favour of the plaintiffs, but the suits were dismissed on the merits.

An appeal was taken by the plaintiffs to the District Judge who found that the value of the properties was not Rs. 2,100 as held by the Trial Court but not less than Rs. 15,000 or 20,000 and he accordingly returned the memoranda of appeal to be presented to the proper Court.

Against this order an appeal was preferred to this Court under O. XLIII r. 1 (a) of the C. P. C., but we held following Raghunath Charan Singh v. Shamo Koeri (1) that no appeal lay and we directed the applications to be registered as revision cases.

It is now urged before us by the learned Vakil for the plaintiffs that the learned Judge's order returning the memoranda of appeal was with a view to link this contention with the provisions of the Suits Valuation Act.

But this contention does not apply. The Suits Valuation Act applies to suits of unlimited pecuniary jurisdiction. An objection as to jurisdiction could be made before him on the ground of his jurisdiction to try the suit. If the suit had been tried by a Munsif it may be that an objection as to valuation for the purpose of determining the Court-fee might, in certain circumstances, have also been regarded as an objection as to jurisdiction; and in that case the Appeal Court, if satisfied, that, in spite of the under-valuation, the disposal of the suit on the merits had not been prejudiced, would have been entitled to hear the appeal as if there has been no defect of jurisdiction.

But here the question is not whether the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to try the suit but whether the Appeal Court had jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Ordinarily the Appeal Court does not interfere with a valuation made by a Trial Court for the purpose of determination of jurisdiction, but it is always open to a party to take this as a ground of appeal. The Court may also investigate the matter in exercise of its inherent powers. Part I of the Suits Valuation Act empowers the Local Government to make rules for determination of the value of land for purposes of jurisdiction in certain classes of suits, and Part II declares that in suits not coming within paras. v, vi and ix and para. x cl. (d) of s. 7 of the Court Fees Act, the value as determinable for the computation of Court-fees and the value for the purposes of jurisdiction shall be the same. Under the first part of s. 12 of the Court Fees Act the valuation made by the Trial Court for the purpose of computing the Court-fee is final as between the parties, but the finality so conferred is confined within very narrow limits and it is even open to a party to appeal on a question of category, that is to say, the class within which the suit falls. On a question of valuation pure and simple a party cannot appeal but the Court may act under the 2nd para. of s. 12 of the Court Fees Act for the purpose of protecting the revenue.

Here the suits before us fall within s. 7 para. iv (c) of the Court Fees Act and the valuation for the purpose of computing the Court-fee must determine the jurisdiction. But there was nothing to prevent the defendants from objecting before the District Judge that he had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. The District Judge had jurisdiction, and indeed it was his duty, to determine the point, and as there was no material before him for coming to the finding that the value of the subject-matter was at least Rs. 15,000 and that, therefore, he was not competent to hear the appeal, no revision lies against his order.

It follows from this view that an appeal on the ground of defect of jurisdiction may if successful disturb the finality of the valuation for the purpose of computation of Court-fees in suits coming under s. 8 of the Suits Valuation Act, but there can be no doubt that the first clause of s. 12 of the Court Fees Act is subject to the provisions of the Suits Valuation Act; and so it has been held in Peari Shah v. Suraja Mal Marwari (2). In the present case the Court vested with jurisdiction to hear the appeals will in deciding the question of jurisdiction be competent to levy deficit Court-fees on the plaintiff if satisfied that the District Judge's valuation was correct.

The immediate question, however, before us is whether the District Judge acted without jurisdiction in returning the memoranda of appeal. The answer is in the negative and these applications in revision are dismissed with costs: hearing fee two gold mohurs in each case.

Ross, J.—I agree.

S. D.

Revision dismissed.

(2) 16 Ind. Cas. 575; 16 C. L. J. 371; 17 C. W. N. 503.

1) 31 C. 344.

[90 I. C. 1925]

BALLABH DAS v. NARAIN PRASAD.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 55 OF 1923.

July 18, 1924.

Present :—Mr. Kotval, A. J. C.

Diwan Bahadur BALLABH DAS—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Seth NARAIN PRASAD—PLAINTIFF

—RESPONDENT.

Construction of document—Agreement to execute kararnama authorizing creditor's agent to receive cheques due to debtor, whether assignment—Decree in favour of third person—Attachment of cheques—Creditor, whether can object—Lien.

L, a P. W. D. contractor, borrowed money from B and executed two agreements in his favour on 4th September 1917 and 19th September 1919, agreeing to credit or deposit at B's shop all cheques that he may get from P. W. D. on account of the works and not to cash them, and to execute a ikararnama in the name of a servant of B whom B may appoint to authorize him to take on his (A's) behalf cheques in his name from the P. W. D. and get them credited in B's shop, and that he will have no authority to take the cheques until the satisfaction of the debt. One N, another creditor of L, obtained a decree against L and attached certain cheques of L obtained from P. W. D. B objected in execution proceeding that cheques were assigned to him. The objection was overruled. B then filed a suit for a declaration that the attachment was not valid:

Held, that the terms of the ikararnama did not constitute a present assignment of the debt due to A but an agreement to assign at future dates, and unless L authorized the P. W. D. to make over each cheque to the agent of B there was no lien acquired over it. [p. 324, col. 1.]

Row & Co. v. Dawson, (1749) 1 Wh. & T. L. C. (8th Ed.) p. 95; 1 Ves. Sen. 331; 27 E. R. 1064, referred to.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Jubbulpore, in Civil Appeal No. 21 of 1922, dated the 27th November 1922.

Sir B. K. Bose, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—Laxman Hira, defendant No. 2, borrowed money from the plaintiff, Narayan Prasad, from time to time to carry on certain road construction work which he had undertaken to do for the Public Works Department. On the 3rd December 1918 accounts were made up and Rs. 4,000 were found due to the plaintiff and for this sum Laxman passed an acknowledgment. He had undertaken other works of a similar nature for which he borrowed money from Ballabhdas defendant No. 1 under two ikrarnamas dated 4th September 1917 and 19th August 1919 Exs. D-2 and D-1. About the end of 1920 the plaintiff filed a suit in the Mandla Court against defendant, Laxman Hira, and obtained a decree for

Rs. 3,779-10-0 and caused certain cheques payable to him by the Public Works Department to be attached in execution. Defendant No. 1 filed an objection to the attachment on the strength of Exs. D-2 and D-1 and succeeded in getting the property released. The plaintiff, therefore, files this suit against the two defendants for a declaration that defendant No. 1 had no right to the cheques and that they were liable to attachment in execution of his decree as the property of defendant No. 2. As the amount due on the cheques was withdrawn by defendant No. 1 after the institution of the suit the plaintiff was allowed to amend his prayer for relief to one for a decree against defendant No. 1 for the amount.

Defendant No. 1 pleads that Exs. D-2 and D-1 were assigned in his favour on the ground that they were assignments and created a lien in his favour at the time of the plaintiff's suit. The cheques were the property of defendant No. 2 and were liable to attachment at the plaintiff's instance. It decreed the plaintiff's claim. The lower Appellate Court has upheld the Trial Court's decree.

The contention raised in the Trial Court by defendant No. 1 is repeated in this Court. Reliance is placed upon Row v. Dawson (1). In this case A borrowed money of B and gave him a draft upon a fund due to him (A) out of the Exchequer. The draft deposited with the officer from whom the fund was payable. A afterwards became bankrupt. The question was whether B became entitled to specific lien upon the fund or whether the assignees under the commission of bankruptcy were entitled to have the amount paid to them. It was held that the draft was an assignment of the fund or debt due to A and on being deposited with the officer attached immediately to the debt so that the officer could not have paid it to A supposing he had not been bankrupt without making himself liable to B.

The question then is whether by the ikrarnama Laxman assigned to defendant No. 1 Ballabhdas debts due from the Public Works Department. The term of the ikrarnama dated the 4th September 1917 now relevant is as follows. "I will credit (or deposit) at your shop all cheques that I may get from the Public Works Department on account of these works. I will not cash them." This term is maintained by the ikrarnama dated the 19th August 1919 which further stipulates as follows: "I will be giving you cheques in satisfaction of the money due to you just as I have been doing. I will execute a mukhtiarnama in the name of the servant whom you may appoint for making disbursements or of the person whom you may propose and will authorise him to take on my behalf cheques in my name from the Public Works Department and get the same credited to my khata at your shop. The mukhtiar-am shall, however have no authority to sign on my behalf any, bill in my name All cheques that may be issued in respect of these works shall be credited (or your shop) until full satisfaction with interest and commission. I have no authority to take any, bill in my name I have been authorized to take any, bill in my name alone have laid out money from the beginning. I, therefore, have no one besides yourself either you or any of my heirs or other mahajan or creditors shall be entitled to take the cheques."

(1) (1749) 1 Wh. & T. L. C. (8th Ed.) p. 95; 1 Ves. Sen. 331; 27 E. R. 1064.

These terms do not constitute a present assignment of the debts. The cheques could not be taken from the Public Works Department until Laxman executed an authority in favour of the agent appointed as agreed to take the cheques. Assuming that the mere delivery of the cheques into the hands of the defendant, amounted to assignment of the debts, the assignments would not be complete until the agent was placed in a position to demand the cheques from the Public Works Department. The agreement is an agreement to assign at future dates. Until each cheque is authorized by Laxman to be made over to the mukhtiar there is no lien acquired over it. Therefore, at the time of the attachment of the cheques by the plaintiff there was no lien on them or the debts payable by the Public Works Department.

As regards the third ground of appeal it is sufficient to state that no plea was raised and no issue framed on the point in the Trial Court. There is nothing on the record to show what cheques were attached by defendant No. 1 in his suit and what by the plaintiff in his, and whether any assets were really held by the Court. The ground cannot be considered now. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

G. R. D.

*Appeal dismissed.ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 137 OF 1922.

June 25, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Lindsay and
Mr. Justice Kanhaiya Lal.Syed SHABBAR HUSSAIN—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Haji ABBAS ALI AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXII, r. 4 —Pre-emption suit—Appeal by pre-emptor—Leith of one of several vendee respondents—Substitution not effected within time—Abatement of appeal.

The cause of action for a pre-emption suit is one and indivisible. Therefore, where an appeal by the pre-emptor in a pre-emption suit abates as against one of several vendee respondents, on account of failure to effect substitution within time after his death, the appeal abates in its entirety. In such a case the right to sue does not survive against the remaining vendees who constitute only a part of what was for the purposes of the suit one legal unit. [p. 325, col. 2.]

Mamuddin v. Sadarat Rai, 5 Ind. Cas. 897; 32 A. 301; 7 A. L. J. 228, followed.

First appeal from a decree of the Subordinate Judge, Basti, dated the 4th February 1922.

Mr. Iqbal Ahmed, for the Appellant.

Mr. S. N. Sen, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The appellant in this case Syed Shabbar Hussain was the plaintiff in the Court below in a suit brought to pre-empt a sale which was carried out by means of a document executed on the 20th August 1920. The first party of defendants to the suit consisted of eight persons who are the purchasers under the deed just mentioned. The defendants second party, consisting of two persons, were the vendors. The sale was a sale to eight persons in consideration of a sum of Rs. 14,999.

The plaintiff's suit failed in the Court below on the ground that the existence of a custom of pre-emption had not been proved. The plaintiff then appealed to this Court and impleaded the eight vendees and the two vendors as respondents. Since the filing of the appeal one of the vendees has died and admittedly no application has been made within time to make his legal representatives parties to the appeal. The necessary result of this default on the part of the plaintiff-appellant is that the appeal has abated as against the deceased respondent in accordance with the provisions of O. XXII, r. 4 (3). Under that sub-rule it is declared that where within the time limited by law no application is made under sub-r. (1) the suit shall abate as against the deceased defendant. The same rule is applicable in the case of appeals.

[90 I. C. 1925]

RAMESWAR NARAYAN SINGH v. MAHABIR PRASAD.

A preliminary objection is now raised on behalf of the remaining respondents vendees to the effect that the appeal has abated not only as against the deceased respondent but in its entirety, and we are of opinion that this plea must prevail.

It cannot be contended on the language of O. XXII, r. 4 (3) that the only result of the default to make the legal representatives of the deceased respondent parties to the record is that the appeal abates only against the deceased respondent and can proceed as against the others. In our opinion that is not the meaning of the sub-rule. The question whether the appeal abates entirely or only against the deceased respondent must be determined with reference to the nature of the suit or rather the nature of the right to sue. We may here refer to the observations at page 112* Wajid Ali Khan v. Puran Singh (1) in which the argument that the appeal necessarily abates only against the deceased respondent but not against the others was repelled.

We have, therefore, in this case to consider what was the plaintiff's right to sue. He claimed as a co-sharer of the vendors to pre-empt the sale made in favour of the eight defendants vendees and his right as a pre-emptor was a right to sue all these vendees as one party and to claim that he should be substituted as vendee in their place. He was bound to pre-empt the whole sale and could not pre-empt a part and so he was under an obligation to make all the vendees defendants in the suit. Every one of the vendees was a necessary party.

Now it is the same right of suit which the plaintiff-appellant is asserting here in this appeal. His suit has failed in the Court below and he asks this Court to enforce the right that he asserted in the Trial Court. If that right is one which in the Court below he could assert only against the eight vendees together it follows that he cannot assert it here against only seven of them. His claim as pre-emptor was to be substituted as vendee of the entire property sold and by his own default that relief can no longer be granted. No decree which we could give could displace the representatives of the deceased vendee from possession.

The fact is that the cause of action for the suit for pre-emption was one and indivisible. There was only one sale in favour of the body of eight persons who are for the purposes of the suit to be treated as one legal entity. The plaintiff asks to be put in the place of this body of purchasers. That was his right to sue a right which he could assert by a suit and as this cannot now be done it appears to us that the claim must fail in its entirety. The right to sue does not survive against the remaining vendees who constitute only a part of the purposes of this case.

Authority [see the Sadarat Rai (2).] We effect to the pre-emptor that the appeal The result is that and is dismissed with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale.

N. H.

(2) 5 In

Appeal dismissed.

Cas. 897; 32 A. 301; 7 A. L. J. 228.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 643 OF 1922.

April 29, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.
KUMAR RAMESWAR NARAYAN SINGH—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT
versus

MAHABIR PRASAD AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act (VI of 1908), ss. 214, 231, 252—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 95—Sale of holding—Suit to set aside sale on ground of fraud, nature of—Limitation applicable.

Sections 214 and 258 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act do not create a right to institute a suit to set aside a sale of a holding held under the provisions of the Act. They bar the institution of such a suit except on the ground of fraud or want of jurisdiction. The right to institute a suit to set aside a sale is conferred by the general law and has been restricted by these sections to the case of fraud or want of jurisdiction. A suit, therefore, to set aside a sale of a holding held under the provisions of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act on the ground of fraud, is not a suit instituted under the provisions of the Act as contemplated by s. 231 of the Act, and consequently the period of limitation applicable to such a suit is not the one provided by that section but the one laid down in Art. 95 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and begins to run from the date on which the fraud becomes known to the plaintiff. [p. 326, col. 2; p. 327, col. 1.]

(1) 85 Ind. Cas. 66; 47 A. 100; 22 A. L. J. 994; L. R. 6 A. 39 Civ.; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 108.

*Page of 47 A.—[Ed.]

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Ranchi, dated the 12th April 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, Hazaribagh, dated the 31st January 1921.

Mr. B. C. De, for the Appellant.

Messrs. N. Roy and Satdeo Sahai, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal by the defendant against the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Ranchi reversing the decision of the Munsif of Hazaribagh and decreeing the plaintiff's suit. The suit was for setting aside a sale of a raiyati holding held under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act on the ground of fraud. The learned Subordinate Judge held that the sale was vitiated on the ground of fraud and accordingly decreed the suit and set aside the sale. Against this decision the defendant has come up in second appeal.

The principal question for decision in this appeal is as to whether the suit was barred by limitation. The sale in execution of the decree obtained by the appellant took place on the 3rd of December 1917. The plaintiff's case is that the entire amount due under the decree had been paid off and the appellant acted fraudulently in getting the sale confirmed and that he came to know of the fraud for the first time on the 11th November 1919 when possession was delivered to the appellant. The suit was instituted on the 10th July 1920. The Munsif held that the period of limitation was one year and that the plaintiffs had knowledge of the sale beyond one year from the date of the suit and that the suit was accordingly barred by limitation. He did not in his judgment state under what provision of the law he held the period of limitation to be one year. The learned Subordinate Judge on appeal was of opinion that the period of limitation applicable to the suit was the one provided for in Art. 95 of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act. It has been contended, however, on behalf of the appellant that the present suit was governed by s. 231 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act and that the period of limitation was one year from the date of the accrual of the cause of action and that upon the finding of the Munsif the cause of action accrued to the plaintiffs at least on 8th April 1918, if not earlier, and that the suit being instituted beyond one year from that date was barred by limitation. Now, in order to make the provisions of s. 231 applicable to the present suit it must first be established that the suit was one instituted under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. The learned Subordinate Judge is of opinion that s. 231 has no application to the present case inasmuch as the suit was not one under the Act. I am of opinion that the learned Subordinate Judge was right and that the present suit is not one under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act. Reliance has been placed by the learned Vakil for the appellant upon the provision of ss. 214 and 258 of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act and it has been contended that the present suit is one under the provisions of those sections. I am of opinion that this contention is unsound. Section 214 bars a suit to set aside a sale made under Ch. XVI of the Act except on the ground of fraud or want of jurisdiction. Section 258 contains a provision similar to that in s. 214. These sections do not create a right to institute a suit to set aside a sale of a holding made under the Act. They bar the institution of such a suit except on the ground of fraud or want of jurisdiction. The right to institute a suit to set aside a sale has not been created but has been taken away under the provisions of those sections. The right exists in a person to bring a suit to set aside a sale under the general law and was not conferred under the provisions of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act and such right was taken away by these sections except the right to bring a suit on the ground of fraud or want of jurisdiction. The present suit was, therefore, not a suit instituted under the provisions of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act as contemplated by s. 231 of the Act; and consequently the period of limitation is not the one provided by that section but the one provided by the Indian Limitation Act. I am, therefore, of opinion that the suit must be governed either by the provisions of Art. 12 or by those of Art. 95 of the First Schedule to the Indian Limitation Act. In my opinion the suit being for a relief on the ground of fraud the Article applicable is 95 and not Art. 12 of the Limitation Act, and the period of limitation is, therefore, three years from the time when the fraud became known to the plaintiffs. In the present case the suit was brought within three years even from the date of the sale and was evidently within time.

[90 I. C. 1925]

JAMNA PERSHAD v. RAMLAL.

It has next been argued that there was no fraud as alleged in the plaint. I am of opinion that the appellant cannot be allowed to raise this question in second appeal. It was found by the Munsif that there was fraud on the part of the defendant and that finding was not challenged by the defendant before the Subordinate Judge as is expressly stated in the decision of the Subordinate Judge. It has been contended that the fraud alleged was not in bringing about the sale but in getting the sale confirmed after receipt of the entire amount of the decree; and it is pointed out that under the provisions of the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act a sale is not required to be confirmed. No doubt, there is no provision in the Act for confirmation of a sale and in Lal Nilmani Nath Sahi Deo v. Baldeo Das Birla (1) it was held by this Court that there was no provision in the Act for confirmation of a sale. Reference was made in that case to the expression "confirmation of sale" occurring in cl. (d) of s. 209 of the Act; but it is noticeable that the word "date" was substituted in this clause for the word "confirmation" by the Bihar and Orissa Act (VI of 1920) and the word "confirmation" now no longer occurs in this section. The question of fraud, however, was not raised by the appellant in the lower Appellate Court, and I am of opinion that the appellant cannot be allowed to raise the question here in this second appeal. The only point argued before the Subordinate Judge was the question of limitation and this question appears to have been correctly decided.

This appeal is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 55 Ind. Cas. 27; 1 P. L. T. 146; 5 P. L. J. 101; (1920) Pat. 73; 2 U. P. L. R. (Pat.) 69.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 39 OF 1924.

July 16, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.

JAMNA PERSHAD AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS—APPELLANTS

versus

RAMLAL AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Custom—Wajib-ul-arz, entry in, value of.

Where it is not shown by reliable evidence that the officer engaged in compiling a wajib-ul-arz neglected to perform his duty or was misled in recording a custom, and it does not appear that a statement of custom in the wajib-ul-arz is ambiguous, the record of the custom in the wajib-ul-arz is most valuable evidence of the custom. [228, col. 2.]

Civil Decree the judgment and Judge, Lucknow, da

for the Appellants.
Gaya Prasad and its.

This is the plaintiffs' appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Lucknow, dated the 22nd October 1923, reversing the decree of the Court of the Munsif (North) Lucknow dated the 6th September, 1922. The result of the decree of the lower Appellate Court was that the plaintiffs' suit for possession of certain zemindari property situate in three villages was dismissed.

The property in suit belonged to one Nand Kishore, who was a separated Hindu of a family governed in the matter of succession by the rules of the Mitakshara. On the death of Nand Kishore his estate was inherited by his widow, Musammatt Muna. She died in 1911. The assignors of the plaintiffs are the remote nephews of Nand Kishore and they claim possession of Nand Kishore's estate on the title that the assignors are the reversioners to the estate of Nand Kishore. The defendants are in possession of that estate and they are the sons of deceased daughters of Nand Kishore. On this statement of facts it is perfectly clear and it is not disputed that the title in law to the property in suit rests with the defendants. The ground, however, upon which the plaintiffs' claim to eject the defendants is based is that under a family custom the daughters and daughters' sons are excluded from inheriting the estate of Nand Kishore. The issue raised on these pleadings was decided by the Court of first instance in favour of the plaintiffs. On appeal by the defendants it was decided against them.

In second appeal the decision of the lower Appellate Court is challenged on three main grounds:—

(1) that the lower Appellate Court has failed to place a proper construction on the paragraph of the wajib-ul-arz of the village Kesarmau relating to the rules of succession in the family;

(2) that the lower Appellate Court has improperly rejected statements of certain deceased persons as inadmissible in evidence, and.

(3) that it has again improperly rejected certain oral evidence produced by the plaintiffs in proof of the exclusion of daughters and Kishore.

As to the ground once that I do not Advocate for the judgment of the lower court. The question of mis-construction of the wajib-ul-arz of Kesarmau arises. Indeed there is no dispute either at the Bar or between the parties as to the plain meaning of the words used in the that wajib-ul-arz on the question of custom. Paragraph 4 of that wajib-ul-arz which is the paragraph relevant to the purposes of the appeal states in absolutely clear and definite language in the first instance that daughters are generally excluded from inheritance. In the second instance, however, there is a qualifying statement that the record of custom therein made will not apply to the dispute then pending with reference to the daughters' title in a case in the Settlement Court. I gather from the judgment of the learned Judge in the lower Appellate Court that he would have been prepared to accept the entry in the wajib-ul-arz as a sufficient proof of the custom relied upon by the plaintiffs had the clause to which reference has just now been made, not been recorded as a part of the entry relating to the custom. He thinks that the qualifying clause detracts from the value of the entry as evidence of a pre-existing custom. It is clear, therefore, that the question with reference to this wajib-ul-arz is one of its evidential value and neither of its construction nor of its admissibility in evidence. The latest decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council with respect to an entry of custom in the wajib-ul-arz of a village is to be found in the case of Balgobind v. Badri

Prasad (1). The appeal was preferred from a decree of this Court and the appeal in this Court was a first appeal. That decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council is a clear authority for the view that the entry of a custom in a wajib-ul-arz is evidence and in the absence of circumstances mentioned in that judgment is a most valuable evidence of the custom. This is amply borne out by the following quotation:—

"One of these duties was, to record customs as the Settlement Officer found them, and not as he might think they ought to be. When it is not shown by reliable evidence that the Settlement Officer neglected to perform his duty or was misled in recording a custom, and it does not appear that the statement of the custom is ambiguous, the record in a wajib-ul-arz of a custom is most valuable evidence of the custom, much more reliable evidence than subsequent oral evidence given after a dispute as to the custom has arisen."

The view taken by their Lordships of the Privy Council confirms the opinion frequently expressed by the Judges of this Court on the same point. In this connection reference may be made to the decision of Mr. (now Mr. Justice) Lindsay in the case of Lalman v. Nand Lal (2). In the case before me the learned Judge in the Court below was, therefore, perfectly competent to attach no or little value to the entry of custom in the wajib-ul-arz under consideration and sitting as a Court of second appeal. I am equally incompetent to review his finding and to hold that more weight ought to be attached to this piece of evidence.

Before parting with this ground of appeal it may be mentioned that there was another circumstance appearing in evidence which induced the learned Judge to regard the entry in the wajib-ul-arz as to the custom of little value. The suit which was mentioned as pending in the Settlement Court in the wajib-ul-arz of Kesarmau ended in favour of the daughters. A copy of the judgment of the Trial Court and also a copy of the judgment in appeal have been filed in the present case. The Court had before it another wajib-ul-arz the entry in which was absolutely general without any qualification as regards the custom excluding daughters.

(1) 74 Ind. Cas. 449; 26 O. C. 217; (1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 70; 21 A. L. J. 578; 9 O. & A. L. R. 581; 45 M. L. J. 289; 45 A. 413; 38 C. L. J. 302; (1923) M. W. N. 799; 33 M. L. T. 317; 10 O. L. J. 368; 50 I. A. 196; 29 C. W. N. 165 (P. C.).

(2) 20 Ind. Cas. 894; 17 O. C. 1.

ters from inheritance. That wajib-ul-arz is of the village Asanha. A copy of the same is also filed in the present case and part of the property in suit is situate in that village. In spite of the entry in the village Asanha the Settlement Court came to the conclusion that there was no such general custom of the exclusion of daughters.

As to the second ground of appeal, I may dispose it off quite briefly. It appears that certain persons were examined as witnesses in a case pending in one of the Courts in Oudh about 15 years ago and the dispute involved in that case was the right of succession to an estate. One of the issues raised was whether the daughters were excluded by a family custom from inheriting the estate of their deceased father. Some of the witnesses, who gave evidence in support of the custom, are now dead. They all belonged to the family of Nand Kishore. The learned Judge has rejected the statements as being inadmissible under s. 32, cl. (4), of the Indian Evidence Act. He is of opinion that they were made after the dispute had arisen. For me it is not necessary to decide whether these statements were technically admissible in evidence or not. To my mind they are certainly of very little value as proof of the custom now in question. That there was a clashing of interests between the two parties to the litigation is perfectly clear. One party supported the custom, the other repudiated it. In this division into two camps some people appeared as supporters of one party and others of the other. In conditions like these it is difficult to say that the evidence produced was not tainted with partiality.

As to the third ground of appeal, I find that the learned Judge in the Court below has considered the evidence relating to the five instances in which the appellants relied in proof of the custom of the exclusion of daughters. This evidence purports to show that a brother succeeded to the exclusion of a daughter. Now in a case of a brother succeeding another brother the evidence that the two brothers were separate must be definite, clear and reliable. The learned Judge thinks that the evidence produced in this case is not of such a nature. On that ground he rejects the instances as of no consequence.

I am, therefore, of opinion that the appeal fails and it is hereby dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

*Appeal dismissed.PATNA HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISIONS NOS 441 AND 442 OF 1924.

April 27, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Kulwant Sahay.

SHAMSHER NARAIN SINGH AND

OTHERS—PETITIONERS

versus

Malik MOHAMMAD SALE alias

WASIUDDIN—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. IX, r. 13, O. XXII, rr. 3, 4—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 78 (6)—Ex-parte decree, application to set aside—Finding as to non-service of summonses and date of knowledge of decree based on evidence—Revision—Interference with finding—Copies of registers kept by officers of Native State, admissibility of.

Where on an application to set aside an ex parte decree the evidence on the record and that the applicant had no knowledge of the suit and that he came days of the application to set aside the ex parte decree, with in revision inasmuch as the Court has committed a mistake as to affect its finding.

Where in a proceeding to set aside an ex parte decree it appears that the heirs of a deceased plaintiff have not been made parties to the application, but the Court comes to the finding that the remaining plaintiffs represent the deceased plaintiff and that it was not necessary to bring his heirs on the record, the finding cannot be interfered with under s. 115 of the C. P. C. [ibid.]

Copies of entries in registers kept by the officers of a Native State are not admissible in evidence having regard to the provisions of s. 78 (6) of the Evidence Act. [ibid.]

Where a Court erroneously holds that certain documents are admissible in evidence but in arriving at its finding it does not base its decision upon those documents alone and arrives at its finding independently of such documents, its finding cannot be said to be vitiated by reason of the fact that it has relied upon inadmissible evidence in arriving at that finding. [ibid.]

Revision from an order of the Munsif, Bihar, dated the 16th September 1924.

Messrs. S. N. Roy and A. H. Fakhruddin, for the Petitioners.

Mr. Hasan Jan, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—These two applications arise out of an order passed by the Munsif of Bihar setting aside two ex parte decrees on an application of the defendant under O. IX, r. 13 of the C. P. C. The decrees were obtained by the plaintiffs-petitioners on the 6th of January 1920. These decrees were ex parte as the defendant did not appear and contest the suits. In execution of these decrees the holding was sold on the 18th of May 1920 and purchased by the plaintiffs. The sale was confirmed on the 18th of June 1920 and possession was delivered to the auction-purchasers on the 6th of July 1920. The present applications in the two suits under O. IX, r. 13 of the C. P. C. were filed on the 9th of January 1924, the allegation being that the defendant came to know of the decrees and of the sale for the first time on the 11th of December 1923.

The opposite party's case was that he was in the territories of the Nizam of Hyderabad as he was in service there and returned home in April 1923, and he had no information of the institution of the suits or of the decrees, or of the execution proceedings or sale of the holding. The learned Munsif has considered the case in very great detail and he has come to the conclusion that the opposite party was not a party to the suits and was not served upon him. As the learned Munsif has found that the opposite party did not know of the decrees until thirty days after the sale, another objection on the ground of limitation by reason of the fact that one of the plaintiffs Taluka Prasad was dead and his heirs were brought on the record for the first time on the 10th of March 1924, and it was contended that so far as the heirs of Taluka Prasad were concerned, the applications were evidently barred by limitation. The learned Munsif has found that it was not necessary for the opposite party to bring the heirs of the deceased Taluka Prasad on the record inasmuch as all the plaintiffs were members of a joint Hindu family and the surviving plaintiffs represented the family. Upon these findings the learned Munsif has granted the applications.

It has been contended in revision that the learned Munsif was wrong in holding that the applications were within time, and secondly, that he was wrong in using in evidence, certain documents produced by the opposite party which were copies of attendance register and leave register kept by the officers of the Nizam of Hyderabad, which showed the presence of the opposite party at Hyderabad. As regards the question of limitation it has been argued that the heirs of Taluka Prasad were necessary parties, and as they were not brought on the record within thirty days of the date of knowledge of the decrees as alleged by the opposite party, the applications were barred by limitation. Now the learned Munsif has come to a finding that the other plaintiffs represented Taluka Prasad and it was not necessary to bring his heirs on the record. The learned Munsif may be right or he may be wrong, but there is no question of jurisdiction involved on this point. He was entitled to come to a finding on the question as to whether the surviving plaintiffs represented Taluka Prasad and as to whether the applications were barred by limitation and he did come to the finding that the applications were not barred because the heirs of Taluka Prasad were not brought on the record within thirty days. I am of opinion that it is not a question which can be considered in revision under s. 115 of the Code.

As regards the question relating to the admissibility of documents of the Hyderabad State, it is clear that those documents were not properly admissible in evidence having regard to the provisions of s. 78 clause (6) of the Indian Evidence Act. But the learned Munsif does not base his decision upon those documents only. Before referring to those documents, the learned Munsif had, upon other evidence in the case, come to the conclusion that the opposite party was absent from his home and summonses were not served upon him. The learned Munsif has, no doubt, not applied his mind to the consideration of the question as to whether these documents were admissible in evidence or not, but, even excluding these documents from the record, it appears from the judgment that there was sufficient evidence to enable the Munsif to come to a finding on the question as regards the service of summonses.

It was next contended that the document marked Ex. F in the case (which was a compromise petition filed in a proceeding relating to the execution of a decree obtained by the opposite party against the petitioners) showed conclusively that the opposite party had knowledge of the decrees and of the execution proceedings long before 30 days of the filing of the present applications. The learned Munsif has considered this compromise petition and has come to the conclusion that this petition was not filed with the knowledge of the opposite party. He has compared the handwriting and he has considered the other circumstances connected therewith, and his finding on this document is a finding of fact upon a consideration of the document. I cannot in revision say that the Munsif has committed any such error or any illegality or irregularity so as to affect his jurisdiction.

There is no question of jurisdiction involved in these applications and they are dismissed with costs. There will be only one hearing fee, two gold mohurs.

Z. K.

Application dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 241 OF 1922.

February 3, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Odgers.

MADE GOUDA AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

—APPELLANTS

versus

CHENNE GOUDA AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS AND DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 54, 118, 123—Hindu Law—Partition—Allotment of share to stranger—Registered-deed, whether necessary—Title, acquisition of.

Where at a partition between members of a joint Hindu family, a share in the family properties of the value of more than Rs. 100 was allotted to a stranger, but the deed was not registered:

Held, that there being no registered instrument, whether the transaction was a gift or an exchange, it offended against the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act and that the stranger acquired no title in the properties allotted to him. [p. 331, col. 2.]

A person cannot by the mere recognition of another as a co-sharer of his convey to the latter a title in immoveable property without observing any of the formalities required by law for the purpose. [p. 332, col. 1.]

Ramkishore Kedarnath v. Jainarayan Ramrachpal, 20 Ind. Cas. 958; 40 C. 966; (1913) M. W. N. 661; 14 M. L. T. 163; 17 C. W. N. 1189; 18 C. L. J. 237; 15 Bom. L. R. 867; 11 A. L. J. 865; 25 M. L. J. 512; 10 N. L. R. 1; 40 I. A. 213 (P. C.) and Second Appeal No. 225 of 1920, followed.

Girhi Rani Misrani v. Chandra Lal Kanth, 17 Ind. Cas. 885; 17 C. W. N. 62, followed.

Second appeal against a decree of the Court of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Coimbatore, in A. S. No. 10 of 1921, preferred against the decree of the Court of the District Munsif, Kollegal, in O. S. No. 88 of 1919.

Mr. C. V. Ananta Krishna Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. K. Bhashyam Iyengar, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—In this case the plaintiff is the grandson of the 1st defendant. The latter is the appellant and is the uncle of the 2nd defendant who is his sister's son. The 1st defendant and his sons entered into a partition in the year 1908 of their joint properties. In this partition they purported to include the 2nd defendant and to allot to him a proportionate share of the joint properties. The 2nd defendant has subsequently assigned a portion of the property to which he alleges he has thus acquired title to the assignee, the respondent. The learned District Munsif found that the 2nd defendant got his share as a gift or that he got it in consideration of the fact that he surrendered part of his property to the 1st defendant by exchange. In either case he held that as the property was Rs. 100 in value and there was no registered instrument, whether the transaction was a gift or exchange, it offended against the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act. The learned Judge, on appeal, was made a finding it difficult to say whether the 2nd defendant could be considered as a member of the joint family and, therefore, not a co-partner. The learned Judge further says that the transaction was not a gift, but a partition of family property of which family 2nd defendant was not a member. In Ex. C the 2nd defendant apparently described the property as having been given to him by way of gift. The comment of the learned Additional Subordinate Judge that this recital is interlineated is a mistake, the word or words simply having been underlined in the course of the argument. The learned Subordinate Judge bases his finding on the authority of Girhi Rani Misrani v. Chandra Lal Kanth (1). It is sufficient to say that this decision has been considered in S. A. No. 225 of 1920 by a Bench of this Court by which decision I am, sitting as a Single Judge, bound. The Calcutta case was very carefully examined in that second appeal and Napier, J., says: "I know of no authority for the proposition that the formal requirements of the Transfer of Property Act can be avoided by calling a transaction by a particular name under the Hindu Law". Krishnan, J., considering the same case says that the Judges in the Calcutta case did not treat the case before them as one of gift, but they do not say under what category it falls. "It does not appear that they meant to treat it as a family arrangement, but if it was meant to hold that a person could by the mere recognition of another as co-sharers of his convey title to him of immovable property without observing any of the formalities required by law for it, I am, with all respect, unable to follow their view." Reference may also be made to the Privy Council case reported as Ramkishore Kedarnath v. Jainarayan Ram-rachpal (3). Therefore, as regards Issue No. 4, I think the Subordinate Judge is clearly wrong and with regard to this, the appeal must be allowed with costs. Mr. Bhashyam Iyengar has, however, represented that the appeal should not be wholly disposed of in this manner but that the case should be sent back to the Appellate Court to be dealt with. I am of opinion that no objection has been made by Mr. Krishna Iyer to this. What I propose to do is to allow the appeal with costs and the appeal will be remitted to the Appellate Court for decision. Whether any and what valid title has been claimed by the 2nd defendant independently of the points decided in this judgment. Appellant will have the Court-fee of the second appeal refunded.

V. N. V.

Appeal allowed.

(2) 20 Ind. Cas. 958; 40 C. 966; (1913) M. W. N. 661; 14 M. L. T. 163; 17 C. W. N. 1189; 18 C. L. J. 237; 15 Bom. L. R. 867; 11 A. L. J. 865; 25 M. L. J. 512; 10 N. L. R. 1; 40 I. A. 213 (P. C.).

POUDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

PRIVY COUNCIL APPEAL No. 8 OF 1925.

July 9, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.,
and Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

JAGMOHAN SINGH AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—APPLICANTS

versus

SHEO MANGAL SINGH AND OTHERS—
—DEFENDANTS—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 109 (c), O. XLVII, r. 7—Review, decree passed on—Appeal to His Majesty in Council, leave for, when to be granted.

Where a decree passed by the High Court is of such a character that if it had been passed by a Court subordinate to the High Court no appeal against it would have been permissible to the High Court, leave will not be granted under s. 109 (c) of the C. P. C. for an appeal to His Majesty in Council against the decree.

Where a decree is passed by the High Court on review, leave to appeal against the decree to the Privy Council under s. 109 (c) of the C. P. C. will not be granted unless the decree is open to objection on some ground recognized by r. 7 of O. XLVII of the C. P. C.

Application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council against an order of Mr. Ashworth, A. J. C., in Miscellaneous Application No. 647 of 1924, dated 10th January 1925, and reported as 86 Ind. Cas. 29, reversing the decree of Mr. Pullan, A. J. C., in Second Civil Appeal No. 163 of 1923, dated 21st July 1924 and reported as 82 Ind. Cas. 583.

Mr. Moti Lal Seksena, for the Applicant.

Mr. St. G. Jackson, for the Opposite Party.

ORDER.—This is an application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council. Such appeals are governed by ss. 109 to 112 of the C. P. C. The value of the subject matter of the suit is only Rs. 2,700 and, therefore, no appeal lies under s. 109 (a) or (b) read with s. 110 of the Code. If we are to grant leave to appeal, it must be because we regard the decree as a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council. We do not think so. It is not necessary to go into the facts of the case. It is enough to say that the suit is one for possession of land and that the Trial Court dismissed it. On appeal the first Appellate Court dismissed the appeal. On second appeal a learned Judge of this Court, Mr. Pullan, allowed the appeal and granted a decree for possession. The defendant-respondent applied in review to this Court. Mr. Pullan was no longer a member of the Court and the application was heard by another Judge, Mr. Ashworth, who granted the application and dismissed the appeal. The plaintiffs are now the applicants for leave to appeal. The ground on which they proceed is that Mr. Ashworth proceeded on a finding that Mr. Pullan was wrong in law in his decision. It is urged that an error of law is not a good ground for granting a review.

In the view we take of the case, it is unnecessary to go into this question. Mr. Ashworth did not profess to proceed on this ground. He considered that Mr. Pullan's judgment contained an error on the face of the record. Whether this is so or not we do not feel called upon to decide. The question before us is not whether Mr. Pullani was right or whether Mr. Ashworth was right, but whether Mr. Ashworth's decree is one fit for appeal to His Majesty in Council. On the face of it it is not.

The plaintiffs, who are the applicants before us, brought a suit for possession of land valued at Rs 2,700 only. Their suit after various vicissitudes has been finally dismissed. If that were all they would have no right of further appeal, but they say that because a review was granted they ought to be allowed to appeal to the Privy Council. The rules governing appeals from the decree passed on review are contained in O. XLVII of the C. P. C. Rule 7 of that Order lays down that an order of the Court rejecting the application shall not be appealable but an order granting an application is appealable on three grounds only. One of these is that the review was granted beyond the time of limitation. That was not the case here. The others are that the application was in contravention of the provisions of r. 2 or r. 4. Neither of these rules was contravened. Therefore, if the review decree had been passed by a Court subordinate to this Court no appeal would lie to this Court. We think that we ought to be guided by the same principles in deciding whether an appeal ought to be permitted to the Privy Council. For these reasons, the application is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

*Application dismissed.CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

LEFTENS PATENT APPEAL No. 32 OF 1924.

March 19, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir Ewart Greaves, Kt.,
and Mr. Justice Cuming.JABED ALI TALUKDAR AND OTHERS—DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

SURENDRA NATH BANDOPADHYA
AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Estoppel—Execution of decree—Decree for rent—Sale—Purchaser believing that he is purchasing free from encumbrances—Co-sharer party to decree, whether estopped from challenging character of decree—Execution of rent-decree by co-sharer—Notice to other co-sharers, necessity of

The obligation of serving co-sharers with notice of the execution of a rent-decree and the sale thereunder is not sufficiently carried out by serving notices on some of them. [p. 336, col. 1.]

Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi, 82 Ind. Cas. 507; 27 C. W. N. 765; 37 C. L. J. 447; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 408, distinguished.

Where a co-sharer landlord, who is a party to a decree for rent obtained by another co-sharer, stands by and allows the purchaser at the auction-sale in execution of the decree to purchase the holding under the impression that the decree is a rent decree and that he is purchasing the holding free from encumbrances, the co-sharer who stands by is estopped from subsequently challenging the character of the decree as a rent-decree and stating that the sale was not free from encumbrances. [p. 336, col. 2.]

Let the appeal be allowed against the judgment of the learned Judge Ghose, dated the 14th April 1925, and reported as follows:—

Briefly these:—
The plaintiffs are co-sharer proprietors of zeminari No. 3558 of the Bakerganj Collectorate to the extent of 1a. 18y. 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ karas 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ grant 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ tils. Within the said zemindari there is a taluk named Taluk Abdul Kasim. The plaintiffs obtained a decree for their share of the rent in 1906 and purchased on 21st September 1909 this share of Taluk Abdul Kasim which belonged to one Akimanessa Bibi. Within the said taluk the principal defendants held a howla and the plaintiffs brought the present suit for the entire rent of the howla making other co-sharers of Taluk Abdul Kasim parties defendants thereto on the strength of his title by purchase in 1909.

On 27th November 1909 one Golam Azam Chowdhury purchased 1 kara share of the zemindari from one Ahmad Hossein. In 15th April 1910 Nawab of Dacca one of the co-sharer zemindars brought a suit for rent making other co-sharers party defendants under s. 148A, Bengal Tenancy Act, but Golam Azam was not impleaded as a party to the said suit. A decree was passed on 14th August 1910 and Golam Azam got his name registered on 19th August 1910. The notices under s. 158B on co-sharer landlords were served on 20th September 1910 and notices were served on the plaintiffs both as co-sharers and izaradar of Golam Azam. The sale was confirmed on 29th May 1911 and sale certificate granted on 5th March 1912. On 14th April 1911 the present plaintiffs brought a suit for rent of the taluk against Bibi Akimennessa and attached the surplus sale-proceeds on 14th June 1911.

The present suit for rent was instituted on 10th May 1917 making the co-sharers of the taluk party defendants. The suit was contested by the tenants and the co-sharers who purchased in execution of Nawab's decree.

Letters Patent Appeal was filed by the purchaser.

Mr. Jatindra Nath Sanyal, for the Appellants.—Golam was not a proprietor at all at the date of the decree. Even assuming that he purchased 1 kara share in 1909 his name was not registered till after the decree in Nawab's rent suit. Section 78 of the Land Registration Act prevents a suit by an unregistered proprietor. A Court cannot pass a decree against an unregistered proprietor. Therefore, the Nawab's decree was sufficient compliance with the law and the registered proprietors were not parties to the suit. Section 60, Bengal Tenancy Act, provides that payment to the registered proprietor is sufficient discharge and the tenant is not entitled to plead in defence to a suit by registered proprietor that the rent is due to any third person. Thus Golam was not a necessary party to the suit.

As for the execution case and notice under s. 158B of the Bengal Tenancy Act non-service of notice upon one of the co-sharers did not nullify the sale or alter its character to that of sale held in execution of a money-decree the co-sharer not served with notice could alone object, see Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi (1). Golam Azam does not object, the only person objecting in this case is a co-sharer who was party to the sale and who was served with notice and he is not entitled to object.

Even assuming that Golam was a necessary party he was sufficiently represented by his izaradar Hariprosad. Izaradar being a party to the suit and the execution case the proprietor was sufficiently represented.

The plaintiff is clearly estopped by his conduct from raising the question that the sale in execution of Nawab's decree was not a sale free from all encumbrances. Apart from s. 115 of the Evidence Act there can be estoppel. It is well established that if a man having title to an estate, which is offered for sale, and knowing his title, stands by or does not forbid the sale, and thereby another person is induced to purchase the estate, under the supposition that the title of the actual vendor is good, the true owner, so standing by and being silent, will be bound by the sale and neither he nor his privies will be at liberty to dispute the validity of the sale; see Story's Equity, 3rd Edition, page 156, Bigelow on Estoppel, 6th Edition, pages 648, 649, 650 and 651 (top); Thomas Barclay v. Syed Hussein Ali Khan (2) and also Joy Chandra Banerjee v. Sreenath Chatterjee (3).

Here Hariprosad was the izaradar of Golam. Notice under s. 158B was served on him, he knew that the taluk was being sold free from all encumbrances, he stood silent fully knowing his title but did not make his rights known, thus the appellants who were strangers were induced to purchase the property for Rs. 4,501 whereas on the first day of the property was put up to sale subject to encumbrance and the bid was only Rs. 500. On the facts found by the learned Subordinate Judge and accepted by Mr. Justice Ghose that plaintiff is equitably estopped from questioning that the decree obtained by Nawab was not a rent-decree and the sale was not free from encumbrances.

The plaintiffs brought a suit for rent of their share of the taluk on 14th April 1911 against Bibi Akimannessa for a period of April 1907 to April 1911, i. e., for a period subsequent to sale and attached the sale-proceeds; thus the plaintiffs must be deemed to have waived their rights under their purchase on 21st September 1909.

Jogeshri Chowdhrair v. Mahomed Ebrahim (4), Kalanand Singh v. Gunpat Singh (5), Sitanath Midda v. Basudeb Midda (6).

Mr. Gunada Charan Sen (with him Babu Prosanna Bhusan Gupta), for the Respondents.—That Golam was a proprietor from the date of his purchase in 1909. Izaradar did not represent the proprietor for the purpose of s. 148A and making him a party to Nawab's rent suit of 1910 was not a sufficient compliance with the law and

(2) 6 C. L. J. 601.

(3) 32 C. 357 at p. 363; 1 C. L. J. 23.

(4) 14 C. 33; 7 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 23.

(5) 11 Ind. Cas. 974; 16 C. W. N. 104.

(6) 2 C. L. J. 540.

(1) 82 Ind. Cas. 507; 27 C. W. N. 765; 37 C. L. J. 447; (1924) A. I. R. (C.) 408.

the decree passed had the effect of a money-decree only. It would not be correct to say that merely because a proprietor had not registered his name he was not a necessary party to a suit for rent under s. 148A, Bengal Tenancy Act.

All the co-sharers must be served with notice of sale. The provisions of s. 158B must be strictly complied with and non-service of the notice of sale on any of the co-sharer will render the sale a money sale, see Ahamad Biswas v. Benoy Bhusan Gupta (7). The case reported in Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi (1) depends upon the particular facts of the case.

The plaintiff had no duty to speak, there was no fiduciary relationship between plaintiffs and the defendants and mere silence on the part of the plaintiff cannot create estoppel. Besides there can be no estoppel against Statute. The law provides that unless certain formalities be complied with the decree for rent and the rent sale at the instances of a co-sharer landlord shall have the effect of a money-decree and money sale and these statutory provisions cannot be ~~be~~ ^{not} over by estoppel and the decree and sale cannot be treated as having a higher sanctity owing for the silence of the plaintiff.

Again the izara was taken by Surendra and other sons of Hariprosad in 1914, an affidavit was sworn and copy served on the Vakil for other party before the case was heard before Mr. Justice Ghose so the plaintiffs did not know of his rights at the time of the purchase by the defendants.

Babu Jatindra Nath Sanyal in reply.—The Subordinate Judge came to a clear findings that Hariprosad was the izaradar at the time of the sale in execution of Nawab's decree. The case has been fought out on that basis before Mr. Justice Ghose. This Court cannot go behind the findings of the Subordinate Judge.

The principle that there is no estoppel against Statute does not apply whether so far as the plaintiff is concerned he is estopped from saying that the decree is not a rent-decree and the sale is not free from encumbrances. This is a personal disability of the plaintiff owing to his conduct in keeping silent and has nothing to do with the character of the decree or sale.

JUDGMENT.

Greaves, J.—This is an appeal under cl. 15 of the Letters Patent from a decision of Mr. Justice Bipin Behary Ghose dated the 31st July 1924. The appeal is by the defendants, Mr. Justice Ghose having reversed the decision of the lower Appellate Court which was in favour of the defendants. The suit was brought for rent of a howla, and the facts are as follows. The respondents who are the plaintiffs in the suit claimed one anna and odd share in a zemindari. In the zemindari there was a Taluq Abdul Kasim and in the talug there was a howla which was held by the tenant-defendants. As I have already stated the suit was a suit for rent of the plaintiffs' share in howla. The plaintiffs' story was that in the year 1906 they commenced a suit for rent—share of the talug share of the taluq, were in that suit proceedings they share of the taluq.

(7) 53 Ind. Cas. 515; 23 C. W. N. 931.

 in the year 1913.

September 1909 one purchased a share
however, was not registered until 19th August 1910 and before that date, namely, on the 1st April 1911 the Nawab of Dacca who was a co-sharer in the zemindari commenced a suit for his share of the rent of the taluk. He made the other co-sharers parties and consequently if all the co-sharers were on the record the decree which he had obtained on the 14th August 1910 was rent decree which could be executed as such. The Nawab of Dacca proceeded to execute his decree and in March 1911 the property was sold in execution of the rent-decree, if it was a rent-decree in the presence of the present plaintiffs as the Courts have found. This sale was confirmed on the 24th May 1911. Now the position is that if all the co-sharers were parties to the Nawab's suit and had also notice of the execution proceedings the sale of the appealing defendants would be free from any incumbrance in favour of the plaintiffs by virtue of their purchase in 1909.

Five points have been raised before us in this appeal. It is stated that Mr. Justice Ghose was wrong in holding that Golam was a proprietor. Mr. Justice Ghose so held, and the result is that if this finding is correct the sale in execution of the Nawab's decree was not a sale free from encumbrance. We think that the decision of Mr. Justice Ghose on this point is correct and that Golam was a proprietor by virtue of his purchase and that the sale in execution was not a sale free from all encumbrances. This also disposes of the second point that if Golam was the proprietor then as he was not registered until 10th August 1910 he was not a necessary party. I agree with Mr. Justice Ghose's conclusion that he was a necessary party as he was the owner from the date of his purchase.

Thirdly, it was urged that if Golam was a necessary party he was sufficiently represented by his izaradar who according to the finding of the Subordinate Judge was the father of Surendra Nath Banerjee and who according to the same finding was on the record in the Nawab's suit both as a co-sharer in the zamin and as an izaradar. We agree with Mr. Justice Ghose that Golam was not represented by his ejaradar and was not cured by this.

Fourthly, it was urged that it was sufficient on some of the facts and reliance was placed on the case reported as Rajani Kanta Ghose v. Rahaman Gazi (1). This seems to us to be a decision which depended upon the facts of the case and cannot be taken as having laid down any principle of law. We do not think that obligation of serving co-sharers is sufficiently carried out by serving notices on some of them.

Then comes the fifth point which is really the main question before us and which is a question of estoppel. What is urged before us on behalf of the appellants is that assuming that Mr. Justice Ghose was right in finding that the decree obtained by the Nawab was not a rent-decree and that the sale in execution to the present appellants was not a sale free from all encumbrances under the circumstances of the present case by the doctrine of estoppel the plaintiffs are precluded from setting up this contention. Mr. Justice Ghose has negatived this contention and he has held that the mere fact that the plaintiffs were on the record in the Nawab's suit as co-sharers did not involve on them any obligation of stating the facts to the purchaser. I agree with him in this conclusion and I do not think that the mere fact that the plaintiffs as co-sharers were on the record in the Nawab's suit involved any obligation on them of stating the encumbrance at the time of the sale. But that does not, in my opinion, dispose of the case. If the defendants knew the facts and stood by and allowed the present appellants to purchase on the basis that the Nawab's decree was a rent decree and that the sale in execution was not, therefore, a sale free from encumbrance then we think that they would be debarred from setting up in these proceedings that it was not a rent decree. Consequently, what really we have to ascertain is what was the state of the knowledge of Surendra Nath Banerji's father at the time of the execution proceedings in the Nawab's suit. Mr. Justice Ghose has not considered that position. But according to the findings of the learned Subordinate Judge which findings whether correct or not, are binding on us, the father of Surendra Nath Banerji, Hariprasad Banerji, was on the record in the Nawab's suit not merely as a co-sharer zemindar but also as an izaradar of Golam. It follows from this finding that Hariprasad must have known that Golam was a co-sharer at the time of the execution proceedings and, therefore, a necessary party to the Nawab's suit and assuming this position which we are bound to assume from the findings of the Subordinate Judge we think that he would be estopped by this fact from now asserting in these proceedings that the sale in execution of the Nawab's decree was not a sale free from encumbrance. It has been urged before us that the ejara was not created until 9th April 1914 and that consequently at the time of the proceedings in the Nawab's suit Hariprasad could not have been on the record as an izaradar, and we were asked to rely on an affidavit which is before us and notice of which was given to the present appellants in the proceeding before Mr. Justice Ghose. But we cannot in second appeal go into the question of facts of this nature and we must accept the finding of fact of the lower Appellate Court and on this finding for the reasons which I have indicated Hariprasad knew at the time of the execution proceedings in the Nawab's suit that what the appellants were purchasing was not free from encumbrance. By the doctrine of equitable estoppel his standing by and allowing the purchaser to buy thinking he was purchasing free from encumbrance precludes him from now asserting in this proceeding that the decree in the Nawab's suit was not a rent-decree and that, therefore, the sale in execution was not a sale free from encumbrance.

This, therefore, disposes of the appeal.

which must succeed on the 5th ground which was urged before us, namely, the ground of estoppel.

There is one thing that we ought to mention, namely, that it was urged before us that there could be no estoppel against the Statute. That proposition is perfectly true but has no application to the present case.

The appeal accordingly succeeds. The decision of Mr Justice Ghose is set aside and that of the lower Appellate Court is restored.

The appellants will be entitled to their costs in this Court and before Mr. Justice Ghose and in the lower Courts.

Cuming, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

ORIGINAL SIDE APPEAL No. 49 of 1924.

August 29, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Charles Gordon Spencer, Officiating Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Srinivasa Iyengar.
K. RAJAGOPALA CHARARIAR
—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

Musammat JAMAL AYISHA BIBI AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

*Receiver—Suit for rent—Appointment of Receiver—
Direction to sell press installed in leased premises—
Sale—Prior mortgagee of press, acquiescence of, in Receiver's management, effect of—Expenditure incurred by Receiver—Priority over mortgagee's claim.*

In execution of a decree for arrears of rent and for ejectment of a tenant, a Receiver was appointed who was directed by the Court to sell a press and machinery installed in the leased premises for the best price obtainable and meanwhile to keep it running as a going concern and to pay the rent due to the landlord. A mortgagee of the press and machinery, though not a party to the suit, acquiesced by his acts and conduct in the employment of and management by the Receiver for the benefit of all parties. The press and machinery when sold fetched a price less than the amount due under the mortgage.

Held, that the mortgagee was not entitled to the sale-proceeds without paying thereout the rent due to the landlord, wages of the workmen employed in running the press and the Receiver's remunerations which items were entitled to priority over the mortgagee's claim. [p. 339, col. 1.]

Per Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—When property is placed in custodia legis by the appointment of a Receiver all the orders passed by the Court for the management of such property will be binding on all persons who, if not actual parties to the suit, have so conducted themselves either with regard to the litigation or with regard to the management of the property under the directions of the Court, as to make themselves virtually or constructively parties to the suit or have otherwise submitted themselves to such management by the Court. [p. 339, col. 1.]

Appeal from the judgment of Mr. Justice Kumaraswami Sastri, in Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction Civil Suit No. No. 133 of 1922, dated the 21st July 1924.

Messrs. C. S. Venkatachariar and T. S. Venkatesa Iyer, for the Appellant.

Mr. A. E. Rencoytre, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Spencer, Offg. C. J.—The appellant holds a first mortgage over the machinery, types and other in-trade of the Modern Printing which is installed in premises below the 1st respondent. The 1st respondent has a decree for arrears of rent and ejectment of the appellant against the 2nd respondent. Third Receiver appointed in the case of the 1st respondent's decree and was directed by the Court in presence of all the parties to sell the press for the best price obtainable and meanwhile to keep it running as a going concern and to pay the rent due to the landlord. Owing to various reasons the attempt to dispose of the press as a going concern was unsuccessful, and the materials were eventually sold for Rs. 10,000 which is less than the sum due to the appellant on his mortgage decree of July 10, 1924. In this appeal we are asked to declare that the appellant's claim to the proceeds of the mortgaged property should be given precedence over the 1st respondent's claim for rent and over the disbursements made by the Official Receiver to workmen for keeping the press running as a going concern. It is argued for the appellant that his position as a secured creditor cannot be rendered worse by an order passed on a petition to which he was not a party, that the landlady can only pursue her remedy for rent against the printer and the Receiver, that his consent to the sale of the press free of encumbrances was given on condition that he should have the same right over the proceeds as he had over the property mortgaged to him, that the Receiver is not entitled to pay the rent out of the proceeds of the corpus and that the order of Devadoss, J., was only to pay the rent out of the nett collections.

The last plea is not well founded. In the affidavit of the 1st respondent's agent, it was suggested that the Court should direct the Receiver to pay the rent out of the gross collections. But the order of the Court, dated the 26th February 1923 does not state from what source the Receiver should pay the rent. In this affidavit of July 1924, the appellant states, that he understood Mr. Justice Devadoss' order that the rent should be a first charge as meaning that it should only be paid after the secured creditors had been satisfied. But the reply affidavit of the 1st respondent's assistant contains a sworn statement that Mr. Justice Devadoss refused to make any order for sale of the property unless the parties agreed that rent should be paid to the plaintiff as a first charge. Apart from any consideration as to whether the parties understood the learned Judge's order to mean, it is very clear from the affidavits and orders to which our attention has been drawn that the appellant, though a party to the 1st respondent's suit, became aware of the appointment of a Receiver and that he applied to the Court that the Receiver appointed in the 1st respondent's suit should be appointed Receiver in his own mortgage suit (Original Side No. 582 of 1923) and that he opposed the removal of the press from its present premises and asked that the defendant should be restrained by an injunction from removing it. He, therefore, acquiesced in the housing of the property in the 1st respondent's premises and in the employment of a Receiver to preserve the property for the benefit of such parties as might be eventually held to have a prior right to it. It is clear that notice was given to his Vakil before passing the order of 24th July 1923 to sell the plant and machinery to public auction with the reserve price of Rs. 31,500 after rejecting an offer for Rs. 30,500. Kumaraswami Sas'ri, J., decided that the appellant was estopped by his conduct from claiming that the landlady and the Receiver should go without satisfaction of their claims and I am clearly of opinion that the learned Judge was right. Appellant evidently acquiesced in the property being kept where it was and he took the benefit of its being preserved. He cannot now claim to have the properties without paying any rent for the period prior to the sale at which he purchased. If he had not moved for keeping the properties in the 1st respondent's premises, she might have got vacant possession and have let the premises to others. He not only enjoyed the benefit of the Receiver's management, but also he has had the benefit of the shelter of the 1st respondent's roof which together resulted in the property being preserved for him and he adopted those benefits when he asked for the press to be left where it was and for an order that the 3rd respondent should continue to manage it instead of getting it sold as soon as possible under his mortgage. The case, therefore, in my opinion, clearly falls within s. 70 of the Contract Act which, as I explained in Rajah of Pittapur v. Secretary of State (1) covers cases of the nature of salvage. The English case of Bertrand v. Davies (2) was quoted on behalf of the Receiver. In that case it was held that a Manager appointed by a Court to manage a West India estate was entitled to a lien on the estate for expenditure incurred in the course of management when the persons interested by tacit acquiescence had encouraged him to incur such expenditure. In Fisher on Mortgages, page 281 this case is quoted as an instance of an equitable salvage lien arising in connection with certain undertakings which would fail for want of immediate pecuniary and other supplies. In this respect the cultivation of West India estates has been put on the same footing as the working of mines, alum works and other works of a perishable nature. The facts of Bertrand v. Davies (2) are not exactly similar to the present case but the principle of salvage is the same. In Giridhari Lal Ray v. Dharendra Kristo Mukerjee (3) there was an order of Court directing the Receiver to raise a loan to preserve the property for the benefit of all parties and the learned Judges held that, if the Court was satisfied that a certain order was made for the benefit of all the parties to the litigation, it was not necessary to inquire further into the circumstances which justified such an order and that a Court appointing a Receiver to be in possession of an estate can deal with the property which is under its control and can authorise the Receiver to create a lien on the property which will take priority over any other mortgage of an earlier date. In the present case the Court did not order the Receiver to raise a loan for the purpose of paying the rent of the premises where the press was and for paying the wages of the workmen who were employed to work it as a going concern. The Judge might have done so and, if in pursuance of the Court's order the Receiver had mortgaged the press for raising a fund to defray the cost of his management, that mortgage would have taken precedence over the appellant's security. Under these circumstances, I have no doubt that the learned Judge's order to pay the rent due to the plaintiff from 1st December 1922 upto the delivery of possession and the wages of the workmen and the Receiver's remuneration in priority to the appellant's mortgage out of the proceeds of the sale of the press was justified both in fact and in law, and the appeal is dismissed with costs of 1st and 3rd respondents (two sets).

(1) 25 Ind. Cas. 783; 16 M. L. T. 375 at p. 380.

(2) (1862) 54 E. R. 1204; 3 Beav. 429; 32 L. J. Ch. 41; 9 Jur. (N. S.) 34; 7 L. T. (N. S.) 372; 11 W. R. 48; 135 R. R. 504.

(3) 34 C. 427; 11 C. W. N. 1; 4 C. L. J. 495.

Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—The question raised in this appeal is a difficult and important one and I have given it my earnest consideration. At the hearing of the appeal I was much impressed with the argument on behalf of the appellant that if one person should file a suit against another and get an order for the appointment of a Receiver in that suit in respect of property which is mortgaged to various persons who are not made parties to the action, the orders passed in that suit with regard to the management of the property by the Receiver would have the effect of depleting, if not, of entirely destroying the securities held by the mortgagees. Generally speaking no doubt such a result would be liable to be characterised as monstrous. But the law is perfectly clear that when the property is placed in custodia legis by the appointment of a Receiver all the orders passed by the Court for the management of such property will be binding on all persons who, if not actual parties to the suit, have so conducted themselves either with regard to the litigation or with regard to the management of the property under the directions of the Court, as to make themselves virtually or constructively parties to the suit or have otherwise submitted themselves to such management by the Court. It is unnecessary for me to say whether or not the appellant in this case was well advised or ill advised in his conduct with regard to the litigation in question and also with regard to the management of the press by the Court. It seems to me that the observation made by the learned Counsel for the 1st respondent that the appellant was always hovering about the Court and appearing in the case in various proceedings and then disappearing, was a very true and just observation. It is also perfectly clear that the appellant far from disputing or questioning the management of the press by the Court through its Receiver, complained at one stage of the apprehended danger of the Receiver being discharged insisting upon the necessity for continuance of the Receiver and suggesting that the Receiver should be in charge on such terms as to pay of rent, etc., as the Court may deem. In the face of such an application, it is impossible to resist the conclusion that the appellant submitted himself to the management by the Court. If so, it follows that either as party, virtually or constructively, as a mortgagee who submitted himself to the management by the Court, he became bound by all the necessary orders made by the Court in respect of the management. It is true that the application of the appellant for making him really a party to the suit was not ordered by the Court. But, if thereafter the appellant had not intervened in the suit and made himself virtual or constructive party as aforesaid, he might possibly have been in a different position. It is true that the mortgage in favour of the appellant was not of the business as a going concern. But at the same time the covenants in the deed of mortgage make it clear that for the maintenance of the value of the securities it was deemed necessary that the business should be maintained and carried on as a going concern. There can also be no doubt that the appellant himself regarded that not only the carrying on of the press as a going concern, but its being housed in the same premises belonging to the 1st respondent were both necessary for the maintenance of the value of his securities. In these circumstances the amounts directed to be expended by the Court by way of salvage was an expenditure necessary for and binding on all the parties including the appellant. It is no doubt to be regretted that things turned out quite differently to what was expected. I am not also sure whether the equitable doctrines of salvage lien might not require considerable extensions in their application to complicated and growing commercial conditions in future. However, that may be, for the reasons already given I agree with my Lord the Officiating Chief Justice in the order made by him.

Appeal dismissed.

CUDDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL NO. 400 OF 1924.

August 18, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

SUKHDEO SINGH AND OTHERS—

PLAINTIFFS APPELLANTS

KASHI SINGH—

RESPONDENTS.

OTHERS—DEFENDANTS

RESPONDENTS.

Contract Act (IX of 1880), s. 65—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 6—Mortgage of reversionary right, validity—Limitation—

Defendants, who had an expectation of reversioners' certain property, mortgaged that property by a registered deed to the plaintiff in 1895. Plaintiff filed a suit in 1923 to enforce the mortgage.

Held, (1) that the mortgage being of a reversionary interest in the property which they purported to mortgage, s. 65 of the Contract Act had no application to the case, and that the plaintiff's claim to a personal decree against the defendants was barred by time.

(2) that plaintiff being aware at the time when he took the mortgage that the defendants had only a reversionary interest in the property which they purported to mortgage, s. 65 of the Contract Act had no application to the case, and that the plaintiff's claim to a personal decree against the defendants was barred by time.

Second appeal against a decree of the First Additional Sub-Judge, Gonda, dated the 12th May 1924, reversing that of the Munsif, Tarabgange, dated the 25th February 1924.

Mr. Hardhian Chandra, for the Appellants.

Mr. S. N. Roy, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—There is no force in this appeal. The suit of the plaintiff for a money decree on a registered deed dated 22nd July, 1895 was certainly time-barred when the present suit was filed on 22nd October, 1923. By that deed the executants purported to transfer a property which did not belong to them but in which they had an expectation as reversioners. The transfer, therefore, of the property was certainly void.

It is argued that upon a proper interpretation of s. 65, limitation should run from the date when a Court of law refused the prayer of the plaintiffs to take the money due on this deed into account when a prior mortgage was redeemed by the defendants. The ruling in the case of Harnath Kuar v. Inder Bahadur Singh (1) of their Lordships of the Privy Council was quoted. The real basis of that ruling is stated at page 227* of the report: "Their Lordships think there are materials on the record from which it may be fairly inferred in the peculiar circumstances of this case that there was a misapprehension as to the private rights of Indar Singh in the villages which he purported to sell by the instrument of 2nd January, 1880 and that the true nature of those rights was not discovered by the plaintiff or Rachpal Singh earlier than the time at which his demand for possession was resisted, and that was well within the period of limitation." No such ambiguity or misapprehension arose in the present case. It was admitted that prior to 1895 (the year of the deed in suit) these very reversioners had sued for a declaration that a former deed of mortgage executed by the widow in possession may be declared to be null and void on the death of the widow. The mortgagees, therefore, fully understood what the rights of the executants were and that they were not present rights but a possibility of future succession. There are no peculiar circumstances in this case to bring it within the provisions of s. 65 of the Contract Act.

Their Lordships have explained the ruling in the case of Harnath Kuar (1), in a later ruling Ananda Mohon Roy v. Gour Mohan Mullick (2).

I dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

Z. K.

(1) 71 Ind. Cas. 629; 26 O. C. 223; (1922) A. I. R. (P. C.) 403; 9 O. & A. L. R. 270; 9 O. L. J. 652; 44 M. L. J. 489; 37 C. L. J. 346; 45 A. 179; 27 C. W. N. 1949; 50 I. A. 69; 18 L. W. 383; 33 M. L. T. 216; 5 P. L. T. 281; 2 Pat. L. R. 237 (P. C.).
(2) 74 Ind. Cas. 499; 21 A. L. J. 718; 4 P. L. T. 609; (1923) A. I. R. (P. C.) 189; (1923) M. W. N. 803; 45 M. L. J. 617; 25 Bom. L. R. 1269; 33 M. L. T. 365; 50 C. 929; 50 I. A. 239; 28 C. W. N. 713; 40 C. L. J. 110 (P. C.).

*Page of 26 O. C.—[44]

RANGOON HIGH COURT. FULL BENCH.

FIRST CIVIL APPEAL No. 223 of 1924.
July 30, 1925.

Present:—Sir Guy Rutledge, Kt., Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Brown and Mr. Justice Maung Ba.

MA NYEIN E—DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

MAUNG MAUNG AND OTHERS—
PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Buddhist Law—Inheritance—Hnapazon property of last marriage—Pubbaka children and their step-parents—Practice or decision of long standing erroneous—Duty of Court.

By the Full Bench.—Where a Burman Buddhist, who has married more than once, dies leaving hnapazon property of the last marriage, if there is an issue of the last marriage the step-child or children collectively take one-eighth and the step-parent seven-eighths, but where there is no issue of the last marriage the former take one-sixth and the latter five-sixths. [p. 345, col. 1.]

Nga Po Thit v. Mi Thaing, S. J. 18, Maung Chit Soya v. Ma Meinkale, U. B. R. (1892-98) Vol. II, 93, discussed. Mi So v. Mi Hnigat Tha, S. J. 177, Ma Ba We v. Mi So, U. B. R. 124, overruled.

Obiter.—Where a rule of law is clear, unambiguous and well-founded, and a decision or practice of the Court, though of a long standing and old is based on a misconception, it is but right that the erroneous decision or practice should be overruled and the correct rule of law followed. [p. 344, col. 2.]

Ma On v. Ka Shwe Tho Dun, S. J. 78, M. Sein Ton v. Ma Son, 30 Ind. Cas. 588, 8 L. B. R. 501, 8 Bur. L. T. 203, Ma In Than v. Maung Saw Hla, S. J. 103, and Maung Hme v. Me Sein, 45 Ind. Cas. 953, 9 L. B. R. 191, 11 Bur. L. T. 236, referred to.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.

In this litigation the estate of one U Chit Pon, a Burman Buddhist, was involved. He married three wives in succession. The first one, Ma Mo Tu, was divorced over 30 years ago. By that wife he had two children, Maung Maung and Maung Aung, who are still alive. After divorcing Ma Mo Tu, he married one Ma Kyaw, who died a few years afterwards. There was no issue of that union. After her death, he again married Ma Nyein E (appellant-defendant). Ma Nyein E had a daughter, Ma Hla, by a former marriage. One Maung Shwe Pu, a nephew of the second wife, Ma Kyaw, claims to have been adopted by U Chit Pon and Ma Kyaw. At first only Maung Maung and Maung Aung brought a suit against Ma Nyein E for their share of inheritance. They allege that 3 pieces of paddy land known as Yonbin Le, Tauk-shabin Le and Ponbuehin Le were the payin property of their father when he married Ma Nyein E. It is common ground that other properties in Schedule B are the hnapazon property of U Chit Pon and Ma Nyein E. They claim a $\frac{3}{8}$ th share in the payin property, and a $\frac{1}{8}$ th share in the hnapazon property.

After the institution of the suit, Maung Shwe Pu made an application to the District Court of Yamethin that he might be impleaded as a co plaintiff on the strength of his alleged adoption. The District Judge granted his application, and ordered an amendment of the plaint.

In the new plaint Maung Maung and Maung Aung admit the adoption of Maung Shwe Pu and the three jointly claim the whole of the payin property and $\frac{1}{8}$ th of the hnapazon property. The defence set up by Ma Nyein E is that Maung Shwe Pu was never adopted, Maung Maung and Maung Aung are not entitled to claim any share because, after divorce of their mother, they have not maintained filial relations with their father, and, lastly, that the pieces of paddy land to which they claim a share are not part of the hnapazon property of herself and deceased.

The issues framed are defective, and it is unfortunate that the learned District Judge has not re-cast them. The disputed adoption has not been specifically mentioned in any of the issues, but, as pointed out by the learned District Judge this omission does not appear to have prejudiced either party because they have produced evidence on that point. The allegation is that Maung Shwe Pu was adopted when he was about 7 or 8 years of age. He is now 42. So one cannot expect the evidence tendered to prove it to be entirely free from discrepancies.

The evidence tendered in the present case is that of persons who are old enough and who are also in a position to know about the alleged adoption. The lower Court has been favourably impressed by those witnesses. Their evidence has been strengthened by the admission of Ma Nyein E that, when she and the deceased shinbueq Maung Shwe Pu, they referred to him as their son (tha) and also by the admission of her witness U Chit Aye (D. W. No. 3) that it was common knowledge, that Shwe Pu was their adopted son. For these reasons we accept the finding of the lower Court on this point of adoption as correct.

As regards the claim of Maung Maung and Maung Aung it must be disallowed in case it is proved that they had severed filial relationship with their father.

There is satisfactory proof that there has not been such a severance. Maung Maung has been blind for some time and Maung Aung has been an invalid for some time. They have latterly lived separately from their father, but there is evidence that they visited him occasionally, and that they stayed with him till they married. Ma Nyein E herself admitted that Maung Aung came and stayed with them for about 1½ months about a year before U Chit Pon's death. U Chit Pon was a wunthanu, but his children are not. There is some indication that for some of the visits to the father were not very frequent. We hold that there has been no severance of the filial relationship, that Maung Maung and Maung Aung have not forfeited their right to inherit.

As regards the 3 pieces of paddy land, the evidence tendered by the plaintiffs in convincing that they constitute the payin property of the deceased. Even Ma Nyein E, contradicting her own written statement, admitted in her evidence that two of the pieces, namely, yonbin and banbwe lands, were brought by U Chit Pon when he married her. In her evidence she stated that the remaining piece, taukshabin le, was acquired by clearing jungle after his marriage with her. The evidence produced by her in support of that allegation is not satisfactory and cannot be accepted in the face of more reliable evidence produced by the other side. We decide that all the 3 pieces constitute the payin property of the deceased.

The learned District Judge has given the plaintiffs the whole of the payin property and ¼th of the hnapazon property. That allotment has now been disputed by the appellant. We are of opinion that the division of shares is not correct.

As regards the payin property, it is settled law that the pubbaka children (children of previous marriage) should get ¾th and their step parent ¼th, as decided by the Full Bench of the late Chief Court in 1903 [Ma Ba We v. Mi Sa U (1)]. This mode of division is supported by s. 8, Book X of Manukyo.

As regards the hapazon property, according to the above ruling, the stepchildren should get ¼th and the step-mother ¼th. We doubt the correctness of this division. As in the present case there was no issue of the last marriage, the division should be in the proportion of 1 to 5 and not 1 to 7. Section 8 of Book X is clear on the point. The division in the proportion of 1 to 7 would be correct according to s. 10 if there was an issue of the last marriage.

(1) 2 L. B. R. 174.

The learned Judges, who decided that case, made no differentiation between a case where there was an issue of the last marriage and a case where there was not. When there was an issue some sort of provision for that issue was contemplated and the share of the pubbaka children was reduced from ¼th to ⅛th. That issue would get two shares out of 8 as against 1 share for the pubbaka children.

The two ex-Ministers, who were great authorities on Buddhist Law, viz., Kinwun Mingyi and Wetmasut Wundauk and who were consulted on this very issue by the late Mr. Burgess in a similar case [Maung Chit Pon v. Ma Meinkale (2)] quoted authorities which support the division in the proportion of 1 to 5.

After the decision of the Full Bench case in 1903 the Privy Council in 1914, in the case of Ma Nhin Bwin v. U Shwe Gon (3) has given the Manukye a commanding position and has held that "where is not ambiguous other dhamathats do not require to be referred to." Manukye is not ambiguous on this point. We are of opinion that this important point requires to be re-considered and we, therefore, refer the following question for the decision of a Full Bench.

"Where a Burman Buddhist, who has married more than once dies leaving hnapazon property of the last marriage, what is the law of partition of that property between the pubbaka children and their step-parent (1) Where there is an issue of the last marriage and (2) where there is not?"

Mr. Hla Tun Phroo, for the Appellant.

Mr. Mya Bu, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT OF THE FULL BENCH.

Maung Ba, J.—This reference relates to the estate of one U Chit Pon a Burman Buddhist.

(2) U. B. R. (1892-96) Vol. II 93.

(3) 23 Ind. Cas 433; 8 L. B. R. 1; 7 Bur. L. T. 105; 16 Bom. L. R. 377; 27 M. L. J. 41; 18 C. W. N. 1121; 16 M. L. T. 142; 20 C. L. J. 263; 41 C. 887; 1 L. W. 914; 41 I. A. 121; (1914) M. W. N. 449 (P. C.).

The facts are as set out in the Order of Reference.

U Chit Pon married three wives in succession, the second wife after divorcing the first and the third after the demise of the second. By the first wife he had two sons and the second wife and himself adopted a child. By the third wife he had no issue. On his death he left both kinds of property, namely, payin property brought to the last marriage and hnapazon property acquired during that marriage.

The reference arose out of a suit brought against the widow by her step-children and relates to the hnapazon property.

The question referred to us is as follows:—

"Where a Burman Buddhist who has married more than once dies leaving hnapazon property of the last marriage, what is the law of partition of that property between the pubbaka children and their step-parent (1) where there is an issue of the last marriage and (2) where there is not."

The law of division in both cases has hitherto been that the step-child takes $\frac{1}{8}$ th and the step-parent $\frac{7}{8}$ th. That law was laid down as early as 1873 in the case of Nga Po Tit v. Mi Thaing (4) where Mr. Sandford the then Judicial Commissioner, held that "on the death of the father, who had married two wives in succession, the child of the first marriage is entitled to $\frac{1}{8}$ th share in property acquired during the continuances of the second marriage." He based his decision on the rule of partition given in Book X, s. 10 of the Manukye Dhammathat. That section relates to the partition between the step-parent, the child of the former marriage and the child of the last marriage. It gives the step-parent 5 shares, the child of the former marriage one share and the child of the last marriage two shares. So the decision of Mr. Sandford would be quite justified under the Manukye Dhammathat if, in the case reported, there was a child of the second marriage. That decision of Mr. Sandford was followed by his successor, Sir John Jardine, in 1883 in the case of Mi So v. Mi Hmat Tha (5). Unfortunately in that case there was no child of the last marriage. The attention of Sir John Jardine was drawn to s. 8, Book X of the Manukye Dhammathat, which gives the step-son $\frac{1}{8}$ th and the step-parent $\frac{5}{6}$ th yet with some doubt he decided to adopt the rule of the Manukye Dhammathat as expounded by Sandford, J., as he was of the opinion that Wunnana and Mohavicchedani supported such exposition of the law. This law was again considered by a Full Bench of the late Chief Court in 1903 in the case of Ma Ba We v. Mi Sa O (1). In that case third wife, who was childless sued her step-children by the former wives for her shares in the estate left by her husband. The previous rulings were considered. As regards hnapazon property the rule laid down in s. 10, Book X, of the Manukye Dhammathat was again followed. In all those cases the presence of a child of the last marriage was in sight of. Apparently the learned Judges were of the opinion that, in view of the settled law that no child except the orasa was entitled to claim a share during the life of his own parent, the two were allowed to the child of the last marriage should be included in the share of his parent, s. 8, Book X of the Manukye Dhammathat makes no mention whatever of a child of the last marriage and it gives a larger share namely, $\frac{1}{8}$ th to the step-child; but s. 10 Book X mentions a child of the last marriage and also gives that child two shares out of eight. A comparison of these two sections clearly shows that the share of the step-parent is reduced when there is a child of the last marriage. It cannot be supposed that the framer of the Manukye Dhammathat had had no object in making that reduction. If it were contemplated that the one law laid down in s. 10 were to be indiscriminately applied to all cases no matter whether there was an issue of the last marriage or not, then the writer of the Manukye Dhammathat would be guilty of having laid down two rules of division, one close on the heels of another, prescribing different shares, one greater than the other; but such a charge of inconsistency and indiscriminate application would disappear if s. 8 were taken to refer only to a case where there was no issue of the last marriage and s. 10 to a case where there was such an issue. In my opinion the writer contemplated that some provision should be made for the child of the last marriage who had no immediate right of claiming any share, owing to the presence of his parent.

In a similar case, Maung Chit Saya v.

(4) S. J. 18.

(5) S. J. 177.

Ma Mein Kale (2) decided by the late Mr. Burgess, Judicial Commissioner Upper Burma, the late Kinwun Mingyi and the Wetmasut Wundauk who are great authorities on Buddhist Law, were consulted. One of the question referred to them was as to the law of partition between the step-parent and the step-child where there was no issue of the last marriage. In answer to that question the Kinwun Mingyi quoted this law:—"On the partition between the children of the two former marriages and the third wife, who is the step-mother of the said children, the law is this:—On the death of the father leaving a subsequently married wife without children the law of partition between the step-mother and the former children is this. All the acquired property should be divided into six shares, the former children receive one share and the step-mother five shares; In view of the law given in the Attathan-keik Dhammathat coincides with the law given in the following Dhammathats. Commentaries on the Manu Dhammathat; Umma Viniçchaya Dhamma, that Pakainaka Dhammathat in verse and Sesidayajji Dipini Dhammathat in verse." Attasankhepa Vannana Dhammathat was compiled by the late Kinwun Mingyi on consideration and comparison of all the available texts, and contains the view of the learned compiler on the law as it actually stood at the time of compilation. It was first printed in Burmese in the year 1882 and has always been regarded as a weighty authority.

The Wetmasut Wundauk also gave the same law of partition, relying upon the Attasankhepa Vannana Dhammathat.

The Kinwun Mingyi, however, proposed to take away one share from the widow and give it to the step-child of the second marriage instead of strictly adopting the law pointed out in his dhammathat.

The learned Counsel for the widow admitted that the law laid down in s. 8 Book X of the Manukye Dhammathat was the correct law; but he urged that the law of division in the proportion of 1 to 7 laid down in 1873 has been accepted and followed ever since by the Burman Buddhist as a settled law on the point, that any sudden change in that law would result in confusion and that, therefore, it would not be advisable to introduce any change but allow the law though incorrect to remain. This argument though plausible, is not warranted by precedents.

The Law about the widow's powers of disposal over her deceased husband's estate laid down in 1886 in Ma On v. Ko Shwo Tha Dun (6) was found to be incorrect and had to be changed in 1915 in Ma Sein Ton v. Ma Son (7). Another law that the taking of a lesser wife by the husband does not in itself constitute a ground for a divorce laid down in 1881 in Ma In Than v. Maung Saw Hla (8) was also found to be incorrect and changed in 1918 in Manug Hme v. Ma Sein (9) and a wife who is not consenting can now obtain a divorce without any further proof of cruelty.

In 1914 their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Ma Hnin Din v. Shwe Gon (3) made Manukye the paramount authority in these words:—"The Manukye has held a commanding position since the time of King Alompra and is still to be regarded as of the highest authority. Where it is not ambiguous other Dhammathats do not require to be referred to."

In the case under review the Manukye Dhammathat is not ambiguous and the rule given there has been adopted by the Kinwun Mingyi in his work. In the case of a large estate the difference in the share by non-observance of this plain law may be considerable.

The Hon'ble U May Oung in his work on Buddhist Law has noticed this misconception of the law and he has urged the reconsideration of the law in the following words:—"It is submitted, therefore, that the question should be re-opened and that the distinction expressly drawn in the Dhammathats between a case in which there is issue of the second marriage and one in which there is not should be recognized." The present practice has, it is true, been a long standing one, but where a rule of law is clear, unambiguous and well-founded as shown above, there appears to be no reason why a decision even so old as the one in Mi So's case (5) based on a misconception and given with some hesitation should not be overruled.

I am of opinion that it is but right to rectify the errors and lay down the correct

(6) S. J. 378.

(7) 30 Ind. Cas. 588; 8 L. B. R. 501; 8 Bur. L. T. 203.

(8) S. J. 103.

(9) 45 Ind. Cas. 953; 9 L. B. R. 191; 11 Bur. L. T. 236.

law in conformity with the Manukye Dhammathat. Accordingly my answer to the question referred to us will be as follows:—

That in a case where there is an issue of the last marriage the step-child or children collectively take $\frac{1}{8}$ th and the step-parent $\frac{7}{8}$ ths and that in a case where there is no issue of the last marriage the former take $\frac{1}{8}$ th and the latter $\frac{7}{8}$ th.

Rutledge, C. J.—I concur.

Brown, J.—I concur.

S. D.

Answered accordingly.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 328 OF 1923.

May 28, 1925.

Present.—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

SHEO BEHARI—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT
versus

SHEO RATAN SINGH AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Hindu Law—Joint family—Mortgage by father—Necessity—Enquiry by mortgagee—Mortgagee, whether bound to see to application of money—Loan not sufficient to meet necessity; effect of—Appeal, second—Necessity, whether question of fact or law.

A person who lends money on the security of joint family property is bound to enquire into the necessity for the loan and to satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. If he does so enquire and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge. Under such circumstances he is not bound to see to the application of the money lent by him. [p. 345, col. 2.]

Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Babooee Munraj Koonweree, 6 M. L. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81n; Sevestre 253n; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147, followed.

A finding as to the existence of necessity is a finding of fact. When a Court finds in favour of the existence of family necessity for a loan but holds that the lender is not protected on the ground that he did not see to the application of the money, the finding becomes a ground of law and a second appeal is maintainable. [p. 346, col. 1.]

A lender is not obliged to ascertain that the amount of money which he advances is equal in amount to the entire debt which constitutes the family necessity. If there exists a necessity which would justify the use of the whole money borrowed, the lender is then justified

ed in making the advance whether or not other funds will be necessary for the same purpose. [ibid.]

The fact that the interest on a mortgage is higher than the Court interest on the decree for payment of which the mortgage is executed does not vitiate the mortgage, nor does the fact that the amount of the property mortgaged is larger than the amount which was about to be sold under the decree. [p. 346, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against the judgment and decree of the Fourth Additional District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 18th July 1923, reversing that of the Munsif, North Lucknow, dated the 28th March 1923.

Mr. B. N. Sriwastava, for the Appellant.

Messrs. Anant Bihari Nigam and Rajeshwari Prasad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

This is a second civil appeal. The plaintiff is the appellant. The appeal raises a very new point of law. The suit was one to enforce a mortgage. The mortgage-deed was executed by a Hindu father, and the property mortgaged belonged to the joint Hindu family consisting of the father and his sons. He cannot, therefore, he enforced a charge on the property, unless there was valid family necessity for the loan, adequate enquiry and honest action on the part of the lender. In the words of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the leading case on the subject, Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Babooee Munraj Koonweree (1), "The lender is bound to inquire into the necessities for the loan, and to satisfy himself as well as he can, with reference to the parties with whom he is dealing, that the manager is acting in the particular instance for the benefit of the estate. But they think that if he does so inquire, and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably credited necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge, and they do not think that, under such circumstances, he is bound to see to the application of the money."

In the present case, there is a recital in the deed that the family property is about to be brought to sale under a decree, and that the money is borrowed for the purpose of satisfying the decree. There is a finding of fact by the lower Appellate Court that there was such a decree in existence, and that the sale of the property under that decree had been fixed for the 21st of October. The date of the loan was the 24th of September. In spite of this finding, both the

(1) 6 M. L. A. 393; 18 W. R. 81n; Sevestre 253n; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 29; 1 Sar. P. C. J. 552; 19 E. R. 147.

Courts below have decided that the plaintiff is not protected, mainly on the ground that the amount of the decree exceeded Rs. 1,000 while the amount of the money borrowed was only Rs. 325 so that the plaintiff must have known that this amount of money was quite insufficient to save the property. Another point taken is that it was the duty of the plaintiff to see that the money was used for this purpose, and that he ought to have paid it into Court or to the decree-holder. Another point is taken by Counsel for the respondents although I do not find it in the judgment, that the interest on the decree was only 8-arnas per cent. per mensem, while the interest on the mortgage is Rs. 1-6-0 per cent. per month, and that only $1\frac{1}{2}$ pies were to be paid while the mortgage extends over $3\frac{1}{2}$ pie fractional share.

The point for decision is whether a second appeal lies at all. The finding of the existence of necessity is a finding of fact. On this point I find that the appeal does lie. There is no finding of fact here as to the existence of necessity. There is a finding that the plaintiff is not protected, and one of the grounds on which this finding is based is undoubtedly a ground of law, namely, that the lender was bound to see to the application of the money. The decision on this point is directly contrary to the decision already quoted in the leading case on the subject. Having found that the lender did satisfy himself as to the existence of family necessity, the Court was wrong in law in finding that the plaintiff was under an obligation to see to the application of the money.

Coming to the second point, I know of no authority for the proposition that the lender is obliged to ascertain that the amount of the money, which he advances is equal in amount to the entire debt which constitutes the family necessity. If there exists a necessity which would justify the use of the whole money borrowed the lender is then justified in making the advance, whether or not other funds will be necessary for the same purpose. I cannot agree that the only alternative is that the Manager of a family should make up the amount by several other small loans. Surely it is entirely possible that he may have some funds of his own.

The fact that the interest on the mortgage was higher than the Court interest on the decree, does not vitiate the mortgage, nor does the fact that the amount of property mortgaged was larger than the amount which was about to be sold under the decree.

I find that, according to the principles which the Courts have always followed, the present plaintiff did all that the law requires from him in the way of satisfying himself of the existence of necessity, and that his mortgage is a valid charge on the joint family property. Accordingly, I set aside the decree of the Court below and I grant plaintiff a decree for Rs. 1,500 with simple interest 6 per cent. per annum from the date of institution to the date of realization. The decree will be in the usual form of a preliminary decree for sale on the basis of a mortgage. The plaintiff-appellant will receive his costs in all three Courts.

Z. K.

G. H.

Decree set aside.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

APPEAL SUIT No. 218 OF 1923.

November 5, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Justice Phillips and
Mr. Justice Odgers.SANKARAN alias KUNHUNNI
NAMBUDRIPAD AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS NOS. 2, 3—APPELLANTS

versus

VATAKKIMYEDATH KIRANGHAT
MANAKKA SREEDHARAN alias ANUJAN NAMBUDRIPAD AND OTHERS

—DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Malabar Law—Nambudri Illom—Family karar providing for management of properties—Karnavan, restrictions on rights of, validity of—Suit against Anandravan for acts of mis-conduct—Defendant becoming Karnavan during pendency of suit—Suit, whether can proceed—Principal and agent—Liability of agent to render accounts—Dismissal of agent before time fixed for taking accounts, effect of.

An agreement by an anandravan under a family karar to have his rights as karnavan restricted when he succeeds to the latter office is valid and effective, but the agreement must be clearly expressed. [p. 347, col. 2; p. 348, col. 1.]

Ordinarily a suit for the recovery of tarwad property must be brought by the karnavan and an anandravan cannot sue unless the karnavan is under some disability. Where, however, a suit is brought to recover tarwad property from the karnavan himself and for the removal of the latter from his office, the suit must in the nature of things be brought by persons other than the karnavan. [p. 348, col. 2.]

Where a defendant is charged with mis-conduct as an anandravan the fact that he has become karnavan since the institution of the suit cannot absolve him from his liability for such misconduct. The mere fact of his becoming a karnavan cannot do away with his responsibility for all his previous acts. [p. 348, col. 2; p. 349, col. 1.]

An agent who is bound to render accounts at the end of a year is not absolved from liability for acts committed in the course of that year, and, even if he is dismissed before the time arrives for the rendering of accounts, he would have to make good any mis-appropriations and, in doing so, the Court would call upon him to render an account to ascertain what they were. [p. 349, col. 1.]

The members of a nambudri illom entered into a karar by which provision was made for the management of the illom. The first plaintiff, who was the karnavan, gave up practically all his rights as such. The defendant who was then the senior anandravan was appointed manager of one set of properties and the third plaintiff was appointed manager of another set of properties. The karar provided in detail for the various acts of management and for succession to the managership. One of the conditions of the karar was that it should remain in force until it was set aside by means of a registered document executed by all the adult members of the illom. After the defendant had been managing the properties allotted to him for sometime, the first plaintiff and plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3, who were the only adult males in the illom, being dissatisfied with the management of the properties by the defendant called upon him to explain his conduct. He failed to do so and thereupon in accordance with the procedure laid down in the karar, the plaintiffs dismissed him from his office and brought a suit for a declaration that the defendant was no longer entitled to manage the properties and for an account and other reliefs. After the suit was filed the first plaintiff died and the defendant became the karnavan of the illom. He thereupon contended that the suit could not proceed against him:

Held, (1) that the karar to which the defendant was party was still binding upon him and had not come to an end merely by the death of the previous karnavan; [p. 349, col. 1.]

(2) that the defendant having agreed to be bound by the terms of the karar, his rights as karnavan were restricted in accordance with the terms of the karar; [ibid.]

(3) that consequently the suit could proceed against the defendant in accordance with the terms of the karar. [ibid.]

Appeal against a decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Ottapalam, in O. S. No. 76 of 1919.

Messrs. C. V. Ananta Krishna Iyer and P. S. Narayanaswami Iyer, for the Appellants.

Messrs. T. R. Ramachandra Iyer and P. S. Ramachandra Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The parties in this suit are members of a nambudri illom in Malabar. The first plaintiff was the de jure karnavan and the other parties are anandravans. In 1918 the family entered into a karar which is filed as Ex. I and in this karar, provision was made for the management of the illom. The first plaintiff, the de jure karnavan gave up practically all his rights as such, retaining only certain privileges. The 1st defendant, who was then the senior anandravan was appointed manager of one set of properties and the 3rd plaintiff was appointed manager of another set of properties. The karar is a very long document and provides in detail for the various acts of management and for the succession to the managership. After the 1st defendant had been managing the properties allotted to him for some time, the 1st plaintiff and plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3, who were the only adult males in the illom were dissatisfied with him and called upon him to explain his conduct. He failed to do so and accordingly the plaintiff sent him a registered notice informing him that he was dismissed from his office. This was in accordance with the procedure laid down in para. 25 of the karar. The 1st defendant was still obstructive and accordingly this suit was brought for a declaration that he was no longer entitled to manage and for an account and various other reliefs. After the suit was filed, the 1st plaintiff died and the 1st defendant became the karnavan of the illom. Plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3 wished to go on with the suit representing that the cause of action survived to them, but the 1st defendant contended that the suit must abate inasmuch as he was karnavan and the legal representative of the 1st plaintiff and that his rights as karnavan were not affected by the conditions in the karar and that no suit would lie. The Subordinate Judge has accepted the contention of the 1st defendant and has held that inasmuch as he has succeeded to all the rights of a karnavan, the practical effect of allowing the suit to continue would be to remove him from his karnavasthanam and as that is not the original plaintiff's case, the suit must abate.

It is argued in appeal that, as a matter of fact, the 1st defendant has not got the full rights of a karnavan because he being a party to the karar, is bound by the terms of it, and has by that karar renounced his right to become a karnavan in the ordinary acceptation of the term. It is not disputed and it was laid down by a Full Bench in Kenath Puthen Vittil Tavazhi v. Narayanan (1) that a karnavan can renounce his rights. In that case an anandravan under a family karar agreed to have his rights as karnavan restricted when he succeeded to the office and it was held that such an agreement was effective. A number of other cases have been cited on this point and this principle has never been disputed, but it has been laid down that such a renunciation must be clearly expressed in the karar. In a case in Krishnan Kidaru v Raman (2) relied on by respondents, on the terms of the karar in question there, it was held that there was no renunciation; but every case must be determined on its own facts and here we have to consider what is the meaning of the karar, Ex. 1. The 1st defendant in so many words does not say that he gives up his rights, but he is a party to all the conditions contained in the karar, and one of these is that the karar shall be in force until it is set aside by means of a registered document executed by all the adult members together. Admittedly the other document has not been executed and prima facie the karar would still be in force. It is, however, argued for the 1st respondent that the karar was not intended to have any force after the death of the 1st plaintiff, the then de jure karnavan. It is, however, significant that in para. 15 there is a provision that the document shall be in the name of the karnavan "for the time being," which clearly contemplates the death of the present karnavan and the succession of somebody else. Again in para. 20 there is a provision that both the present and future karnavans shall do so and so. Here again it is obvious that the acceptance of the karar contemplated its continuing in force after the lifetime of the karnavan, the 1st plaintiff. Again there is a provision in cl. 26 which runs as follows:—"At, also, the death of the members, who are managers new members shall be appointed for management in accordance with the consent of the majority; at change of persons or change of office (sthanom), all matters shall be conducted in accordance with the karar." The word translated as "office" is 'sthanom,' and it is contended for the appellants that this refers to karnavasthanam inasmuch as there is no particular 'sthanom' or estate attached to this illom and it cannot refer to a sthanom in that sense. On the other side it is contended that it merely means the office of manager of the two sets of properties mentioned in the karar. Those managers are referred to in the first sentence of cl. 26 and the word used is not "sthanom." Similarly if it is to be interpreted as office of manager, the recital "at the change of persons" (viz., the persons who are managers) "of the change of office" (viz., the office of manager) is tautological and it seems unlikely that that can be the meaning. Whether we say that it refers to karnavasthanam, or anandrasthanam, it does not make much difference, because when the karnavan died, there is a change in a karnavasthanam; and one anandravan loses his anandrasthanam and becomes a karnavan. The word "sthanom" seems quite applicable if interpreted in this sense; and taking all the recitals in the karar together, especially paras. 15 and 20, and the last part of para. 26, it certainly seems as if the karar was intended to have effect not only during the lifetime of the first plaintiff but also until all these executants chose to put an end to it by executing another karar. If it is so and we think it is, the first defendant clearly renounced his right to become karnavan with unrestricted powers. In that view, he is not necessarily the only representative of the first plaintiff. He is the de jure karnavan, but this suit does not relate to his acts as such but as manager of one of the two sets of properties or "sthalams" as they are called. Ordinarily the karnavan ought to bring a suit for recovery of tarwad property and it has been held that an anandravan cannot sue unless the karnavan is under some disability such as cases where he has himself alienated the tarwad property [vide Cherna Pangi Achan v. Unnalachan (3) on which the lower Court relies]. Here there is a very clear disability in the case of the 1st defendant, for he would be bringing a suit to recover property from himself and for his own removal from office, and this is clearly impossible. The only other persons that can sue are the other members of the illom and the only adult members are plaintiffs Nos. 2 and 3; the suit is, therefore, maintainable by them. The Subordinate Judge does not seem to have considered whether apart from the karar, the suit would not lie. The first defendant is charged with misconduct as an anandravan and the fact that he has become karnavan since he misconducted himself cannot absolve him from his liability.

(1) 23 M. 182; 14 M. L. J. 415.

(3) 38 Ind. Cas. 513; 32 M. L. J. 323; (1917) M. W. N. 185; 5 L. W. 302; 21 M. L. T. 329.

(2) 38 Ind. Cas. 638; 39 M. 918.

ity for such mis-conduct. The mere fact of becoming a karnavan cannot do away with his responsibility for all the previous acts. He as an anandravan is liable, if the plaint allegations are true, to make good certain property to the tarwad. It may be that that property will have to be handed over into his own hands as karnavan, but it will be handed over to him on behalf of the tarwad. He is liable to the tarwad and it is on that account that he is sued. It is contended on his behalf that any suit brought by the illom must be brought within the provisions of cl. 18 of the karar which provides that it must be brought by the manager of each "sthalam" and the karnavan conjointly. That clearly refers to suits by the illom against third parties and cannot refer to suits between the parties based on breaches of the karar itself. The further contention that there is no cause of action against the 1st defendant and that the suit is premature because not having been in office for one year, he is not bound by the karar to render accounts, cannot possibly be sustained. An agent who is bound to render accounts at the end of a year is not absolved from liability for the acts committed in the course of that year, and, even if he is dismissed before the time arrives for the rendering of accounts, he would have to make good any misappropriation and, in doing so, the Court would call upon him to render an account to ascertain what they were. In this view also, so far as certain of the prayers in the plaint are concerned, the suit would be maintainable.

The appeal is accordingly allowed and the suit remanded for disposal on the merits. The first respondent will pay the appellant's costs of this appeal. The Court-fee will be refunded.

V. N. V.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 381 OF 1923.

July 21, 1924.

Present :—Mr. Baker, J. C.

Lala RATANLAL AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS

—APPELLANTS.

versus

GOVINDA—DEFENDANT—RESPONDENT.

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), s. 28 (6)—

Mortgage executed prior to insolvency—Payment by fresh mortgage after insolvency—Transaction, whether protected.

If a mortgage executed prior to the insolvency of the mortgagor is satisfied after his insolvency by the execution of a fresh mortgage to a third person, the transaction is protected by s. 28, cl. (6) of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920. [p. 350, col. 2.]

Shiam Sarup v. Nand Ram, 63 Ind. Cas. 366; 13 A. 555; 19 A. L. J. 511, followed.

Appeal against a decree of the District Judge, Nagpur, dated the 6th June 1923, in Civil Appeal No. 19 of 1923.

Mr. R. N. Padhye, for the Appellants.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT—The appellants sued to recover possession of certain absolute occupancy lands. The lands along with some other absolute occupancy fields were mortgaged to one Awachit and his brother Amrit in favour of the Raj Nandgaon Trading Company for Rs. 2,000 by a mortgage-deed dated the 1st April 1904. The amount was payable by instalments and in case of default of three instalments the mortgagee was entitled to take possession of the property, though he did not do so.

There was a partition between Awachit and his brother Amrit, at which the fields in suit fell to Awachit's share. In 1919 Awachit applied to be declared an insolvent and was so declared. The Insolvency Court ordered the sale of the fields in suit for satisfaction of his debts and they were sold subject to the mortgage of 1904 and were purchased by the defendant Govinda who took possession in May 1921.

Awachit died shortly after he was declared insolvent and after his death his minor sons and Amrit's minor sons, through their respective guardians executed a possessory mortgage-deed for Rs. 5,000 on 19th February 1920, mortgaging the fields in suit along with other fields to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs alleged that they were placed in possession under this mortgage and that they were wrongly dispossessed by the defendant. They, therefore, sued to recover possession of the said fields, alleging that they were the proprietors of the Raj Nandgaon Trading Company who were the mortgagees under the mortgage of 1904, that the mortgage of 1920 was simply a renewal of the mortgage and that the order of the Insolvency Court did not affect their right as they were secured creditors.

The First Court dismissed the plaintiffs' suit. On appeal the District Judge of Nagpur upheld the decision of the First Court, finding that the plaintiffs had failed to prove that they are the mortgagees under the mortgage of 1904, and that under s. 28 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act the property of the insolvent vests in the Court and so on Awachit's death his heirs had no right to mortgage the fields in suit which vested in the Insolvency Court, so as to prejudice the rights of the scheduled creditors. This mortgage, therefore, could not be enforced against the creditors of Awachit nor against the defendant who purchased the fields in suit at the sale held under the orders of the Insolvency Court.

The plaintiffs make this second appeal.

The two points raised in the second appeal are that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in finding that the plaintiffs are not the mortgagees under the mortgage of 1904, as it has overlooked an admission by Awachit to that effect in 1904 and by Venkati, the son of the mortgagor Amrit made as P. W. No. 4, and the fact that the mortgage of 1904 has been satisfied. It is produced by the plaintiffs who have given the heirs of the mortgagors a discharge, so far as this is concerned. Secondly, it is argued that assuming that the plaintiffs are not the mortgagees of 1904, still the mortgage of 1920 would not be invalid because it is for the satisfaction of the previous mortgage of 1904, which has been cancelled.

So far as the first contention is concerned, both the Courts below have found on the evidence that the plaintiffs are not the mortgagees of 1904. That mortgage was passed in favour of the Raj Nandgaon Trading Company who are different persons to the present plaintiffs. Although the District Judge has not referred to the admission on which the plaintiffs rely, he states that on a careful consideration of the entire oral and documentary evidence on record he has come to the conclusion that it has not been established that the mortgagees of the two mortgages dated 1904 and 1920 are identical persons. This is a finding of fact behind which this Court cannot go in second appeal.

So far, however, as the second point is concerned, I am unable to agree with the view taken by the learned District Judge. The mortgage of 1904 gave the mortgagee the right of possession on failure of payment of there instalments. The mortgage of 1920 is with possession and at the same time the mortgage of 1904 was cancelled. The plaintiffs took possession under the mortgage of 1920 and were dispossessed by the auction-purchaser. The present suit for possession is one to enforce the right of possession under the mortgage. The mortgagee of 1904 was a secured creditor and, therefore, unaffected by the mortgagor's insolvency. Under s. 28, cl. (6) of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920 he could realise or otherwise deal with the security without reference to the insolvency proceedings.

If it had been held that the mortgagee of 1920 was the same person as the mortgagee of 1904, there would have been an end of the matter, but the mortgage of 1920 is in re-placement of the mortgage of 1904, which has been cancelled and produced by the plaintiffs with an endorsement of satisfaction on it signed by one of themselves. It would, therefore, appear that the mortgage of 1920 was agreed to by the mortgagee of 1904, whoever he may be and represents the manner in which the secured creditor chose to deal with his security.

In my opinion the case is governed by Shiam Sarup v. Nand Ram (1) in which case the mortgage executed prior to the insolvency of the mortgagor was satisfied after the mortgagors had become insolvent by the execution of a fresh mortgage to a third person. It was held that the provisions of s. 16, cl. (5) of Act III of 1907, which corresponds to s. 28 cl. (6) of the present Insolvency Act, protected the transaction in suit. It was further held: "If it is open and legal to a secured creditor to realise his security in any way he prefers, surely, the means that are adopted to realise the security are also valid unless forbidden by any statutory law. If it was open to Bhagwan Das (original mortgagee) to realise his mortgage by suing upon it and enforcing his decree, why should a private settlement come to between him and the mortgagors by which a fresh mortgage was given to a third party and from the proceeds of which Bhagwan Das' mortgage was satisfied be considered to be invalid under Act III of 1907?..... The consideration of the deed was utilized towards the payment and discharge of the mortgage of Bhagwan Das and, therefore, the mortgage in suit is not invalid."

The present case is very similar. The learned District Judge has distinguished it on the ground that this is not a suit to enforce the mortgage. It has already been shown that the plaintiffs being entitled to possession under the mortgage and having been deprived thereof are now really seeking to enforce the mortgage. In view of the production by the plaintiffs of the mortgage of 1904 with an endorsement of satisfaction thereon, there can be no doubt that the present mortgage of 1920 is in substitution of the mortgage of 1904 and it represents the manner in which the secured creditor dealt with his security, that is to say, its consideration was the discharge of the mortgage of 1904.

(1) 63 Ind. Cas. 366; 43 A. 555; 19 A. L. J. 511.

In these circumstances I am of opinion that the mortgage of 1920 is not affected by the insolvency proceedings and, therefore, is valid and being prior to the sale to defendant the plaintiffs are entitled to possession under it. I, therefore, reverse the decree of the lower Appellate Court and direct that the plaintiffs be put in possession of the mortgaged property with costs in all the Courts.

K. S. D.

Decree reversed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

FIRST MISCELLANEOUS APPEAL No. 40 OF 1925.

August 21, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Wazir Hasan, A. J. C.,
and Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

Ch. AHMAD HASAN AND OTHERS—
APPELLANTS

versus

KODI LAL AND OTHERS—RESPONDENTS.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, rr. 54, 66, 67, 69—Execution of decree—Sale, adjournment of—Fresh proclamation—Notice to judgment-debtor, whether necessary.

The issue of the notice enjoined by sub-r. (2) of r. 66 of O. XXI of the C. P. C. relates to cases where a proclamation has to be drawn up. Where a sale is adjourned all that sub-r. (2) of r. 69 of the Order requires is that a fresh proclamation must be made under r. 67, which again requires that the proclamation must be made and published, as nearly as may be, in the manner prescribed by sub-r. (2) of r. 54. Where the latter rule is complied with, the proclamation is duly published and no notice to the judgment-debtor under sub-r. (2) of r. 66 is necessary.

Miscellaneous appeal against an order of the Sub Judge, Bara Banki, dated the 21st March 1925.

Mr. H. Husain, for the Appellants.

Mr. G. N. Misra, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is an appeal from the order of the Subordinate Judge of Bara Banki, dated the 21st March 1925, rejecting an application made by the appellants under r. 90 of O. XXI of the C. P. C., for setting aside an auction-sale held in execution of a decree existing in favour of the respondents. The respondents are also the purchasers at the auction-sale.

The only ground which has been pressed upon us in support of this appeal is that the provision of sub-r. (2) of r. 69 of O. XXI, of the C. P. C., was not complied with and that in that contention was sound the omission to issue a fresh proclamation amounted to an illegality and it was not necessary to prove any substantial injury as required by r. 90 of O. XXI of the C. P. C. The argument is that proclamation issued for the second time should have been prepared after notice to the judgment-debtors as required by r. 66, sub-r. (2), of O. XXI of the C. P. C. It is common ground that no such notice was issued to the judgment-debtors after the adjournment of the sale and previous to the public auction of the fresh proclamation.

We are of opinion that the provision of sub-r. (2) of r. 66 is inapplicable to this case. Sub-rule (2) of r. 69 requires a fresh proclamation to be made under r. 67. Sub-rule (1) of r. 67 requires that such a proclamation shall be made and published as nearly as may be, in the manner prescribed by r. 54, sub-r. (2). That rule has been complied with in this case and does not require any issue of notice. The issue of notice enjoined by sub-r. (2) of r. 66, relates to a case where a proclamation is to be drawn up. In this case proclamation was drawn up originally after notice to the judgment-debtors.

The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.APPEAL FROM APPELLATE DECREE No. 688
OF 1922.

April 20, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Das and
Mr. Justice Adami.PRASANA KUMAR BANERJI AND OTHERS
—APPELLANTS

versus

KALEYAN CHARAN MANDAL AND ANOTHER—RESPONDENTS.Construction of document—Sale or lease—"Moghli," meaning of.

The term "moghli" is a word of doubtful meaning and at the best imports no more than that the rent assessed represents a proportion of the Government revenue assessed on the lands. In no sense of the term does it constitute rent.

Certain lands were conveyed by a document which was described as a khas kobala, the consideration money being arrived at by a calculation of annual profits of the land conveyed, deducting therefrom a small sum payable by the transferor as the "moghli". The kobala recited:—"From this day forth you become fully entitled to the said lands and are empowered to sell and make a gift of the same and paying yearly Re. 1-1-0 moghli to me and to my heirs and legal representatives from 1286 B. S. you become entitled from this day from generation to generation cultivating the same yourself or by settlement of tenants and to that I or my heirs and representatives shall never make any objection."

Held, that the transaction was one of sale and not one of lease.

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Purulia, dated the 7th April 1922, confirming that of the Munsif, First Court, Purulia, dated the 18th August 1921.

Mr. A. K. Roy, for the Appellants.

Messrs. A. B. Mukerji and B. B. Mukherji, for the Respondents.JUDGMENT.

Das, J.—The only question in this appeal is whether the transaction of the 3rd Aghran 1285 B. S. was one of sale or one of lease. The document is described as a khas kobala; and there is very little doubt to my mind that the parties regarded the transaction as one of sale. The consideration money was arrived at on a calculation of the annual profits of the lands conveyed. It was ascertained that the annual profit was Rs. 7-13-0; and deducting therefrom Rs. 1-1-0 payable by the transferor as the moghli the net profit was found to be Rs. 6-12-0. The transferor conveyed the land to the transferee for a consideration which was settled at 18 times the net annual profits of the lands. The critical passage in the document runs as follows:—

"I have myself got the following lands as bounded below, namely," and the boundaries are given, "In all three items of lands about 17 bighas in area the annual profits of these lands amount to Rs. 7-13-0 only out of which deducting Re. 1-1-0 moghli, annual rent is Rs. 6-12-0 only and receiving the sum of Rs. 121-8-0 only as 18 times of the annual profit I sell the said lands to you. From this day forth you become fully entitled to the said lands and are empowered to sell and make a gift of the same and paying yearly Re. 1-1-0 only moghli to me and to my heirs and legal representatives from 1286 B. S. you become entitled from this day from generation to generation by cultivating the same yourself or by settlement of tenants and to that I or my heirs and representatives shall never make any objection."

It is contended on behalf of the appellants that the respondents were the holders of a subordinate interest since Re. 1-1-0 was payable by them as moghli to the appellants; but it is to be pointed out that this moghli of Re. 1-1-0 was payable by the appellants who were the transferors to their superior landlord and did not constitute a profit in their hands when paid by the respondents to them. The term "moghli" is a word of doubtful meaning and at the best imports no more than that the rent assessed represented a proportion of the Government revenue [Nawagarh Coal Co. Ltd. v. Behari Lal Trigunait (I).] There is very little doubt that the sum of Re. 1-1-0 represented the proportion of the Government revenue assessed on the lands conveyed. In no sense of the term does it constitute rent. That being so, there is nothing to show that the respondents were the holders of a subordinate interest in relation to the appellants. In my opinion they are the holders of co-ordinate interest.

In my opinion the question was correctly decided by the learned Judge in the Court below and I must dismiss this appeal with costs.

Adami, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

(1) 37 Ind. Cas. 450; 20 C. W. N. 1135 at p. 1144; 1 P. L. J. 275; 2 P. L. W. 324.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 44 OF 1925.

July 14, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and
Mr. Justice Daniels.Babu BISHESHAR PRASAD PANDEY—PLAINTIFF—APPLICANT

versus

RAGHUBIR AND ANOTHER—DEFENDANTS—
OPPOSITE PARTY.Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115, O. VII, r. 10, O. XLIII, r. 1(a)—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), ss. 196, 197—Order directing return of plaint for presentation to proper Court—Appeal, dismissal of—Revision, whether lies—Jurisdiction of Civil and Revenue Courts—Procedure.

Where on an appeal against an order directing the return of a plaint for presentation to the proper Court, the Appellate Court upholds the decision of the Trial Court, it cannot be said to have exercised its jurisdiction illegally or with material irregularity and its order is not open to revision. The order of the Trial Court, however, in such a case, if erroneous, may be revised by the High Court in spite of the fact that an appeal against that order has been dismissed by the Appellate Court, and if the order of the Trial Court is set aside by the High Court, the order of the Appellate Court necessarily falls to the ground with it. [p. 355, col. 2.]

Sections 196 and 197 of the Agra Tenancy Act must be read together. They both deal with a case in which an objection is taken in the Appellate Court that the suit was wrongly instituted in the Court below instead of in a Civil or Revenue Court as the case may be. Section 196 tells the Appellate Court what to do if the objection was not raised in the Trial Court. Section 197 tells it what to do if the objection had been raised. Both sections assume that the Trial Court has entertained the suit and disposed of it on the merits. [p. 355, col. 1.]

Neither section deals with a case where either or both Courts has or have wrongly refused to exercise jurisdiction. [ibid.]

Civil revision from an order of the District Judge, Ghazipur, dated the 1st of December 1924.

Mr. A. P. Pandey, for the Applicant.

Mr. Haribans Sahai, for the Opposite Party.

JUDGMENT.—This revision involves an important question as to the application of s. 115 of the C. P. C.

The applicant was plaintiff in the Trial Court. He had given a perpetual lease of 34 bighas 8 biswas 18 biswas of land to two of his servants on a rent of Rs. 17-1-0 a year. He subsequently gave a theka of his zemin-dari share to the second defendant Indrasan Singh giving him the right to realise the rent from the perpetual lessees. After the theka had been given the perpetual lessees relinquished their lease. According to the plaintiff, the first defendant Raghbir Singh, who is the father of Indrasan Singh, the second defendant, obtained unlawful possession of the 34 bighas odd of land. The plaintiff asserts that on the relinquishment by the perpetual lessees he himself became entitled to actual possession of the 34 bighas held by them. He, therefore, brought the present suit for the ejectment of Raghbir Singh as a trespasser, and for mesne profits and rent for three years. In the alternative, in case his first and second reliefs were refused, he asked for a declaration that he and not the second defendant, was entitled to realize rent from Raghbir Singh in respect of this area, and also claimed a sum of Rs. 999 against the second defendant. This was the same amount which in his earlier relief he had claimed against Raghbir Singh. Apparently it consists partly of rent realized by the second defendant from Raghbir Singh and partly of damages. It must be mentioned here that the plaintiff had previously sued Raghbir Singh in the Revenue Court treating him as tenant. Raghbir Singh pleaded that he was the sub-tenant of his son Indarsan Singh and had paid the rent to the latter in good faith. The Revenue Court decided the suit on the issue of payment in good faith under s. 198, and, holding that the rent had been paid in good faith as alleged, dismissed the plaintiff's suit, and directed him to establish his rights in the Civil Court. The plaintiff's position in the present suit is that, in the first place, Raghbir Singh is a trespasser, pure and simple, but that even if this is not the case, and he is to any extent the sub-tenant of the second defendant, the latter is only entitled to realize from him the same rent which he could have realised from the perpetual lessees, namely, Rs. 17-1-0, and that the balance of the rent is payable to the plaintiff. The entire rent of the holding of 34 bighas is admittedly Rs. 88.

The suit was filed in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. The defendants resisted the claim on the merits, and also pleaded that it was not cognizable by the Civil Court. The Subordinate Judge adopted a curious course. He framed and decided issues on the merits. Having decided these, he proceeded to direct the plaint to be returned on the ground that he had no jurisdiction. This order has been upheld by the learned District Judge on appeal. The Subordinate Judge held that the defendant was, in fact, a tenant and not a trespasser, having been let into possession of the land by the plaintiff.

iff's father. This was a decision on the merits. The Subordinate Judge did not hold that on the facts alleged in the plaint he had no jurisdiction. He held that the case set out in the plaint was untrue in fact. On this finding he ought to have dismissed the suit on the merits instead of returning the plaint under O. VII, r. 10 of the C. P. C. The Subordinate Judge committed another error. In their written pleadings the defendant took the position that Raghbir Singh was the sub-tenant of his son, the second defendant. In the course of a subsequent oral pleading under O. X, r. 1, the second defendant set up the case that Raghbir Singh was the tenant of the plaintiff himself, having been admitted to the occupation of the holding by the plaintiff's father. Raghbir Singh himself was not examined. If this was the position taken up by Raghbir Singh, as it appears to have been, s. 202 of the Tenancy Act was applicable, and the Subordinate Judge ought to have directed Raghbir Singh to file a suit in the Revenue Court to establish the alleged tenancy. It may be that some of the reliefs claimed in the suit are such as could only have been decreed by a decree of a Revenue Court, but it is quite clear that the main relief asked for, namely, the ejectment of Raghbir Singh as a trespasser, was cognizable by the Civil Court. In view of the decision under s. 198 of the Tenancy Act the plaintiff was also entitled to ask the Civil Court for a declaration that he, and not the second defendant, was entitled to realize rent from Raghbir Singh. On the merits, therefore, it is clear that the Courts below were in error in directing the plaint to be returned, and that the Subordinate Judge in refusing to try the suit failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law.

The respondents raise a preliminary objection that no revision lies. They claim that, however wrong the order of the Subordinate Judge may have been, his decision has been superseded by the appellate decree of the District Judge. The District Judge had jurisdiction to decide the appeal, and did decide it, and whether his decision is right or wrong on the merits, he cannot be said to have failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law or to have acted irregularly in the exercise of his jurisdiction.

The plaintiff contests this position on three grounds. He argues

(1) that the District Judge in upholding the erroneous order of the Subordinate Judge failed to exercise jurisdiction he should have exercised, because he did not direct the Subordinate Judge to try the suit on the merits;

(2) that s. 197 of the Tenancy Act applies and that the District Judge should have remanded the case under that section to any Court competent to entertain it; in this view the District Judge failed to exercise a jurisdiction he should have exercised;

(3) that notwithstanding the appeal this Court has power to revise the Subordinate Judge's order.

The first contention though it derives some support from the judgment of Mukerji, J., in Ganeshi Lal Harnarain v. Debi Das (1) is, in our opinion, untenable. We fail to see how it can possibly be said that the District Judge failed to exercise the jurisdiction vested in him. His jurisdiction was confined to deciding the appeal under O. XLIII, r. 1 (a), C. P. C. He had only two courses open to him. If he had held that the suit was really cognizable by the Civil Court, he would have set aside the Subordinate Judge's order and directed the latter to try the suit on the merits. Holding as he did that the Subordinate Judge's view was right, he was bound to dismiss the appeal. In either case he exercised the jurisdiction vested in him by law, and there is no case for revision. We think that the remarks of the Privy Council in Balakrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Aiyar (2) were misunderstood in Behari Lal v. Baldeo Narain (3) one of the judgments which have been cited to us. Their Lordships said that s. 115 was not directed to conclusions of law or fact in which the question of jurisdiction was not involved. In this passage they were speaking of a question of jurisdiction with reference to the provisions of the section they were discussing. In an earlier portion of the same judgment they had said: "It will be observed that the section applies to jurisdiction alone. The irregular exercise or non-exercise of it, or the illegal assumption of it."

They refer in fact to the case in which a Court, owing to erroneous view of the

(1) 85 Ind. Cas. 470; 47 A. 140 at pp. 145, 146; (1925) A. I. R. (A.) 267.

(2) 40 Ind. Cas. 650; 40 M. 793; 15 A. L. J. 645; 2 P. L. W. 101. 33 M. L. J. 69; 26 C. L. J. 143; 19 Bom. L. R. 715; (1917) M. W. N. 628; 6 L. W. 501; 22 C. W. N. 50; 11 Bur. L. T. 48; 44 I. A. 261 (P. C.).

(3) 48 Ind. Cas. 14; 16 A. L. J. 717; 40 A. 674.

law, takes cognizance of a case outside its jurisdiction, or refuses to try a suit or appeal which is within its jurisdiction. They do not apply where a Court in the exercise of the jurisdiction vested in it upholds or reverses a decision of an inferior Court on an issue whether the inferior Court had jurisdiction.

We have reluctantly come to the conclusion that the applicant's second contention is also untenable. We say "reluctantly" because if we could hold that s. 197 applied, it would go a long way to prevent these difficult questions of jurisdiction arising. Sections 196 and 197 must be read together. They both deal with a case in which an objection is taken in the Appellate Court that the suit was wrongly instituted in the Court below instead of a Civil or Revenue Court as the case may be. Section 196 tells the Appellate Court what to do if the objection was not raised in the Trial Court. Section 197 tells it what to do if the objection had been raised. Both sections assume that the Trial Court has entertained the suit and disposed of it on the merits. It is only in such a case that the Court could remand the suit or frame issues or direct additional evidence to be taken as contemplated by sub-s. (2). Where the appeal is against an order returning the plaint the Appellate Court, if it agrees with the Trial Court merely affirms its order, and if it differs from the Trial Court directs such Court to restore the case to the file and dispose of it on the merits. Moreover, in the case of an appeal against an order returning the plaint, the appellant's objection is not that the case was instituted in the wrong Court, but that it was instituted in the right Court. The Tenancy Act makes elaborate provisions for the case where the suit is wrongly entertained by a Civil or Revenue Court on the merits, but fails to provide for the case where either or both Courts wrongly refused to exercise jurisdiction. We commend this point for the notice of the Legislature in connection with the revision of the Tenancy Act which we understand to be in contemplation.

If the applicant's third contention were res integra we might have felt considerable difficulty regarding it. Section 115 confers revisional jurisdiction on the High Court in cases in which no appeal lies to that Court. Its jurisdiction is not excluded by the fact that an appeal might lie to a Subordinate Court. The difficulty arises from the principle, which has been affirmed in a large number of decisions, that where an appeal has been preferred and decided, the order or decree of the Trial Court is merged in that of the Appellate Court and no longer subsists. This principle was affirmed with reference to amendment of the Trial Court's decree, in the Full Bench decision of Muhammad Sulaiman Khan v. Muhammad Yar Khan (4); with reference to the passing of a final decree in Gajadhar Singh v. Kishan Jiwan Lal (5) and with reference to limitation in Rup Narain v. Shro Prakash (6) and there are many other decisions to the same effect. It is certainly anomalous that it should be open to us to review the order of the Subordinate Judge when that order has been superseded by an appellate order which is not open to revision. The matter is, however, concluded by the Full Bench decision in Badami Kuar v. Dinu Rai (7). That was a decision of a Bench of five Judges with reference to s. 622 of the C. P. C. of 1882, which is substantially identical with s. 115 of the present Code. It is pointed out by the respondents that nothing is said in any of the five judgments as to the effect of the Trial Court's order having been superseded by that of the Appellate Court. This is true, but it cannot be said that the point was overlooked. The referring order, which is printed on page 113* of the report, expressly mentions that the Munsif's order has been upheld by the Judge in appeal, and Straight, J., in the illustration which he gives on page 115* refers to the fact that an appeal would lie to the Judge though there would be no second appeal to the High Court. The Full Bench decision was followed in recent years in Chandu Lal v. Kokamal (8) and again in Ganeshi Lal Harnarain v. Debi Das (1). The order of the Munsif having been set aside the appellate order of the District Judge must necessarily fall to the ground with it.

We are glad to be able to hold in this case that a revision does lie because the effect of the contrary view might be to

(4) 11 A. 267; A. W. N. (1889) 55; 13 Ind. Jur. 427; 6 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 598.

(5) 42 Ind. Cas. 93; 39 A. 641; 15 A. L. J. 734.

(6) 61 Ind. Cas. 129; 43 A. 405; 19 A. L. J. 159.

(7) 8 A. 111; A. W. N. (1886) 28; 4 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 1142.

(8) 61 Ind. Cas. 36; 19 A. L. J. 110; 43 A. 334.

*Pages of 8 A.—[Ed.]

leave the plaintiff without a remedy. If he filed his suit in the Revenue Court, that Court might well hold that it had no jurisdiction to entertain it. This Court would have no power to revise that order. A revision would lie to the Board of Revenue, and if the Board of Revenue upheld the view of the Trial Court, the result would be to leave the plaintiff without any means of redress.

For the reasons already given we allow the application with costs including in this Court fees on the higher scale and direct the Subordinate Judge to restore the case to his file and dispose of it on the merits.

Z. K.

Application allowed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 1274 OF 1922.

June 25, 1925.

Present :—Sir Dawson Miller, Kt., Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice Macpherson.

Shaikh ABDUL GHANI AND OTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—APPELLANTS

versus

HARNAM SINGH AND OTHERS—PLAINTIFFS
—RESPONDENTS.

Easement—Grant—Presumption—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), s. 26.

Section 26 of the Limitation Act is remedial and is neither prohibitory nor exhaustive. Its object is to make more easy the establishment of rights of easement and not to exclude or interfere with other titles and modes of acquiring easements, such as by grant either proved or implied. [p. 357, col. 2.]

When the enjoyment of easement can be traced to a distant past and has continued ever since or at least down to the time of the obstruction complained of, the Court should refer such a long enjoyment to a legal origin, and presume a grant or an agreement. [p. 358, col. 1.]

Rajrup Koer v. Abul Hossein, 6 C. 394; 7 C. L. R. 529; 7 I. A. 240; 4 Shome L. R. 7; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 199; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 816; 4 Ind. Jur. 530; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 257 (P. C.), referred to.

Appeal from a decision of the Subordinate Judge, Shahabad, dated the 25th August 1922, reversing that of the Munsif, Sassaram, dated the 29th August 1921.

Messrs. L. N. Singh and R. Prasad, for the Appellants.

Mr. P. Dayal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Miller, C. J.—This appeal arises out of a suit instituted on behalf of the plaintiff to enforce a right to irrigate certain lands lying within their estate with water from a tal situated within the adjoining lands of the defendants. It is the plaintiffs' case that they have enjoyed this right for a great number of years and that within recent years the defendants have obstructed their right and they claim a declaration and damages for the loss sustained by them by reason of the obstruction.

In order to understand the effect of the decision of the learned Subordinate Judge now under appeal which found that the plaintiffs had acquired a right by a presumed grant some time in the past apart altogether from the mode of acquisition referred to in s. 26 of the Limitation Act, it is necessary to refer shortly to some of the salient facts proved in the case. The estates of the plaintiffs and the defendants adjoin each other and they both form part of Mouza Malaon. That village was held in joint ownership until the year 1870 and the tal in question had undoubtedly existed long before that time and there can be no doubt upon the facts found that this tal which is one of considerable size had been used for the purpose for irrigating not only the lands in its immediate vicinity but certainly the whole or some portion of the lands which are now in the exclusive possession of the plaintiffs. In fact there is a karha leading from the lands of the defendants into the lands of the plaintiffs which is found to have existed for a great number of years and which obviously could only have served the purpose of carrying water from the tal in question into the lands now held by the plaintiffs. At the partition in 1870 the plaintiffs obtained a takhta bearing Tauzi No. 5589 whereas the lands of the defendants lie in an adjoining takhta bearing Tauzi No. 5591. It is within the lands of the defendants' takhta that the tal is situate.

There was evidence to show that from the year 1870 right up to the year 1905 when the defendants first acquired by purchase an interest in Tauzi No. 5591 this right of taking water from the tal in the defendants' lands through channels, for the purpose of irrigating the plaintiff's land, had been exercised. A comparatively old man called Gobardhan Bind who had resided for the last 40 years at the place in question said that during that time he had seen the plaintiff iffs' takhta being irrigated with water from this tal and that evidence is accepted by the learned Subordinate Judge. It follows, therefore, that up to the time when the defendants first acquired an interest in the property which they now hold, a right to irrigate their lands from the tal in question had been exercised by the plaintiffs. In 1905 some friction appears to have occurred. The defendants, the new purchasers, seem to have made some attempt to stop the plaintiffs' right of irrigation; and in 1906 an agreement was entered into between the parties whereby the plaintiffs' right to irrigate their lands was to continue; and a new water channel was to be cut from the south west of the tal leading into the old water channel which had been in existence for some years. This was to be carried out at the expense of both parties and a small rental of Rs. 12 a year was to be paid to the defendants for the use of the water.

What subsequently happened is perhaps not very clear but it appears that the new water-course was not in fact constructed at the expense of the parties but it also appears that there was a provision in the agreement that until this was done the plaintiffs should be entitled to irrigate their lands from the tal by any such means as might be arranged between the parties. So that the right at all events appears to have been recognised at that date but it is unnecessary in this case to complicate the matter by reference to that agreement, or the terms thereof, because it is the case of both parties that it was not acted upon and neither party in this case relies upon it. They both had in fact at some earlier period repudiated it.

Although some attempt was made, as I have stated, in 1906 to interfere with the plaintiffs' right, according to the findings, by which we are bound, the plaintiffs did manage to get water from this tal without any further serious interruption up to the year 1912. The finding of the learned Subordinate Judge upon that matter is to this effect:—"The next point that incidentally arises is if the right of the plaintiffs have become barred by limitation, they not having exercised it since 1912 as appears from the fact that plaintiffs' lessees had to bring a suit in 1912. It would be improbable that after the withdrawal of that suit the defendants allowed the plaintiffs' water from the tal for irrigation of their fields. I do not think that there is sufficient evidence on the record of this suit to show the obstruction of the right before 1912". There is, therefore, a clear finding that there was obstruction of the right in 1912 and that there was no real obstruction of the right before that date.

Upon these facts it was contended by the defendants that the claim for an easement, which is the claim in this case, must fail by reason of the provisions of s. 26 of the Indian Limitation Act. That section provides for the acquisition by peaceable enjoyment without interruption for a period of 20 years of a right of easement either in a water-course or in any other matter, but if one is claiming a right given under that section then you have to prove that the right has been exercised for 20 years and that there has been no interruption of the right at any period further back than two years before the commencement of the suit. In other words you have got to prove uninterrupted enjoyment ending not later than two years before the commencement of the suit and extending not less than 20 years back from that time. It was contended, therefore, that the interruption having taken place in 1912 the present suit must fail. In answer to that the plaintiffs rely upon the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in the case of Rajrup Koer v. Abdul Hossein (1). It was pointed out by Sir Montagu Smith in that case in delivering the judgment of their Lordships that the acquisition of the right of easement referred to in s. 26 of the Act is not the only method of acquiring a right of easement, and that the section is not exhaustive and if you have acquired a right of easement by any other method such as by a grant either proved or implied then s. 26 can have no operation to a suit brought to enforce such a grant. It is pointed out in the judgment there delivered that "the object of the Statute was to make more easy the establishment of rights of this description (that is rights of easement) by allowing an enjoyment of 20 years, if exercised under the conditions prescribed by the Act., to give, without more, a title to easements. But the Statute is remedial, and is neither prohibitory nor exhaustive. A man may acquire a title under it who has no other right at all, but it does not exclude or interfere with other titles and modes of acquiring easements." It then goes on and deals with the facts in the case and points out that there was abundant evidence upon the facts found by the Courts, for presuming the existence of a grant at some distant period of time and having come to the conclusion that, on the facts of that case, a grant at some time or other, between 20 and 60 years earlier, may be presumed, it was decided that s. 26 of the Limitation Act had no application to the case. In dealing with the evidence from which such a grant may be presumed the judgment proceeds as follows:—"This being an artificial pawn constructed on the land of another man at the distant period found by the Courts, and enjoyed ever since, or at least down to the time of obstruction complained of, by the plaintiff and his ancestors, any Court which had to deal with the subject might, and indeed ought to, refer such a long enjoyment to a legal origin, and under the circumstances which have been indicated, to presume a grant or an agreement between those who were owners of the plaintiff's mehal and the defendant's land by which the right was created. That being so, the plaintiff does not require the aid of the Statute; and his right, therefore, is not in any degree interfered with by the provision in the 27th section, upon which the Munsif decided." I ought to point out that the Act which Sir Montagu Smith in that judgment was referring to was the Limitation Act of 1871, s. 27, but that section is for all material purposes similar to s. 26 of the present Act. In the present case upon the evidence which I have referred to the features are not unlike the features in the case to which I have just referred. The learned Subordinate Judge found, accepting the evidence of long user from 1870 down to 1912 with a slight interruption in 1905 that the plaintiffs' predecessors and afterwards the plaintiffs' use of the water may be attributed to some implied grant made long ago but sometime after the partition in 1870. In my opinion if there was evidence to support a grant made after the year 1870 the learned Judge acting upon the principle referred to in the case of Rajrup Koer v. Abdul Hossein (1) was perfectly justified in finding in favour of the plaintiffs and the only question which remains is was there in this case any evidence which would justify the learned Judge in arriving at his conclusion. There undoubtedly was evidence from which it might be found that there had been an uninterrupted user for a great number of years; certainly more than 20 years, before the defendants had any interest in the property at all, and although it is unnecessary for us to say at what conclusion we should have arrived upon the evidence before the Court, and indeed we have not the evidence before us in second appeal, still it appears from what has been said by the learned Judge in his judgment that there was some evidence to support his finding. He is the ultimate judge of fact in such a case and I do not think that in the particular circumstances of this case we would be justified in saying that there was no evidence to support his finding. The result, in my opinion, is that the case is one concluded by the findings of fact and this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

(1) 6 C. 394; 7 C. L. R. 529; 7 I. A. 240; 4 Shome L. R. 7; 4 Sar. P. C. J. 189; 3 Suth. P. C. J. 816; 4 Ind. Jur. 530; 3 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 257 (P. C.).

Macpherson, J.—I agree.

S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

ALLAHABAD HIGH COURT.

FIRST APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 172
OF 1924.

July 6, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Sulaiman and
Mr. Justice Daniels.

Musammatt KISHAN DEI—DEFENDANT
—APPELLANT

versus

SHEO PALTAN—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.

Hindu Law—Custom—Succession—Stridhan property of woman married in karao form—Customary marriage, validity of—Approved form—Presumption—Burden of proof.

The rule of succession to stridhan property left by a woman married in the karao form ought, in the first instance, to be determined with reference to the particular custom of the caste. Where the incidents of such custom can be traced they must be given the force of law. [p. 360, cols. 1 & 2.]

The Hindu Law recognizes custom as a matter of paramount importance, and custom if it is established can override the written law. There may, therefore, be customary forms of marriage which are perfectly valid and which do not strictly come within the definition of any of the eight forms of marriage mentioned in the Mitakshara. [p. 360, col. 2; p. 361, col. 1.]

When a customary form of marriage is allowed it may be in any one of the eight forms mentioned in the Mitakshara, or an approach to any one of them. It is not correct to say that unless it is shown that a customary marriage was in the asura form, it must always be conclusively presumed that it was in the brahma form. When the particulars of a customary form of marriage are known then the question of the presumption that it was in the brahma form becomes of very little importance. That presumption substantially arises only when all that is known is that a marriage did take place. In such cases the presumption is that the marriage was in the brahma form no matter what the caste of the parties be. But when the incidents and the circumstances attending the customary form of marriage are known the presumption can no longer be applied and the Court must find of what form it is. When facts are proved the question of what form the marriage is becomes a question of law. [p. 361, col. 1.]

Where re-marriage of widows is allowed by the custom of a caste such a marriage may not have any disapprobation attaching to it, on the other hand even among castes which allow the validity of widow re-marriages such marriages may be regarded as not a praiseworthy and superior form but a blameworthy and inferior form of marriage. The rule of succession to the stridhan property of a widow who had re-married ought, therefore, to vary according as the marriage is or is not blameworthy. For instance if a virgin widow has not passed out of her parent's family and is still under its control and her parents or other legal guardians in pursuance of the caste custom which allows such marriages give her away in marriage a second time as if she were a maiden the marriage though a widow marriage would undoubtedly be in the brahma form if there is no social censure attaching to it. On the other hand if a widow, who is not a virgin, herself enters into a matrimonial alliance in a form considered blameworthy by the caste, though recognised by custom as valid, and there is no gift of her by her legal guardians it may be difficult to see any analogy between such a marriage and the brahma form of marriage even though there be no consideration paid to her guardians. It may rather be an approach to the gantharba form where the marriage takes place with the mutual desire of the parties. In this latter case, it would be of an inferior form, particularly when such a marriage is looked down upon by the caste people; but if such a marriage is not considered the least blameworthy, it would be deemed to be of the brahma form. [p. 361, col. 2.]

When a particular form of marriage is recognised by custom it is to be presumed that the caste approves of it and no social censure attaches to it, unless the contrary is established. The burden lies on the person who asserts the contrary. [p. 362, col. 2.]

Per Daniels, J.—Under the Hindu Law a marriage is presumed to be in an approved form unless it is shown to be in a disapproved form. If a marriage is valid at all, the natural presumption is that it is valid in all respects and carries the full privileges and obligations of an approved marriage, and the burden of proving that its results fall short of this is on the person who asserts it. This rule applies equally to marriages which derive their validity from custom. [p. 363, col. 2; 364, col. 1.]

Case-law referred to.

First appeal from an order of the District Judge, Saharanpur, dated the 18th June 1924.

Dr. K. N. Katju and Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. L. Banerji, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Sulaiman, J.—This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for recovery of possession. The plaintiff had a brother Paltu, who died some six years ago. He married a woman named Musammam Mano and executed a deed, dated the 29th of January 1904, under which he stated that he had installed her in his house (apne ghar men baitha lia hai) and made a Will that after his death she would inherit the whole estate and that his brothers would have no right. There was a further provision that if he were not to keep her he would pay her Rs. 10 a month regularly. In his lifetime, however, he executed a deed of gift, dated the 29th of April 1917, under which he transferred the property in dispute to Musammam Mano. The validity of this deed is accepted by the plaintiff and he admits that the property thereafter became the stridhan property of Musammam Mano. Paltu died in 1919, and it was a part of the plaintiff's case that after his death there was an agreement between him and Musammam Mano as well as some other relations that she would remain in possession of the property for her life and after her death the plaintiff and his brother would get it. Apart from this agreement the plaintiff claimed to be the heir of Musammam Mano, who died on the 16th of April 1921 leaving no issue. The defendant is the mother of Anand Prakash, who was the son of Nathu Singh, a brother of Musammam Mano. The defendant denied that the plaintiff was Musammam Mano's heir, and pleaded that she having been married in karao form her heirs were her relations in the paternal line. It was further pleaded that before her death she had executed a Will dated the 14th of April 1921 under which she had bequeathed the property in favour of Anand Prakash.

The Court of first instance found that the alleged agreement was not established. It found that the marriage of Musammam Mano had been a widow re marriage in the karao form. It came to the conclusion that her marriage could not be said to have been in the brahma form and that, therefore, the plaintiff was not her heir. It, therefore, dismissed the suit considering it unnecessary to go into the question of the alleged Will. On appeal the learned District Judge has affirmed the finding that the agreement has not been established and has also affirmed the finding that Musam- mat Mano's marriage had been in the karao form. He, however, came to the conclusion that it must be presumed that her marriage was in the brahma form and that, therefore, the plaintiff was the legal heir. He has accordingly remanded the case in order that the other issues may be disposed of.

The argument of Dr. Katju on behalf of the appellant may be summarised as follows:—It is an essential feature of the brahma form of marriage that there should be a gift by the father or other legal guardian of the girl and that as on the first marriage she passes into a new gotra her paternal relations have no longer any right left to give her away a second time. His contention, therefore, is that a widow re-marriage can never be a brahma form of marriage. He argues that unless the plaintiff establishes that the marriage was in one of the four approved forms he cannot succeed. He contends that a karao form of marriage does not come within the definition of any of the first four forms and that in fact at the time when the Mitakshara was written re-marriages were absolute and, therefore, not in contemplation.

On the other hand the argument of Mr. Peary Lal Banerji on behalf of the respondent is that no ceremonies are absolutely essential for the validity of a marriage and that if a re-marriage is allowed by custom the wife has the same rights and status as a maiden who has been married. In order to show that in every case, no matter to which caste the parties belong, there is a strong presumption that the marriage was in the brahma form, he relies on the cases of Jagannath Prasad Gupta v. Runjit Singh (1), Authikesavulu Chetty v. Ramanujam Chetty (2) and Gabrielnathaswami v. Valliammal Ammal (3). He has gone further and urged that now a days only two forms exist, namely, brahma and asura and that if it is not shown that the marriage was in the asura form, the irresistible conclusion is that it was in the brahma form. He has pointed out that the findings of the Courts below being that no price was paid, the marriage could not have been in the asura form.

The rule of succession to stridhan property left by a woman married in karao form ought in the first instance to be determined with reference to the particular custom of the caste. Where the incidents of this custom can be traced they will have to be given the force of law. The difficulty arises in a case where no particular custom as to inheritance to stridhan is established.

The rule of succession to stridhan is stated by Vijnaneswara in the Mitakshara as follows:—

"Of a woman dying without issue, as before stated, and who had become a wife by any of the four modes of marriage denominated brahma, daiva, arsha, and Prajapatya, the property, as before described, belonged in the first place to her husband. On failure of him it goes to his nearest sapindas. But, in the other forms of marriage called asura, gandharba, rakshasa and paisacha, the property of a childless woman goes to her parents that is to her father and mother. The succession devolves first (and the reason has been before explained) on the mother, who is virtually exhibited (first) in the elliptical phrase pitrigami, implying 'goes' (gachchhati) to both parents (pitarau), that is, to the mother and to the father. On failure of them, their next of kin take the succession."

This passage is a commentary on the text of Yajnavalkya which is as follows:—
"The property of a childless woman married in one of the four forms denominated brahma, etc., goes to her husband; but if she leave progeny, it will go to her (daughter's) daughters; and in other forms of marriage (as the asura, etc.) it goes to her father (and mother on failure of her own issue)."

Now if it were possible to say that the karao form of marriage is identical with any of the eight forms mentioned above there would be no difficulty in deciding which rule of succession should prevail. The difficulty arises when the customary form of marriage is not identical with any of those forms.

Now if we examine the definitions of the various forms of marriage we will find that the classification into eight forms was not logically exhaustive. It is possible to conceive of a form of marriage which is a mixture and is not strictly identical with any of these eight forms. The Hindu Law recognises custom as a matter of paramount importance, and custom if it is established

(1) 25 C. 354; 13 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 237.

(2) 3 Ind. Cas. 541; 32 M. 512; 19 M. L. J. 656; 6 M. L. T. 183.

(3) 53 Ind. Cas. 423; 10 L. W. 491; 26 M. L. T. 318; (1920) M. W. N. 158.

can override the written law. It is, therefore, manifest that we may have customary forms of marriage which are perfectly valid and which do not strictly come within the definitions of any of these eight forms. In a vast country like India with so many castes living in so many different places multifarious forms of marriage allowed by custom can and have come into existence. It would, therefore, be inappropriate to put them in any of these eight categories.

Similarly there may be statutory forms, e.g., marriage under the Widows Re-marriage Act which also may be difficult to class under any of the above forms.

I am, therefore, not prepared to accept the contention of the learned Advocate for the appellant that a widow re-marriage can never be deemed to be in the brahma form. Nor am I prepared to accept the argument of the learned Advocate for the respondent that only two forms, brahma and asura, are now in existence and the rest are obsolete. When customary forms of marriage are allowed, they may be (provided such is the custom) in any one of the eight forms, or an approach to any one of them. I do not think it is correct to say that unless it be shown that the customary marriage was in the asura form, it must always be conclusively presumed that it was in the brahma form. In my opinion when the particulars of a customary form of marriage are known then the question of the presumption that it was in the brahma form becomes of very little importance. That presumption substantially arises only when all that is known is that a marriage did take place. In such cases the presumption is that the marriage was in the brahma form no matter what the caste of the parties be. But when the incidents and the circumstances attending the customary form of marriage are known the presumption can no longer be applied and the Court must find of what form it is. When facts are proved the question of what form the marriage is becomes a question of law.

It is true that the basic principle underlying the first four forms of marriage as well as the fifth form is the gift of the girl by her father or other lawful guardian. The asura form is distinguished from the first four forms because of the pecuniary consideration. On the other hand the last three forms of marriage do not contemplate any formal gift by the guardian though in the case of gandharba marriage the choice by the girl may be followed by the ordinary ceremonies.

When re-marriage is allowed by the custom of a caste such a marriage may not have any disapprobation attaching to it. On the other hand even among castes which allow the validity of re-marriages such marriages may be regarded as not a praiseworthy and superior form but a blameworthy and inferior form of marriage. In my opinion the rule of succession ought to vary according as the marriage is not or is blameworthy. For instance if a virgin widow has not passed out of her parent's family and is still under its control and her parents or other legal guardians in pursuance of the caste custom which allows such marriage give her away in marriage a second time as if she were a maiden the marriage though a widow marriage would undoubtedly be in the brahma form if there is no social censure attaching to it. On the other hand if a widow, who is not a virgin, herself enters into a matrimonial alliance in a form considered blameworthy by the caste, though recognised by custom as valid, and there is no gift of her legal guardians it may be difficult to see any analogy between such a marriage and the brahma form of marriage even though there be no consideration paid to her guardians. It may rather be an approach to the gandharba form where the marriage takes place with the mutual desire of the parties. In this latter case, it would be of an inferior form, particularly when such a marriage is looked down upon by the caste people; but if such a marriage is not considered the least blameworthy, it would be deemed to be of the brahma form.

The learned Advocate for the respondent has referred us to the case of Bhaoni v. Maharaja Singh (4), where it was remarked that the gandharba form which was nothing more or less than concubinage, had become obsolete as a form of marriage giving the status of wife and making the offspring legitimate. What the learned Judges meant was that in the absence of any custom to that effect such a marriage was not valid in law. They could not have meant to lay down that gandharba marriages were wholly non-existent, and cannot be recognised even if they are allowed by custom.

(4) 3 A. 738; A. W. N. (1881) 48; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 413.

That the quality of marriage is also a consideration is apparent from a curious case which came up before the Bombay High Court namely that of Moosa Haji Joonas v. Haji Abdul Rahim (5). In that case the parties to the marriage were Cutchi Memons who performed their marriages in accordance with the Muhammadan Law but who under a special custom are governed by the Hindu Law of inheritance and succession. The marriage obviously was not in any of the Hindu forms of marriage and yet the learned Judges of the Bombay High Court held that, inasmuch as the particular marriage was in the highest form of union known to Cutchi Memons and was free from all that was reprehensible and that could call for censure, it corresponded with the four approved kinds of marriage under the Hindu system and was distinguishable from the four disapproved. They accordingly held that the rule of devolution was the one applied to marriages of the approved form.

Even in the case of Hira v. Hansji Pema, (6), where a re-marriage of a divorced Koli woman was held to be of the brahma form, the learned Judges remarked "Admittedly re-marriage between parties of the Koli caste is valid, and there is nothing before us to suggest that the people of that caste regard it with any social censure or disapproval. This seems to us to be a capital consideration when we are administering a system of jurisprudence where established custom plays such an important part as it does in Hindu Law."

Similarly, in the case reported as Authikesavulu Chetty v. Ramanujam Chetty (2), though it was held that "In the absence of any proof to the contrary the marriage must be presumed to be in one of the approved forms", the learned Judges remarked that the presumption of Hindu Law must be applied only with some caution to marriage among the (kararais) "caste...". The case, therefore, has to be decided upon the evidence given by the parties without the aid of any presumption in favour of either side."

The question unfortunately arises before us in the abstract form whether the widow re-marriage in the karao form is a brahma form of marriage or not. The plaintiff led evidence to prove that Musammam Mano was a virgin maiden and that she was married in the brahma form and the ceremony of going round the seven steps was also performed. On the other hand the defendant led evidence to show that she was a widow and that there was no phera ceremony and no worship at all and in fact some price was paid for the marriage. Though the Courts below have rejected the plaintiff's evidence that she was a virgin maiden and have accepted the defendant's evidence that she had been a widow, they have not thought it necessary to find in detail the actual ceremonies if any which took place, nor have they found whether a karao form of marriage is considered an inferior form of marriage and regarded with disapprobation or not. They have, however, found that no price was in fact paid.

It seems to me that one of the important questions which can enable us to determine whether the marriage is in an approved or disapproved form has been left unanswered. I have, therefore, thought it essential to examine for myself the evidence of both parties.

I find that out of the ten witnesses produced by the plaintiff, only four speak of Musammam Mano's marriage. They, however, go so far as to deny that it was in the karao form. In cross-examination they were not questioned as to whether karao marriages are regarded with disapprobation by the caste. Out of the fourteen witnesses examined by the defendant five speak of her marriage. They say that she was a widow and was married in the karao form without any phera ceremony. They do not go on to state a karao marriage, though recognised by custom as legal, is considered by the Ahir caste an inferior form of marriage and is not looked upon with approbation.

When a particular form of marriage is recognised by custom it is to be presumed that the caste approves of it and no social censure attaches to it, unless the contrary is established. The burden lies on the person who asserts the contrary. In the present case when there is no evidence of any kind that a karao marriage is regarded by the Ahir caste with disapprobation and generally censured, I must hold that the defendant has failed to discharge the burden that lay on her. It must, therefore, be assumed that the marriage was in one of the approved forms, and the plaintiff is the heir to her stridhan. I would on this ground uphold the order of the District Judge.

(5) 30 B. 197; 7 Bom. L. R. 447.

(6) 17 Ind. Cas. 949; 37 B. 295; 14 Bom. L. R. 1182.

Daniels, J.—The property in dispute in this case was the stridhan property of Musammāt Mano now dead. Musammāt Mano was a widow and was married by karao marriage to Paltu Ram. The parties are Ahirs and it is common ground that in this caste the marriage of widows in the karao form is recognized and constitutes a valid marriage. It is, therefore, unnecessary to go into the question what formalities are necessary or were observed in this form of marriage. Paltu Ram made a gift of the property in suit to Musammāt Mano in 1917. Paltu Ram died in 1919. Musammāt Mano died in 1921. The plaintiff Sheo Paltan is Paltu Ram's brother, and his claim so far as it is now in controversy rests on the ground that except where the marriage is in a disapproved form the stridhan is inherited in the absence of issue by the husband and his sapindas. The original defendant was Anand Prakash, a nephew (brother's son) of Musammāt Mano. He died during the suit and was succeeded by his mother Musammāt Kishan Dei. Her defence so far as it is now material is two-fold. She alleges that Musammāt Mano executed a Will in favour of her son, and she asserts the marriage was not in an approved form and that in consequence even on an intestacy the stridhan goes to the wife's relations and not to those of her husband. The question of the Will remains to be tried. The Subordinate Judge held that the plaintiff had failed to prove that the marriage was in the brahma form, the only approved form now surviving; he was, therefore, not a possible heir even in the absence of a Will and had no cause of action for the suit. The suit was accordingly dismissed. The learned District Judge holds that there is a presumption that every valid marriage is in an approved form and that the defendant had failed to rebut that presumption. It was not suggested before the District Judge that the marriage could be included in either of the four recognised disapproved forms, viz., asura, Gandharra, bakshasa and paisacha. The learned District Judge therefore held the marriage to be in an approved form and the plaintiff to be entitled to succeed in the absence of a Will. He, therefore, remanded the case for decision on the merits. Against that order the present appeal has been filed.

In this Court the defendant-appellant relies on the description of a brahma marriage given by Manu as being "the gift of a daughter, clad only in a single robe, to a man learned in the Veda, whom her father voluntarily invites and respectfully receives." He argues that a giving by the father is essential part of this definition, and that it is entirely inapplicable to the marriage of a widow where there is no giving by the father and she herself is a principal in the transaction. As the girl passed into another gotra by her marriage, only a virgin could be married in this form. The plaintiff-respondent relies on the line of reasoning adopted by the District Judge, and argues further that a brahma marriage cannot be limited by the narrow terms of Manu's definition, which has long become obsolete. The requirement that the husband shall be learned in the Veda shows how archaic the description is. As the other forms became obsolete the conception of a brahma marriage widened so as to include all valid marriages with the exception of the asura, the only disapproved form which still survives, and any valid marriage which is not in the asura form will necessarily be treated as a brahma marriage.

Now it is obvious that we are dealing here with a state of things not contemplated by Manu or Vijnaneshvara. In no respect has Hindu society changed and progressed more since the laws of Manu than in its conception of marriage. Six of the eight forms mentioned by him have wholly disappeared. It is probable that in very early time widow re-marriage was allowable, but at the era of the Mitakshara, and even at the earlier period when the manava dharma-shastra received its final form, it had long ceased to be recognised. They do not, therefore, provide for it, and though they do emphatically assert the binding force of custom, they say nothing as to the class in which marriages recognised as valid by caste custom shall fall.

Nevertheless some progress has been made in adapting the law to the modern social conditions, and we ought in dealing with this case to apply the same principles which have already obtained recognition from the Courts. The leading principle is that a marriage is presumed to be in an approved form unless it is shown to be in a disapproved form. This is a reasonable principle and is not contradicted by anything in the Hindu texts. If a marriage is valid at all, the natural presumption is that it is valid in all respects and carries the full privileges and obligations of an approved marriage, and the burden of proving that its results fall short of this is on the person who asserts it.

The presumption in favour of a marriage being in an approved form is supported by numerous authorities, commencing with Thakoor Deybee v. Rai Baluk Ram (7) and including Jagannath Prasad Gupta v. Runjit Singh (1), Authikesavulu Chetty v. Ramanujam Chetty (2), Muthan Chetty v. Ramaswamy Chetty (8) and several Bombay cases. In Hira v. Hansji Pema (6), the marriage of a divorced woman of the koli caste was treated as being authority in an approved form. This is a strong authority against the view that only the marriage of a virgin can be treated as approved. The same principle has been applied in Moosa Haji Joonas v. Haji Abdul Rahim (5) to a marriage which, being between persons who were only partly governed by Hindu Law, was admittedly not strictly in any form contemplated by Manu, and there seems no reason why it should not equally apply to marriages which derive their validity from custom. The binding force of custom among Hindus has been clearly laid down in the Shastras, and it would be superfluous to cite texts or other authorities in support of it.

A suggestion was made in the course of argument in this Court that a karao marriage, being contracted by the consent of the parties, should be identified with the gandhabra form of marriage mentioned by Manu. No such suggestion was made in the Court below, and it cannot be too strongly repudiated. As Mayne points out in his Hindu Law, Chapter IV, the different forms of marriage enumerated by Manu relate to different stages of social progress and their antiquity is in inverse ratio to the order in which they are mentioned. Gandharba is one of the three most primitive, and is really nothing more than the unregulated indulgence of lust. As was pointed out in Bhaoni v. Maharaja Singh (4), no ceremonies were necessary (I am aware that the Madras High Court has differed, but the Allahabad view is historically the more correct), and as such was allowable to soldiers, to whom much was allowed which would not be tolerated in ordinary citizens. To identify modern forms of marriage such as those proposed by Dr. Gour's Marriage Bill or allowed by the Hindu Widow's Re-marriage Act with this primitive and obsolete form would be historically unsound and socially reactionary. To quote Mayne again, "This form belongs to a time when the notion of marriage involved no notion of permanence or exclusiveness. Its definition implies nothing more than fornication. It is difficult to see how such a connection could be treated at present as constituting a marriage, with the incidents and results of such a union" (p. 100, Eighth Edition).

The view taken by the learned Judge is, therefore, in my opinion, correct, and I would dismiss this appeal with costs including fees on the higher scale.

By the Court.—This appeal is dismissed with costs including fees on the higher scale.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 599 OF 1922.

April 16, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.
SHEOBUX—PLAINTIFF—APPELLANT

versus

Seth JAGANNATH AND OTHERS—
DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Landlord and tenant—Transfer by tenant, effect of—Suit for ejectment against transferee—Defendant, whether can set up another transfer.

In answer to a landlord's suit for ejectment against a transferee on the ground that a particular transfer of an absolute occupancy holding is voidable for want of consent, it is open to the defendant to contend in the alternative, that even if the transfer sought to be avoided, be voidable, he is entitled to retain possession under another transfer which is binding as against the landlord. [p. 365, cols. 1 & 2.]

Sahasram v. Sheonath, 31 Ind. Cas. 303; 11 N. L. R. 124, relied on.

Ordinarily, the tenant-right, as between the tenant mortgagor and his transferee becomes transferred absolutely to the latter the moment the final decree for foreclosure is passed, and nothing remains which the tenant can claim to be his own. [p. 366, col. 1.]

If the mortgage on the basis of which such foreclosure is obtained, is a legal, a consented or ratified mortgage, then, the transferee's position is secure, not only against the tenant, but also against the landlord. [ibid.]

But if the mortgage is neither legal nor consented to by the landlord, nor subsequently ratified by the acceptance of rent by the landlord from the transferee

(7) 11 M. L. A. 139; 10 W. R. P. C. 3; 2 Ind. Jur. (N. S.) 106; 2 Suth. P. C. J. 49; 2 Sar. P. C. J. 231; 20 E. R. 51.

(8) 16 M. L. J. 750.

as such the latter's position is nothing better than that of a mere trespasser liable to be ejected by the landlord. [p. 366, col. 2.]

Baliram v. Ramrao, 4 N. L. R. 57, referred to.

By consenting to a mortgage the landlord consents to a foreclosure also provided it takes place so long as the tenant-right is subsisting. The consent does not enure for the benefit of the transferee if he has not worked out his rights under the transfer so long as the tenant-right subsisted. [p. 366, col. 2; p. 367, col. 1.]

Jaharuddin v. Keshcorao Mahadeo, 6 C. P. L. R. 109, referred to.

If the tenancy is determined by forfeiture the mortgage even if valid as against the landlord is also determined. [p. 367, col. 1.]

Sarjirao v. Tukaram, 46 Ind. Cas. 244; 14 N. L. R. 107 at p. 109, Rani Bahu Parwar v. Sobha Ram, 43 Ind. Cas. 912 and Gorindrao v. Sarjabai, 89 Ind. Cas. 872, referred to.

Appeal against the decree of the District Judge, Jubbulpore, in Civil Appeal No. 41 of 1922, dated the 25th September 1922.

Sir Bipin Krishna Bose, and R. B. N. G. Bose, for the Appellant.

Mr. M. Gupta, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The two points which are material for the decision of this second appeal are:—

(1) Whether Ex. D-10 imports any implied consent to or ratification of the defendants' mortgage dated 22nd January 1894 (Ex. P-2).

(2) Whether by reason of plaintiff accepting rent from the defendants in respect of Gurubux's land, before and after foreclosure, the latter's position either under the foreclosure or under their usufructuary mortgage of 1896 has been rendered unsalable as against the former.

As regards the first point, I am clearly of opinion that the lower Courts have gone wrong. They have erroneously assumed that plaintiff took a sub-lease of the land in suit from defendants, through Dulichand as per Ex. D-10. The evidence of Jagannath D. W. No. 9 on which the finding is based does not, however, support it. It appears that the Courts have confused a lease taken by plaintiff's another son Dhanraj, with the sub-lease taken by Dulichand. The mere fact that plaintiff's son Raghurising took part in writing Ex. D-10, does not import any acquiescence in the defendants' title under the foreclosure on the part of the plaintiff in his capacity as landlord. I am not prepared to accept the said finding as correct and binding against me in second appeal.

The second point raises the question whether in answer to a landlord's suit for ejectment against a transferee on the ground that a particular transfer is voidable for want of consent, it is open to the defendants to contend in the alternative, that even if the transfer sought to be avoided, be voidable, they are entitled to retain possession under another transfer which is binding as against the landlord. Mr. Gupta who appears for the respondents argues that this being an ejectment suit, the plaintiff must succeed only on the strength of his own title, or by proving that an immediate right of re-entry has accrued to him. This practically means that a landlord's suit can be defeated by a transferee from tenant, by pleading the jus tertii of the tenant or by proving that the tenant's interest hath in the eye of law a continuance in order to work out his rights as a transferee under some other transfer valid as against the landlord. That such a defence is not available to any one but the transferee of a tenant is established by the ruling reported in Sahasram v. Sheonath (1), where it is pointed out that no person who is a pure trespasser, and not a transferee, authorized or unauthorized from a tenant, is allowed to set up against the landlord the rights of the real tenant. Here the defendants are not trespassers pure and simple. They held several mortgages. They, however, sued on the basis of one mortgage, viz., of 1894 Ex. P-2 and obtained a final decree for foreclosure on 10th April 1913 thereon. They hold also a second usufructuary mortgage dated 23rd June 1896 Ex. P-3 for a term of 50 years which is yet to expire. Even though with effect from 10th April 1913 they became the holders of the mortgagors' equity of redemption, and could, therefore, claim to be the owners of the fields and regard their own rights even under the mortgage of 1896 as having come to an end, it is argued that they have got the option to choose between their rights as owners and as possessory mortgagees. They contend that there is no reason why they should be precluded from making their election, even in answer to the landlord's claim to eject them, as they were not bound to make it (the election) earlier, that they have been paying rent of the land even after the foreclosure and the landlord has accepted rent from them, and that in any case they have been accepting receipts for rents paid by them in their capacity of the holders of the usufructuary mortgage or as zarepeshgi lessees. In fact they paid rent for land held by them under what is described as theka as per Ex. D-6 which is a receipt for rent paid on 3rd February 1917.

(1) 31 Ind. Cas. 303; 11 N. L. R. 124.

Under these circumstances, it is argued that having accepted rent from defendants after foreclosure, plaintiff must be deemed to have determined his election to ratify even the mortgage on the basis of which the foreclosure was ordered, and consequently accepted the defendants as tenants of the land. Reliance is placed on Ex. D-7 in support of this argument. I am not, however, prepared to go this length. Exhibit D-7 cannot be read singly. Exhibits D-6, D-7 and D-8 which relate to the years 1917 and 1918 must be read together in order to see how far they support the defendants' aforesaid contention that the plaintiff recognized the defendants' status to be that of tenants in place of the original tenant. There are no clear indications of an intention to treat them as tenants; at the most all that one can spell out in defendants' favour is a recognition of their status as thekadars or holders of the usufructuary mortgage under Ex. D-3 as before and nothing more.

The term created by the aforesaid mortgage Ex. D-3 has not yet terminated; it is to last till 2002 Sambat. The question is whether that term cannot be said to have been voluntarily drowned by the defendant by his own act of suing or obtaining the decree final dated 10th April 1913 (Ex. P-9). The defendants' contention is that their rights under the mortgage (Ex. D-3) are still kept intact, while the plaintiff contends that the defendants must be deemed to have brought about their extinction by their own voluntary act of suing upon their voidable mortgage and acquiring the mortgagor's equity of redemption on its basis.

Ordinarily, the tenant-right, as between the tenant mortgagor and his transferee becomes transferred absolutely to the latter the moment the final decree for foreclosure is passed, and nothing remains which the tenant can claim to be his own. If the mortgage on the basis of which such foreclosure is obtained, is a legal, a consented or ratified mortgage, then, the transferee's position is secure, not only against the tenant, but also against the landlord, because in that case the tenant-right on which the mortgage encumbrance is engrafted becomes validly transferred to the mortgagee as against both the tenant and the landlord, compare Baliram v. Ramrao

(2). But if the mortgage is neither legal nor consented to by the landlord, nor subsequently ratified by the acceptance of rent by the landlord from the transferee as such the latter's position is nothing better than that of a mere trespasser liable to be ejected by the landlord, on the ground that the tenant's interest having come to an end by reason of the land being foreclosed or put to auction in execution of a decree based on a mortgage voidable at the instance of the landlord, a right to immediate re-entry into possession has accrued to the landlord.

Here we are concerned with a foreclosure decree obtained by the defendants on the basis of a voidable mortgage of 1894 (Ex. P-2). If the defendants had entered for the first time into possession on the basis of this foreclosure, and their right to possession had stood solely on such foreclosure, I would not have hesitated to give plaintiff a decree for possession against the defendants, because defendants cannot have a better title to possession. The tenant's interest having ceased to exist, the landlord's right of re-entry came into existence and the defendants being only voidable transferees were mere trespassers. Here the position is somewhat different. The defendants were already in possession of the lands under a possessory mortgage which had been duly ratified by the landlord by acceptance of rent from them for many years in the past. By accepting such rent the landlord determined his election once for all to avoid the said mortgage of 1896, and signified his intention to respect the defendants' right under that usufructuary mortgage so long as it lasts, or to accept them as tenants, in case they were to work out their rights in terms of that mortgage, and thus become the owners of the equity of redemption on the basis of that mortgage. A tenant transfers nothing beyond his tenant-right. It is, therefore, argued that any transfer engrafted on the tenant-right whether it be by a mortgage or by a sublease and whether the same be consented to by the landlord or not must determine with the tenant-right, if the tenant-right comes to an end by operation of law or forfeiture: Vithal v. Ganpat (3). By consenting to a mortgage the landlord consents to a foreclosure, also provided it takes place so long as the tenant-right is subsisting. The consent does not enure for the benefit of the transferee if he has not worked out his rights under the transfer so long as the tenant-right subsisted: Jaharuddin v. Kesheorao Mehadco (4). If the tenancy is determined by forfeiture the mortgage even if valid as against the landlord is also determined: Sarjirao v. Tukaram (5), Rani Bahu Parwar v. Sobha Ram (6), Vithal v. Ganpat (3), and Govindrao v. Sarjabai (7). The question is whether the mortgagor's right to redeem having ceased by foreclosure there is such a cessation of the tenant-right in this case as would give the landlord a right of re-entry.

(2) 4 N. L. R. 57.

(3) 10 C. P. L. R. 65.

In this case the term created by the mortgage of 1896 is yet to expire and the mortgagees have yet to acquire the mortgagor's equity of redemption with reference to that mortgage. It is argued for the appellant that the equity of redemption foreclosed on the basis of the mortgage of 1894 comprised within its scope the whole of the equity of redemption as it stood in 1894 and also on the day of the mortgage of 1896, and, therefore, the whole of the mortgagor's interest passed to the mortgagees and that no separate foreclosure or sale on the basis of the said mortgage of 1896 is now possible. It is said that if a person who holds two mortgages sues on the first mortgage alone and does not make reference to the second one, he is not entitled to sue upon the second mortgage afterwards. The respondents in their turn submit that although they have acquired the rights of the mortgagor and became absolutely entitled to the property mortgaged with them under the mortgage of 1894, they have on the principle which underlies s. 101 of the Transfer of Property Act, got the option of keeping their rights qua holders of the equity of redemption, apart from their rights qua mortgagees, and that they can legally fall back upon their rights under such of their mortgages as may be valid as against the landlord, namely, the one of 1896, as an answer to the latter's claim for their ejection as trespassers. I think this contention of the respondents is sound and must prevail.

There is a difference of opinion on the point as to whether a person holding several mortgages over the same property, one a simple and the other a usufructuary mortgage can sue, on the earlier, or the later mortgage, as the case may be, subject to the rights under the other; the question whether the foreclosure on the basis of one mortgage would necessarily be subject to, the rights under the other mortgage, or would extinguish the rights thereunder, is not free from difficulty. Much depends upon the intention of the person suing, and upon how far that intention has been manifested by him in the plaint and the pleadings, or in the form of relief claimed in the suit. If he wants to keep his rights, under the mortgage not sued upon, intact, he has to disclose, that mortgage. The case of Govind Pershad v. Harihar Charan (8), on the contrary, permits a suit on earlier mortgage without reference to the later mortgages. In Laxman Ganesh v. Mathurabai (9), it has been held that a purchase by the first mortgagee of the mortgaged property at a sale held in execution of his own decree on that mortgage extinguishes his rights under the second mortgage and he can have no cause of action on the basis of the second mortgage because he cannot sue himself. Here no question of enforcing by suit the second mortgage against himself is involved.

It appears from plaintiff's Ex. P.7 which is the judgment dated 21st October, 1910 in the mortgage Suit No. 196 of 1910 based on the first mortgage of 1894, that the mortgagor demanded an account of the usufruct of the land and prayed that credit may be given for the same in that suit; in answer to this demand the present defendants pointed out that they were in possession under the usufructuary mortgage of 1896 (Ex. D-3) and were, therefore, not accountable for the same in the said suit. The Court upheld this contention and decided that the usufruct could not go towards the mortgage sued upon. This clearly shows that the mortgagees had expressed their intention to keep their capacity of subsequent usufructuary mortgagees separate from their other capacity, viz., that of the last mortgagees under which they sought the decree for foreclosure. Defendants' intention to keep their rights under the second mortgage intact both as against the mortgagor and the landlord was thus clearly manifested. I am not consequently prepared to hold, that the foreclosure in this case

(4) 6 C. P. L. R. 100.

(5) 46 Ind. Cas. 244; 14 N. L. R. 107 at p. 109.

(6) 43 Ind. Cas. 912.

(7) 80 Ind. Cas. 872.

(8) 7 Ind. Cas. 330; 38 C. 60; 13 C. L. J. 21; 14 C. W. N. 1053.

(9) 23 Ind. Cas. 221; 38 B. 369; 16 Bom. L. R. 26.

necessarily involved an extinction of the defendants' rights under the usufructuary mortgage.

No doubt as between the mortgagee and mortgagor the equity of redemption of the first mortgage has become vested in the defendants, and as the tenants have lost their right to redeem by virtue of the foreclosure decree final, the defendants have rather three capacities (1) qua-mortgagees under the mortgage of 1894, (2) qua-usufructuary mortgagees under the deed of 1896 and (3) qua-holders of the equity of redemption, centered in them, with effect from 4th October 1913 the date of the final decree Ex. P-9. So far as the mortgagors are concerned they can say to them qua holders of the equity of redemption that they are entitled to appropriate the usufruct of the land as absolute owners and not as usufructuary mortgagees; but so far as the plaintiff who is the paramount owner and landlord of the holding foreclosed is concerned, they can, in answer to his suit for their complete eviction as trespassers, say that (apart from the question that they have become owners of the property and they need not, therefore, split up their different capacities as against the mortgagors) they have a right to keep their capacities separate and split them up and fall back on their rights qua-usufructuary mortgagees, if they find it to their benefit to keep their interest as such usufructuary mortgagees alive, by breaking up the confluence or unison in them of the mortgagees' and the mortgagor's rights.

The tenancy-rights with which we are concerned is an absolute occupancy tenant-right which is not liable to forfeiture for non-payment of rent of non-cultivation. It is no doubt capable of being determined by operation of law. Until such a contingency happens it is capable of being transferred to, and enjoyed by, the mortgagee on foreclosure. There being no privity of contract between the landlord and such transferee the former ordinarily gets a right to eject the latter as a trespasser as soon as foreclosure takes place. But where as here an independent equitable defence against ejection has become available to a transferee under a voidable transfer, owing to the landlord's conduct in relation to another transfer in his favour, I fail to see why he should not be allowed to rely on it in the alternative. I have held above, that by accepting rent from the defendants after the date of the foreclosure and by passing a receipt Ex. D-6, dated the 3th February 1917 for the same describing them as holding the lands under a theka (i. e., zarepeshgi lease or usufructuary mortgage), plaintiff has clearly recognized the mortgagees' right to continue to hold possession under the tenant, or in other words, he has signified his intention to treat the tenant-right as still subsisting in spite of the foreclosure decree for the purpose of working out the defendants' rights as the possessory mortgagees as such. The tenancy hath, under these circumstances, a continuance in the eye of law and the landlord has no right to immediate re-entry as against the defendants, so long as, the term of 50 years has not expired, or the mortgage is not redeemed, if it permits earlier redemption, or, the tenant-right has not determined by operation of law, or by another mode valid under law.

For all these reasons I hold that the mortgage of 1896, which has been ratified by the landlord by accepting rent from the defendants, is a complete answer to the plaintiff's suit for ejectment, and that the claim was rightly dismissed by the District Judge. I, therefore, dismiss the appeal with costs. The costs in the Courts below will be paid as already ordered.

K. S. D.

Appeal dismissed.

MADRAS HIGH COURT.

CIVIL REVISION PETITION No. 526 of 1924.
January 7, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Justice Wallace and Mr. Justice Madhavan Nair.
PALANIAPPA CHETTIAR —RESPONDENT No. 1—PETITIONER

versus

N. K. KRISHNASWAMY CHETTIAR
AND OTHERS—PETITIONERS NOS. 1 AND 2—
RESPONDENTS.

Madras District Municipalities Act (V of 1920), s. 4 (a) Rules for conduct of Elections, rr. 4, 32—Rules for decision of election disputes, r. 11—Vice-Chairman of Municipality acting as Chairman and passing his own nomination paper—Breach of rule—Election, validity of—Result of election, whether materially affected—“Vice-Chairman,” whether “officer”—Erroneous interpretation of rule—Revision—Interference by High Court.

Under the rules framed under the Madras District Municipalities Act, relating to the decision of election disputes, a breach of the Election Rules will not in itself justify an Election Court holding that the election is invalid. It must be further proved that the breach of the rules has materially affected the result of the election. [p. 369, col. 2.]

The result of the election must be affected in some other way than by the mere breach of the rule; the breach must have resulted in and produced some other result which has in itself the effect of invalidating a candidature or a nomination or an election. [p. 369, col. 2; p. 370, col. 1.]

The Vice-Chairman of a Municipality is not an "officer" within the meaning of s. 4 (a) of the Madras District Municipalities Act and is not incompetent to stand for election to the Municipal Council. [p. 370, col. 2.]

Where a Vice-Chairman of a Municipality, who was acting as Chairman during the temporary absence of the Chairman, himself scrutinised and passed his own nomination paper in the matter of nomination of candidates for a vacancy in his Municipal ward:

Held, that r. 32 of the rules for the conduct of elections was thereby broken but such breach would not invalidate the subsequent election unless it was proved that the result of the election was materially affected by such breach. [p. 370, col. 1.]

Where a finding by a Court that the result of an election was materially affected by a breach of the Election Rules is based on no evidence and is contrary to a rule governing the conduct of elections, the Court must be held to have exercised its jurisdiction with material irregularity so as to warrant interference by the High Court in revision. But a mere erroneous interpretation of a rule by a subordinate Court unless it is unreasonable or perverse is a matter quite within its jurisdiction and would not amount to material irregularity. [p. 371, col. 1.]

Petition, under s. 115 of Act V of 1903 and s. 107 of the Government of India Act, praying the High Court to revise an order of the Court of the Subordinate Judge, Coimbatore, dated 4th July 1924, in O. P. No. 7 of 1924.

Messrs. T. R. Ramachanda Iyer and S. S. Ramachandra Iyer, for the Petitioners.

Messrs. T. M. Krishnasawmi Iyer and N. Sivarama Krishna Iyer, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—The petitioner asks this Court to set aside the order of the lower Court in O. P. No. 7 of 1924 on its file. That was a petition under the Election Rules framed under the Madras District Municipalities Act, V of 1920, to set aside the election of the present petitioner held on 11th February 1924 for a ward in the Erode Municipality, and for other incidental reliefs.

The lower Court found that the petitioner, who was the Vice-Chairman of the Municipality and was acting as Chairman during the temporary absence of the Chairman, had broken r. 32 of the rules for the conduct of elections of Municipal Councillors, in that he, in the matter of the nomination of candidates for the vacancy in this ward, had himself scrutinised and passed his own nomination paper. Whether in thus holding that there was a breach of r. 32 he did find at all or did properly find that this violation had materially affected the result of the election and, therefore, he had jurisdiction to set aside the election, is the chief point argued before us.

At one stage in its order the lower Court seems to hold that the mere breach of the rule itself rendered the election void and, therefore, "there is no need to consider whether the result of the election was materially affected." Later on it holds that, as the result of the petitioner's breach of the rules was that voters voted for a candidate who was not validly nominated, the result of the election was materially affected. The two findings seem different aspects of the same conclusion rather than two different conclusions.

One of us, Wallace, J., as already held in a case reported as Ahmad Thambi Maricar v. Barasa Maracayar (1) that a breach of the Election Rules will not in itself justify an Election Court holding that the election is invalid and must be set aside. It has to be further proved that that breach of the rules materially affected the result of the election. That follows from the plain words of r. 11 of the "Rules for decision of disputes as to the validity of an election." We have heard nothing now in the argument to induce us to modify that opinion. It does not then follow that a breach of the rules regarding the nomination ipso facto renders void or invalid the election carried through by means of such a breach. There is no rule which says so and if a breach of any such rule automatically carried with it the invalidity of a nomination or candidature so that the election following thereon would be invalid also, r. 11 is a superfluous rule. The result of the election, therefore, must be affected in some other way than by the mere breach of the rule, that is, the breach must in itself have resulted in and produced some other result which has in itself the effect of invalidating a candidature or a nomination or an election, as for example, the breach must have resulted in the candidature of some one incompetent to stand or the nomination of some one who could not be validly nominated. The real question, therefore, which the lower Court had to put to itself was, supposing that the rule now found to have been broken had not been broken and the nomination proceedings had been conducted by the proper authority properly constituted under r. 32, would the result, namely, the petitioner's nomination, have been different? Would the petitioner's nomination have been invalid either because he was incompetent to stand for election at all or because his nomination paper was in some way defective, or would the result have been just what it was, namely, that the petitioner's nomination was valid and his candidature proper? If the latter, we find it impossible to hold that the result of the election was materially affected by the breach of the rules. We are clear also that the lower Court had not looked at the case from that point of view. It has simply held that as there was a breach of the rules, therefore, the nomination was invalid and, therefore, an election comprising an invalid nomination was itself invalid and its result was, therefore, materially affected.

(1) 72 Ind. Cas. 902; 46 M. 123; 16 L. W. 898; (1922) M. W. N. 813; 41 M. L. J. 69; (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 251.

The next point is whether this failure of the lower Court to look at the question from the right point of view is a mere question of an erroneous interpretation of r. 11 on which the Court has jurisdiction to come to a wrong as well as a right interpretation, or is a matter of the exercise of jurisdiction with material irregularity so as to give this Court jurisdiction to interfere under s. 115 of the C. P. C. It appears to us that this is a case where there is no evidence before the lower Court on which it could come to a finding that the result of the election had been materially affected. The evidence before it was only on the question whether the rules had been broken and the Court found that the rules had been broken. It has really not proceeded further than that, and there was no evidence before it to justify any further finding. The lower Court's finding, therefore, that the result was affected was a finding based on no evidence and contrary to r. 11, and it has, therefore, exercised its jurisdiction with material irregularity. This case appears to us one really of the same complexion as Ahmad Thambi Maricari v. Bavasa Maracayar (1).

We are not impressed with the argument of respondents that the general principle of law that a man shall not be a judge in his own cause should be applied and will, if applied, lead to the result that the Vice-Chairman's proceedings are wholly illegal and invalid and, therefore, the whole election is invalid. That is to introduce a principle at variance with r. 11. We are not also clear why this salutary principle should punish the innocent with the guilty and invalidate nominations of other candidates than the Vice-Chairman's equally with the Vice-Chairman's himself. It was obviously to prevent such untoward results that r. 11 was enacted.

The respondents have contended that by force of s. 49 of the Madras District Municipalities Act the Vice-Chairman is incompetent to stand for election because he is an "officer" of the Municipality, and the lower Court in a sort of aside in para. 12 of its orders seems to accept this contention. It is not very clear whether it considers its finding on this point as sufficient to justify a conclusion that the result of the election had been materially affected, but even if it did, we think here also it has erred in jurisdiction. Its inference no doubt will be correct in law if the Vice-Chairman were an "officer" of the Municipality within the meaning of s. 4 (a) but it is quite clear that he is not. Rule 32 itself clearly contemplates that the Vice-Chairman may himself be a candidate for a ward while he is the Vice-Chairman; and so may the Chairman. Section 12, sub-s. 5 of the Act would also imply that it is not necessary for the Chairman or the Vice-Chairman to resign their posts before they can stand for election as Councillors. This again is not a case of a mere mistake in interpretation of s. 49. It is the question of whether the Vice-Chairman is or is not within the meaning of the word "officer" in that section, and, as we have already pointed out r. 32 itself makes that point quite clear and the lower Court cannot legally base its finding that there has been a breach of r. 32 on a ground which r. 32 itself contradicts. The Rule must be accepted or rejected in its entirety.

The lower Court has found also that the rule directing that four days' notice of the poll should be given has been violated. But there was no evidence before it that this violation has affected the result of the Election. The lower Court has not in fact recorded any finding that this violation of the rules affected the result of the election, nor has it set aside the election because of its finding on this fact. Its order, therefore, setting aside the election is not based on this finding.

The petitioner has argued that r. 32 does not apply at all when there is a Chairman appointed but he is temporarily absent. He contends that the rule applies only when there is no Chairman appointed at all. But it is quite a plausible and reasonable interpretation of r. 32 that it applies when there is no Chairman in charge, that is, when there is an appointed Chairman but he is temporarily absent. In any case, we consider that the point is a mere matter of the interpretation of this particular rule, and, unless that interpretation was unreasonable or perverse, a mere erroneous interpretation by the lower Court is a matter quite within its jurisdiction and would not amount to material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction. We are not prepared to hold that the lower Court in so interpreting r. 32 exercised its jurisdiction with material irregularity.

However, as we find, for reasons already given that the lower Court has not really decided the question whether the result of the election was materially affected, the lower Court's order cannot be supported, and must be set aside and the case sent back to it to be re-heard in the light of the remarks that we have made above as to whether the result of the election has been materially affected by the breach of the rules which it finds did occur. We order accordingly and direct the costs to abide the result.

This disposes also of the memorandum of objections.

V N. V.

Order set aside.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 370 OF 1924.

August 21, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Dalal, J. C.

SAJJAD ALI KHAN—DEFENDANT—
APPELLANT

versus

JAGMOHAN DAS—PLAINTIFF—
RESPONDENT.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. VII, r. 11 (c), O. XXXIII, r. 3, O. XLIV, r. 1—Application for leave to appeal as pauper, dismissal of—Procedure—Appeal, memorandum of, order on—Court-fees, payment of—Presentation of memorandum of appeal, mode of.

An application for leave to appeal as a pauper and the memorandum of appeal accompanying such application must be treated as two separate documents and if the Court dismisses the application for leave to appeal as a pauper summarily under the proviso to r. 1 of O. XLIV of the C. P. C., or after enquiry on the ground that the applicant is not a pauper, the Court should pass a separate order on the memorandum of appeal directing the appellant to pay the Court-fee within a certain time, with a penalty attached of his appeal being liable to be dismissed for want of such payment. [p. 372, col. 1.]

Rule 3 of O. XXXIII of the C. P. C., read with r. 1 of O. XLIV of the Code, applies only to the presentation of an application for leave to appeal as a pauper and has no application to the presentation of the memorandum of appeal which must accompany such application. [ibid.]

Appeal against an order of the District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 21st July 1924, dismissing that of the Additional Judge, Small Cause Court, Lucknow, dated the 31st March 1924.

Mr. M. Wasim, for the Appellant.

Mr. Aditya Prasad, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The defendant Sajjad Ali took proceedings under O. XLIV, r. 1. That rule lays down that any person entitled to prefer an appeal who is unable to pay the fee required for the memorandum of appeal may present an application accompanied by a memorandum of appeal and may be allowed to appeal as a pauper subject in all matters, including the presentation of such application, to the provisions relating to suits by paupers in so far as those provisions are applicable. There is also a proviso for summary rejection. The application to appeal as a pauper was summarily rejected in terms of the proviso to r. 1. The application was presented with a memorandum of appeal on 30th April 1924 and the application was rejected on 15th May 1924. No order was passed by the learned Judge on the memorandum of appeal.

Subsequently on 8th July 1924 the defendant put in an application that proper Court-fee for the memorandum of appeal may be received. This application was treated as one under s. 149 of the C. P. C. and rejected. The defendant has come here in second appeal.

The first objection taken was that no second appeal lay. In my opinion the proper order for the lower Court to pass was to reject the memorandum of appeal. This would amount to a decree dismissing the appeal and a second appeal would lie from that decree. The lower Court has overlooked the fact that on 30th April 1924 the defendant Sajjad Ali Khan not only presented an application to appeal as a pauper but also a memorandum of appeal on which some decree ought to have been passed. When the defendant applied to pay Court-fee what he stated in substance was that his appeal may be heard and the lower Court passed a decree dismissing the appeal on the ground that the appeal was such as could not be heard for want of payment of Court-fee. Personally I have always adopted the procedure of considering the two documents presented under O. XLIV, r. 1 as separate. Whenever I happened to dismiss the application to appeal as a pauper summarily under the proviso to r. 1 or after inquiry on the ground that the applicant was not a pauper, I passed a separate order on the memorandum of appeal directing the appellant to pay the Court-fee within a certain time with a penalty attached of his appeal being liable to dismissal for want of such payment. In my opinion, that is the correct procedure which ought to be followed having regard to the provisions of O. VII, r. 11 (c) which apply to plaints read with s. 107 (2) of the C. P. C., which makes the provisions relating to suits applicable to appeals.

A point was taken that the application to appeal as a pauper was not presented personally as required by O. XXXIII, r. 3 which also governs the provisions under O. XLIV. This defect was, however, cured by the lower Court accepting presentation of the application and taking action thereon. Apart from that, the rule would apply to the presentation of the application to appeal, as a pauper and not to the presentation of the memorandum of appeal. The difference between O. XXXIII relating to plaints and O. XLIV relating to pauper appeals is that in the case of a suit, no plaint is to be supplied along with an application to sue as a pauper. If that application is accepted, the application is treated as a plaint and if it is not accepted it is rejected and the law provides for the filing of the plaint subsequently on payment of proper Court-fee under r. 15 of O. XXXIII. The distinction in O. XLIV of presenting a memorandum of appeal along with an application to sue as a pauper is made with an object because the time at the disposal of an appellant is limited and it would be unfair to deprive him of his right to appeal on payment of a proper Court-fee in case of his application to appeal as a pauper being disallowed. For the institution of a plaint the time at the disposal of the plaintiff is comparatively much longer and even after procedure resulting in the dismissal of his pauper application, he would have time to sue on payment of proper Court-fee. I am of opinion that the presentation of the memorandum of appeal through a Pleader was not a breach of the rules and did not entail the penalty of rejection of that memorandum.

When the defendant put in an application to pay Court-fee, his memorandum of appeal was existing without any order being passed thereon, so no question of limitation arose. The only order which the Court could pass would be to fix a time within which the Court-fee was to be paid with the attachment of a penalty that the memorandum would be rejected on non-payment of such fee within the time limited. The matter has been considered at great length by a Bench of the Bombay High Court in Achut Ramchandra v. Nagappa (1) and the opinion of that Court has been approved of by the Calcutta and Madras High Courts [Raaha Kanta Saha v. Debendra Narayan Saha (2) and Nellavadijn Ammal v. Subramania Pillai (3)]. All the contentions of the learned Counsel for the plaintiff-respondent are met in that judgment. The learned Counsel argued that acceptance of Court-fee will be contrary to the provisions of ss. 4, 6 and 28 of the Court Fees Act. Their Lordships of the Bombay High Court explained that in a case like the present there was no question of receiving, or filing, or exhibiting, or acting upon an insufficiently stamped

(1) 21 Ind. Cas. 337; 38 B. 41; 15 Bom. L. R. 902.

(2) 70 Ind. Cas. 101; 49 C. 880; (1922) A. I. R. (C.) 506; 27 C. W. N. 566; 38 C. L. J. 78.

(3) 38 Ind. Cas. 617; 40 M. 657; 31 M. L. J. 269.

[90 I. C. 1925]

GAJADHAR v. AULAD HUSAIN.

document, as if it were sufficiently stamped but of determining what, if any, opportunity the appellant can claim under the law for removing the objection on the score of the insufficiency of the stamp. On the date when the memorandum of appeal was presented the law did not require any Court-fee stamps because it was accompanied by an application to appeal as a pauper. The payment of Court-fee was rendered necessary subsequently when the application was rejected and then if the lower Court had given the defendant an opportunity to pay Court-fee, he was willing to carry out such an order. Considerations in the ruling of the Patna High Court quoted by the appellant's learned Counsel were different. In Ram Sahay Ram Pandey v. Kumar Lachmi Narain Singh (4) the appellant had deliberately and to suit his own convenience paid on his appeal an insufficient Court-fee. Such was not the case here. As already pointed out, when the memorandum of appeal was presented the defendant was privileged to present it without payment of Court-fee.

I set aside the order and decree of the lower Court and direct that if the proper Court-fee is paid by the defendant in the lower Appellate Court within one month of to-day's date his appeal shall be heard by the lower Appellate Court and disposed of according to law. On non-payment of such Court-fee within the time specified this appeal shall stand dismissed with costs. On payment of the Court-fee costs here and heretofore shall abide the result. If the deposit is made in the Trial Court the office shall put up a report as to the refund of the Court-fee on this appeal.

Z. K. Order set aside.
(4) 42 Ind. Cas. 675; 3 P. L. J. 75; 5 P. L. W. 18.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 56 OF 1925.

July 22, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

GAJADHAR—DEFENDANT—APPLICANT

versus

AULAD HUSAIN—PLAINTIFF—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), s. 115—Question of fact—Error of law—Revision—Interference by High Court.

The High Court will not ordinarily interfere with a finding of fact in revision.

Where a Court has jurisdiction to decide a question of law, the mere fact that its decision is erroneous is no ground for interference in revision.

The question whether the death of one of the arbitrators to whom a dispute had been referred for decision renders an award made by the remaining arbitrators invalid, is a question of law, and the mere fact that this question is decided erroneously by a Court having jurisdiction to decide it will not render its decision open to interference in revision.

Application against an order of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 3rd February 1925, confirming that of the Munsif, Akbarpur, Fyzabad, dated the 25th October 1924.

Mr. K. P. Misra for Mr. G. N. Misra, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—This is an application under s. 115 of the C. P. C. in revision. There was an arbitration and a decree in terms of the award. This was in the Court of the learned Munsif of Akbarpur. An appeal from this decree was heard by the learned Additional Subordinate Judge of Fyzabad and was dismissed. The grounds of revision are that the award was signed by only nine out of the twelve arbitrators, that one of the arbitrators having died, the arbitration fell through, and because two arbitrators who were alive but who did not sign the award, did not do so, because they did not agree to the decision. The finding of the learned Additional Subordinate Judge is that the two arbitrators, who were alive and who did not sign, were absent at the time the award was signed, but had previously consented to the decision. This Court will not ordinarily interfere with a finding of fact in revision. As regards the point that one of the arbitrators had died, this means rendering the award invalid. This is a question of law which the Court below had jurisdiction to decide. If it was wrongly decided there is no ground for revision.

The application is dismissed.

Z. K. Application dismissed.

PATNA HIGH COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 267 OF 1923.

July 1, 1925.

Present:—Justice Sir B. K. Mullick, Kt.,
Acting Chief Justice. and Mr. Justice
Kulwant Sahay.

AGENT OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY COMPANY LTD.—DEFENDANT
—APPELLANT

versus

HAMIR MULL CHAGAN MULL

AND ANOTHER—PLAINTIFFS—RESPONDENTS.

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 31—Railways Act (IX of 1890), s. 77—Goods entrusted to Railway for carriage—Non-delivery—Damages, suit for—Limitation—Notice, whether necessary.

Where compensation is claimed for non-delivery of goods entrusted to a Railway Company for carriage, the suit, whether laid in tort or contract, is governed by Art. 31 of Sch. I to the Limitation Act and must be brought within one year from the date when the goods ought to have been delivered. [p. 374, col. 2.]

Non-delivery of goods entrusted to a Railway Company for carriage constitutes "loss" within the meaning of s. 77 of the Railways Act and, therefore, notice under s. 77 of the Railways Act must be given before a suit for the recovery of damages for non-delivery can be maintained. [p. 375, col. 1.]

Case-law referred to.

Second appeal from a decision of the District Judge, Manbhum, dated the 2nd January, 1923 setting aside that of the Subordinate Judge, Purulia, dated the 8th June 1922.

Mr. A. B. Mukherji, for the Appellant.

Mr. P. Dayal, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.

Mullick, Actg. C. J.—The plaintiffs consigned 25 bales of cloth to themselves by the Bengal Nagpur Railway Company to be carried from Assansol to Barabhum. The goods were entrusted to the Railway on the 25th August 1918. On the 10th September 1918 only 24 bales were delivered and one bale was missing. On the 21st August 1921 the plaintiffs brought a suit before the Subordinate Judge of Manbhum claiming compensation for non-delivery. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit.

An appeal was taken by the plaintiffs to the Court of the District Judge and he on the 2nd January 1923 reversed the decision of the Subordinate Judge and gave the plaintiffs a decree for Rs. 950 as compensation with costs.

The present second appeal is preferred by the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway Company.

A preliminary point which was not taken in the memorandum of appeal to this Court has first to be noticed.

It appears that in the Court of the Subordinate Judge the plaintiffs correctly impleaded the Railway Company as the defendant but in the Court of the District Judge the respondent named was the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway. This was clearly an error, for having regard to the fact that it was the Company that was sued in the Trial Court there can be no doubt that in the District Judge's Court the plaintiffs intended to implead the same party and that they misdescribed him as the Agent of the Railway. The present appeal is preferred by the Agent and in any view of the matter he cannot now be heard to say that the appeal cannot proceed merely because he was impleaded in his personal capacity in the lower Appellate Court.

The next two points are more substantial. The first of these is whether Art. 31 of the Indian Limitation Act or Art. 115 governs the suit. The learned District Judge relying on the case of Radha Sham Pasa v. Secretary of State for India (1) held that where the consignee is the plaintiff Art. 31 applies but if the consignor is the plaintiff then Art. 115 operates. Upon the authorities this view cannot be supported. The following decisions show that whether the suit is laid in tort or contract if compensation is claimed for non-delivery of goods entrusted to a carrier the period of limitation is one year as prescribed by Art. 31 and that the residuary Article has no application: Indian General Navigation Co., Ltd. v. Nanda Lal Banik (2), Jaldu Venkatasuba Rao v. Asisatic Steam Navigation Company of Calcutta (3), Mutsaddi Lal v. Bombay Baroda and Central Indian Railway Co., (4), Vally Mahomed Haji Gunny v. Nederland S. Navigation Co., (5), Gobind Ram Marwari v. East Indian Railway Co. (6) [decided by Dawson Miller, C.J., and Kulwant Sahay, J., on the 22nd June 1923]. The East Indian Railway Co. v. Sagar Mull (7) decided by

(1) 34 Ind. Cas. 130; 44 C. 16; 20 C. W. N. 790; 23 C. L. J. 547.

(2) 3 Ind. Cas. 469; 13 C. W. N. 851.

(3) 30 Ind. Cas. 840; 39 M. 1; 29 M. L. J. 342; 2 L. W. 805; 18 M. L. T. 236; (1915) M. W. N. 644 (F. B.).

(4) 58 Ind. Cas. 547; 42 A. 390; 18 A. L. J. 377; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 84.

(5) 80 Ind. Cas. 612; 27 C. W. N. 806; (1924) A. I. R. (C) 173.

(6) 71 Ind. Cas. 565; 4 P. L. T. 331; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 298.

(7) 89 Ind. Cas. 672; 6 P. L. T. 559; 4 Pat. 482; (1925) A. I. R. (Pat) 611.

Ross and Kulwant Sahay, JJ., on the 23rd January 1925. Here the claim is for compensation for breach of contract on account of non-delivery and should have been made within one year from the date when the goods ought to have been delivered. The suit has, therefore, been brought long after the due date.

The other point is whether a notice under s. 77 of the Indian Railways Act was necessary in this case. It is found as a fact by the learned District Judge that no notice was served but the learned Judge holds that as the suit is brought for non-delivery and not for loss, s. 77 of the Indian Railways Act has no application. For this view he relies upon the case of East Indian Railway Co., v. Kali Charan Ram Prasad (8). That judgment, however, has been dissented from in later cases in this Court and also in the Calcutta High Court, see Great Indian Peninsular Railway Co. v. Jitan Ram and Nirmal Ram, (9), East Indian Railway Co. v. Netram Genesh Lal (10), Assam Bengal Railway Co. v. Radhika Mohan Nath (11), East Indian Railway Co. v. Sheo Prasad and Ram Prasad (C. R. No. 118 of 1924 decided on the 28th May 1924). These authorities show that non-delivery constitutes loss within the meaning of s. 77 and, therefore, the service of notice under the provisions of that section is essential.

On both these grounds, therefore, the plaintiffs must fail. The appeal is accordingly decreed with costs throughout and the suit is dismissed.

Kulwant Sahay, J.—I agree.

Z. K. Appeal dismissed.

(8) 69 Ind. Cas. 103; 3 P. L. T. 215; (1922) Pat. 145; (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 106.

(9) 72 Ind. Cas. 440; 2 Pat. 442; 4 P. L. T. 173; (1923) Pat. 82; 1 Pat. L. R. 169; (1923) A. I. R. (Pat.) 285.

(10) 75 Ind. Cas. 26; (1924) A. I. R. (Pat.) 812.

(11) 72 Ind. Cas. 714; 28 C. W. N. 438; (1923) A. I. R. (C.) 397.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND RENT APPEAL No. 23 OF 1924.

May 14, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

TAWAKKUL KHAN—DEFENDANT—

APPELLANT

versus

Raja MUHAMMAD MEHDI ALI KHAN—

PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), ss. 32 A, 32 B, 127

—Rent, arrears of, suit to recover—Agreement to pay rent—Relationship of landlord and tenant—Defendant not entitled to possession of land—Findings against plaintiff—Suit, whether maintainable.

Plaintiff brought a suit to recover arrears of rent from the defendant on the allegation that the defendant held the land under a kabuliyat executed by him. It was further alleged that even if the kabuliyat was not proved, the defendant had been paying rent to the plaintiff and that the relationship of landlord and tenant existed between the parties. The defendant set up a quasi-proprietary title to the land. He did not admit that he was a tenant of the plaintiff at all and denied the kabuliyat and the payments of rent alleged by the plaintiff. It was found that the kabuliyat was fictitious and that the defendant had never paid rent to the plaintiff. Plaintiff also failed to show that the defendant was not entitled to possession of the land:

Held, that the plaintiff's suit must fail inasmuch as (a) he could set up no case under s. 32 A of the Oudh Rent Act as it had been found that defendant had never agreed to pay rent to him; (b) he could not proceed under s. 32 B of the Oudh Rent Act as he had failed to prove that the relationship of landlord and tenant existed between him and the defendant; (c) he could not succeed under s. 127 of the Oudh Rent Act as he had failed to show that the defendant was a person not entitled to the possession of the land. [p. 378, col. 2.]

Second Rent appeal against a decree and order of the District Judge, Fyzabad, dated the 6th August 1924, reversing that of the Assistant Collector, First Class, Sultanpur, dated the 7th May 1923.

Mr. Ali Muhammad, for the Appellant.

Mr. Niamat U'llah, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.—The taluqdar of Hasanpur is the plaintiff-respondent. The suit was one for arrears of rent. In the plaint as originally framed the area was 37 bighas 9 biswas and the annual rent Rs. 175. The date of institution was 12th June 1922. The claim was for three years of rent, allowance was given for realizations in each year, and the balance was sued for. The defendant, who is now appellant, denied that he was a tenant at all. He said that his ancestor had originally been a taluqdar and that when his illaga was incorporated in that of Hasanpur a large area was reserved as rent free sir land. The land in suit was said to be a remnant of this. The written statement was filed on 25th July 1922. On 16th August 1922 plaintiff amended his plaint, and based his claim on a kabuliyat, Ex. 1, a document which is not dated. He now stated the area to be 39 bighas, 19 biswas and 10 biswansis, and the rent to be Rs. 225 6 0. The claim became one for Rs. 295-14-0. The following issues were framed:—

1. Whether the defendant has ever paid rent as mere tenant to the plaintiff or not?

The decision was that he had not done so, so that all the payments set out in the plaint were found to be fictitious.

2. Whether the suit is barred by limitation?

I cannot find any decision on this issue.

3. How much rent, if any, is in arrears?

4. What is the correct rent of the holding?

5. Whether there was a contract between the parties for payment of the rent?

On these issues it was found that there was no contract between the parties and that nothing was due. The 5th issue was whether the plaint was defective, because some plots which are not cultivated by the defendant are shown in the plaint as under his cultivation. This issue is no longer of importance. In the result the learned Assistant Collector dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge.

The principal point raised in the appeal was evidently the kabuliyat. The learned District Judge found that the kabuliyat was not proved. He said "As the plaintiff has failed to prove the kabuliyat, and has based his claim upon this contract alone, I cannot alter the nature of his suit and give him a decree for arrears of rent for the use and occupation of the plots in suit." He said "It is unnecessary for me to discuss the other issues or to decide whether the suit is barred by limitation, or whether the defendant is a mere tenant of the plaintiff or not, and whether the plaint is defective because it contains plots which are not in the cultivation of the defendant and so on. Plaintiff's suit fails because he does not prove that any rent was agreed upon between the parties or was fixed by any Court of competent jurisdiction."

The plaintiff filed a second appeal in this Court. A Judge of this Court passed an order for remand, and the decision of the present appeal turns entirely on the correct interpretation of that order. In so far as any question was settled finally between the parties by that judgment it cannot now be re-opened. My learned brother pointed out that there were other issues besides the question of a kabuliyat, namely, whether the defendant had ever paid rent as a mere tenant to the plaintiff, how much rent, if any, was in arrears, and whether there was any contract between the parties for the payment of rent. He said;

"In his grounds of appeal to the lower Appellate Court, the appellant not only appealed against the decision rejecting the kabuliyat, but referred to the entries in the patwari's papers. The lower Appellate Court agreed with the First Court in rejecting the kabuliyat and refused to consider the other grounds of appeal, for the reason that the appellant ought not to be allowed to alter the nature of his suit, and obtain a decree for arrear of rent for use and occupation of the plots in suit." It was then decided that this was too strict a view of the law. This is a decision that the appellant can be allowed to alter the nature of the suit and obtain a decree for arrears of rent for use and occupation of the plots in suit. The judgment proceeded to discuss two cases which were referred to by the learned District Judge, and went on "In the present suit, it was the appellant's case that the defendant had agreed to pay rent. He relied in the first place on the kabuliyat, but in the event of his being able to prove that the defendant has actually been in possession of the plots in suit, and has actually paid rent to him for them as a tenant, he would at any rate be able to point to an implied agreement to pay rent, and, to claim arrears for any years in which rent had not been paid. There is certainly a finding by the First Court that rent has not been paid. The appellant challenged that finding in his grounds of appeal, and it was open to the lower Appellate Court either to uphold or to reverse that finding. If the lower Appellate Court had reversed that finding, the result would have been that the relationship of landlord and tenant would have been found to subsist between the parties, and in this case, I do not think that the case could have been dismissed on the technical ground that the plaintiff had in the first place relied on the kabuliyat." The judgment does not go on to say what the consequences would be if the lower Appellate Court had upheld that finding. This is unfortunate, because that is what the lower Appellate Court has now done. The judgment goes on. "The appellant admits that if there were a definite finding that the defendant is not a mere tenant, but has some kind of proprietary right in the plots, the suit will have to be dismissed." The point is thus narrowed on both sides. On the one hand, if the plaintiff can prove payment of rent he is entitled to a decree. On the other hand, if the defendant can prove any status of a proprietary nature, higher than that of a mere tenant, the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed. But neither of these points has been so found by the learned District Judge. The judgment goes on "It is objected on behalf of the respondent that the plaintiff-appellant did not sue under s. 127 of the Oudh Rent Act, and that if he wanted to set up that case he should have done so at the earliest possible moment, but it appears to me that the main question between the parties has from the very beginning been whether the relation of landlord and tenant subsists between them. The case set up in the plaint was that the defendant was a mere tenant. The defendant denied this and claimed to have some kind of proprietary title. The plaintiff not only set up his kabuliyat, but attempted to prove that rent has been paid to him by the defendant. The case based on the kabuliyat has definitely failed, but there is, what seems to me, to be a perfectly legitimate alternate case, namely, that the defendant was in occupation of the land with the consent of the plaintiff, and had been paying rent to him, that he is, therefore, to be treated as a tenant, and whether the actual section of the Oudh Rent Act that is to be applied to the case is s. 32A, s. 32B or s. 127, it should be disposed of on its merits, and not on the technical ground taken by the learned Judge. The First Court has already come to a finding, namely, that no rent has been paid by the defendant to the plaintiff and that the defendant had not been proved to be a tenant of the plaintiff. The appeal against this finding has not been decided by the District Judge. I, therefore, order that the suit be remanded to the lower Appellate Court under O. XLI, r. 23 of the O. P. C. for a decision on this point."

A remand under O. XLI, r. 23 means the re-admission of the appeal and determination by the learned District Judge, but it is open to the Court ordering the remand to direct what issues shall be tried in the case. The issue remanded was on the finding of the First Court that no rent had been paid, and that the defendant had not been proved to be tenant of the plaintiff. It is here that I find some difficulty in determining what the order of remand really means. The learned District Judge decided that no rent had ever been paid by the defendant to the plaintiff, and if he had been free to exercise his own judgment it seems clear that he would have dismissed the suit on this finding, but he considered that this Court had decided that it was open to the plaintiff to fall back on his position as proprietor of the land in suit being taluqdar of Hasanpur estate, and to say that the defendant was liable to pay rent whatever his status might be. Having decided, against his own judgment, that some rent must be fixed, the learned Judge accepted an agreement between the parties that the rent should be Rs. 150, and he gave a decree on the basis of that rental. The amount came for four years to Rs. 600 but as the plaintiff had claimed Rs. 398-1-0 only, the decree was restricted to that amount. I do not think that this was what the remand order meant. We have seen that the remand order was quite clear as to the effect of a finding that rent had been paid, but I conceive that in the event of a finding that no rent had ever been paid, the learned District Judge was to make use of his own judgment and determine the rights of the parties with regard to the rent claimed. The order of remand goes on as follows:—"If the learned Judge comes to the conclusion that the defendant has been paying rent to the plaintiff, and is a tenant of his, he will be able to come to a further decision as to whether a decree for arrears of rent can be given to the plaintiff. If, on the other hand, he finds that the relationship of landlord and tenant has never existed between the parties, he will be able to dispose of the appeal on the basis of that finding, and the appellant will know in what position he is in the event of his deciding to sue for any relief other than that claimed in the present suit."

When the case came before the learned District Judge on this remand he came to a finding that no rent had been paid. He said "There is no evidence on the record which will enable me to give a finding that the relationship of landlord and tenant exists between the parties, or that rent was ever received by the plaintiff from the defendant in respect of the land in suit." That would have sufficed for the dismissal of the suit. It is for the plaintiff to show that the relation of landlord and tenant exists or he cannot get a decree. The only difficulty arises from the existence of s. 127 and from the reference to that section in the order of remand. Section 127 runs as follows:—

"A person taking or retaining possession of land without being entitled to such possession may, at the option of the person entitled to eject him as a trespasser, be treated as a tenant, and shall thereupon be liable for the rent of that land at such rate as the Court may determine to be fair and equitable."

It is also laid down in s. 32B that a suit for determination of rent under s. 32B (1) or s. 127 may be joined with a suit for arrears of rent under cl. (2) of s. 108. There is thus a possible procedure by which a landlord may obtain a decree for arrears of rent from a person who is not a tenant, and who has never agreed to pay him any rent at all, and the learned District Judge has interpreted the order of remand to mean that he was not to exercise his own judgment as to whether the plaintiff in the present case possessed any such right or not. I do not think that is what the order of remand meant. I interpret it to mean that the suit ought not to have been dismissed merely because the kabuliyat was not proved. Two other aspects of the case ought to have been considered. The first was plaintiff's allegation that defendant had paid him rent. That case has now been disposed of on the finding of the District Judge that no rent was ever paid. That is a finding of fact which cannot be questioned in second appeal. The other case which was contemplated in the order of remand was that the plaintiff although he had never received rent, might be able to show that the defendant was in fact his tenant, although no rent had been fixed, or that he was a person not entitled to possession at all, a trespasser, who could be attacked under s. 127. But the order of remand did not decide that the plaintiff possessed any of these rights. It merely decided that he was entitled to set up these pleas.

I have now to decide what the proper order is under the circumstances. One course would be to remand the case again in order that the lower Appellate Court should apply its mind to the question whether s. 127 is applicable, not holding itself bound to decide the point in plaintiff's favour. But this is the fifth judgment which has been written in this matter and I am unwilling to prolong the litigation. I find that there are enough findings of fact before me to enable me to dispose of the case. The plaintiff brought a suit for arrears of rent and he alleged that the terms of the tenancy were contained in a kabuliyat. He also alleged that he had received payments of rent from the defendant. The defendant set up a quasi-proprietary title. He did not admit that he was plaintiff's tenant at all. He denied the kabuliyat, and he denied the payments of rent. We now possess findings of fact, which cannot be challenged in second appeal, that the kabuliyat is not genuine, and that no rent was ever paid. The plaintiff can set up no case under s. 32A, because no rent has been agreed upon between him and his tenant, nor can he proceed under s. 32B because he has failed to prove that the defendant is a tenant at all. Lastly he cannot succeed under s. 127, because he has failed to show that the defendant is a person not entitled to possession.

The plaintiff's case fails entirely. I accept the appeal, set aside the judgment and decree of the lower Appellate Court, and dismiss plaintiff's suit with costs in all Courts. He will however get the costs which were awarded to him by the order of remand of my learned brother.

In view of this decision, respondents' cross-objection fails and is dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal accepted.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CIVIL REVISION No. 206-B OF 1923.

February 11, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

Sheikh JAMU—APPLICANT

versus

MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM AND ANOTHER—
NON-APPLICANTS.

Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92—Promissory-note—"On demand," meaning of—Oral agreement re exigibility, whether admissible—Oaths Act (X of 1873), scope of—Agreements between parties in pending suits—Court, powers of—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXIII, r 3.

A subsequent oral agreement varying the terms of a promissory-note as regards its exigibility on demand is inadmissible in evidence and cannot be proved under s. 92 of the Evidence Act. [p. 379, col. 1.]

Saikh Imam v. Ishak Ali, 10 Ind. Cas. 734; 7 N. L. R. 39, referred to.

An acceptance of the challenge by a party to a suit on a promissory-note to make the declaration about the existence of such an agreement on oath and the making of such a declaration on oath in pursuance thereof cannot override the provisions of the Evidence Act, as the powers of the Court to record agreements under O. XXIII, r. 3, C. P. C., are restricted to lawful agreements only and cannot be extended to one which is not legally provable. [p. 379, col. 2.]

The usual import of the words "on demand" in the promissory note is that the debt is due and payable immediately. [p. 379, col. 1.]

Meghraj v. Johnson, 31 Ind. Cas. 880; 11 N. L. R. 189 at p. 192, followed.

The provisions of the Oaths Act are not intended to be utilized in such a manner as would abrogate the provisions of the Evidence Act. [p. 379, col. 2.]

Application for revision of a decree of the Small Cause Court, Amraoti, dated the 2nd October 1923, in Small Cause Suit No. 1908 of 1923.

Mr. J. G. Ghose, for the Applicant.

Mr. M. Y. Sharif, for the Non-Applicants.

ORDER.—The only point worth consideration is whether a subsequent oral agreement varying the terms of a promissory-note as regards its exigibility on demand can be legally proved. In Saikh Imam v. Ishak Ali (1) it has been held that the maker of a promissory note is not debarred from setting up against the payee a subsequent written agreement by the latter not to enforce it. If the agreement pleaded in this case had been written I think it was provable, otherwise it cannot be proved. Section 92, proviso (4) of the Indian Evidence Act is relied upon as not excluding evidence of a subsequent oral agreement and it is argued that a promissory-note is not such a contract as is required by law to be in writing. To this s. 4 of the Negotiable Instruments Act is a complete answer. The very definition of a promissory-note shows that it must be a promise in writing. It is, therefore, of the very essence of a promissory note that the promise to pay must appear in writing. The instrument, therefore, embodies a contract in writing which the law requires should be in writing. The usual import of the words "on demand" in the promissory-note is that the debt is due and payable immediately, vide Meghraj v. Johnson (2). To allow evidence of an oral agreement to be given would be to override the express contract embodied in the promissory-note to pay immediately and s. 92 of the Evidence Act would preclude such proof being admissible under law. The contention, therefore, fails. It has been argued that the applicant was challenged to make the declaration about the existence of the alleged agreement on special oath and he accepted the challenge and made the declaration, and that in view of the statement made on special oath in the course of the proceedings the Court below was bound to give effect to the agreement of the parties arrived at as regards the truth or otherwise of the matter stated. It is pointed out that the statement is conclusive under the Indian Oaths Act.

All this contention is correct, but the learned Advocate ignored one very important circumstance in arguing this point; he forgets that the Indian Oaths Act itself treat this statement or declaration on special oath not merely a statement but "evidence." The only effect of the challenge and of its acceptance was to establish beyond doubt the existence of an oral agreement between the parties and that the plaintiff lost his right to rebut the evidence so given, and nothing more. The provisions of the Indian Oaths Act are not intended to be utilized in such a manner as would abrogate the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act.

The argument that the parties must be deemed to have agreed to have the matter in dispute between them decided by the special oath of one of them and not by any adjudication at the hands of the Court and that the moment the agreement was made and recorded and the oath administered the Courts' jurisdiction became restricted to giving effect to the agreement of the parties and to decide the case in terms of the agreement and on the merits. This argument is also one which cannot prevail. Order XXXIII, r. 3, C. P. C., which deals with the question of Courts' power to record agreements arrived at during the pendency of the suit restricts the Courts' power to only such agreements as are "lawful". If the oral agreement was not legally provable, I would not be prepared to hold that the parties could make it the subject of an adjustment or that the adjustment was such an adjustment as could be said to have been lawfully arrived at and as would oust the Courts' jurisdiction to deal with the merits of the case.

It must, therefore, be held that the oral agreement is conclusively established but that the law of evidence intervenes and says that it is an inadmissible piece of evidence which the Court is precluded from looking at. The Courts' jurisdiction to decide the case on the merits therefore remained unaffected and I do not see any reasons to interfere with the decision arrived at. I, therefore, reject the petition with costs.

(1) 10 Ind. Cas. 734; 7 N. L. R. 39.

(2) 31 Ind. Cas. 880; 11 N. L. R. 189 at p. 192.

K. S. D.

Petition rejected.

G. R. D.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

APPEAL FROM ORDER No. 179 OF 1924.

March 13, 1925.

Present :—Mr. Justice Suhrawardy and
Mr. Justice Duval.

JOGENDRA NARAYAN DAS—

DEFENDANT—APPELLANT

versus

SATYENDRA CHANDRA GHOSE

MOULIK—PLAINTIFF—RESPONDENT.

Appeal—Mortgage suit—Preliminary decree, ex parte—Final decree—Order refusing to set aside decree—Appeal, whether lies.

No appeal lies against an order refusing to set aside a preliminary decree after the passing of the final decree. [p. 380, col. 2.]

A preliminary decree is an interlocutory order, and the right of appeal against interlocutory orders ceases with the disposal of the suit. [p. 381, col. 1.]

Madhu Sudan Sen v. Kamini Kanta Sen, 32 C. 1023; 9 C. W. N. 895 and Nanibala Dasi v. Ichhamoyee Dasi, 81 Ind. Cas. 674; 40 C. L. J. 291; (1925) A. I. R. (C.) 218, relied on.

Appeal against an order of the Subordinate Judge, Birbhum, dated the 16th of February and the 7th of April 1924.

Dr. Sarat Chandra Basak and Babu Mukunda Behary Mullick, for the Appellant.

Babu Panchanon Ghose, for the Respondent.

JUDGMENT.

Suhrawardy, J.—The facts of this case are that the plaintiff-respondent brought a mortgage suit against the defendant-appellant on the 4th May 1922. After several adjournments the case was fixed for hearing on the 24th July 1923. On that day the defendant's Pleader stated that he had no instruction and an ex parte preliminary decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. The defendant thereafter applied for a re-hearing of the case under O. IX, r. 13. That application was registered and the 16th February 1924 was fixed for hearing of the re-hearing case. On that date the defendant applied for time on the ground of illness. The prayer was rejected and the re-hearing case dismissed for default. On the same day, namely, the 16th February 1924, the Court on the application of the plaintiff passed the final decree for the sale of the mortgaged properties. On the 25th February 1924 the defendant filed an application for setting aside the order dismissing his application under O. IX, r. 13. That application was registered and finally disposed of on the merits on the 7th April 1924. The present appeal was filed in this Court on the 15th May 1924 against the orders dated the 16th February and the 7th April 1924, namely, the orders by which the lower Court dismissed his application under O. IX, r. 13 and the application under O. IX, r. 9 for the restoration of his previous application.

At the hearing of this appeal a preliminary objection is taken by the respondent to the effect that the final decree having been passed before the appeal was lodged in this Court, this appeal is incompetent. In my opinion this objection should succeed. So far as this Court is concerned it is taken to be concluded by authorities that if an appeal is preferred against the preliminary decree after the final decree has been passed, it cannot be heard. The principle upon which this view has been taken is that the right of appeal from interlocutory orders ceases with the disposal of the suit. It has been so held in the case of Madhu Sudan Sen v. Kamini Kanta Sen (1). There the appeal was preferred against an order of remand passed under s. 562 of the Code of 1882 (corresponding to O. XLI, r. 23 of the new Code) after the suit on remand was heard and decided by the Trial Court, but there was no appeal from the final decision in the suit. It was held that the appeal to the High Court from the order of remand after the suit was finally decided on remand was not maintainable. Maclean, C. J., observed thus: "If a party desires to avail himself of the privilege conferred by s. 588 (O. XLIII, r. 1) in relation to an order of remand, he ought to do so before the final disposal of the suit. He cannot be permitted to wait until after the final disposal of the suit and then to appeal against the interlocutory order without appealing from the decree in the suit". There are no doubt divergent decisions which have all been collected and considered in the case of Nanibala Dasi v. Ichhamoyee Dasi (2), to which I was a party where it is laid down that in a suit for partition an appeal against the preliminary decree is incompetent if filed after the preparation of the final decree. It is not questioned that the same principle applies to the present case. But it is argued by the appellant that the right of appeal conferred on a party by law under O. XLIII should not be taken away without any statutory enactment to that effect because he has not taken certain steps under some other proceeding; and it is argued on the authority of some of the cases cited on behalf of the appellant that the final decree must be considered to be dependent upon the preliminary decree and, therefore, if the preliminary decree is set aside on appeal, though filed after the final decree was passed, the final decree must accordingly be set aside. This question was considered in the cases which have taken the view affirmed in the case of Nanibala Dasi v. Ichhamoyee Dasi (2). The learned Judges have stated that the principle underlying the cases which have been reviewed in the case of Nanibala Dasi v. Ichhamoyee Dasi (2) is that the right of appeal against interlocutory orders ceases with the disposal of the suit and that the preliminary decree is said to be an interlocutory order because it is an order passed before the suit was finally disposed of. If the contention of the respondent is given effect to, it may lead to many absurd results. Every decree depends upon the validity of the procedure followed in the suit and upon the legality of interlocutory order passed in the suit; and if one of such orders is appealable, the aggrieved party may appeal against that order after the decree and cease to care for the decree in the suit which may be had at great waste of time and money. That is not a desirable procedure to follow. I may quote one instance in order to illustrate my view. Under O. XXIII, r. 3 the Court may refuse to pass a decree in accordance with the compromise alleged to have been effected between the parties. There is an appeal provided against that order. The defendant, if aggrieved by that order may appeal from it even after a decree is passed on the merits. This I do not believe can be the policy of the law.

(1) 32 C. 1023; 9 C. W. N. 895.

(2) 84 Ind. Cas. 674; 40 C. L. J. 291; (1925) A. I. R. C. 218.

The present case is much weaker than the cases in which the question has been examined. Here the appeal is not against the preliminary decree but against an order refusing to set aside the preliminary decree. The effect of the petitioner succeeding in the appeal will be to revive the application for setting aside the preliminary decree; and if that application succeeds the preliminary decree may be re-opened and the final decree should be taken to be contingent upon the result of those proceedings. I, therefore, hold that this appeal cannot proceed and must be dismissed with costs, three gold mohurs.

Duval, J.—I agree.

Z. K.

Appeal dismissed.

ODDH JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

SECOND CIVIL APPEAL No. 65 OF 1924.

May 18, 1925.

Present:—Mr. Simpson, A. J. C.

RAM PRASAD BABU—PLAINTIFF

—APPELLANT

versus

MESSRS. PAUL BROTHERS—

DEFENDANTS—RESPONDENTS.

Vendor and purchaser—Sale of goods—Delivery to be taken at warehouse of vendor—Property, when passes—Goods despatched at request of buyer—Vendor making delivery conditional on payment of price, effect of—Shortage and breakage, liability for.

Plaintiff purchased certain goods from the defendant at Calcutta and it was agreed that delivery of the goods should be taken from the defendant's warehouse at Calcutta but that if the plaintiff so desired the defendant would forward the goods to Lucknow. Plaintiff asked the defendant to despatch the goods to Lucknow, which the defendant did, but, instead of forwarding the Railway receipt to the plaintiff, the defendant sent it to a Bank in Lucknow with the instructions that it was to be handed over to the plaintiff only on payment of the price of the goods. Plaintiff paid the price of the goods and on taking delivery of the goods found that there was a shortage of goods and that out of those goods which had been despatched from Calcutta a considerable portion had been badly damaged either in transit or before they were despatched. The plaintiff, therefore, sued the defendant for a return of the price of the goods which had not been delivered in safe condition to the former plus proportionate freight:

Held, (1) that delivery having been agreed to be taken at the defendant's warehouse at Calcutta, the property in the goods had passed to the plaintiff and that thereafter the defendant was only the plaintiff's agent for the purpose of forwarding the goods to Lucknow; [p. 383, col. 1.]

(2) but that the defendant having imposed a condition upon the plaintiff that he must pay for the price of the goods before he would be able to take delivery of them at Lucknow, a condition which had not been agreed upon between the plaintiff and the defendant as his agent, had altered the terms of the original contract, the effect of which was that the property in the goods had gone back to the defendant and that consequently the plaintiff was not liable to pay for more goods than he had actually received at Lucknow in a safe condition; [p. 383, col. 2.]

(3) that, therefore, the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for the return of the price of the goods which had not been delivered to him plus proportionate freight. [p. 384, cols. 1 & 2.]

Appeal against a decree of the Third Additional District Judge, Lucknow, dated the 5th November 1923, modifying that of the Additional Subordinate Judge, Lucknow, dated the 22nd November 1922.

Messrs. Niamat Ullah and Moti Lal Saksena, for the Appellant.

Mr. H. C. Dutt, for the Respondents.

JUDGMENT.—This is a second civil appeal. The appellant Ram Prasad, a retired District and Sessions Judge, was plaintiff in the suit. There is little dispute about the facts, and of course in a second appeal all the findings of fact of the lower Appellate Court must be accepted. The plaintiff, Ram Prasad, had acquired the rights of one Mrs. Willis. She had taken out a patent for a medicine called Splenox, and she had had a business in the sale of this patent medicine. She had ordered a quantity of bottles, complete with capsules, corks and cardboard cases, from Japan, but she had failed to pay for the consignment, so it was sold in Calcutta by the Tata Bank and was bought by Laha & Co. of Calcutta. Ram Prasad got information of the facts, and he sent his manager Mr. Murphy to find out where they were and to see whether he could buy them. Mr. Murphy went to Calcutta where he ascertained that they had been bought from Laha and Co. by the defendants Messrs. Paul Brothers and Co. of Calcutta. He entered into an oral contract with the defendants on behalf of his principal, the plaintiff, which was afterwards ratified by plaintiff. This contract was that the plaintiff would buy these bottles, which were contained in wooden boxes or packing cases, each of which contained one gross of bottles. There were 220 of these boxes.

The price was to be Rs 16 a box.

The most important matter in this contract is about the place of delivery. There is a finding of fact that the contract was that delivery was to be taken at Calcutta at the godown of Paul Brothers. Mr. Murphy says that he tried to get a contract for delivery F. O. R. Howrah, but failed to do so, and the arrangement was that the plaintiff should take delivery at the warehouse. It was also understood that if this should prove inconvenient to the plaintiff the defendant would send the goods to him at Lucknow. I agree that in these circumstances the defendant's position, at law, was that of plaintiff's agent, and that delivery could be effected by the defendant merely accepting that position and considering himself in possession of the goods no longer as owner but as agent for the buyer. The bargain was struck at the end of July, but some delay occurred and the boxes were not despatched to Lucknow till the middle of October. The plaintiff before despatch sent the defendant a cheque for Rs. 1,000. This was in answer to defendant's letter dated 9th September 1921, Ex. 1. It runs as follows:—

"Dear Sir,

With reference to your telegram dated 6th instant asking for consignment of bottles as ordered we beg to state that it is necessary to pay the freight for empty bottles first here so that we may request you to remit Rs. 1,000 through Tata Bank paid as an advance and also to be applied for the above purpose. On receipt of same we shall be pleased to act according to your instructions immediately."

When the boxes reached Lucknow they were in a bad state. A large proportion of the bottles were broken, some of the capsules and cardboard cases were damaged or missing and there were no corks at all.

We now reach the real difficulty of this case. So far plaintiff could not have succeeded. His man went down and bought certain boxes which he saw. The arrangement was that the plaintiff was to take delivery at Calcutta. Plaintiff then took delivery through the defendant himself as his agent, and apparently gave him no instructions except to despatch the goods to Lucknow. It had been suggested by Mr. Murphy that some wiring might be done to strengthen the boxes provided that this was not too expensive, and it appears from Mr. Murphy's evidence that some wiring had been done. If the boxes were not strong enough to stand the journey, or if the Railway people knocked them about unnecessarily, no liability would attach to the defendant. And this is in substance the decision of the learned District Judge.

The Court of Trial dismissed the suit altogether. The First Court of Appeal held

[90 I. C. 1925]

RAM PRASAD BABU v. PAUL BROTHERS, that there was no responsibility for breakages and no proof of shortage as distinguished from breakage, except in respect of the corks. Accordingly he gave plaintiff a decree for the price of the corks only. But the important point is this, that the defendant consigned the goods to himself, and sent the Railway Receipt to the Tata Bank at Lucknow, with instructions that it was not to be endorsed over to the plaintiff until he paid the price of the goods. The question is what the effect of this is upon the rights of the parties. The learned District Judge has dismissed the matter with the remark that this arrangement was agreed to by the plaintiff, but in my opinion it cannot be dealt with so lightly. The original agreement undoubtedly was to take delivery at Calcutta, and the defendant when he was asked to forward the goods was merely the plaintiff's agent in doing so. But when he made this fresh stipulation that delivery was not to be taken of the goods until a condition had been complied with, namely, the payment to the Tata Bank as agents of the defendant of the price, he altered the contract. It was no longer possible for the plaintiff to take delivery at Calcutta or to obtain control of the goods at all until he had fulfilled this condition. The condition was not entered into between the defendant, as the plaintiff's agent and the plaintiff. It was clearly a contract between the defendant as seller and the plaintiff. This new contract was for delivery of the goods at Lucknow. The ownership of the goods went back to the defendants, who had assumed control over them adversely to the plaintiff. From this point of view the plaintiff is not bound to pay for anything more than he received. The risk of damage on the Railway becomes the defendant's risk. The goods had become his again. The case is not, I think, distinguishable from the case of Ford Automobiles (India) Ltd. v. Delhi Motor & Engineering Co. (1). In that case the Ford Automobiles made a proposal to the Delhi Motor Co., to sell them 20 Motor Cars. The Delhi firm agreed and the contract was completed. The motors were despatched from Bombay, but they were destroyed by fire on the way. The question for decision was who was to bear the loss.

It was contended on behalf of the Bombay firm that when they took twenty motors out of their stock and appropriated them to this contract the ownership was transferred to the Delhi firm. It was held that this would have been so had not the Bombay firm acted exactly as the defendant did in the case before me, that is to say they consigned the motors themselves and sent the Railway receipt to a Bank in order that the money might be collected before the Railway receipt was made over to the Delhi firm. It was held that if they themselves imposed a condition precedent to delivery, then delivery would not take place in law until the condition had been fulfilled. As it never was fulfilled there was never any delivery. It is impossible to distinguish that case from the case before me. In that case also the arrangement was a matter of contract between the parties. Indeed it had been suggested by the Delhi firm. The Bombay firm set up the case that the contract was for delivery F. O. R., but that was negatived by the consignment to themselves, and the instruction not to hand over the Railway receipt without payment. No doubt in the case before me there had been an original contract by which delivery was to be taken at Calcutta, but the parties destroyed that contract and substituted another when they agreed to contract and substituted another when they agreed to this method of payment.

(1) 70 Ind. Cas. 138; 24 Bom. L. R. 1140; (1923) A. I. R. (B.) 125.

I hold, therefore, that in law the contract was that delivery should be in Lucknow, and that the plaintiff was only liable to pay for what was delivered to him. He is not bound to pay either for bottles that never reached him or for broken bottles. In his plaint he claimed on the following detailed damages:—

	Rs.	a.	p.
1. Price of 96 gross bottles short	1,536	0	0
2. Proportionately freight	180	0	0
3. Improper charges as specified in para. 10	165	8	0
4. Price of 215 gross capsules at Rs. 2-8 per gross	537	8	0
5. Price of 220 gross of corks Rs. 1-8 per gross	330	0	0
6. Interest on Rs. 2,749 Re. 1 per cent. per mensem from middle of November 1921 to the middle of April 1922	134	10	0
Total	2,883	10	0

In the written statement all knowledge was disclaimed and para. 10 was simply denied. It is necessary, therefore, to see to what extent each item is proved in the evidence. The plaintiff said that he found a shortage of 96 gross of bottles, which is the figure given in the plaint, and that he found it on examining 199 boxes. He says there was no doubt a further shortage in the remaining 21 boxes, but he does not claim for that. The head clerk in the Octroi Office was produced as plaintiff's witness and he said that the 199 boxes which were opened in his presence contained the number stated in his report Ex. 13. That report shows that 199 boxes were opened in his presence, the same number of which the plaintiff speaks. Three cases were found to contain capsules and cardboard pieces. Out of the remaining cases there were 119 gross unbroken bottles. It was on this basis that octroi was paid as appears from plaintiff's Ex. 8, that is to say it was reckoned that 199 boxes yield 199 gross giving a deficiency of 80 gross. This deficiency was deducted from 220, and octroi was paid on 140 gross. It is clear that this calculation contains an error, because only 196 cases contained bottles at all, so that the actual deficiency detected was 77 gross only. It is, of course, possible that the 21 boxes which were not opened also contained breakages or shortage, and it is probably on this basis that octroi was accepted on 140 gross only. I do not think I am likely at this stage of the proceedings to get nearer to the facts than the octroi authorities did at the time. I, therefore, make my decree on the basis that a shortage of 80 gross of bottles has been proved.

As regards the second item which is Railway freight the proportionate Railway freight for 80 gross bottles is Rs. 150-3.

As regards the third item of improper charges there is no evidence on the record relating to it and Counsel has abandoned it.

The fourth item relating to capsules presents some difficulty. Plaintiff has stated that he received only 5 gross capsules instead of 220 gross. In view of the fact that plaintiff has claimed for 96 gross bottles, while his witness gives evidence relating to only 77, or at most 80 gross, I am not prepared to accept plaintiff's unsupported testimony as regards capsules, and I make no decree for capsules at all.

The learned District Judge gave the plaintiff a decree in respect of the corks of which none arrived at all. I accept the finding that no corks arrived. There seems to be no evidence of the value of the corks, but the learned District Judge regarded Rs. 1-8 per gross as a reasonable price, and it certainly does not seem to be too much. It is to be noted, however, that the Rs. 13 per cent. per gross which was paid for the bottles, included corks and capsules, so instead of 220 gross there will only be 140 gross to be paid for in addition to the amount paid for the bottles.

Interest has been claimed at 12 per cent. per annum. I allow interest from the middle of November 1921, to the date of institution of the suit at 6 per cent. per annum. The decree will, therefore, stand.

	Rs.	a.	p.
Price of 80 gross bottles short	1,280	0	0
Proportionate Railway freight	150	3	0
Improper charges	Nil.
Price of 215 gross capsules	Nil.
Price of 140 gross of corks Rs. 1-8 per gross	210	8	0
Interest from the middle of November 1921 to date of institution of suit	41	13	0
Total	1,682	0	0

In the result I allow the appeal and decree plaintiff's suit for Rs. 1,682 as detailed above. In view of the fact that the plaintiff has succeeded on his main contentions he will receive costs in proportion to his success, while defendants will not receive any costs at all.

The cross objections are dismissed with costs.

Z. K.

Appeal allowed.

NAGPUR JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 294 OF 1923.

March 1, 1924.

Present:—Mr. Kinkhede, A. J. C.

SHEOCHARAN—ACCUSED—APPLICANT

versus

EMPEROR—COMPLAINANT—

OPPOSITE PARTY.

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 437—Further enquiry, when to be directed—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 30—Confession of co-accused, when admissible

A District Magistrate cannot set aside an order of discharge if there is no irregularity, illegality or impropriety in the proceedings. Further enquiry ought not to be ordered in a case in which the Courts are liable to take different views of the evidence and of the probabilities, especially where the Magistrate has disbelieved the evidence for the prosecution. [p. 386, col. 1.]

Empress v. Bhagwan Malec, 2 C. P. L. R. 82, Fado v. Emperor, 34 Ind. Cas. 965; 12 N. L. R. 94 at pp. 97, 98; 17 Cr. L. J. 245, Empress of India v. Gaya Din, 4 A. 148; A. W. N. (1881) 159; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 745, Queen-Empress v. Chotu, 9 A. 52; A. W. N. (1886) 281; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 465, Prankhang v. Emperor, 17 Ind. Cas. 76; 16 C. W. N. 1078; 13 Cr. L. J. 761, Emperor v. Devidas, 14 C. P. L. R. 161, Chandan v. Kalla, 9 Ind. Cas. 274; 8 A. L. J. 45; 12 C. L. J. 45, Lakshminarasappa v. Mekala Venkatappa, 31 M. 133; 3 M. L. T. 230; 18 M. L. J. 57; 7 Cr. L. J. 267, and Bindeshri Dube v. Emperor, 59 Ind. Cas. 193; 18 A. L. J. 1135; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 374; 22 Cr. L. J. 49, referred to.

The statement of one accused cannot be taken as evidence against another accused under s. 30 of the Evidence Act unless the parties are admittedly in pari delicto, that is, when a confessing accused implicates himself to the full or as much as his co-accused whom he is criminating. Statements which inculcate the maker more than, or equally with, others alone can afford any satisfactory guarantee of their truth. Less weight must be attached to statements which implicate the maker in a lesser degree than others. Where the principal blame is laid on others the statement is self-serving according to the ideas of the person making it and is entirely excluded from consideration. There is absolutely no guarantee whatever as to its truth where the statement entirely exonerates the maker. Such a statement cannot be held admissible as against the co-accused. [p. 386, col. 2; p. 387, col. 1.]

R. v. Baino Chowdhury, 25 W. R. 43 Cr., relied on.

Criminal revision against an order of the District Magistrate, Betul, in Criminal Revision No. 10 of 1923, dated the 29th October 1923.

Mr. M. B. Niyogi, for the Applicant.

ORDER.—Musammatt Jhuniah and the applicant Sheocharan were prosecuted for secretly disposing of the dead body of a newly born illegitimate child of Jhuniah under s. 318, Indian Penal Code. Jhuniah was charged with aiding and abetting the concealment and Sheocharan for the concealment of the birth of the child itself by secret disposal of the dead body.

The Trial Magistrate after taking all the evidence and considering it discharged both the accused. He found that there was no evidence showing that the accused Sheocharan had secretly disposed of the dead body. He, however, pointed out that the only thing against him was a statement made by the co-accused Jhuniah, but remarked that the same could not be taken into account against him as it did not amount to a confession admissible under s. 30 of the Indian Evidence Act. He also observed that as Musammatt Jhuniah was not examined as an accomplice the advantage of s. 133 of the Indian Evidence Act, was not available to the prosecution. As to Musammatt Jhuniah the Magistrate held that there was no evidence to show that the body found in the well was the body of the child to which Jhuniah gave birth, and that Musammatt Jhuniah could not, therefore, be charged either with the commission of the offence or with the abetment thereof. The Magistrate has remarked that Jhuniah did seem to him to have helped the accused Sheocharan not as a free agent but under some threat, and that she consented under fear of injury and that she could not be said to be intentionally aiding in the secret disposal of the dead body. Thus both the accused were discharged.

The District Superintendent of Police moved the District Magistrate pointing out that the accused were improperly discharged. The District Magistrate thereupon ordered a notice to issue to Sheocharan to show cause why the order of discharge should not be set aside. The accused appeared and showed cause, the District Magistrate has set aside the order of discharge, and directed that he be retried under s. 318, Indian Penal Code, in the Court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Multai. In doing so the District Magistrate has differed from the Trial Magistrate in the view of evidence taken by him, and held that the identity of the dead body with the child born of Jhuniah was proved and that Musammatt Jhuniah's statement showed that the child was illegitimate, that Sheocharan was its father, and that he took it away after its birth for secretly disposing it off. He has made use of a remark of the Trial Magistrate, in the body of the order, that Musammatt Jhuniah helped Sheocharan in the matter of the disposal under a threat and fear of injury from him. The District Magistrate has overruled the objection of the accused that the statement of Jhuniah was uncorroborated; after observing that there were grounds for holding that Sheocharan's statements were not worthy of belief he came to the conclusion that there were grounds for further enquiry into the case and has directed him to be re-tried. Against this order of the District Magistrate the accused has come up to this Court in revision. He contends that when once he was discharged by the Trial Magistrate the District Magistrate should not have ordered his re-trial, and that the order is wrong inasmuch as it is mainly based upon the statement of the co-accused Jhuniah which is inadmissible as against him.

In the argument it is brought to my notice that the powers vested in a District Magistrate of ordering further enquiry under s. 437, Cr. P. C., should be used sparingly and with great circumspection; that it is only where the order of discharge is perverse or foolish or the Magistrate has not dealt with the evidence or has not recorded sound reasons for the discharge, that the District Magistrate might exercise his powers of directing further enquiry. There is ample authority for this view in Empress v. Bhagwan Malee (1) and Yado v. Emperor (2) and reported decisions of other High Courts as well: the leading cases on the point are Empress of India v. Gaya Din (3) and Queen-Empress v. Chotu (4). In Yado v. Emperor (2) and in Prankhang v. Emperor (5) it has been held that a District Magistrate cannot set aside an order of discharge if there be no irregularity, illegality or impropriety in the proceedings. Where further enquiry is directed it does not in all cases mean taking of additional evidence but may be re-hearing and re-consideration of the evidence already taken as held in Empress v. Bhagwan Malee (1) and Emperor v. Debidas (6).

(1) 2 C. P. L. R. 82.

(2) 34 Ind. Cas. 965; 12 N. L. R. 94 at pp 97, 98; 17 Cr. L. J. 245.

(3) 4 A. 148; A. W. N. (1881) 159; 2 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 745

(4) 9 A. 52; A. W. N. (1886) 281; 5 Ind. Dec. (N. S.) 465

(5) 17 Ind. Cas. 76; 16 C. W. N. 1078; 13 Cr. L. J. 764.

(6) 14 C. P. L. R. 161.

The learned District Magistrate has not pointed out any irregularity, illegality or impropriety in the proceedings, nor do I find any beyond the fact that the nature of the case is such that Courts are liable to take different views of the evidence and of the probabilities. In Chandan v. Kalla (7) it has been held that in such a case further enquiry ought not to be ordered especially where the Magistrate has disbelieved the evidence for the prosecution. The Madras High Court has even gone to the length of holding in Lakshminarasappa v. Mekala Venkatappah (8) that further enquiry cannot be directed by the District Magistrate even if there be mis-appreciation of the evidence. Bindesari Dube v. Emperor (9) is a case which clearly endorses and justifies the view I have taken whether in the present case there was room for interference with the order of discharge must, therefore, be determined with reference to the merits of the evidence on record.

I am asked to hold that the statement of Jhuniah does not amount to a confession within the meaning of s. 30, Indian Evidence Act. The Trial Magistrate had very rightly remarked that it was not a confession within s. 30. As to this the test is laid down in several cases collected under s. 30 of Indian Evidence Act in Ameer Ali's Law of Evidence, 6th Edition. It is to see whether the statement of one prisoner proposed to be used in evidence against another is sufficient by itself to justify the conviction of the person making it, for the offence for which he is jointly tried with the other person against whom it is tendered. The statement of one prisoner cannot be taken as evidence against another prisoner under s. 30 of the Evidence Act, unless the parties are admittedly in pari delicto, that is, when a confessing prisoner implicates himself to the full or as much as his co-prisoner whom he is criminalising, compare R. v. Baino Chowdhry (10) per Glover, J., who held that this is so only when the confession makes both equally guilty of the offence. The ratio decidendi of the cases bearing on this point is that statements

(7) 9 Ind. Cas. 274; 8 A. L. J. 45; 12 Cr. L. J. 45.

(8) 31 M. 133; 3 M. L. T. 230; 18 M. L. J. 57; 7 Cr. L. J. 267.

(9) 59 Ind. Cas. 193; 18 A. L. J. 1135; 2 U. P. L. R. (A.) 374; 22 Cr. L. J. 49.

(10) 25 W. R. 43 Cr.

which inculcate the maker more than, or equally with, others, alone can afford any satisfactory guarantee of their truth. This necessarily means less weight must be attached to statements which implicate the maker in the lesser degree than others. Where the principal blame is laid on others the statement is self-serving according to the ideas of the person making it and is entirely excluded from consideration. There is absolutely no guarantee whatever as to its truth where the statement entirely exonerates the maker. Such a statement cannot be held admissible as against the co-accused.

If the statement of Jhunia as a co-accused were to be carefully read, it will be found that it does not satisfy any of these tests and does not amount to a confession. There is a clear attempt on the part of Jhunia to throw the whole blame of concealment of the birth of the child by secret disposal, on the applicant Sheocharan, and to exculpate herself by stating that she was not acting as a free agent, but as observed by the Trial Magistrate, under fear of personal injury from Sheocharan. This one circumstance alone was sufficient to convince even the District Magistrate that the statement as it stood was inadmissible under s. 30 of the Indian Evidence Act. He, however, writes in his order that corroboration for this statement is not wanting. I have gone through the evidence and I do not find any corroboration from any other legally admissible evidence on record. On the contrary the testimony of witnesses Nos. 3 and 7 which has any bearing on this point is hearsay being based on information supplied by Jhunia to them. There is no other testimony which directly proves that Sheocharan was concerned in the secret disposal of the dead body of this child. Under these circumstances what is said to be independent corroboration of Jhunia's statement is wanting in the case; and it is, therefore, improper to order the re-trial of the accused Sheocharan on such insufficient data, i. e., on Jhunia's inadmissible statement as a co-accused. The applicant complains that now that Jhunia is discharged there is a chance of her being examined as a witness and thus supplementing the evidence on record, and that this will necessarily prejudice him and cause grave injustice to him. There is much force in this contention of the applicant. I, therefore, set aside the order of the District Magistrate and direct that the accused be set at liberty, and if any proceedings may have been hitherto started against him the same are hereby ordered to be quashed.

Z. K.

*Revision allowed.CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.

CRIMINAL REVISION No. 887 of 1924.

March 23, 1925.

Present :—Justice Sir Babington Newbould, Kt., Mr. Justice Buckland and Mr. Justice B. B. Ghose.

PRATAP CHANDRA GUHA ROY—

PETITIONER

versus

EMPEROR—OPPOSITE PARTY.

Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 499, 500—Defamation—Imputations concerning conduct of members of Police force—Individual member, whether defamed—Truth of imputations, plea of, proof of—Good faith, plea of—Defamatory statement, strict proof of.

Complainant was the principal officer in charge of a certain Police force which was stationed at a certain place for the purpose of investigating a certain occurrence. There were some complaints against the conduct of the members of the Police force and the accused, after making some enquiries from the villagers, made two speeches at two different places as a consequence of which he was charged and tried at the instance of the complainant for offences under s. 500 of the Penal Code. The charge with regard to the first speech alleged that the accused had stated that not to speak of the Police only but the British Government themselves and the superior officers including from the District Magistrate down to the daroga and the chaukidars were all beasts and pigs in their conduct, and the charge with regard to the second speech alleged that the accused had stated that the Police force had bitten off the nipple of the breast of a woman and had bitten the cheek of a woman nine months pregnant. In his defence the accused sought to prove the notes taken by him of the statements made to him by the villagers of the ill-treatment accorded to them by members of the Police force, but the notes of statements of those persons who were not called as witnesses at the trial were not admitted in evidence.

Held, (Per Newbould, J.)—(1) that the statement by the accused that the members of the Police force were beasts and pigs in their conduct was defamatory of the complainant who was a member of the Police force and that the imputation having been made against the Police force as a whole employed under the complainant the accused was guilty of the offence of defamation in respect of that statement; [p. 390, col. 1.]

(2) that so far as the second charge was concerned it related to definite acts of brutality by individual members of the Police force and inasmuch as the complainant personally was not accused of the brutal conduct alleged, the accused could not be convicted of an offence under s. 500 of the Penal Code in respect of the second charge. [p. 390, col. 1.]

Per Ghose, J.—(1) that the accused was entitled to prove the notes of the statements made to him by the villagers as evidence of his good faith and that the notes were relevant on the question, although the persons who had made the statements were not examined as witnesses; [p. 391, col. 2.]

(2) that the words in the first charge that not to speak of the Police only but the British Government themselves and the superior officers including from the District Magistrate down to the daroga and chaukidars were all beasts and pigs in their conduct were too wide to admit of the construction that any particular Police Officer was defamed; [p. 392, col. 2.]

(3) that the second charge related to specific acts of brutality of which the Police force as a body could not have been guilty and that the statement, therefore, referred to the personal conduct of some of the constables and had no reference to the complainant; [p. 393, col. 2.]

(4) that, therefore, the petitioner could not be convicted of an offence under s. 500 of the Penal Code on either charge; [p. 391, col. 2.]

(5) that as the evidence showed that the Police force had been guilty of acts of misconduct, oppression and persecution the accused had reasonable grounds for believing in the truth of the allegations made to him and that the case was, therefore, covered by the 9th Exception to s. 499 of the Penal Code and that on that ground also the accused was entitled to an acquittal. [p. 395, col. 2.]

Per Buckland, J.—that there was confusion in the charges between the complainant and the Police force of which he was in charge in relation to the various ingredients of the charges and that consequently there had been no proper trial of the accused and that the accused must, therefore, be re-tried on charges properly framed. [p. 396, col. 2.]

Per Ghose, J.—To speak of a person that he is a beast and a pig in his conduct is defamatory. [p. 392, col. 1.]

In a prosecution under s. 500 of the Penal Code the words complained of as constituting the offence must be set out in the charge and proved before the accused can be convicted. When there is a denial the evidence in support of the prosecution must be scrutinized. [p. 392, col. 1.]

When spoken words are alleged to have constituted the offence of defamation, a very slight alteration of a word may give quite a different meaning to the whole statement. [p. 392, col. 2.]

Where the words ascribed to the accused are differently stated by each witness and the petition of complaint also puts them differently it cannot be said to have been proved that the accused spoke the words stated in the charge, and it would not be correct to say that the words given in the different versions have the same meaning. [p. 392, cols. 1 & 2.]

If a person complains that he has been defamed as a member of a class he must satisfy the Court that the imputation complained of is against him personally and that he is the person aimed at, before he can maintain a prosecution for defamation. [p. 394, col. 1.]

All circumstances which were apparent to the bystanders at the time the words were uttered should be put in evidence so as to place the Court as much as possible in the position of such bystanders, and then it is for the Court to say what meaning such words would fairly have conveyed to their minds. [ibid.]

Where the defamation imputes a crime to the complainant and the accused pleads justification there must be the same strictness of proof as on a trial for such crime. [p. 394, col. 2.]

Per Buckland, J.—In a case in which Explanation II to s. 499 of the Penal Code is properly called into use the identity of the company or association or collection of persons must be maintained throughout with reference to the imputation said to have been made concerning them as such with the intention of harming their reputation so that thereby they are defamed. An imputation concerning a company or association of persons as such cannot by virtue of this Explanation justify a charge of defaming an individual and a charge cannot combine the Explanation with the definition for such a purpose. [p. 396, col. 2.]

The offence of defamation consists in using language which others knowing the circumstances would reasonably think to be defamatory of the person complaining of and injured by it. It may be that an individual is as much defamed by words apparently only of more general application as by words referring to him by name. [p. 397, col. 1.]

The question for the consideration of the Court is whether it thinks that the libel designates the complainant in such a way as to let those who know him understand that he is the person meant. It is not necessary that all the world should understand the libel: it is sufficient if those who know the complainant can make out that he is the person meant. [ibid.]

Case-law referred to.

Rule against an order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Faridpore, dated the 21st July 1924.

JUDGMENT.

Newbould, J.—The petitioner Pratap Chandra Guha Roy was tried and convicted by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Faridpur on three charges of defamation and was sentenced under s. 500 of the Indian Penal Code to one year's simple imprisonment for each offence, the sentences to run concurrently. On appeal to the Sessions Judge of Faridpur his conviction on the third charge was set aside and the sentences were reduced to six months' simple imprisonment on each of the two charges on which the conviction was upheld, these sentences also running concurrently. The petitioner has obtained an open Rule from this Court calling upon the District Magistrate and the complainant to show cause why the conviction of and the sentence passed on the petitioner should not be set aside or such other orders passed as to this Court may seem fit.

The two charges in the respect of which the petitioner's conviction has been upheld are as follows:—

"Firstly.—That you on or about the 13th day of June 1923 at Berhamganj, P. S. Sibchar, defamed the complainant by making and publishing the following imputation in your speech at a public meeting concerning the Police force employed at Char Maniar of which the complainant was a member and the principal officer in charge of the investigation to the effect that not to speak of the Police only but the British Government themselves and the superior officers including from the District Magistrate down to the daroga and chowkidars were all beasts and pigs in their conduct, intending to harm and knowing and having reason to believe that it would harm the reputation of the said complainant and the Police force employed at Char Maniar and that you thereby committed an offence punishable under s. 500, Indian Penal Code, and within my cognizance.

